THE SANDFORD FLEMING LIBRARY

EX — LIBRIS

THE REVEREND Mr. RALPH ERSKINE.
The Revd Mr
Ralph Erskine
Died 6th Nov.
1752.
in the LXVIII
Year of his Age.
L. Chambars sculp.

THE

SERMONS,

AND OTHER

PRACTICAL WORKS,

OF THE LATE REVEREND AND LEARNED

MR. RALPH ERSKINE,

MINISTER OF THE GOSPEL IN DUNFERMLINE.

CONSISTING OF ABOUT

One Hundred and Thirty Sermons, beſides his Poetical Pieces.

IN TWO LARGE FOLIO VOLUMES.

To which is prefixed,

A ſhort Account of the AUTHOR'S LIFE and WRITINGS, with the CONTENTS.

Whereunto is ſubjoined,

A Copious Alphabetical INDEX of the Principal Matters contained in the whole Work.

The righteous ſhall be had in everlaſting rememberance. PSAL. cxii. 6.
By theſe he being dead yet ſpeaketh. HEB. xi. 4.

VOLUME I.

ENTERED IN STATIONERS-HALL.

BERKELEY BAPTIST DIVINITY SCHOOL
SANDFORD FLEMING LIBRARY

GLASGOW:
Printed by ROBERT URIE,
For JOHN NEWLANDS, the Editor; and Sold by him at his Shop in Head of the Gallowgate, Glaſgow.
MDCCLXIV.

f BX
8915
E7
v.1

THE EDITOR TO THE PUBLIC.

IT is now a conſiderable time ſince the publication of the Reverend Mr. RALPH ERSKINE's Practical Works was firſt propoſed. Several occurrences have contributed to retard the forwarding the deſign; the intimation whereof here would anſwer no valuable end. It gives the Editor now a great deal of pleaſure, that he hath it in his power to favour the public with the FIRST VOLUME of this Work, finiſhed in an handſome manner. He reſolved with himſelf, when he firſt propoſed this undertaking, either to have the Work done in ſuch a manner as would reflect honour upon the worthy Author, yield pleaſure, as well as profit, to the Reader, be a credit to himſelf, and an honour to our country, (being the firſt of its kind, for largeneſs and elegance, that ever was publiſhed, as the compoſition of a Scotch author,) or not to have emitted it at all into the world: How he hath accompliſhed his reſolution, the public are left to judge. But the elegant and handſome dreſs, in which it now makes its appearance, will, in ſome meaſure, we hope, compenſate for the unavoidable impediments which fell in the way of its publication.

THE Publiſher, however, hath ſpared no pains and coſt to effectuate his deſign, in having this Work both accurately and elegantly printed. For this purpoſe, the whole Work was carefully read over and prepared for the Preſs, before it was printed; and the Sermons, formerly publiſhed, freed of many inaccuracies and improprieties of the preceding impreſſions.—The doctrinal obſervations, general heads of method, and ſub-diviſions, (which our Author's works abound with) are carefully diſtinguiſhed, and properly ranged, which was not the caſe in the other editions.—The ſcripture texts, which were too curtly cited, and broke off with et cætera's, (of which the Author himſelf, when alive, juſtly complained) are here properly extended; at leaſt ſo much as was neceſſary to prove the point for which they were quoted.—The emphatical words and phraſes are carefully pointed out, and printed in different characters, according to the degree of the emphaſis, that the reader may, at once, perceive the chain of connexion, the emphaſis of his diſcourſe, and the ſtrength of his reaſoning.—Various readings, and criticiſms upon the original text, are uniformly marked out and diſtinguiſhed: proper paragraphs have been made through all the diſcourſes, and the whole punctuation rectified; with ſeveral other amendments.

THE Sermons are here placed according to the order of time in which they were delivered; and ſuch of them as were never before publiſhed, the reader is acquainted thereof at the beginning of the ſermon; with the time, occaſion, and place of the delivery of each. Such pains have been taken upon the Manuſcript Sermons, to have them accurately reviſed, and correctly printed, that, it is hoped, they will appear every way equal to thoſe formerly publiſhed.

THAT nothing might be wanting to render this edition of our Author's Works acceptable to the public, and every way beneficial to the reader; in ſuch places of his diſcourſes, where he makes an alluſion to the occurrences and tranſactions of the times, in which they were compoſed and delivered, theſe alluſions are pointed out, and ſuch paſſages elucidated with notes at the foot of the page, that the Reader, unacquainted with, or uncertain about, theſe occurrences, may be at no loſs to underſtand our Author; and eſpecially, that thoſe in after ages may have a clear view of the whole. Any point of doctrine, only occaſionally touched at by the Author, on account of his having elſewhere more copiouſly handled the ſame, the reader is directed to the place where he may find it.

in

47555

To affirm that there are no typographical miſtakes in this edition, would be conſtructed more a piece of vanity than truth; in a work of this extent it is not to be expected: However, it is hoped theſe will be found to be but very few; all imaginable pains having been taken to free it of theſe as much as poſſible, and eſpecially of ſuch as would injure the ſenſe.

THE Encouragers of this undertaking, on receipt of the Book, will find that they have not been ſerved, as the moſt part of ſubſcribers uſually are. It is a very ordinary thing with publiſhers of books, in far leſs undertakings than this, to amuſe the Public with flattering and pompous words, great promiſes, ſtriking and enticing conditions; but, upon ſeeing the work executed, there hath been a viſible failure of the whole. In this undertaking, the Editor hath exceeded, inſtead of fallen ſhort of what he promiſed, as will be eaſily perceived by the judicious and accurate Reader; eſpecially in the following reſpects. In the printed propoſals for this work, it was undertaken to print ſome copies upon a coarſe, and ſome upon a fine paper: the Editor altered his reſolution in this particular, and hath printed the whole upon a ſuperfine DEMY paper; and although this alteration will coſt the Publiſher more than £ 130 of additional expence, yet there is no additional price exacted from the ſubſcribers. Beſides this, that the book may be more univerſally uſeful to thoſe who want to peruſe it, he has cauſed to draw out, though at a vaſt labour and expence, a copious alphabetical INDEX of the principal matters contained in the whole work; which is a conſiderable ornament to the book, and makes it vaſtly more valuable. Moreover, as an evidence that the Editor's motives, in this undertaking, were not ſolely lucrative, but the good of the Public his principal aim; though the printed propoſals intitled the ſubſcribers only to one copy gratis for a DOZEN, yet he afterwards condeſcended to give them a copy freely to every SIX.

THE ſubſcribers to this Edition have no reaſon to be afraid that the book will fall in its price, after publication, as indeed is too frequently the caſe: and if any perſons, in expectation of this, have withheld their ſubſcriptions, with a view to purchaſe it eaſier afterwards, they may, perhaps, come to be diſappointed altogether, in regard the impreſſion is but ſmall.

WHAT is farther neceſſary to be ſaid, concerning our AUTHOR and his WORKS in general, and this edition of them in particular, we refer our Reader to the Account of his Life and Writings.

THE Editor has nothing farther to trouble the Public with, but to acquaint them, that the SECOND VOLUME is going forward, conſiderably advanced, and will be carried on and finiſhed with all poſſible expedition.—Any ſubſcribers names, not come to hand, to be printed in this Firſt Volume, may get a place in the Second.

A LIST of the ENCOURAGERS of this WORK.

A

THE Rev. Mr. William Arnot, Miniſter of the goſpel at Kenneway, 7 Copies.
Mr. Andrew Aitken, portioner in Elfrighill.
James Anderſon, portioner in Govan.
William Aitken, merchant in Kirkcaldy.
James Abercrombie, dyer there.
James Anderſon, tennant in Doctoun.
John Archer, taylor in London.
Gilbert Amos, inn-keeper there.
Andrew Adams, joiner there.
James Anderſon, baker in Glaſgow.
William Aitken, weaver there.
John Acton, in Moſsfield.
Robert Alexander, merchant in Stirling.
James Adam, merchant there.
James Aitken, merchant in Port-Glaſgow.
David Anderſon, dyer in Dunfermline.
William Anderſon, farmer in Philiphaugh.
John Atchiſon, farmer in Whitemuir.
John Alexander, farmer in Glenholm pariſh.
Andrew Anderſon, weaver in Peebles.
Peter Anderſon, houſe-wright in Greenock.
Archibald Aitken, weaver there.
John Anderſon, paſtorer.
Mrs. Kathrine Aitchiſon, in London.

B

THE Rev. Mr. Andrew Black, miniſter of the goſpel at Killeny, in Ireland.
The Rev. Mr. John Beattie, miniſter of the goſpel at Newbleſs, in Ireland.
The Rev. Mr. John Brown, miniſter of the goſpel in Haddington.
The Rev. Mr. John Belfrage, miniſter of the goſpel at Falkirk, 4 copies.
Mr. John Bennet, preacher of the goſpel.
Ballie Michael Broad, merchant in Selkirk.
Mr. George Buchanan, merchant in Glaſgow 14 copies.
John Brown, bookſeller there, 14 copies.
William and Archibald Blacks, merchant taylors there, 7 copies.
John Bryce, printer there.
David Black, tobacconiſt there.
Andrew Buchanan, weaver there.
Chriſtopher Beck, weaver there.
James Barclay, jun. ſkinner there.
John Buchanan, merchant in Greenock.
William Boyd, overſeer of the rope-work in Port-glaſgow.
John Brown, merchant in Linton-bridge.
Andrew Brown, merchant in Dunbar.
Hugh Brown, merchant in Dalray.
John Baxter, land-ſurveyer in Loan-head.
William Brown, merchant in Stirling.
Thomas Borland, merchant in Perth.
Patrick Blacklaw, merchant there.
Thomas Broadie, Portioner in Kinnaſwood.
Charles Brown, druggiſt in Edinburgh.
John Bracklehurſt, in Moſsfield.
Alexander Barr, barber in Gorbals.
Charles Brown, farmer in Shiels.
Charles Bell, ſhoemaker in Perth.
John Beugo, in eaſt Calder,
Edward Bolton, grazier near Alnwick.
James Bryden, farmer in the pariſh of Newlands.
James Bell, farmer in Longridge.

C

THE Rev. Mr. Thomas Clark, miniſter of the goſpel at Ballibea and Monaghan, in Ireland, 7 copies.
The Rev. Mr. George Coventry, miniſter of the goſpel at Stitchel.
The Rev. Daniel Cock, miniſter of the goſpel at Crawfurd's-Dyke.
The Rev. Mr. Patrick Crighton, miniſter of the goſpel at Wooler.
Mr. Robert Campbell, preacher of the goſpel.
Ballie William Currie, merchant in Selkirk.
Mr. Robert Clark, taylor in London, 6 copies.
James Coldſtream, dyer there.
William Cleugh, merchant there.
Samuel Colier, tobacconiſt in Glaſgow.
Robert Currie, merchant in Edinburgh.
John Calder, farmer in the pariſh of Nigg, near Aberdeen.
John Crumbie, in Weſt-port Edinburgh.
John Croſs, miller at Braidiſholm, Old Monkland
William Crielman, Bonnet-maker in Kilmarnock.
John Currie, tennant in the Craigs, Dunfermline pariſh.
Robert Coventry, portioner in Airlery.
George Clunie, candle-maker in Dunfermline.
James Cuthbert, merchant in Perth.
James Clapperton, farmer at Gala-bridge.
Patrick Connel, merchant in Stirling.
John Callender, dyer in Bathgate.
Alexander Calder, farmer in Weſter-Bingower.
James Call, gardiner to the earl of Northumberland.
Walter Cunningham, couper in Alnwick.
Thomas Cruickſhanks, merchant in Aberdeen.
Mrs. Cuſhnie, relict of Peter Cuſhnie, merchant there.
Miſs. Helen Cruickſhanks there.
Miſs. Nelly Cruickſhanks, in Broadgate there.

D

THE Rev. Mr Alexander Dick, miniſter of the goſpel at Aberdeen.
Mr. William Dundaſs, taylor in London, 6 copies.
Mr. Ebenezer Dickie, taylor there.
John Donaldſon tobacconiſt there.
Matthew Davidſon, ſurgeon in Perth.
Mr. Robert Donaldſon, merchant in Glaſgow.
Patrick Duncan, writer there.
John Dun, merchant in Sanquhar
Charles Davidſon, free-holder in Cannongate of Alnwick.
Andrew Dick, tennant in Deichmont.
James Dickſon, tennant in Ingraſton
William Dury, farmer.

E

THE Rev. Mr. Henry Erſkine, miniſter of the goſpel at Roberton.
Mr. Thomas Edmunds, preacher of the goſpel.
Mr. Edward Ewans, merchant in Rotterdam.
James Edmond, portioner in Conney-hill.
George Edmund, merchant in Crawfurd's-dyke.

F

THE Rev. Mr. James Fiſher, miniſter of the goſpel at Glaſgow.
The Rev. Mr. David Forreſt miniſter of the goſpel at Inverkeithen.
The Rev Mr. James Fletcher, miniſter of the goſpel at Liddiſdale.
Mr. John Fairly, preacher of the goſpel.
Ballie James Fleming, hammerman in Rutherglen,
Mr. Alexander Forſyth, ſhoe-maker in London.
John Fiſher, farmer in Cardroſs.
Nathaniel Forſyth, ſtay-maker there.
Adam French, weaver in Dunfermline.
Henry Flakker, portioner in Annafreigh.
James Forreſt, in Biggar-miln.
William Finlay, in Starlaw. His daughter Janet wife of Alexander Russell, Bathgate, was my maternal grandmother. To her I used to read out of these volumes.

G

MR. Robert Greig, of Lethangy.
Mr. Andrew Gray, portioner of Lillisleaf. A R Simpson, 52 Queen St. Edinburgh
Ballie John Gib, merchant in Stirling
Mr. John Gray, printer in Edinburgh.
Charles Grinley, merchant in Glaſgow.
Andrew Gallaway, merchant there.
James Gray, baker there.
John Gilfillen, barber there.
William Gregg, merchant there.
Thomas Gallaway, Merchant in Stirling.
James Graham, of Weſter-cauſwayend.
Hugh Graham, tennant in Sclateheugh.
Archibald Galbreath, carman in Greenock.
Alexander Gibſon, maſon in Aniſtoun.
Mrs. Gray, baker in Greenock.

H

THE Rev. Mr. David Horn, miniſter of the goſpel at Cambuſnethen, 8 copies.
The Rev. Mr. William Hutton, miniſter of the goſpel at Dalkeith, 7 copies.
The Rev. Mr. Archibald Hall, miniſter of the goſpel at Torphichen.
Robert Harper, A. M. profeſſor of natural philoſophy in the king's college of New York, in America.
Mr. William Hyſlop, merchant in Boſton, New England, 30 copies.
David Hogg, dyer in London.
George Hoy, of the wood of Portmoak.
George Houſhold, ſugar-refiner in Glaſgow.
John Haddin, weaver there.
George Hunter, maſon in Edinburgh.
William Hunt, merchant in Dunfermline.
John Harley, merchant there.
Archibald Hunter, weaver in Roſsland.
George Hall, farmer in Brachal.
Alexander Harper, farmer in Auchincoath.
John Henderſon, farmer in Rink.
John Henderſon, farmer in Methelhill.
John Hutton, baker in Perth.
James Hogg, wool-comber in Aberdeen.
Robert Hall, merchant in Stirling.
John Harly, gardiner there.
James Haſtie, farmer at Hanginſhaw.
John Hogg, farmer in Huleſton.
Thomas Henderſon, farmer near Falkirk.
James Heugh, baker in Bathgate,
John Hill, ſhop-keeper in Gateſhead.
Robert Hamilton, tennant in Kirknewton, Bathgate.
Hugh Heugh.

I

ARCHIBALD INGRAM, Eſq; Lord provoſt of Glaſgow.
Ballie Andrew Ingles, merchant in Kirkcaldy.

J

THE Rev. Mr. John Jervie, miniſter of the goſpel at Perth.
The Rev. Mr. James Johnſton miniſter of the goſpel at Echelſechen.
Mr. Alexander Jerdan merchant in Newcaſtle.
Patrick Jameſon, maſon, and conveener of the trades in Edinburgh.
Michael Jameſon, king's coupar in Port-glaſgow.
Andrew Johnſton, in Mid-Calder.
Mrs. Jeffery, relict of Hugh Jeffery merchant in Aberdeen.

K

THE Rev. Mr. William Kidſton, miniſter of the goſpel at Stow.
The Rev. Mr. William Knox, miniſter of the goſpel at Lochachry, in Ireland.
The Rev. Mr. Joſeph Ker, miniſter of the goſpel at Balligony, in Ireland.
Mr. William Kilgour, tennant in Seafield.
Duncan Kidſton, dyer there.
William Knewiſs, cabinet-maker in London.
Andrew Kelly, farmer in Skirling.
Patrick King, workman in Glaſgow.

Mr. William Kinloch, tennant in Kowſland.
John Kelly, farmer in Corniſtoun, Liberton pariſh.
James King, in Gifford walk-miln.
Lawrence Kid, farmer in Cockerny.
Samuel Kinloch.
Andrew Kippen, glover in Perth.
Mrs. Elizabeth Kilgour in London.

L

THE Rev. Mr. Thomas Liſter, miniſter of the goſpel at Dundee, 7 copies.
The Rev. Mr. John Low, miniſter of the goſpel at Biggar.
Mr. Matthew Lynd, preacher of the goſpel, near Lara, in Ireland.
Peter Liddel of Weſt-Mains.
William Lang, merchant in Glaſgow, 4 copies.
John Lochhead, wright there.
James Lethem, taylor there.
James Logan, cabinet-maker there.
John Lendrum, merchant in Aberdeen.
Robert Lamb, merchant there.
Archibald Logan in Pancartland.
William Laidlaw, farmer in Birkwood.
Robert Laing, ſhoemaker in Liberton pariſh.
Thomas Landal, at Balhouſie.
Mrs. Mary Laurie, in Carſewell.

M

THE Rev. Mr. Patrick Mathie, miniſter of the goſpel at Aughtermuchty.
The Rev. Mr. James Mair, miniſter of the goſpel at Linton.
The Rev. Mr. John M'Ara, miniſter of the goſpel at Bruntſhiels.
The Rev. Mr. Thomas Mair, miniſter of the goſpel at Orwel.
The Rev. Mr. Thomas Main, miniſter of the goſpel in Bellerony, in Ireland.
The Rev. Mr. Hugh M'Gill, miniſter or the goſpel at Clananees, in Ireland.
The Rev. Mr. John M'Millan, miniſter of the goſpel at Sandhills.
The Rev. Mr. Andrew Moir, miniſter of the goſpel at Selkirk.
The Rev. Mr. John M'Aula, miniſter of the goſpel at Dereneuſe, in Ireland.
The Rev. Mr. William Martin, miniſter of the goſpel in Kells-county of Antrim, in Ireland.
Captain William M'Cun. in Greenock.
Mr. James M'Gie of Berryknows.
David Millie, manufacturer in Path-head.
David Moriſon, baker in Kinroſs.
James Meikle, ſurgeon in Carnwath.
George Miller, merchant in Glaſgow, 30 copies.
Allan M'Aulay, gardener in Glaſgow.
John Menzies, baker there.
Archibald M'Farlane, weaver there.
Duncan M'Farlane, weaver there.
James Mitchel, ſhoe-maker in London.
Andrew Moleſs, merchant in Perth.
David Millar, merchant in Calder.
James Moriſon, merchant in Perth.
James Moriſon, weaver in Dumblane.
Alexander Mein, portioner of Eilden.
George Mether, tobacconiſt in Alnwick.
George Moodie, tennant in Lithamond.
Robert Murray, farmer in Kilbrichin.
John Murray, in Groſs-cauſey.
Robert Meſſer, inn-keeper at Harrot-houſe.
Aleſon Meſſer, farmer at Thornalee.
William Mitchel, at Sevogbank.
Hugh M'Callum, weaver in Greenock.
John Maxwell, merchant in Paiſley.
Mrs. M'Nair, relict of Duncan M'Nair, late weaver in Glaſgow.

N

THE Rev. Mr. Robert Nickle, miniſter of the goſpel at Kelſo.
Mr. John Noble of Periſhlands, preacher of the goſpel.
Mr. John Nimmo of Windeals.
William Newlands, merchant in Bathgate.
Robert Nimmo, farmer in Kirktown, Pennicook.
William Noble, farmer of Windeals.

O

MR. James Oliphant, preacher in Gorbals.
Mr. Robert Oliphant, weaver in Scotland-well.

P

THE Rev. Mr. John Patiſon, miniſter of the goſpel at Edinburgh.
Bailie John Pagan, merchant in Glaſgow.
Mr. William Pagan, merchant there.
James Pateſon, wig-maker in London.
Alexander Pirie, merchant in Aberdeen.
John Paton, tennant in Over-Williamſton.
David Paterſon, farmer in New-hall.
William Paterſon, farmer in Watſton pariſh.
James Paul, weaver in Greenock.

R

THE Rev. Mr. James Robertſon, miniſter of the goſpel at Newcaſtle, 7 copies.
The Rev. Mr. William Ronaldſon, miniſter of the goſpel at Scarvagh, in Ireland.
Bailie James Rodger, merchant in Selkirk.
Mr. John Roſs, merchant in Rotterdam.
James Ruſſel of South-Inch.
William Rob, merchant in Glaſgow.
David Ruſſel, merchant there.
James Reid, cabinet-maker in London, 7 copies.
John Ryeburn, cheeſe-monger there.
Alexander Robertſon, wig maker there.
Hugh Rowand, portioner in Govan.
John Runſhiman, gardiner in Stirling.
Mr. James Reſton, weaver at Radd-hill, near Glaſgow.
John Rammage of Ladyurd.
Thomas Riſk, weaver in Caltoun of Glaſgow.
John Reid, merchant in Dunfermline.
James Reid, ſenr. merchant in Perth.
James Robertſon, farmer in the Hood, at Stirling.
William Robertſon, portioner in the Weſt-Greanges.
John Roſs, merchant there.
James Ronaldſon in Pinkerton.
William Rutherford, farmer in Hauden.
James Ritchie, farmer in Glenholm pariſh.
Thomas Ritchie, farmer in Abingtoun.
Alexander Ralſton, weaver in Greenock.
Thomas Rennie, gardiner there.
Alexander Ritchie, coupar in Port-Glaſgow.

S

THE Rev. Mr. John Smith, miniſter of the goſpel at Dunfermline.
The Rev. Mr. Robert Shirra, miniſter of the goſpel at Kirkcaldy.
The Rev. Mr. John Swanſton, miniſter of the goſpel at Kinroſs.
The Rev. Mr. Alexander Shanks, miniſter of the goſpel at Jedburgh.
The Rev. Mr. David Smith, miniſter of the goſpel at St. Andrews.
Bailie James Scott, ſtamp-maſter in Rutherglen.
Mr. Robert Storie, merchant in Rotterdam.
Andrew Storie, merchant there.
William Smith, printer in Glaſgow.
George Shaw, merchant in Bathgate.
Joſeph Street, in Moſefield.
Thomas Steel, ſurgeon in Pennicoock.
James Smith, weaver in Midholm.
Robert Savage, wig-maker in Potter-row
William Scot, weaver in Caltoun of Glaſgow.
Thomas Scot, fleſher in Perth.
David Swan, near Eddeſtoun.
William Somervil, farmer in Croft-hill.
John Simſon, maſon in Port-Glaſgow.
John Stevenſon, weaver in Govan.

T

THE Rev. Mr. John Thomſon, miniſter of the goſpel at Donaghclong, in Ireland.
The Rev. Mr. David Telfer, miniſter of the goſpel at Down.
The Rev. Mr. John Thorburn, miniſter of the goſpel at Douglaſs.
Mr. John Telfer of Whinbuſs.
Alexander Thorntoun of Croſewood-hill.
John Tennant of Weſter-Inch.
Archibald Torrance, merchant in Glaſgow.
Thomas Tait, wright there.
James Thomſon, writing-maſter in Edinburgh.
William Threipland, merchant near Stirling.
James Thomſon, merchant in Paiſley, 7 copies.
Thomas Thomſon, tennant in Eaſter-gellet.
Thomas Taylor, farmer at Brether-Shiels.
William Thomſon, farmer in Haſſendean.
William Thurborn, farmer in Camiſtoun.
John Telfer, farmer in Carwood.
William Turner, ſmith in Greenock.
Mrs. Tolmie, relict of Peter Tolmie, ſhoemaker in Aberdeen.

U

Mr. ROBERT URIE, printer in Glaſgow, 108 copies.

W

THE Rev. Mr. James Wylie, miniſter of the goſpel at Scoon.
The Rev. Mr. Thomas Wilſon, miniſter of the goſpel at Tyron.
Mr. Thomas Wardlaw, of Nether-Beath.
William Watts, bookſeller in London, 7 copies.
David Watſon, dyer there, 7 copies.
John Watſon, merchant in Dyſart.
Andrew Wilſon, maltſter in Kirkcaldy.
Alexander Williamſon of Peter's-hill.
John Whyte, portioner in Pitendreich.
Thomas Whyte, portioner in Eaſter-Bagedie.
John Whyte, portioner there.
Samuel Watſon, merchant in Edinburgh.
David Waddel, merchant in Glaſgow.
Robert Wilſon, weaver there.
John Wier, merchant in Stirling.
Hugh Wilſon, merchant in Paiſley.
Alexander Wright in Cowſland.
James Waddel of Craighead.
William Wardrobe of Cult.
James Waddel of Wholehouſeburn.
William Wilſon, tennant in Bingour.
John Wyld, tennant in Ladyurd.
John Whittel, fleſher in Perth.
George Webſter, overſeer of the brick-work near Aberdeen.
William Wardlaw, in Haddington.
Alexander Wardrope, wright in Bathgate.
Thomas Wilſon, currier in Kelſo.
James Wilſon, farmer in Winter-muir.
Andrew Wilkie, ſtay-maker in Alnwick.
William Watſon, farmer in Niſbit.
Robert Wilſon, indweller in Biggar.
James Whyte, farmer in Kilbride.
Mrs. Watſon, relict of John Watſon, late merchant in Glaſgow.

Y

BAILIE David Young, copper-ſmith in Perth.
Mr. John Young, merchant in Edinburgh.
Mr. John Young, dyer in London.
Robert Young, coupar in Glaſgow.
John Young, coupar there.
William Young, farmer in Eagleſholm.

PREFACE,

GIVING A SHORT

ACCOUNT of the AUTHOR.

THE Rev. Mr. HENRY ERSKINE, the AUTHOR's father, was amongſt the younger of the thirty-three children of RALPH ERSKINE of Shielfield, a family of conſiderable ſtanding in the county of Merſe, deſcended from the antient houſe of MAR. He was born at Dryburgh, the ordinary ſeat of the family, in the year 1624, and ordained to the miniſtry, by the Preſbyterians in England, at Cornwal, Northumberland; but ſoon after the Reſtoration, was ejected from his charge there, in virtue of the Bartholemew act, or act of Uniformity, requiring the Preſbyterian miniſters, in that kingdom, to receive their ordination a-new, in the Epiſcopal form, and to comply with the Liturgy and Ceremonies of the church of England. After a variety of ſufferings in the perſecuting period, under the reigns of CHARLES II. and JAMES VII. he was called, ſoon after the merciful and happy Revolution, to be miniſter at Chirnſide, five miles from Berwick, on the Scot's ſide, where he continued till the day of his death, on the 10th, of Auguſt, 1696. aged ſeventy-two. *

Beſides ſome other children, he left two ſons behind him, Meſſrs. EBENEZER and RALPH, whoſe miniſterial endowments are well known, not only in this, but in other churches of Chriſt.

Mr. EBENEZER ERSKINE, the eldeſt of the two, was ordained to the paſtoral office, in Portmoak, in the Preſbytery of Kirkcaldy, Anno 1703. where he continued, till he was tranſported to Stirling, in the year 1731. In April 1732. he was choſen Moderator of the Synod of Perth and Stirling; and, of courſe, had to preach at the opening of the ſaid Synod, at Perth, Oct. 10th, the ſame year. His text, on that occaſion, was Pſal. cxviii. 22. The ſtone which the builders refuſed, is become the head-ſtone of the corner. In his ſermon on this text, he uſed that freedom and plainneſs of ſpeech, which he thought became him, on ſuch a public occaſion, againſt ſome of the prevailing evils of thoſe times; particularly, againſt the act of the preceding Aſſembly, [May 1732.] lodging the deciſive power of electing and calling miniſters, (where an accepted preſentation did not take place,) in the majority of a conjunct meeting of heritors and elders, no other qualification being required of heritors, but that they be Proteſtants; which they might nominally be, and yet very much diſaffected to the government both in church and ſtate: beſides, by the above reſtriction, it is obvious, that heads of families were quite excluded from any voice in the election.

Againſt this act, and other violent methods practiſed by the judicatories at that time, of obtruding miniſters upon diſſenting and reclaiming congregations, Mr. Erſkine very faithfully teſtified; which ſo nettled ſome of the members, who had an active hand in carrying on the arbitrary meaſures complained of in the ſermon, that, at the ſecond ſederunt of that Synod, they accuſed Mr. Erſkine of uttering many offenſive expreſſions in his diſcourſe before them: and though others, at the ſame time, declared, they were ſo far from being offended, that they heard nothing but ſound and ſeaſonable doctrine delivered; yet the foreſaid party inſiſted ſtrenuouſly for the appointment of a Committee, to recollect theſe expreſſions, which had given offence, and lay them before the Synod in writing, at their next diet, which was done accordingly.

After three days warm reaſoning on this affair, the Synod did, by the ſmall majority of ſix voices, find Mr. Erſkine cenſurable, for the expreſſions contained in the proceſs, and which, they alledged, were emitted by him, in his ſermon at the opening of the ſaid Synod. Againſt which ſentence he proteſted, and appealed to the next enſuing General Aſſembly.

When the ſaid Aſſembly met at Edinburgh, in the month of May 1733. they approved the proceedings of the Synod of Perth and Stirling; and appointed Mr. Erſkine to be rebuked and admoniſhed by the Moderator, at their own bar; which was accordingly done: whereupon Mr. Erſkine proteſted, that in regard the Aſſembly had found him cenſurable, and had tendered a rebuke and admonition to him, for things he conceived agreeable to, and founded upon the word of God, and our approven Standards, therefore he ſhould be at liberty, to preach the ſame truths, and teſtify againſt the ſame, or like evils, on all proper occaſions. Unto which Proteſtation and Declaration, as containing a Teſtimony againſt the act of Aſſembly 1732. and aſſert-

* See the Continuation of Calamy's Life of Baxter, p. 681. See alſo Scots Magazine for October, 1752. p. 510.

ing

ing their privilege and duty, to teſtify publickly againſt the ſame, or like defections, other three miniſters gave in a written adherence, under form of inſtrument; and then all the four withdrew, not reſolving to carry their Teſtimony any farther, but to return home to their charges, and act in conformity with their Proteſtation, as Providence ſhould give them opportunity: and, probably, there never had been a Seceſſion, if matters had ſiſted here.

But the prevailing party were determined, to ſcrew church authority to a far greater height; and accordingly, about eleven o' clock the ſame night, the four Brethren were ſummoned, by the Aſſembly's officer, to compear at the bar of the General Aſſembly, to-morrow, at ten before noon. When, in obedience to this citation, they came, next day, to the bar, without a queſtion put to them, they were immediately ordered to retire with a Committee, who were inſtructed to deal with them, about withdrawing their Proteſt. This Committee, after ſome time ſpent with them, returned, and made report, That the four Brethren continued firmly reſolved to adhere to their Proteſtation; but without relating any of the reaſons advanced by them, in ſupport of this their reſolution: whereupon the Aſſembly, by a great majority, ordained that the ſaid four Brethren appear before the Commiſſion in Auguſt next, and then ſhew their ſorrow for their conduct, in offering to proteſt againſt a ſentence of the Aſſembly, and retract the ſame: and, in caſe they do not ſhew their ſorrow, and retract, as ſaid is, the Commiſſion is impowered and appointed to ſuſpend them from the exerciſe of their miniſtry: and, in caſe they act contrary to the ſaid ſentence of ſuſpenſion, the Commiſſion in November is impowered and appointed to proceed to a higher cenſure againſt them.

As the Commiſſion in Auguſt, that year, paſſed the ſentence of ſuſpenſion, contrary to the mind of many of their members, ſeverals of whom, both miniſters and elders, diſſented therefrom; ſo their proceeding in November enſuing, to a higher cenſure, was carried only by the Moderator, Mr. John Goldie's caſting vote. Thereafter, the ſaid Commiſſion came to their final ſentence, which ſtands in their minutes, in the following terms;——" The Commiſſion did, " and hereby do, looſe the relation of Mr. Ebenezer Erſkine, miniſter at Stirling, Mr. William Wil- " ſon, miniſter at Perth, Mr. Alexander Moncrief, miniſter at Abernethy, and Mr. James Fiſher, " miniſter [then] at Kinclaven, to their reſpective charges; and do declare them no longer mi- " niſters of this Church: and do, hereby, prohibite all miniſters of this Church, to employ them, " or any of them, in any miniſterial function. And the Commiſſion do declare the churches of " of the ſaid miniſters vacant, from, and after the date of this ſentence."

This arbitrary procedure laid the four Brethren under the neceſſity, of declaring their SECESSION, [not from the Church of Scotland, but] from the prevailing party in the Judicatories thereof, who had now caſt them out from miniſterial communion with them: and this their Seceſſion, given in, at that time, in writting, under form of inſtrument, was chiefly founded upon the following grounds, namely, That the ſaid prevailing party were carrying on a courſe of defection from our reformed principles; and particularly, were ſuppreſſing miniſterial freedom and faithfulneſs, in teſtifying againſt the preſent backſlidings of the Church, and inflicting cenſures upon miniſters, for witneſſing, by proteſtations and otherwiſe, againſt the ſame.

It is true, the Aſſembly which met in May 1734. did ſo far abate the rigour of the above ſentence, that they impowered the Synod of Perth and Stirling, to unite the four Brethren to the communion of this Church, and reſtore them to their reſpective miniſterial charges; " but, with " this expreſs direction, That the ſaid Synod ſhall not take upon them, to judge of the legality " or formality of the former proceedings of the Church Judicatories, in relation to this affair; " or, either approve or cenſure the ſame." Whereby it plainly appears, that the acts and ſentences paſſed againſt the Brethren, were legal and formal ſtill, notwithſtanding of all that the Aſſembly 1634. did; and muſt continue to be ſo, till ſome ſubſequent Aſſembly ſhall think fit to reverſe and annul them, which is not likely to be done in our day: ſo that both preaching and proteſting, againſt acts and deciſions of Aſſembly, (however bad,) if once paſſed, are ſtill, in the judgment of the prevailing party, in the preſent Judicatories, neither due nor regular miniſterial freedom, which any miniſters of this Church may uſe, without being liable to cenſure.

This ſhort narrative, of the riſe of that memorable event of the SECESSION in Scotland, was the more requiſite, in regard of the after-acceſſion that the worthy Author made thereunto, as ſhall be preſently related. Mean-time, to finiſh the account of the Rev. Mr. Ebenezer Erſkine, whoſe freedom and faithfulneſs was the firſt occaſion of all the above procedure *, it ſhall only be obſerved, that he lived ſeveral years after this, labouring in the work of the miniſtry, amongſt a very numerous congregation in Stirling, till it pleaſed the Lord to remove him by death, June 2d, 1754. in the ſeventy-fourth year of his age, and fifty-firſt of his miniſtry.

* See a Pamphlet, intitled, The true State of the Proceſs againſt Mr. EBENEZER ERSKINE.

It

His younger brother, the Rev. Mr. RALPH ERSKINE, Author of the following Sermons, was born at Monilaws, in Northumberland, March 15th, 1685.——After he had made good progreſs in the languages at the ſchools, he went through the ordinary courſes of philoſophy and divinity, at the college of Edinburgh, with ſucceſs: and being well reported of, by all who knew him, for a converſation becoming the goſpel, he was entered upon trials in the Preſbytery of Dunfermline; and afterwards licenſed by them, to preach as a probationer, June 8th, 1709. In which capacity, he exerciſed the talents, which the Lord had graciouſly given him, within the bounds of the ſaid Preſbytery, both in vacancies, and ſettled congregations, to the great ſatisfaction of his hearers, both miniſters and people, as his certificate from that Preſbytery, dated April 4th, 1711. expreſly bears.

At length, upon application from the pariſhioners of Dunfermline, the Rev. Mr. Samuel Charters at Inverkiethen, was appointed to moderate in a call amongſt them, which, on the firſt day of May, 1711. turned out very harmoniouſly for Mr. Ralph Erſkine, and was approven by the Preſbytery, on the very day following, as regularly proceeded in. Then the uſual pieces of trial for ordination, were preſcribed, in which he acquitted himſelf, to the entire ſatisfaction and approbation of the preſbytery: whereupon they ſet him apart to the office of the holy miniſtry, in the collegiate charge of Dunfermline, on the ſeventh day of Auguſt, 1711. the Rev. Mr. James Culbert, miniſter at Culroſs, having preſided in that action, who preached upon Eph. iv. 11, 12, 13. And he gave ſome, apoſtles; and ſome, prophets; and ſome, evangeliſts; and ſome, paſtors and teachers; for the perfecting of the ſaints, for the work of the miniſtry, for the edifying of the body of Chriſt: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the meaſure of the ſtature of the fulneſs of Chriſt.

Having, now, a paſtoral relation, to a particular flock, in the Church univerſal, he determined not to know any thing among them, ſave Jeſus Chriſt, and him crucified: was inſtant in ſeaſon, and out of ſeaſon, in all the parts of his miniſterial labour; gave himſelf wholly thereunto; exhorting the people under his truſt, from houſe to houſe, in the way of family-viſitation; examining them, more publickly, upon the principles of our holy religion; and viſiting their ſick, when called; beſides his main work of preaching the everlaſting goſpel among them, wherein he had a very pleaſant and edifying gift. He preached by turns with his colleague, every Sabbath and Thurſday, through the year; and afterwards, when he had none for ſeveral years before his death, he officiated alone, both on Sabbath and week-day very punctually.

He delivered few extemporary productions. His ſermons were, generally, the fruit of diligent ſtudy, and aſſiduous application. For the moſt part, he wrote all; and kept very cloſe by his notes in the delivery, except when the Lord was pleaſed to carry in upon his mind, in time of preaching, ſome pat and appoſite enlargements, whereof he had no previous ſtudy, and to which he, nevertheleſs, chearfully gave way, as coming from him who has the tongue of the learned, who knows how to ſpeak a word in ſeaſon to him that is weary *, and who ſays, It ſhall be given you the ſame hour, what ye ſhall ſpeak: for it is not ye that ſpeak, but the Spirit of your Father which ſpeaketh in you †.——He was bleſſed with a rich and fertile invention, as appears in the agreeable and entertaining diverſity, wherewith his heads of doctrine are, every where, adorned. The poetical genius, with which he was happily endowed, contributed not a little, to the embelliſhing of his diſcourſes, with a variety of pertinent epithets, and ſtricking metaphors.

It will eaſily appear to the judicious and experienced reader, in peruſing theſe Volumes, that he had a dexterous faculty in ranſacking the plagues of the heart, and deſcribing the diverſifyed circumſtances of ſerious and exerciſed ſouls, as if they had fully communicated their ſeveral doubts and caſes unto him; while, in the mean time, he was only unfolding the inward experience of his own ſoul, what he himſelf felt of the workings of unbelief, and of the powerful influence of the holy Spirit, in oppoſition thereunto; which could not but quadrate or agree, with the operations of the ſelf-ſame Spirit of God in others; for, as in water, face anſwereth to face, ſo doth the heart of man to man ‡.—No trial or temptation can befal any of the ſaints, but ſomething ſimilar thereunto, has happened to others before them, as the apoſtle aſſerts, when he ſays, There hath no temptation taken you, but ſuch as is common to man ‖.—This eminent ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, being exerciſed to godlineſs from his youth, became, by the grace of God, a ſcribe inſtructed unto the kingdom of heaven, whom our Lord compares to an houſholder, which bringeth forth out of his treaſures things new and old ⁋.—Old invariable truths, but new illuſtrations of them; old experiences, the ſame with other ſaints before, but new obſervations and improvements upon them: ſo that, with abundance of propriety, it may be ſaid, that there are few perplexing doubts, or intricate caſes, which the ſaints have, at any time, been exerciſed with, that are not, in ſome one or other other of the following ſermons, very judiciouſly ſolved, and diſtinctly elucidated, or cleared up.

* Iſa. l. 4. † Matth. x. 19, 20. ‡ Prov. xxvii. 19. ‖ 1 Cor. x. 13. ⁋ Matth. xiii. 52.

In a word, his gift of preaching, was both inſtructive and ſearching. Few, perhaps, outſhine him, in the nervous and convincing manner, whereby he confirms the truth of the doctrines he is inſiſting on; and fewer ſtill, in the warm and pathetic addreſs, in which he inforces the practice of them. — He peculiarly excelled, in the ample and free offers of Chriſt he made to his hearers, and the captivating and alluring method he uſed, for gaining their compliance, or their receiving and reſting on Chriſt alone for ſalvation, as thus freely and fully exhibited unto them in the goſpel.—On all which accounts, he was juſtly eſteemed, and much followed, as one of the moſt popular and edifying preachers of his day.——During his time, ſacramental ſolemnities, at Dunfermline, were much crouded: numbers of people, from ſeveral parts of the kingdom, reſorting unto them, and the Lord was pleaſed to countenance ſome of theſe communions, with ſignal evidences of his gracious preſence and influence, to the ſweet and comfortable experience of many.

When the General Aſſembly, in their fifth act 1720. very ſummarily condemned a book, intitled, The Marrow of Modern Divinity, after it had been under the conſideration only of two different ſederunts of that Aſſembly, and a Committee of the whole houſe; the Rev. Mr. Ralph Erſkine was one of the twelve miniſters, who gave in a Repreſentation and Petition to the Aſſembly 1721. bearing, That many goſpel-truths were wounded by the foreſaid condemnatory ſentence; and craving that the ſame might be repealed. The Aſſembly referred this whole affair to their Commiſſion; and the Commiſſion, which met in November that year, did put twelve Queries to theſe miniſters, to be anſwered by them in writing, at their meeting in March following: againſt which time, their written and ſubſcribed anſwers were given in accordingly, and ſoon after publiſhed to the world. The conſequence of which was, that the Aſſembly, which met in May 1722. paſſed another act, intitled, Act concerning doctrine, confirming and explaining the acts 5th and 8th of the General Aſſembly, Anno 1720. In the ſaid act, " the General Aſſembly finds, that the " ſaid Aſſembly 1720. in theſe acts, had no deſign to recede from the received doctrine of this " Church, nor by them have done injury to truth, nor given countenance to error.——And con- " ſidering, that the Brethren's deſire, that the act 1720 ſhould be repealed, is unjuſt, the Aſſembly " does refuſe the ſame." Whereby it evidently appears, that whatever truths, [by way of amendment,] may ſeem to be aſſerted by the Aſſembly 1722. they can be underſtood in no other ſenſe, than will agree with the act of Aſſembly 1720.; in regard, the act of Aſſembly 1722. is expreſly ſaid to be in vindication of the two acts of Aſſembly 1720. and for wiping off, (what they are pleaſed to call,) injurious aſperſions, caſt upon them by the Brethren in their Repreſentation.

The Rev. Mr. Erſkine was a very zealous and ſtrenuous defender of theſe precious goſpel-truths, condemned through the ſides of that book, intitled, The Marrow of Modern Divinity, in the above acts of Aſſembly 1720, and 1722. A few of them ſhall be here enumerated, for the ſake of thoſe Readers, who have not, perhaps, ſeen and peruſed a Paper, intitled, Act of the Aſſociate Presbytery, concerning the Doctrine of Grace; where they are more fully vindicated.

1. That there is a revelation of the divine will in the word, affording a warrant to offer Chriſt, unto all mankind without exception; and a warrant to all freely to receive him, however great ſinners they are, or have been: and that this gift is made to mankind only, and not to fallen angels.——The oppoſite error, couched in the foreſaid acts is, That the free and univerſal offer of Chriſt in the goſpel, to mankind ſinners, as ſuch, is inconſiſtent with particular redemption, or infers an univerſal redemption, as to purchaſe; and that this offer is made only to the elect, or ſuch as have ſome previous qualifications, commending them above others.

2. That in juſtifying faith, there is a real perſuaſion in the heart of a ſinner, that Chriſt is his; that he ſhall have life and ſalvation by him; and that whatever Chriſt did, for the redemption of mankind, he did it for him: or, that in juſtifying faith, there is the ſinner's application and appropriation of Chriſt, and the whole of his ſalvation, to himſelf in particular, upon the gift or promiſe of him in the goſpel, to ſinners of Adam's family in general.——In oppoſition hereunto, the condemnatory ſentence of the two Aſſemblies above-mentioned, plainly bears: That in juſtifying faith, there is only a belief and perſuaſion of the mercy of God in Chriſt, and of Chriſt's ability and willingneſs to ſave all that come to him:—evidently importing, that we muſt firſt come to Chriſt, and be true believers, before we are warranted to appropriate him to ourſelves, upon ſcripture-ground. This is a notion of faith the Arminians can ſubſcribe to, in a full conſiſtency with their ſcheme.

3. That all precepts do, in a ſtrict and proper ſenſe, belong to the law; and that the infinitely meritorious obedience and ſufferings of Chriſt, our Surety, are the believer's only plea, in anſwer ſwer to the law's demand of perfect obedience, and complete ſatisfaction to juſtice. Whereas, in the above acts of Aſſembly, it is fairly imported, that the goſpel, ſtrictly taken, is a new preceptive law with ſanction, binding to faith, repentance, and other duties, conſequential to the revelation of the grace of God; and expreſly aſſerted, that though the righteouſneſs of Chriſt alone, founds our title to eternal glory, yet it is by our own perſonal holineſs we obtain the poſſeſſion thereof; and that this our perſonal holineſs has a CAUSAL influence upon our ſalvation, and is a fœderal and conditional mean thereof; which is a plain retrograde motion to the covenant of works, from which Chriſt came to deliver us.

4. It is a truth, That neither believers, nor unbelievers, under a goſpel-diſpenſation, are obliged to ſeek juſtification by their own obedience, as the above acts of Aſſembly aſſert, with reference, at leaſt, to unbelievers. On the contrary, it is the ineſtimable privilege, and unqueſtionable duty of all the hearers of the goſpel, believers or unbelievers, to ſeek juſtification, only, through the obedience and ſatisfaction of Chriſt, imputed to them, and received by faith alone; there being no other name by which they can be juſtified and ſaved.

5. It is a precious goſpel-truth, That all believers "are delivered from the moral law, as a "covenant of works, ſo as thereby they are neither juſtified nor condemned †." Whereas, the ſaid acts of Aſſembly affirm, That the law, as to believers, is not really diveſted of the promiſe of life, and threatening of death. From whence it undeniably follows, That if the law, as to believers, is not diveſted of its promiſe of eternal life, then they muſt be under the commanding power thereof; and if it is not diveſted of its threatening of death, they muſt be under the condemning power of it ſtill, after all that Chriſt has done and ſuffered in their ſtead; quite contrary to the above doctrine in our Larger Catechiſm.

6. God ſeeth not iniquity in true believers, as it is a traſgreſſion of the law, as a covenant of works, but only as it is a tranſgreſſion of the law, as a rule of obedience, in the hand of a Mediator, they not being without law to God, but under the law to Chriſt ‡. Whereas it is contained in the foreſaid acts, That God ſeeth iniquity in believers, as it is a violation of the covenant of works, and conſequently with an eye of vindictive juſtice notwithſtanding of their being under the covering of his law-magnifying righteouſneſs.

In the following diſcourſes, the Reader will find the above, and other truths, relative to the doctrine of grace, clearly illuſtrated; and the oppoſite errors, ſolidly confuted, particularly in Vol. I. Serm. VIII. intitled, Law-death, Goſpel-life.

This controverſy about the book, intitled, The Marrow of Modern Divinity, wherein the Rev. Author was ſo deeply concerned on the defenſive ſide, has been the moſt uſeful and beneficial to this Church, of any other, that has been broached, ſince the beginning of this Century: for it broke up at a time, when the Neonomian, or Half-arminian ſcheme, was like to be univerſally adopted; in regard of the great encouragement, (with regrete be it ſpoken) that it met with from the General Aſſembly, in the year 1717. who, the ſame day, wherein they very ſuperficially diſmiſſed the proceſs againſt Profeſſor Simſon, which had taken up much of the time of three Aſſemblies ſucceſſively, in labouring to ſcreen him from cenſure, though according to their own confeſſion, "He had vented ſome opinions not neceſſary to be taught in Divinity,—and which "tend to attribute too much to natural reaſon, and the power of corrupt nature *:" Yet when a doctrine came before them, which tended to advance the freedom of grace, in oppoſition to man's natural powers of performing that which is ſpiritually good, it gets their condemnatory ſentence at once; for, ſo ſoon as the following propoſition, advanced by the Preſbytery of Auchterarder, for putting a ſtop to the ſpread of Arminian and Baxterian errors in their bounds, was brought in from the Committee of Bills, viz. That it is not ſound and orthodox to teach, that we muſt forſake ſin, in order to our coming to Chriſt, and inſtating us in covenant with God; immediately, upon a ſhort hearing of parties, the ſaid Aſſembly "declare their abhorrence of the foreſaid propoſition, as unſound and moſt deteſtable ‖." Whereby they ſay, upon the matter, that we muſt be holy, or ſo and ſo qualified, in order to our coming to Chriſt, or believing on him: or, which is the ſame thing, That we muſt waſh ourſelves, before we come to the fountain opened for ſin and uncleanneſs; which is the very ſoul of the Arminian and Neonomian ſcheme. Whereas, it is obvious from the Scriptures, and our Standards, that a natural man can no more forſake his ſin, or qualify himſelf for the grace of God, than the Ethiopian can change his ſkin, or, the leopard his ſpots.

To prevent the fatal tendency of ſuch a deciſion, ſo much in favour of the legal and Arminian ſide, the Marrow of Modern Divinity is reprinted at Edinburgh, in the year 1718. with a recommendatory preface, by a worthy miniſter of this Church, the Rev. Mr. James Hog at Carnock; wherein he affirms, That this book "contains a great deal of the marrow of revealed and goſ-† Larger Cat. Queſt. 97. ‡ 1 Cor. ix. 21. * Act ix. Aſſem. 1717. ‖ Act x. Aſſem. 1717. of the ſame date with the former, viz. May 14th, ſaid year.

" pel-truth, ſelected from authors of great note, clearly enlightened, and of moſt digeſted ex" perience." That the matter contained in it, " is of the greateſt concernment, viz. the ſtating
" aright both law and goſpel, and giving true and clear narrations of the courſe of the cloud of " witneſſes, in the following of which, many have arrived at a glorious reſt." All which, ſays he,
" are managed in ſuch a manner, as to detect the rocks on either hand, upon which the dan" ger of ſplitting is exceeding great."

Upon the publiſhing of this new edition of the Marrow, it took a very ſpeedy run among people of different ſtations; wherefore the General Aſſembly 1719. inſtructed their Commiſſion to " enquire into the publiſhing of books and pamphlets, tending to the diffuſing of that condemn" ed propoſition, *viz. That it is not ſound and orthodox to teach, that we muſt forſake ſin, in order to our
" coming to Chriſt.*" In conſequence of this inſtruction, the Commiſſion of that Aſſembly appointed a Committee of their number, (the leading members whereof, being the ſame that had ſuch an active hand in condemning the Preſbytery of Auchterarder for the foreſaid propoſition,) to take under their cognizance, the Marrow of Modern Divinity, as a book of the above tendency, and bring in an Overture, concerning the ſame, to the enſuing General Aſſembly 1720. which they did in the condemnatory way, and it was paſſed, and publiſhed among the printed acts of that Aſſembly, as above related. This animated the Rev. Author, and ſeveral other worthy miniſters, to make a ſtand in defence of theſe condemned doctrines, to the great benefit of real religion, and the true intereſts of precious and immortal ſouls, when the whole land was in danger of being overflowed, with the deluge of Legaliſm, which every intelligent perſon knows to be an inlet to Popery.

When, in the ſecond Proceſs againſt profeſſor Simſon, concluded by the Aſſembly 1729. it was found clearly proven, that he had vented and taught ſeveral propoſitions, utterly inconſiſtent with the ſupreme Deity, and neceſſary Exiſtence of the eternal Son of God; Mr. Erſkine teſtified, with a becoming zeal, againſt theſe dangerous, and ſoul-ruining errors, in ſome of his ſermons preached and publiſhed at that time *.

Though he did not join in the Seceſſion, when it was firſt ſtated, in Nov. 1733. yet he concurred with other miniſters, in the Proteſtations which were taken againſt the Cenſures, paſſed upon the four Brethren, at that time; and afterwards, when he ſaw no probability of the Judicatories redreſſing the grievances, complained of by the ſeceding miniſters, and others, but that they were ſtill going farther off from the foundation which God had laid in Zion, He, together with the Rev. Mr. Thomas Mair at Orwel, gave in a Declaration of Seceſſion, from the preſent Judicatories of the Church of Scotland, to the Rev. Preſbytery of Dunfermline, (whereof they were members,) met at Dunfermline, the ſixteenth day of February 1737 years. This Declaration was preſented to the Aſſociate Preſbytery, met at Orwel, on the eighteenth day of the ſame month; and the Preſbytery finding, that the grounds thereof were the ſame, upon the matter, with theſe, upon which they themſelves had, ſome time ago, declared their Seceſſion from the ſaid Judicatories, they unanimouſly agreed to receive and admit them, as members of the Aſſociate Preſbytery; and appointed their names to be added to the Preſbytery-roll. In Mr. Erſkine's adherence to Mr. Mair's grounds of Seceſſion, he has theſe words; " The four Brethren, being particu" larly ſtirred up to this work, by a remarkable chain of providences, I think myſelf obliged to " join with them in this matter; not as they are a Preſbytery or Judicatory ſeparate from the " Church of Scotland, but as they are a part of the ſame Church, conſtituting themſelves in the " Lord's name, as a Judicatory of miniſters aſſociate together, diſtinct from the preſent Judicatories of " this Church, and witneſſing againſt their corruptions and defections.——If the Judicatories—
" were acting a contrary part, and putting hand to Reformation, the ſame reaſons that induce " to this withdrawing, would neceſſarily induce to a returning; which I cordially wiſh, I may
" quickly ſee good reaſon for:" But this he never ſaw, for he died a ſteady member of the Aſſociate Body, having, to his grief, ſeen the grounds of Seceſſion more and more corroborated.

About the beginning of the year 1742. there appeared at Cambuſlang, and ſome other places in the Weſt of Scotland, ſome very uncommon emotions among the people; ſuch as, convulſions, ſwoonings, imaginary repreſentations of ſtrange ſights, and the like; as may be ſeen from the journals of theſe times, ſtill extant in the hands of many. This extraordinary work, (as it was then called,) could not miſs to attract the attention, both of the ſerious and profane, who made very different improvement thereof: the one ſort were thereby confirmed in their infidelity; and the other, ſet upon a more narrow ſcrutiny and ſearch, into the ſcriptural and poſitive evidences of true converſion, ſo as to diſtinguiſh betwixt what was real and ſolid, and would ſtand the teſt of the unerring ſtandard, and that which was only imaginary and deluſive. It is not doubted, doubted, but ſeveral exerciſed Chriſtians, acquainted with religion before, might get benefit to their ſouls, by means of the ſound doctrine, preached by ſome of the miniſters, who reſorted to Cambuſlang on that occaſion; but, at the ſame time, the converſion of others, ſo loudly boaſted of, was much ſuſpected; in regard the ſubjects of that extraordinary work, which took place at that time, were preſently filled with an indifferency as to any one profeſſion by another, and an utter averſion to all contending for the Reformation-principles of the Church of Scotland, in oppoſition to every contrary extreme; this being the grand object Mr. Whitefield had in view, in all his miniſtrations while in this kingdom, to induce the people therein, to give as kindly reception to Prelacy, as to Preſbytery; and to blunt the edge of their zeal againſt the defections that were then, and are ſtill taking place in this Church *.

* See, amongſt other places, Vol. I. p. 322, 454, 577.

One thing cannot be denied, that the promoters of this work defended the fanciful ſights, which the ſubjects of it pretended to be privileged with, by alledging, that an imaginary idea of Chriſt as man, was helpful to the faith of his being God-man. In oppoſition to this extravagant notion, the Rev. Author publiſhed a very elaborate Diſcourſe, intitled, FAITH NO FANCY; or, a Treatiſe of mental Images: wherein he diſcovers the abſurdity of the above principle, That an imaginary idea of Chriſt as man is helpful to the faith of his being God-man: Firſt, by ſhewing the ignorance, error, idolatry, and atheiſm, that are, each of them, included in the doctrine of an imaginary idea of Chriſt as man †; and then, in conſequence hereof, proves, at great length, that the foreſaid imaginary idea, is ſo far from being helpful and neceſſary, that it is moſt hurtful and contrary to, or quite everſive of the faith of his being God-man.

As this excellent treatiſe may not, perhaps, be in the hands of every one who may read the following Sermons, a few paſſages of many, ſhall be quoted, as a ſpecimen of the Author's accurate ſentiments on this head; and the rather, as it is doubted, if this nice and delicate point was ever directly and of purpoſe handled by any Divine before him. "To aſſert, ſays he, that "a man cannot believe in Chriſt, without an imaginary conception or idea of him as man, is to "aſſert, That we cannot believe, without that which neceſſarily preſents a falſe Chriſt to the "imagination, and conſequently hath a native tendency to lead people off from the true Chriſt "in the word ‡." This he proves by the following arguments, amongſt others. "1. The true "Chriſt in the word is the perſon, God-man: but Chriſt repreſented in the imaginary conception, "as man, is not the perſon, God-man; therefore it leads to a falſe Chriſt in the imagination. "(2.) The true Chriſt held forth in the word, is exhibited there, as a Prophet, Prieſt, and King: "but no imaginary conception can have any offices or relations whatſoever for its object.— "(3.) The true Chriſt in the word, is a whole Chriſt. The imaginary conception of him, as man, "is not a conceiving of a whole Chriſt, but of a mere human body. Therefore that idea muſt "lead to a falſe Chriſt in the imagination ‖."—Again, he argues thus. "How ſtrangely muſt "the man be attached to his imaginary notions, who makes the repreſentation of Chriſt in "them, as true, as the repreſentation of him in the divine word?—An imaginary idea, to give "us as true a picture of Chriſt in the fancy, as the infallible truth of God gives us in the word! "If ſo, then a corporeal Chriſt, in the imagination, is as truly the object of faith, as the true Chriſt, "IMMANUEL, God with us, is in the word; and ſo a Chriſt within us, as good as a Chriſt without us. Here is a wide door opened to dreadful Enthuſiaſm, and damnable Quakeriſm ‖‖." Farther, ſince human nature cannot be ſeparated from a perſon, either human or divine, then, ſays he, "The image of Chriſt's human nature, muſt either repreſent a human perſon, or a divine "one; if it repreſent a human perſon, then it is not the true image of Chriſt, who never had, and "never was a human perſon; and ſo it conveys nothing but lies and falſehoods. If the image "of Chriſt repreſent a divine perſon, then it is the image of God; for Jeſus Chriſt is God, the "ſecond Perſon of the glorious Trinity: and conſequently, it is but an idolatrous picture of "him who is God, expreſly forbidden in the ſecond commandment.——There is no image of "Chriſt lawful for us to contemplate, but in the glaſs of the goſpel, 2 Cor. iii. 18. To con"template an image of Chriſt formed in the brain, is to gaze upon an idol, and ſo to turn the "mind from him who is all, to that which is nothing; For we know, ſays the apoſtle, that an idol is "nothing in the world, and that there is no other God but one," 1 Cor. viii. 4. —Moreover, he adds, "The imaginary idea of the man Chriſt Jeſus, is impoſſible; for the man Chriſt, is God as well as "man, in one Perſon: therefore, this imaginary idea of Chriſt as man, repreſenteth to the "mind no truth, but a lye: for, when by this, men alledge they think upon Chriſt, they are "under a groſs deluſion; for Chriſt as man, is not God, nor a perſon either: and conſequently "the object of that idea, is not the true Chriſt. True faith is founded upon the knowledge of "truth; but it is ſtrange doctrine, that ſuppoſes we cannot believe in Chriſt, without imagining "a falſehood ††." And, to quote no more, if it is aſked, "Is not Chriſt's manhood, or humanity, † Faith no Fancy, p. 42,—57. ‡ Ibid. p. 143. at the foot. ‖ Ibid. p. 144. ‖‖ Ibid. p. 146.  Ibid. p. 156, 157. †† Ibid. p. 161.

* See the Author's APPENDIX to the Pamphlet, intitled, Fraud and Falſehood diſcovered, publiſhed Anno 1743. which concludes thus; "May this generation be delivered from an imaginary faith, religion, and converſion; which will neither unite them to the true Chriſt, "nor bring them to the true heaven, nor keep them out of the true hell." See likewiſe ſeveral ſermons of his, in Vol. II. particularly, one intitled, The true Chriſt, no new Chriſt... p. 180, 181. The Reader may conſult alſo, p. 158, 159, 174, 240.

" a part of, or rather what relates to the object of faith? It is answered, Not separately, or apart " from the divine Person; and therefore it is no part of the object of faith, as it is the object of " fancy, or of any imaginary idea; because that fancy or idea can conceive of it no other way, " than separately or apart from the divine Person; for this good reason, because it can conceive " of no more than that which is corporeal †."——" From the union of the two distinct natures " in one individual Person it is, that the actions of each nature, are the actions of the same one " Person. Thus it was the Person of God-man who fulfilled all righteousness, preached, wrought " miracles, suffered, died.—Hence,—to speak of the doing, suffering, and death of Christ as " man, or in his human nature, as if they were not to be considered as the doing, suffering, " and death of the Person, God-man, is to weaken and undermine our redemption by him, and " destroy the merit and value of his obedience and satisfaction ‡."

What a pity is it, that such an useful book should not be more universally known, and carefully perused! For therein, the more learned would find several of the received, though unguarded maxims of philosophy, which lay the foundation for manifold mistakes in Divinity, solidly and convincingly refuted; and, at the same time, Christians in general, whether learned or unlearned, have the grounds of their faith, especially in that essential article, concerning the PERSON of our Redeemer, as God-man, clearly and distinctly unfolded, in opposition to delusive fancies, and imaginary notions.

When the unhappy difference about the religious Clause in some burgess oaths, viz. " Here I " protest before God, that I confess and allow with my heart, the true religion presently professed " within this realm, and authorized by the laws thereof; I shall abide thereat, and defend the " same to my life's end, renouncing the Roman religion, called Papistry:" When the idle debate, about the lawfulness of this clause, was forced in upon the Associate Synod; the majority, of whom the Author was one, staved it off for some Synods, as a point, which had never formerly been controverted in this Church, even in her purest times. At length, in a thin meeting, at the end of the Synod, in April 1746. when several members, who had opposed any controversy on this head, were gone off; then they who had insisted upon the sinfulness of the foresaid clause, having kept their party together, catched the opportunity of the Synod's adjournment to a second week, and by mere stratagem, got the sinfulness of the said clause, voted by a scrimp majority. Against which the Rev. AUTHOR, and several other ministers protested, and promised to give in their reasons in due time: which they did accordingly. But, when at next meeting in September, these reasons and answers were called for, the answers were not in readiness: wherefore a question was moved by the protesting ministers, " Whether the decision " about the religious clause in some burgess oaths, pushed by this Synod," [that is, by a party in the Synod, who took the advantage of the absence of several members on the opposite side,] " in " April 1746. shall now, or afterward, be made a term of ministerial and Christian communion, " ay and until the making of the same to be so, shall be referred, by way of overture, to Pres- " byteries and Kirk-sessions, for their judgment in the same,—or not?" The putting of this question was strenuously opposed by the party, who were for condemning the burgess oath; at length, they went in by a vote, to delay the voting of it till next Synod. At the said next meeting of Synod in April 1747. the members being fully conveened, the foresaid question came natively upon the field from the minutes. But, instead of protesting against it, (as they ought to have done, if it was such a monstrous iniquity, as they afterwards make it to be;) they themselves did put a shift to it: that is, proposed another question, in order to try by a vote, which of the two should be voted; and yet when it carried, that their decision should not be a term of communion, as above, they immediately went off, though they were the minority, and separated themselves, in a manner, absolutely unparalleled in the Christian Church, from the resurrection of our Lord and Saviour, to this day. The rise and scope of this unprecedented Schism, is admirably well delineated by this Rev. Author, in a Pamphlet of his, published that same year, intitled, FANCY NO FAITH: or, A few humble Admonition and Information to Seceders, against the sinful Constitution of some brethren into a pretended Judicatory, &c.

In this book, amongst a variety of other things, he observes, p. 5. That " though the rise of " the late rupture was a rash decision, pretending to find the religious clause in some burgess oaths " to be sinful, yet the main topic upon which they pretend to have founded this, is, by declar- " ing their quarrel with the present national profession and settlement of religion: that is, with the " true religion presently professed within this realm, and authorized by the laws thereof,—and with " the renounciation of Popery at present. Whence it is evident, like sun-shine, they have taught " themselves and their followers, to renounce that religious clause as sinful, at the dreadful " expence of renouncing their own Testimony: wherein, and in the papers it adopts, the true " religion presently professed in the acts of the Revolution Parliament, and established, or au- " thorized by the laws of the land: that is, the authorized doctrine, worship, discipline, and " government of the Church of Scotland; or, the profession of this national Church, and the

† FANCY NO FAITH, p. 107. ‡ Ibid. 308.

" excellent Conſtitution thereof, is again and again, yea, twenty or thirty times eſpouſed and " adopted: in ſo much, as that unleſs they ſhall alſo find it unlawful, to make that the matter " of an oath, which they themſelves have already made the matter of a ſolemn Teſtimony, they " cannot find that foreſaid clauſe to be ſinful, but by finding the Teſtimony to be ſinful alſo; " renouncing what is therein called the happy and glorious Revolution, and our excellent, valuable, " and beautiful Preſbyterian conſtitution," &c. He obſerves further, concerning their declaring the religious clauſe in ſome burgeſs oaths to be ſinful, " That, as the ſaid deciſion was paſſed " at the very time when we were threatened with an inundation of popiſh idolatry and tyranny; " and as the paſſing thereof, made it a ſin to renounce Popery, as well as a ſin to ſwear an ad- " herence to the true religion preſently authorized; ſo the raſh authors of that deciſion, ſeem to " be righteouſly left of God, to embrace a new religion, or a new profeſſion and conſtitution, lead- " ing them to ſo many pieces of the Roman religion, called Papiſtry, as to aſſume to themſelves " a popiſh and arbitrary power, to urge a popiſh and implicite faith, and to carry on popiſh and " prelatic practices;—arrogating to themſelves the name of the Synod,—the only Synod;—declaring " and enacting, that all Preſbyteries, Kirk-ſeſſions, and Communities of the Aſſociation, were " ſubject to them; and that all Courts, whether Preſbyteries or Seſſions, who were not ſubor- " dinate to them, were unlawful Courts; and that all miniſters and elders, who were not ſub- " ordinate to them, had loſt the keys of the kingdom of heaven.——All this being without the leaſt " ſhadow of argument from ſcripture or reaſon, is a piece of conduct, ſo manifeſtly diſorderly " and ſchiſmatical, that it hath not, in all its circumſtances, a parallel, among the wildeſt Separatiſts and Sectaries, that aroſe in any age of the Chriſtian Church *."

The Rev. Mr. Erſkine expoſes the foundation of this unprecedented Schiſm, in a moſt convincing and ſtriking light, to all who are not ignorantly bigotted, and implicitely led, in the following terms:— " The religious clauſe, ſays he, of the burgeſs oath, is a ſwearing to the " true religion preſently profeſſed and ſettled by law; which true religion none dare find fault with; " but the Brethren's arguments make it a ſwearing to the preſent profeſſion and ſettlement, which " being faulty, they make this profeſſion and ſettlement, the thing ſworn to, that they may find fault " with the foreſaid religious clauſe of the oath. But, as no man can lawfully ſwear, either to " his own, or other mens profeſſion, in this ſenſe; otherwiſe, he would be but ſwearing to " himſelf, or to men, and not to God, which is profanity; ſo, the thing ſworn to in the burgeſs " oath, is neither the PROFESSION nor SETTLEMENT, but ony the true Religion PROFESSED " and SETTLED.

" The beſt profeſſion and ſettlement in the world, is but a human thing, may be imperfect, defec- " tive, and unfit to be ſworn to; but the true religion, which is God's religion, Chriſt's religion, (as " the ſtanding laws term it,) is a divine thing, and to ſwear to it, is the only thing ſworn to in " that oath. To confound theſe two, is to confound an imperfect law, with a perfect religion " eſtabliſhed and authorized by that law; and thus to confound the thoughts of people with a " notion, that when they ſwear to maintain the true religion authorized by law, they ſwear to " maintain ſome other thing that is not the true religion, namely, the authorized profeſſion, or Re- " volution ſettlement of religion;—whereas that religious clauſe of ſome burgeſs oaths, imports a " ſwearing, neither to a profeſſion nor a ſettlement, as I ſaid, but to the true religion profeſſed and " ſettled: and therefore, though it were never ſo clear and evident, that the profeſſion and ſettle- " ment is wrong in certain reſpects, yet it is as clear as the ſun, that the true religion profeſſed " and ſettled is right; and, that this true religion, and nothing elſe, except the renouncing of Po- " pery, is the matter ſworn to in the foreſaid clauſe †." This is the true ſtate of the argument, in its juſt and proper light, which the oppoſite party have never been able to diſprove to this day.

Beſides this Pamphlet, the Rev. Author publiſhed alſo two others on this controverſy, viz. The LAWFULNESS of the religious clauſe in ſome burgeſs oaths, aſſerted; and OBSERVATIONS upon the conduct of the ſeparating Brethren, particularly, upon the unwarrantable grounds of their pretended Conſtitution, &c. wherein he ſhews a direct oppoſition betwixt their former, and preſent profeſſion and Teſtimony; their inconſiſtency in condemning the burgeſs oath, as a ſin of the firſt magnitude; and yet allowing their burgeſſes to continue their traffic upon ſuch a ſinful footing; and the vaſt odds, or wide difference there is, betwixt the firſt conſtitution of the Aſſociate Preſbytery, and this new and unprecedented conſtitution, at Edinburgh, April 10th, 1747. Our firſt conſtitu- " tion, ſays he, was the fruit and effect of our being ſeparated from our Brethren, who thurſt us " out from their miniſterial communion. But this new conſtitution, was the effect and conſequent " of our Brethren's ſeparating themſelves. We find in ſcripture, a wide difference betwixt a paſſive " and an active ſeparation from Church communion. We ſee a bleſſing reſting on the head of " them who have been ſeparated from their brethren; but a note of ignominy upon theſe that " wilfully ſeparate themſelves, Jude ver. 19.—The fruit of our firſt conſtitution, was the joy of all " the friends of the covenanted Reformation; but the fruit of this new pretended conſtitution, is the " ſaddening of the hearts of the Lord's remnant every where.—The fruit of our firſt conſtitution,

* Fancy no Faith, p. 7,—11. † Ibid, p. 35, 36.

" was the gathering of the Lord's remnant into one; but the fruit of the ſecond, is the rending and " breaking them to pieces *;" and ſeveral other remarks of this kind, to excellent purpoſe.

Thus far concerning the Rev. Mr. RALPH ERSKINE's controverſial Writings, wherein he gives ſufficient proof of his ability in fair and candid argumentation from ſcripture and reaſon, without ſophiſtical cavilling, or ſubtil evaſion. Had theſe polemical performances been re-printed in this Collection, the Reader would not have been troubled with the above excerpts from them; which, indeed, are deſigned, not only to give a view of the Author's judgment in theſe controverted points; but likewiſe to induce all who want information, to have recourſe to the Treatiſes themſelves, (which may be had from the Editor of theſe Volumes,) and, it is hoped, they would have abundance of pleaſure and ſatisfaction, to compenſate their labour in peruſing them.

His poetical talent was employed chiefly on divine ſubjects; he had no reliſh and taſte for any other. They who have any appetite for the ſubſtantial and ſolid food of the word, to the nouriſhment of their precious and immortal ſouls, and do not want to be ſtarved and decoyed with empty notions, and fanciful flights, will readily meet with ſuitable and agreeable entertainment in the poetical performances of this Rev. Author, which are here re-publiſhed in the Second Volume of his Works. They begin with that excellent Poem, intitled, GOSPEL SONNETS, or SPIRITUAL SONGS, in ſix parts, viz. The Believer's Eſpouſals, Jointure, Riddle, Lodging, Soliloquy, and Principles. This book (as the Author obſerves) underwent ſeveral impreſſions at Edinburgh, ſome of them without his knowledge, and very incorrect; but at length, upon leave aſked and given, it was re-printed at London, with large additions and great improvements, made by himſelf, upwards of ten years before his death. The reaſon of calling this Poem by the name of Goſpel Sonnets, is given by himſelf, in his preface to this London edition.—" When I conſidered (ſays he) the man- " ner, wherein much of it is written, and how far true poeſy is, in my opinion, ſuperior thereto; " I thought it preſumption in me to give it any lofty title; and that it was enough if it paſt " under the name of SONNETS: yet, on the other hand, the matter contained therein, being ge- " nerally ſo great evangelical myſteries, as are not below the ſtudy of elect angels in heaven, " 1 Pet. i. 12. far leſs below the conſideration of the moſt intelligent minds and elevated thoughts " of men, under whatever denomination, on earth; I thought I might preſume to diſtinguiſh " them from all idle and profane ſcribbles under that name, by the high adjunct and epithet of " GOSPEL Sonnets." The uſefulneſs of this poetical Compend of the revealed principles of our holy religion, for the promoting of the life of faith, comfort, and holineſs, will, it is hoped, be experienced by many of the ſaints of God, to the lateſt poſterity.

Next after the Goſpel Sonnets, was publiſhed a PARAPHRASE, or Large explicatory Poem upon the SONG OF SOLOMON; which indeed is an evangelical Comment, done in a ſtrain adapted to the New-teſtament diſpenſation, upon that allegorical or figurative part of holy Writ. Of the ſame paraphraſtic or explanatory nature, are his Poems on ſome ſelect paſſages of the book of Job, intitled, Job's Hymns. But, as a Verſion in common metre, as near to a literal tranſlation as the idiom of the Engliſh language would permit, of all the Scripture Songs, was very much wanted, [except of the Pſalms of David; there being already a moſt excellent tranſlation of theſe, allowed by the authority of the General Aſſembly of the Church of Scotland, and appointed to be ſung in congregations and families, upwards of an hundred years ago;] ſo it was warmly recommended to the Rev. Author, by all his Brethren, that as he had already emitted a ſhort verſion of the Song of Solomon, and book of the Lamentations, as free of the paraphraſe, as the ſenſe would allow; he might, in like manner, make out a verſion in metre of all the other Scripture Songs. Theſe he completely finiſhed, a little time before his laſt ailment, and they were carefully tranſcribed from his ſhort-hand characters, by his eldeſt ſon, the Rev. Mr. Henry Erſkine, and publiſhed after his death.

This faithful and laborious ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, continued publickly uſeful in his Maſter's work, till within a few days of his departure; for he preached in his own pulpit on Sabbath Oct. 29th, and by means of a nervous fever, wherein, nevertheleſs, he had the exerciſe of his judgment and ſenſes, he fell aſleep in Jeſus on Monday ſe'n-night thereafter, being Nov. 6th, 1752. in the ſixty-eight year of his age, and was buried in the church-yard of Dunfermline, on Thurſday the 9th of foreſaid month.

Beſides other children, he had three ſons miniſters in the Aſſociation, the Rev. Meſſrs. Henry, John, and James Erſkines: the firſt ordained at Falkirk, the ſecond at Leſlie, and the third at Stirling. All of them died in the prime of their age, when they had given the world ground to conceive big hopes of their after-uſefulneſs.—He had a daughter alſo, married to the Editor of theſe Volumes. His only ſon, now in life, is Robert, a merchant in London.

That the whole of his Works here publiſhed, both Sermons and Poems, may be profitable to the Churches of Chriſt, while ſun and moon endure, is the ſincere and unfeigned deſire of his ſurviving friend, at the date hereof,

* Obſervations, &c. p. 39, 40, 41.

GLASGOW, Jan. 16th, 1764. JAMES FISHER.

CONTENTES.

SERMON I.

THE Beſt Match; or, the Incomparable Marriage between the Creator and the Creature, Page 1

Isa. liv. 5. Thy Maker is thy Huſband.

The words being viewed in their connexion and ſcope, and wrapt up in a doctrinal propoſition, the following general topics are illuſtrated, viz.

1. That there is a marriage-relation betwixt Chriſt and believers, proved, ibid.
2. The nature of this marriage opened up, ibid.
3. Reaſons aſſigned why Chriſt comes under ſuch a relation to his people, 4
4. Application of the whole, in ſundry uſes, ibid.

SERMON II.

The Rent Vail of the Temple; or, Acceſs to the Holy of Holies by the Death of Chriſt, 8

Mat. xxvii. 51. And, behold the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom.

The words being analized and explained, and their proper ſignification being aſcertained, the following general heads of method are illuſtrated, viz.

1. What that vail is that interpoſed between God and us enquired into, 10
2. How the death of Chriſt hath rent that vail, ibid.
3. In what manner the vail is rent, 11
4. For what end the vail is rent, narrated, 12
5. Inferences deduced for application, 13

SERMON III.

The Sword of Juſtice awakened againſt God's Fellow, 22

Zech. xiii. 7. Awake, O ſword, againſt my ſhepherd, and againſt the man that is my fellow, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

After a brief introduction, clear analization, and ſuccinct explication of the words, the following general topics of diſcourſe are treated of, viz.

1. The character of the perſon againſt whom the ſword doth awake, enquired into, 23
2. The nature and quality of this ſword opened up, 28
3. The manner how this ſword did awake, and the import of it, 30
4. The ſpecial hand Jehovah had in calling this ſword to awake againſt this glorious perſon evinced, 31
5. The reaſons of the doctrine adduced, why the Lord of hoſts ordered the ſword of juſtice to awake againſt his Shepherd, ibid.
6. The application of the ſubject in ſundry inferences, 34

SERMON IV.

Chriſt the People's Covenant, 47

Isa. xlii. 6. —I will give thee for a covenant of the people.—

The connexion of the words being traced, viewed in their ſcope, divided, explained, and ſummed up in a compendious propoſition, the following general heads of method are proſecuted, viz.

1. Some remarks offered concerning the covenant in general, 49
2. How Chriſt is the covenant, and in what reſpects he bears that name, 51
3. For whoſe benefit he is ſo; and thus ſhew that he is the covenant of the people, 52
4. By whoſe authority he is ſo; and here his divine ordination, and being given of God for that end, are ſpeak of, 54
5. Some reaſons of the doctrine offered, why he is given to be a covenant, and why a covenant of the people, 57
6. Inferences are deduced for the application of the ſubject, 58

SERMON V.

Preventing Love; or, God's Love to us, the Cauſe of our Love to him, 74

1 John iv. 19. We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us.

After an introduction to, an analization and explication of the words, and their ſenſe given in a doctrinal obſervation, the following topics are diſcourſed, viz.

1. God's love to his people, 75
2. The ſaints love to God, 79
3. The influence his love hath upon ours as the cauſe of it, 83
4. The application of the whole in ſundry uſes, 84

SERMON VI.

The Militant's Song; or, the Believer's exerciſe while here below, Pag. 92

Psal. ci. 1. I will ſing of mercy and judgment; unto thee, O Lord, will I ſing.

Here after an introduction unto the ſubject, and an analization of the text, four general topics are handled, viz.

1. What mercies the people of God meet with, and what it is in theſe that afford matter of a ſong, 93,—97
2. What judgments the people of God meet with, and what it is in them that may be matter of a ſong of praiſe, 97,—103
3. What this ſinging imports; and how we are to ſing of mercy and judgment, 103,—105
4. The reaſons why it is ſo ordered by the Lord, that his people ſhould have ground to ſing both of mercy and judgment, 105, 106
5. The application of the whole, in a variety of inferences, 106,—112

SERMON VII.

The Harmony of the divine Attributes diſpayed, in the Redemption and Salvation of Sinners by Jeſus Chriſt, 112

Psal. lxxxv. 10. Mercy and truth are met together, righteouſneſs and peace have kiſſed each other.

After the introduction and explanation of the words, four general heads of method are proſecuted, viz.

1. Who are members of the meeting; or, what are theſe attributes of God which do harmoniouſly conſpire together, propoſing their various claims, 114, 115
2. When and where did theſe parties meet together, 116,—118
3. How, and after what manner, they meet together and kiſs each other, 118,—120
4. Why, or for what reaſons, they have met together, and embraced each other, 120,—124
5. The application of the ſubject in ſundry inferences, 124,—130

SERMON VIII.

Law-death, Goſpel-life; or, the Death of legal Righteouſneſs, the Life of Goſpel Holineſs, 131

Gal. ii. 19. I through the law, am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.

The ſcope of the apoſtle being obſerved, the words analized and explained, and a compendious propoſition laid down, the following topics of diſcourſe are illuſtrated, viz.

1. The doctrine cleared and confirmed, 133
2. The believer's mortification, or death to the law, opened up, 234
3. The believer's vivification, or living to God enquired into, 140
4. The neceſſity of this death, in order to this life; or, the influence that our being dead to the law, hath upon our living to God, 145
5. The application of the ſubject, in four diſtinct uſes, 149

SERMON IX.

The Beſt Bond; or, the ſureſt Engagement, 167

Jer. xxx. 21. For, who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me, ſaith the Lord.

The ſcope of the prophet being noticed, and the words viewed in their connexion, analized, and explained, the doctrine laid down and confirmed, the following general heads are diſcourſed, viz.

1. Who this wonderful perſon is that engaged his heart to approach unto God, 169
2. The nature of the work he engages himſelf in, 170
3. The ſingularity of the fact, 174
4. The reaſons of the doctrine, viz. why Chriſt came under this engagement, &c. 176
5. Some inferences deduced for the application of the doctrine, 178

SERMON X,—XIX.

Goſpel-Principle the Foundation of Goſpel-Practice; or, the great Duty of receiving Chriſt, and walking in him, opened, 186

Col. ii. 6. As ye have received Chriſt Jeſus, the Lord, ſo walk ye in him.

After a copious introduction and ſuccinct diviſion of the words, ſhewing the ſcope of the apoſtle, and ſenſe of the verſe, the following general topics are handled at great length, viz.

1. The believer's character and dignity, as a receiver of Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, delineated, 188

2. The

2. The believer's duty, viz. to walk in Chriſt, opened, 199
3. The rule of the believer's duty, and the proportion it ſhould bear to the reception of Chriſt, evinced. 205
4. The connexion betwixt the character and the duty; or, between receiving Chriſt and walking in him, opened up, 213
5. An ample application, in a variety of inferences and uſes, 218

SERMON XX,—XXVII.

The Happy Congregation; or, the Great Gathering of the People to Shiloh, 279

GEN. xlix. 10. The ſceptre ſhall not depart from Judah, nor the lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him ſhall the gathering of the people be.

The words being viewed in their connexion, analized, and explained, difficulties obviated, and the true ſenſe aſcertained, the following general topics of diſcourſe are largely handled, viz.
1. Some remarks offered with reſpect to the nature and qualities of the gathering of the people to Shiloh, 279
2. Who the people are, of whom it is ſaid this gathering ſhall be, enquired into, 284
3. To whom this gathering of the people is to be, and in what reſpects it is to Chriſt, 287
4. The manner of this gathering, by what means, and in what method it ſhall be, 290
5. The ſpecial ſeaſons mentioned wherein this gathering doth, or ſhall take place, 302
6. The reaſons why this gathering of the people ſhall be to Shiloh, ennumerated, 315
7. A copious improvement of the whole, in an uſe of information and exhortation, 319

SERMON XXVIII,—XXXI.

The Main Queſtion of the Goſpel Catechiſm, WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST? 336

MAT. xxii. 42. What think ye of Chriſt?

After an introduction to the words, the connexion traced, the occaſion of propounding the queſtion aſcertained, the words themſelves divided, explained, their emphaſis pointed out, and the ſcope of them ſummed up in a doctrinal propoſition, the following general heads of method are illuſtrated, viz.
1. Some general remarks premiſed for clearing the doctrine, 338
2. The import of the queſtion pointed out, 340
3. The reaſons of the doctrine aſſigned, why this is the leading queſtion in the Chriſtian Catechiſm, 352
4. Application of the point, for informing our minds, trying our ſtate, and directing our thoughts and affections concerning Chriſt, 354

SERMON XXXII,—XXXVIII.

The Pregnant Promiſe with her Iſſue; or, the Children of Promiſe brought forth and deſcribed, 367

GAL. iv. 28. Now we, brethren, as Iſaac was, are children of promiſe.

After taking a view of the words in their connexion, dividing, explaining, and fixing the proper ſenſe of them, the following general topics are treated at great length, viz.
1. The promiſe whereof believers are the children, opened up, 369
2. This character, of their being the children of promiſe, unfolded; and in what reſpects they are ſo, inquired into, 378
3. The compariſon ſtated, or the parallel run, between them and Iſaac, and ſo the truth of the propoſition evinced, viz. that as he was, ſo they are the children of promiſe, 382
4. The grounds of the doctrine ennumerated, both with reference to the prolific virtue of the promiſe for begetting children to God, and alſo the pleaſure of the Promiſer, why he will have people to be children of promiſe, 386
5. Application of the ſubject, in an uſe of information, examination, caution, and exhortation, 390

SERMON XXXIX,—XLII.

The Saving Sight; or, a View of God in Chriſt, 440

JOHN xiv. 6. —He that hath ſeen me, hath ſeen the Father.—

The words being viewed in their connexion, analized, explained, and ſummed up in a doctrinal propoſition, the following general heads of method are handled, viz.
1. The oneneſs betwixt the Father and the Son, opened up, 441
2. Some remarks offered concerning a ſaving ſight of Chriſt, 443
3. In what reſpects they who ſee Chriſt ſee the Father, 447
4. In what manner the Father is ſeen in Chriſt, 451
5. The reaſons why theſe who ſee Chriſt, ſee the Father, 452
6. The application of the whole, in an uſe of information, examination, conviction, conſolation, and exhortation, 454

SERMON XLIII, XLIV.

The Gradual Conqueſt; or, Heaven won by little and little, 477

DEUT. vii. 22. And the Lord thy God will put out theſe nations before thee, by little and little.

Having divided and explained the words, viewed them in their ſpiritual meaning, and wrapt them up in a doctrinal obſervation, the following general topics are illuſtrated, viz.
1. Who are the true Iſrael of God, enquired into, 472
2. The heavenly Canaan, which they are brought to the poſſeſſion of, viewed, 473
3. What nations of enemies oppoſe them in their way to the heavenly Zion, enumerated, 474
4. The mighty Conqueror, The Lord their God, viewed and deſcribed, 476
5. The manner of the conqueſt, by little and little, 476
6. The reaſons of this gradual conqueſt, 485
7. The application of the whole in ſeveral uſes, 488

SERMON XLV,—LI.

The Strength of Sin, and how the law is the Strength thereof, opened up and unfolded, 496

1 COR. xv. 56. The Strength of ſin is the law.

The words being viewed in their connexion, analized and explained, there are two doctrinal propoſitions adduced, and ſeparately proſecuted. The FIRST is, That ſin is a very ſtrong and powerful thing. And from this obſervation, the following general heads of method are proſecuted, viz.
1. The nature of ſin enquired into, and opened up, 498
2. The ſtrength of ſin unfolded, by viewing the qualities and degrees of its ſtrength, 499
3. How the ſtrength of ſin diſcovers itſelf, evinced, 503
4. Whence the ſtrength of ſin comes, and where it lies, 507
5. Some inferences deduced for application, ibid.

The SECOND doctrine is, That the law of works is the ſtrength of ſin to the ſinner that hath violate and broken it. And from this propoſition, the following general topics are propoſed, viz.
1. Enquire what law is the ſtrength of ſin, 513
2. Shew what ſtrength it is that ſin hath from the law, 514
3. Shew what ſin the law is the ſtrength of, 515
4. How, and in what reſpect, the law is the ſtrength of ſin, 518
5. Whence it is that the law is the ſtrength of ſin, 521
6. Application of the whole, in an uſe of caution, information, examination, and exhortation, 523

SERMON LI.

The Mediator's Power in Heaven and Earth, 548

MAT. xxviii. 18. And Jeſus came, and ſpoke unto them, ſaying, All power is given unto me in heaven and earth.

After the words are divided and explained, and ſummed up in a doctrinal propoſition, the following general heads of method are handled, viz.
1. The truth of the propoſition illuſtrated from parallel texts and ſcripture inſtances, 549
2. The power that is delegated to, and reſides in the perſon of Chriſt, enquired into, 551
3. The extent of this power unfolded, as it is declared to be all power in heaven and earth, 554
4. The divine donation thereof touched at, by ſhewing when and how it was given to Chriſt, 555
5. The reaſons of the doctrine aſſigned, why all power in heaven and earth is given to him, 557
6. Sundry inferences deduced for the application, 559

SERMON LII.

The Female Preacher; or, the Woman of Samaria's Sermon to the Men of the City: or, the Self-humbling and Chriſt-exalting Influence of divine Diſcoveries, 572

JOHN iv. 29. Come, ſee a man that told me all things that ever I did; Is not this the Chriſt?

The context being viewed, the connexion traced, the words analized and explained, and wrapt up in a general propoſition, the following general topics are diſcourſed, viz.
1. What is to be underſtood by Chriſt manifeſting himſelf to a perſon, 574
2. What are theſe ſin-diſcovering and ſoul-debaſing effects of Chriſt manifeſting himſelf, 576
3. What are theſe Chriſt-exalting commendations wherein ſuch diſcoveries of Chriſt vent themſelves, 577
4. The reaſons why ſaving diſcoveries of Chriſt have ſuch a ſelf-debaſing and Chriſt-exalting influence, 580
5. The application of the whole in ſundry uſes, 581

SERMON LIII.

God's Great Name, the Ground and Reaſon of ſaving great Sinners, 590

PSAL. cvii. 8. Nevertheleſs he ſaved them for his name's ſake.

The words being divided, explained, and ſummed up in a doctrinal obſervation, ſeveral propoſitions laid down for clearing the doctrine, and parallel ſcriptures adduced for illuſtrating the truth of it, the following general heads of method are inſiſted upon, viz.

1. What is that name of God, for the ſake of which he ſaves, 591
2. What it is for God to ſave for his name's ſake, 593
3. What ſalvation he works for his name's ſake, 595
4. What is imported in this nevertheleſs; or, over what impediments God brings about ſalvation for his name's ſake, 596
5. Some reaſons offered why he ſaves for his name's ſake, 597
6. Some inferences deduced for the application, 598

SERMON LIV, LV.

Heaven's Grand Repoſitory; or, the Father's Love to the Son, and depoſiting all Things into his Hand, a ſtrong Encouragement to Faith, 661

JOHN iii. 35. The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

After an introduction unto, a diviſion, and explication of the words, and laying down the doctrinal propoſition, the following topics of diſcourſe are handled, viz.

1. The Father's love to the Son evinced, 602
2. The evidence of the Father's love manifeſted, by giving all things into his hand, 603
3. How the love of the Father, thus evidenced, in giving all things into his hand, is a ground of faith, 606
4. A very copious application of the whole, 608

In which application, beſides other things, the following points are proſecuted, viz.

(1.) That all things are in Chriſt's hand, demonſtrated, 614
(2.) The beauty of this diſpoſure pointed out, 615
(3.) The extent of this treaſure enquired into, 617
(4.) The manner how all things are in his hand, conſidered, 620
(5.) Motives and conſiderations laid down to excite and quicken our faith in this truth, 621
(6.) Directions offered for regulating our faith therein, 623

SERMON LVI.

The Law of God's Houſe, 627

EZEK. xliii. 2. This is the law of the houſe; upon the top of the mountain, the whole limit thereof round about ſhall be moſt holy; behold, this is the law of the houſe.

The words being viewed in their connexion, analized, explained, their proper meaning aſcertained, and ſummed up in a doctrinal propoſition, the following general heads of method are diſcourſed, viz.

1. The houſe of God treated of, 628
2. The nature of that holineſs, that is peculiar to the houſe of God, unfolded, ibid.
3. That holineſs is the law of the houſe, evinced, 629
4. The extent of this holineſs, required by the law of God's houſe, pointed out, 630
5. The privilege of acceſs to the moſt holy place, 632
6. That this privilege obliges the whole to be a moſt holy people, manifeſted, 635
7. The application of the whole, in ſundry uſes, ibid.

SERMON LVII.

The Little City beſieged, and delivered: or, the Deliverance of the Church by Chriſt, and the Ingratitude of Men to the glorious Redeemer, repreſented, 639

ECCL. ix. 14, 15. There was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king againſt it, and beſieged it, and built great bulwarks againſt it: now, there was found in it a poor wiſe man, and he by his wiſdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that ſame poor man.

The ſenſe of the words being aſcertained, accurately analized, and ſummed up in a doctrine, the following general topics of diſcourſe are proſecuted, viz.

1. The little city, and the few men in it, deſcribed, 640
2. The great ſiege laid againſt the little city, opened, 641
3. The deliverance thereof, and the reaſons of the ſiege, 642
4. The ingratitude of the citizens repreſented, 645
5. The application of the whole, in ſeveral uſes, 646

SERMON LVIII.

The Lamb in the midſt of the Throne, 651

REV. vii. 17. For the Lamb that is in the midſt of throne ſhall feed them.

The words being viewed in their ſcope and connexion, divided, explained, and a doctrine obſerved, the following topics are propoſed, viz.

1. To ſpeak a little concerning the Lamb, 652
2. To diſcourſe ſomewhat of the throne, 653
3. Enquire how the Lamb comes to be upon the throne, ibid.
4. What is imported in the Lamb's being in the midſt of the throne, 654
5. Conſider the benefit of feeding, that iſſues from the Lamb's being in the midſt of the throne, 655
6. To deduce ſome inferences for the application, 656

SERMON LIX.

Stability in the Faith, the Church's Strength, 663

ISA. xxx. 7. —Their ſtrength is to ſit ſtill.

The author having taken a view of the words in their connexion, analized, and explained them, and taken up their ſcope in a doctrinal propoſition, the following general heads of method are proſecute by him, viz.

1. What theſe times are, that may be called perilous times, in which people ſhew much inſtability in the faith, 665
2. The nature of ſtedfaſtneſs in the faith, 667
3. That this ſtability is people's ſtrength in perilous times, 674
4. Inferences for the application of the whole, 675

SERMON LX.

Faith's Plea upon God's Covenant, 678

PSAL. lxxiv. 20. Have reſpect unto the covenant.

The words being explained, and a doctrinal propoſition raiſed from them, the following points are handled, viz.

1. What covenant it is he will have reſpect unto, 679
2. What it is for him to have reſpect unto the covenant, ibid.
3. What it is in the covenant he hath reſpect unto, 680
4. What kind a reſpect he hath to it, ibid.
5. Why he hath a reſpect to it, ibid.
6. Some application made of the whole, 681

SERMON LXI.

Faith's Plea upon God's Word, 684

2 SAM. vii. 25. —Do as thou haſt ſaid.

The words being explained, and a doctrinal obſervation laid down, the following heads of method are proſecute, viz.

1. To ſhew that it is the buſineſs of faith to take God's word, 684
2. That it is the buſineſs of faith to put him to it, 685
3. How faith takes God's word, ibid.
4. How it pleads the accompliſhment of the promiſe, ibid.
5. Whence it is the buſineſs of faith to take God at his word, and put him to it, ibid.
6. The application of the whole, 685,—689.

SERMON LXII.

The promiſing God, a performing God, 690

GEN. xxviii. 15. —For I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have ſpoken to thee of.

After an introduction, and the words viewed in their connexion, divided, opened up, explained, and the ſenſe wrapt up in a doctrine, the following general topics of diſcourſe are handled, viz.

1. What is to be underſtood by the Bethel-viſits that God may allow his people, 691
2. Some of the dark days that may follow theſe Bethel-interviews, mentioned, 693
3. The promiſe explained, I will not leave thee, &c. though dark days may intevene between the promiſe and the accompliſhment, 695
4. Some grounds offered upon which they may be aſſured that God will not leave them, till he hath done that which he hath ſpoken to them of, 698
5. Several inferences deduced for the application, 699

SERMON LXIII.

The Combination and Conjunction of joys; or, the joyful Approach of the Saviour, chearfully welcomed by the Church's Echo of Faith, 704

PSAL. xlvii. 7. —Lo, I come!—
SONG ii. 8. Behold, he cometh!

The words being complexly viewed and explained, and the ſcope of them ſummed up in a doctrinal propoſition, the following general heads of method are proſecute, viz.

1. What

1. What comings of Christ to his people are joyful to him and them, pointed out, 705
2. What makes his coming joyful to him, evinced, 706
3. Shew what makes his coming joyful to them, 707
4. What expressions of joy in him are imported in his Lo, I come! 708
5. What expressions of joy in them are imported in their Behold, he cometh! 709
6. Whence is this combination and conjunction of joys, ibid.
7. Inferences deduced for the application of the whole, 710

SERMON LXIV,—LXVIII.

The Time of Need, a Time of Love, 713

EZEK. xvi. 8. Now, when I passed by thee, and looked upon thee; behold, thy time was a time of love.

The words being viewed in their spiritual meaning, analized, explained, and a doctrinal proposition raised from them, the following topics of discourse are handled, viz.
1. The sinner's time of need and misery, as described in the context, spoken of, 714
2. God's time of love, as here also represented, considered, ibid.
3. That he shews his love at such a remarkable juncture, as makes it appear, their time of need is his time of love, evinced, 716
4. That this is matter of wonder and admiration, pointed out, 717
5. Inferences deduced for the application of the whole, 718

SERMON LXIX.

Sensible Presence, Sudden Absence; or, the Believer's most comfortable Interviews but of short Duration, 739

GEN. XXXV. 13. And God went up from him, in the place where he talked with him.

Having viewed the words in their scope and connexion, divided, explained, and taken up their sense in a doctrinal observation, the following heads of method are proposed, viz.
1. To speak a little of the communion that God's people may have with him, 740
2. Offer a few remarks concerning their missing and finding the Lord, 741
3. To enquire in what respects they may miss him, where they enjoyed him, 742
4. Assign the reason of this dispensation, 743
5. Make application of the whole subject, 744

SERMON LXX.

The Mounting Christian; or, the Eagle-winged Believer, 748

ISA. xl. 31. —They shall mount up with wings as eagles.

After an introduction to the words, the scope of the prophet in the preceding verses, the words themselves viewed as they stand connected with the preceding and subsequent clauses, and their sense expressed in a doctrinal proposition, the following general topics are handled, viz.
1. The wings wherewith they mount up, speak of, 749
2. The things wherein they mount up, 750
3. The seasons when it is especially they mount up, 751
4. The manner how they mount up, 752
5. The reasons why they mount up, ibid.
6. Application made of the whole subject, 753

SERMON LXXI.

The River of Life, proceeding out of the Throne of God and of the Lamb, 757

REV. xxii. 1. And he shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

The words being viewed in their scope, their sense ascertained, explained, and summed up in a doctrine, the following general heads of method are prosecute, viz.
1. Some remarks offered for clearing and confirming the doctrine, 757
2. The property and quality of the water of this river observed, 758
3. The import of its being said to proceed out of the throne of God and the Lamb, 759
4. The reasons why this river is said to proceed from thence, ibid.
5. Inferences deduced for the application of the whole, 760

SERMON LXXII, LXXIII.

The Comer's Conflict; or, the Beginner's Battle with the Devil, when essaying to come to Christ by Faith, 766

LUKE ix. 42. And as he was yet a-coming, the devil threw him down and tare him.—

The Author having considered the words in their connexion, divided, explained, and raised a doctrine from them, the following particulars are illustrated, viz.
1. The import of coming to Christ, 766
2. In what respects matters may grow worse with people, even when they are thus coming to Christ, 767
3. The reasons why people come to Christ for help, and why they whom he undertakes to help, may find their distress grow, before their deliverance come, ibid.
4. The Application of the whole subject, ibid.

SERMON LXXIV.

Dark Providences cleared in due Time, 774

JOHN xiii. 7. —What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter.

After taking a view of the words in their scope and design, analizing and explaining them, deducing an observation from them, and confirming it by an induction of scripture instances, the following general heads are proposed, viz.
1. To mention some things the Lord doth towards his church and people, that are dark and mysterious, hidden and unknown, 778
2. To shew in what respects these things that he is doing for them, may be hid and unknown to them, 779
3. For what reason the Lord takes this way of doing, so hid, dark, and mysterious, that what he doth they know not, 780
4. To observe some seasons when it is that he makes them know what now they are in the dark about, 781
5. To deduce some inferences for the application of the whole, 783

SERMON LXXV.

The great Trumpet of the everlasting Gospel, 787

ISA. xxvii. 13. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the great trumpet shall be blown; and they shall come which were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt, and shall worship the Lord in the holy mountain at Jerusalem.

The words being copiously viewed, both as to their literal, typical, and spiritual meaning, accurately analized and explained, their spiritual sense expressed in a doctrinal observation, and each branch of the doctrine confirmed and illustrated from expres texts of scripture, the following general topics of discourse are insisted upon, viz.
1. The state and condition of sinners by nature, as outcasts, ready to perish, considered, 789
2. The duty of sinners to come to a Saviour, the great Lord-deliverer, and glorious object of worship, 790
3. The means speak of by which the Lord gathers these sinners thus to him, viz. the blowing of the great gospel-trumpet, 791
4. The efficacy of these means, and shew why it is promised they shall come, 793
5. The end for which they shall come, viz. their worshipping in his holy mountain, 794
6. Inferences for the application of the whole, 795

SERMON I.*

The BEST MATCH; or, the Incomparable Marriage between the CREATOR and the Creature.

ISAIAH liv. 5.
Thy Maker is thy Husband.

THE prophet Iſaiah having largely diſcourſed of the ſufferings of Chriſt, and the bleſſed fruits and effects of them; among which, one is, that he ſhould have a numerous ſeed to believe on him; and that, when the Jews reject him, the Gentiles ſhould gladly receive him: And thus foreſeeing, by the ſpirit of prophecy, the glorious ſtate of the Gentile church, he breaks forth into a ſong of triumph in the beginning of this chapter; where the prophet directs his ſpeech to the church and ſpouſe of God in theſe words, Sing, O barren, thou that didſt not bear; break forth into ſinging, and cry aloud, thou that didſt not travail with child: for more are the children of the deſolate than the children of the married wife, ſaith the Lord. Where we have a magnificent and glorious promiſe of the fertility and the felicity of the Gentile church; and this is enlarged to the fifth verſe, which contains the words of our text; where we have the reaſon of her happineſs and fruitfulneſs who was formerly a barren widow, For thy Maker is thy Husband: he who made thee out of nothing, and therefore can eaſily fulfil all theſe promiſes, how unlikely ſoever they ſeem to be; he who made thee a people, yea, which is more, who made thee his people, he will own thee as his ſpouſe, and act the part of an huſband to thee.

I ſhall defer any further introduction and explication, and alſo whatever might be ſaid concerning the external relation betwixt Chriſt and the viſible church, my chief deſign being, at this time, only to ſpeak a little to that internal ſpiritual marriage-relation betwixt Chriſt and the inviſible church, or Chriſt and the believer, as it is repreſented under the formality of a marriage: and what I would offer upon this ſubject, I lay before you in this doctrinal propoſition,

That there is a marriage-relation betwixt Chriſt and believers, wherein he ſupplies the place of a husband unto them, and they the place of a bride and ſpouſe to him.

In proſecuting whereof, I would,
I. Prove, That there is ſuch a marriage-relation betwixt Chriſt and believers.
II. Speak to the nature of this marriage.
III. Give the reaſons, why Chriſt comes under ſuch a relation to his people.
IV. Make ſome application.

I. To confirm the doctrine, that there is a marriage-relation betwixt Chriſt and believers. This will appear from theſe two conſiderations.

1. From the compellations given to Chriſt with relation to believers. How frequently doth the ſpouſe call him her husband in the book of the Song? As the apple-tree among the trees of the wood, ſo is my Beloved among the ſons. My Beloved is mine, and I am his, Song ii. 3, 16. And, ſays the apoſtle, 2 Cor. xi. 2. I have eſpouſed you to one huſband, that I may preſent you as a chaſte virgin unto Chriſt.

2. The marriage-relation betwixt Chriſt and believers appears from the compellations given to believers in ſcripture, with reſpect to Chriſt. How frequently calls he her his love, his ſpouſe, in the book of the Song? Thou haſt raviſhed my heart, my ſiſter, my SPOUSE. How fair is thy love, my ſiſter, my SPOUSE! Song iv. 9, 10. Rev. xix. 7. There the church, (or believers in the collective capacity) is called the bride, the Lamb's wife, The marriage of the Lamb is come, and the BRIDE hath made herſelf ready. We need not ſtand to prove that which is ſo evident, we need ſay no more to confirm it, than to repeat the text, Thy Maker is thy husband. Therefore I come,

II. To ſpeak of the nature of this marriage: and here we would briefly conſider, 1. The parties married. 2. The terms of the marriage. 3. The properties of the marriage. 4. The effects of it. 5. How the match is carried on. 6. How it is concluded.

(1.) I ſay, let us conſider the parties married; who is the Bridegroom, and who is the bride.

1. Then, the Bridegroom is the wiſdom of God; and all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge are found in him: he knows all the wants of the bride, and is ready to ſupply them.—On the other hand, the bride, before her matching with him, is the moſt arrant fool out of hell: her folly is diſcoverd by continuing to refuſe to match with him; to refuſe to give her conſent to this heavenly Bridegroom.

2. The Bridegroom is the eternal Son of God; the King's only Son; The King made a marriage for his Son: He is the blood-royal of heaven.—On the other hand, What is the bride's pedigree? She needs not boaſt of her deſcent, Thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite, Ezek. xvi. 3. There is a vaſt difference here.

3. The Bridegroom is the heir of all things; he hath all riches, the unſearchable riches of Chriſt.—But what is the bride worth before he match with her? She is worſe than nothing, poverty itſelf; and not only a beggar, but in debt, and Chriſt is willing to pay her debt.

4. The Bridegroom is comely and glorious. All the ſeraphims and cherubims above, all the ſons of men in the world, all the crowned heads on earth, in all the circumſtances of glory, are but like black pieces of earth compared with this glorious Bridegroom.—On the other hand, What is the bride before he match with her? Even as black as the devil can make her. Not only a leopard, ſpotted here and there, but an Ethiopian, wholly black and ugly. When ſhe is caſt forth in the open field to the loathing of her perſon, ſhe is a ſpectacle of horror and miſery; yet then it is a marriage-day, and a time of love.

* This was delivered in two diſcourſes at Culroſs; but the preciſe time and occaſion cannot be aſcertained; only we ſee the firſt edition was printed Anno 1722. and another Anno 1739.

(2.) What are the terms of the marriage? the articles of it on his part and her part? The terms on her part, though the whole belong to Chriſt, yet, to ſpeak of terms in an improper ſenſe, he requires of her what he worketh in her; namely,

1. That ſhe be divorced from all other huſbands, and give up with all other lovers and idols; particularly, that ſhe be divorced from the law, that ſhe may be married unto Chriſt: ſhe muſt not obey the law from a principle of her own ſtrength; nor as a covenant of works, that, by obedience, ſhe may purchaſe a title to heaven; nor to gratify a natural conſcience; nor merely to eſcape hell, and make a righteouſneſs of her obedience: ſhe muſt be divorced from that huſband.

2. Upon her part it is required, that ſhe be ſatisfied with this huſband alone, as the great portion of the ſoul; that he may have no rival, no competitor in her affections, none to ſit on the throne with him: ſhe muſt keep the chief room for the Son of God. Again, on his part, he contracts,

1. That he will make over himſelf to her; all he is, all he hath, all he hath purchaſed, all he hath promiſed: he will make over to her all the bleſſings of the everlaſting covenant. O this is a ſweet article! and a large charter indeed!

2. He contracts to perform all the glorious offices of a huſband to her; to provide for her, protect her, direct her, pity her, clothe her, to encourage and comfort her; and to do all for her ſhe needs: this is the ſum of the contract; for, to ſpeak properly, Chriſt is all, and does all in this matter; and our part is done by him in us, Hoſ. ii. 19, 20. I will betrothe thee unto me for ever; yea, I will betrothe thee unto me in righteouſneſs, and in judgment, and in loving kindneſs, and in mercies; I will even betrothe thee unto me in faithfulneſs, and thou ſhalt know the Lord. Chriſt ſigns the contract for him and her both. I will betrothe thee unto me in righteouſneſs; I will fulfil the law, and ſatisfy God's juſtice. I will betrothe thee unto me in loving kindneſs; though there be nothing in thee to invite my love, but much to challenge my averſion, yet I will overcome all thy imperfections, and ſet my love upon thee. I will betrothe thee unto me in mercies; in pardoning mercy, ſanctifying mercy, ſupporting mercy, comforting mercy. But leſt the bride think, that when ever ſhe ſins there may be a divorce, ſhe may break and go away, therefore it follows, I will betrothe thee unto me in faithfulneſs. He pledges his veracity for fulfilling the articles on her part and his both. But then,

(3.) What are the properties of this marriage?

1. It is a very myſterious marriage, that the Creator ſhould take the work of his hands for a bride; not only when in its primitive and virgin integrity, as it dropt out of his creating hands, but when polluted with the poiſon of the devil, the venom of the ſerpent, that he ſhould take her for a bride; Thy Maker is thy husband. This is a wonderful conjunction. If a glorious angel ſhould be matched with a creeping worm, and a king with a beggar, it would not be ſuch a wonder; but the Maker to join himſelf to the work of his hands! there cannot be a greater diſtance conceived betwixt any thing, than betwixt a Creator, and that which is brought out from the barren womb of nothing, a creature; and yet they are in a marriage-relation; Thy Maker is thy husband.

2. This marriage is very difficult and hard. It is true, there is nothing too hard for Omnipotency; yet the human nature of Chriſt had much to do with it: though he was ſupported by the divine nature, yet he behoved to ſwim through the river of his own blood, before he could get his bride. He ſatisfied the juſtice of God, eſtabliſhed a new covenant. All this muſt be done in order to this marriage.

3. This marriage is an indiſſolvable marriage; death diſſolves other relations, but it increaſes this intimate union: Nothing ſhall ſeparate Chriſt and the believer; I am perſuaded, ſaith Paul, that neither life, nor death, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, Rom. viii. 38, 39.

(3.) What are the effects of this marriage?

1. The firſt and immediate effect is a moſt cloſe union betwixt Chriſt and the believer. This union, though leſs than a perſonal union, although it be in ſome reſpect, yet it is more than a political union, more than a moral union: It is a very cloſe union. The Bridegroom, Chriſt, he gives his bride his own Spirit; communicates vital influences, from the glorious Head, to her; and ſhe cleaves, by faith and love, cloſe to him: and God promiſeth that he will make the houſe of Iſrael cleave cloſe to him, as a girdle to the loins of a man, Jer. xiii. 11. He makes his ſpouſe, in ſpite of all her folly, in ſpite of all her enmity, in ſpite of all her enemies and temptations, to cleave cloſe to him.

2. Another effect of this union, is ſweet communion, mutual fellowſhip: he feaſts with them and they with him; he blows upon her garden, quickens and animates her graces; and then he comes and eats his pleaſant fruits.

3. Another effect is, familiarity, (which is coincident with the former,) he treats them not as ſtrangers, but as friends; and not as friends only, but as his own ſpouſe; he communicates to her, and ſpeaks comfortably and kindly to her. It is a wonder what condeſcenſion God will make ſometimes; and the believer again can be more familiar with God, than with the whole world; and can tell to God what he can tell to none elſe.—Thus you ſee ſome of the effects of this marriage.

(5.) How was the match carried on?

I anſwer, in a word. On his part it was carried on thus:

1. He gave the Father his hand, and engaged to him in the covenant of redemption, from eternity, that he would do all things neceſſary for accompliſhing the marriage.

2. Becauſe there muſt be an union of natures betwixt the Bridegroom and the bride; (it was not poſſible that we could be matched with with the divine nature;) therefore he becomes a man, and takes on our nature, that there might be an union of natures.

3. Becauſe the bride is a ſlave, he pays her ranſom, ſubſtitutes himſelf in her room, takes on her debt, and pays all that ſhe owed to juſtice, and then takes on with her. But, on our part, juſt nothing at all: we had no hand in the covenant of redemption; no hand in the contrivance of ſalvation; we knew nothing about the buſineſs; we had no thoughts of a Redeemer, deſerved nothing but pure wrath: we were lying with full contentment in the devil's territories, when Chriſt was carrying on the match.

(6.) How is the marriage concluded upon his part?

1. He ſends forth his ambaſſadors to court for him, as Abraham did his ſervant for Iſaac; and there is a great work, indeed, to make her give her conſent. Let angels in heaven unite their topicks of perſuaſion, they could not prevail with one ſoul, if a converting day were not come: but they muſt always ſpeak fair to her. How rhetorical was Abraham's ſervant for his maſter: he hath but one child, and that child hath great riches; he ſeeks no portion with Rebecca, only her conſent. Thus he rhetorizes and flouriſhes exceedingly, and perſuades with the greateſt motives. But yet the ambaſſadors of Chriſt have a larger commiſſion, if our eyes were opened to ſee it: they are ſent forth to make love to the bride, and in his name to commend Chriſt.

2. He concludes the marriage thus. The bride being wretchedly ignorant of her true happineſs, therefore his Father diſtreſſes her with the debt that ſhe owes to him; and the wretched perſon is forced, for ſome time, to mount Sinai; and there God deſcends in all the circumſtances of terrible majeſty: he thunders againſt her, curſes her; Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them, Gal. iii. 10. God exacts all the debt, conſcience roars, and the devils are let looſe; ſhe fears hell and wrath; and God declares, in the goſpel, that the wretched bankrupt ſhall go to priſon, and ly eternally in hell, if ſhe do not take on with his Son, marry him, and believe on him. Thus the bride is forced to an extremity: ſome have more, ſome have leſs of this law-work; but all are humbled and broken in ſome meaſure, who are married to Chriſt: he ſends forth his Spirit and convinces the world of ſin. But this would not do either; and therefore,

3. The bridegroom ſees that nothing but condeſcenſion will do it; and ſo he appears in all his glory: when the bride is full of fears, perplexities, and anxieties; when the terrors of God are ſurrounding her, and the arrows of the Almighty drinking up her ſpirits, and when ſhe is crying out, What ſhall I do? Whether ſhall I go? Then the bridegroom appears in all his excellency and glory, and ſays, Behold me, behold me; and ſhe gets a view of him that raviſhes her heart, and enlarges her ſoul: then it is that the Spirit is ſent to determine her to conſent. The manifeſtation of his glory does enlighten her mind and ſpirit; and immediately grace, upon the will, draws out the whole heart after him; ſo that if the bride could be grieved and pained upon the marriage-day, it would be for her folly in refuſing him ſo long. — But what is done upon the bride's part, for concluding the match? Nothing at all; but the whole ſoul is enabled to acquieſce in a Redeemer; and the believer is ready, at ſuch a time, to ſay, He is my Lord, my God, my ſtrength, my all, and ſhall be for ever.——Thus you have a brief ſcheme of the nature and way of this marriage.

Having ſpoken but very briefly to the former heads, I ſhall here, before I proceed to the reaſons of the doctrine, offer a few remarks upon the time of this marriage-union betwixt Chriſt and believers. We told you how this match was concluded and compleated by Chriſt, and now we ſay, there is a ſtated day and time for the concluding thereof: and upon this head we may remark.

1*ſt*, That there is a two-fold day we are to conſider in this marriage, namely, the day of eſpouſals on earth, and the day of conſummation in heaven; and we may compare theſe two together in few words. 1. The day of eſpouſals here is uſhered in with a very dark morning, or rather an evening, upon the bride's part, with the wrath of God, and the law: as it was ſaid, The evening and the morning was the day; ſo, in this contract, the evening of legal terrors, at leaſt ſome humiliation, uſhers in the morning: But as to the conſummation, there is a great deal of glory before it, the ſoul being taken to heaven already, and the body ſleeping ſweetly in the grave, a bed where the bridegroom lay three days before her. 2. In the day of eſpouſals, when the perſon gets a victory over corruption, and finds little ſtirring of it, no ſenſible working of it, yet there is a party within, at the ſame time, that oppoſe the match, and which will afterwards get out its head, and will be ſtill aſſaulting the believer, while he is on earth: but, in the day of conſummation, there is no ſuch thing; no enemy, no ſin, no corruption; but the whole ſoul goes out wholly upon the bridegroom. 3. The eſpouſals are carried on ſecretly; it may be the perſon is ſitting at your ſide, and you do not ſee, nor know when Chriſt is making up the match; or, perhaps, on his knees at home, there is a ſecret tranſaction: But the conſummation will be before millions of angels, millions of ſaints, millions of ſpectators. Here is a great difference: after the day of eſpouſals is over, the bride may give many ſquint looks to her old lovers, looking back to Egypt, departing from her huſband, doubting of his love, diſtruſting his word, fearing his diſpenſations: But, after the conſummation, no ſhadow of ſin, no ſhadow of jealouſy, no ſhadow of imſtakes, or fears, can overtake her for ever; no cloud can interveen, for the ſun of righteouſneſs ſhall never be eclipſed any more. But then,

2*d*, A ſecond remark is, that the preciſe time of the eſpouſals is condeſcended on by the Bridegroom and his Father, from all eternity; the very moment when the bride ſhall be made to ſign the contract, and flee to Chriſt, and pour our her whole ſoul upon him; that preciſe moment is agreed upon betwixt the Father and the Son, in the covenant of Redemption, from eternity.

3*d*, We remark, that the bridegroom waits pati- patiently for that moment that is agreed upon betwixt the Father and the Son; he longs for it, he desires it. The believer many times is ready to think, O, Christ is not willing! I have set days apart, I have gone to my knees, I have sought him in and about this and the other ordinance, and yet I could not close with him: I have been almost dipt in hell with affliction, yet my heart was never melted; surely Christ is not willing. O let us flee the borders of blasphemy! The Lord Jesus is willing, but the fulness of time is not yet come: there is a set moment of his coming to his people, and for this they are to wait; yea, for this he waits himself, according to that scripture, which I shall read to them that cannot get that in duties and ordinances which they have been long looking for; Isa. xxx. 18. Therefore will the Lord wait, that he may be gracious unto you, and therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you: For, the Lord is a God of judgment; blessed are all they that wait for him. He will wait upon the very moment of time, for the day of salvation; he knows the proper season. The crane, the swallow, and the stork know their seasons, by the natural instinct God hath given them; and will he not know his own season? yea, he waits to be gracious.

4*th* Remark, That when the time comes, then there is a sweet conjunction of all circumstances to conclude the work; all things work pleasantly together to compleat the match; conscience goes right to work, the word is made lively, the Spirit acts powerfully and sweetly in the soul: there is an auspicious conjunction of all favourable circumstances, for determining the bride, and drawing out her heart.

5*th* Remark, That there are several signs and characters of this day, by which it may be known. What are the signs of it? you will say. I shall not stand on this, only it is a day of light; great light breaks in upon the mind: it is a day of love; much love is let in upon the heart: it is a day of power, wherein the bride is perswaded and overcome; difficulties are surmounted, enemies conquered, and the bride's will is moulded into a compliance; it is a day of amazement. O what an extasy of wonder is raised in the person's heart! I was blind, now I see; I was dead, now I live; I was weak, now I am strong; this morning, perhaps, I was under affliction, and under the terrors of God, and now he hath ravished me with the consolations of his Spirit: I was afraid of hell, now I have the hope of heaven and eternal life. O what a day of wonder is it! Lastly, It is a day of vows; the soul will be ready to break forth in such a day, crying, What shall I speak for him? What shall I suffer for him?

A sixth and last remark on this head is, that, in this stated day of espousals, the bridegroom manifests his glory to the bride; when he intimates to the soul, Thy Maker is thy husband, he shews his glory; his absolute glory, his comparative glory, his relative glory; they are all one upon the matter, yet there is a formal different consideration of them. 1. His absolute glory is manifested. What does the soul see, that is matched and married to Christ? Alas! some see nothing but dreams and fancies; but when the believer is matched with Christ, he so deals with him as with Moses, he makes all his glory to pass before him: The person gets a view of the glorious attributes of the Son of God. 2. He manifests his comparative glory; Thou art more excellent than hills of prey; fairer than the sons of men: the bride, the believer, sees him as the apple-tree among the trees of the wood, every way incomparable: whatever he be compared to, he excells it; if he be a lilly, he is the lilly of the valley; if he be a rose, he is the rose of Sharon; if he be a plant, he is the plant of renown; if he be a physician, he is the physician of value; if an advocate, he is an advocate with the Father: he is represented without any parallel. 3. His relative glory is manifested: he is discovered as a glorious Priest, a glorious Prophet, a glorious King, a glorious Husband, a glorious Redeemer and Saviour; and there will be a sight of his glorious fulness in all these relations, and the glorious fitness of that sufficiency and fulness, all suited for the soul: and thus revealing himself, he removes all jealousies and mistakes from the bride, supplies all her wants, heals all her diseases, and outbids all her rivals, who can offer nothing to allure the soul, while he can, and doth say, I am All-sufficient to help thee.

III. I come now to the third thing proposed, namely, To offer some reasons of the doctrine, why Christ comes under a marriage-relation to believers.

I answer, 1. His own sovereign will is the best reason why he comes under a marriage-relation in this case; Even so Father, for so it seems good in thy sight, Matth. xi. 26. His actions are not to be examined at the bar of our reason: He hath mercy, because he will have mercy.

2. His love to them makes him come under such a relation to them; I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with everlasting kindness have I drawn thee. Love is the motive that engages him; love brought him out of heaven for them; love nailed him to the cross for them; love laid him in a grave for them; and love engages him to a marriage-relation with them.

3. He does it for the glory of his own free grace, mercy, and love. As love and mercy was his motive, so it was his end, that he might display and discover it to the utmost. This attribute is at its utmost line. Infinite wisdom could have contrived a thousand worlds, and infinite power could have made them, but the love of God hath gone to its utmost height; it is not possible for Christ to give a greater demonstration of his love than he hath done, in giving his life for the bride, and entering into a marriage-relation with her.

4. He does it, that he may furnish work for the blessed company in the higher house; for on the earth the contract is only drawn up: this is only the day of espousals; heaven will be the day of consummation of the marriage: this is only a courting and wooing time; but the day will come when the nuptial solemnity shall be celebrated, and that shall continue while the day of eternity lasts.—This shall suffice for the reasons of the doctrine.

IV. The fourth thing was, To make some application; and it may be, 1. For information. 2. Lamentation. 3. Examination. 4. Exhortation. Now of these in their order.

(1.) For

(1.) For information. Is it ſo, that there is a marriage-relation betwixt Chriſt and believers?

1. This informs us of the infinite love of God towards loſt ſinners, in giving his own Son to be a Huſband and Redeemer unto them; God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoſoever believeth in him might not periſh, but have everlaſting life, John iii. 16. God ſo loved the world, as neither angels nor men can tell.

2. This informs us of the infinite love of Chriſt, in condeſcending to be a huſband to ſuch a bride. It could never have entered into the heart of the wiſeſt angel in heaven, that Chriſt, the eternal Son of God, ſhould become man; and far leſs that he ſhould take ſuch a filthy and deformed creature and bride by the hand, as ſinners are: if he had given us our deſerving, he would made his juſtice to ride in triumph over us, and hell to reſound with eternal hollows of praiſe to injured juſtice; but, to the quite contrary, he hath ſo ordered, that heaven ſhall reſound with eternal halelujahs of praiſe to his gracious mercy and free grace, in chuſing thoſe that were enemies, and admitting them to his bleſſed boſom.

3. This doctrine informs us of the believer's ſafety. Having Chriſt for her huſband, who can hurt her? It is the duty of a huſband, you know, to protect and defend his ſpouſe; and to be ſure Chriſt will not be wanting in this to his bride: He will hide them in the ſecret of his preſence from the pride of men: he will keep them ſecretly in a pavilion from the ſtrife of tongues, Pſalm xxxi. 20. About all the glory he makes a defence, Iſa. iv. 5. He covers them with the mantle of his providence, the mantle of his righteouſneſs, the mantle of his interceſſion, the mantle of his Spirit; ſure then the bride of Chriſt is in abſolute ſafety: he hath retiring chambers for her, to hide her in till the day of indignation be overpaſt.

4. This doctrine lets us ſee, that believers are no ſuch mean and deſpicable perſons as the world generally takes them to be; they are Chriſt's bride, and he is their huſband: and O what an honour is it to be married to the Son of God! Having him for an huſband, they come to be related to all Chriſt's relations; God is their Father, becauſe he is his Father; angels are their ſervants, becauſe they are his ſervants; ſaints are their fellow-brethren, becauſe they are his members; heaven is their inheritance, becauſe it is the kingdom of their huſband. In a word, whatever is his, is theirs; And all things are yours, for ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's, 2 Cor. iii. 22, 23.

(2.) For lamentation. Is it ſo, that there is a marriage-relation betwixt Chriſt and believers? This calls for deep lamentation in theſe two particulars.

1. It calls us to lament that Chriſt ſhould have ſo few brides among us, though he be wooing and courting us by the goſpel, crying, Behold me, behold me, Iſa. lxv. 1. Yet where is the man or woman that is prevailed with to enter a match with this glorious bridegroom? Though he be fairer than the ſons of men, and condeſcends to offer marriage with ſinners, who are as black and ugly as hell itſelf, yet they ſet him at nought, and give him juſt ground for that melancholy complaint, My people would not hearken to my voice, Iſrael would have none of me, Pſalm lxxxi. 11. And may he not appeal to the very material creation, to judge of our folly, as he did of old to Iſrael? Jer. ii. 12, 13. Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth; yea, be aſtoniſhed and horribly afraid, for my people have committed two great evils: they have forſaken me the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out ciſterns, broken ciſterns, that can hold no water.

2. This doctrine may afford us matter of lamentation alſo, That believers, who are eſpouſed to him, ſhould walk ſo unworthily of ſuch a huſband. You know a wife ſhould demean herſelf conform to the character of her huſband; and where her carriage is baſe and mean, it reflects a diſhonour on him. O how unſuitable is it to ſee Chriſt's bride blackened with the filth of hell! to ſee thoſe who have ſtricken hands with Chriſt, in a marriage-covenant, joining hands with luſts and idols, and defiling themſelves with them!

(3.) For examination. Let us try if we be thus married and related to Chriſt; whether he be our huſband, and we his bride and ſpouſe.

I ſhall offer a few marks whereby we may know whether or not we be married unto this glorious huſband; and they may be drawn from the conſideration of the antecedents, the conſtituents, and the conſequents of this marriage.

1ſt, Try by the antecedents to the marriage-contract. Before ever Chriſt did contract with thee, didſt thou obſerve him courting thy ſoul before this contract? Here is a courting. Now, how did Chriſt court you?

1. Did he court you by the auſterity of the law, as with fire and ſword? Did he court you by ſuch a word as that, Thou art a curſed wretch? For, curſed is every one that continueth not in all things that are written in the book of the law to do them, Gal. iii. 10. Did he court you by ſuch a word as that, Curſed is every one that doth the work of the Lord negligently? Did he court you thus, by the ſpirit of bondage, with the terrors of God, as clothed with vengeance, telling thee, thou art an heir of hell and wrath, a child of the devil? Did he court thee ſo as thou waſt ſurrounded with fear and trouble?

2. Did he court thee as by the auſterity of the law; ſo by the ſweetneſs of the goſpel, when he ſaw thee caſt down, when he ſaw thee a poor heavy laden ſinner, like to be cruſhed under thy weights? Did he then court you with ſuch a word as that, Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt, Matth. xi. 28. or with ſuch a word as that, Ho, every one that thirſteth, come to the waters; he that hath no money, come; buy wine and milk without money and without price, Iſa. lv. 1. Flee to your ſtrong holds, ye priſoners of hope. Did he thus court you with the goſpel-offer?

3. Did he court you by his love-letters? This is another antecedent of the contract. Got you ever a love-letter ſent from Chriſt out of heaven? But you will ſay, What is the love-letter? even the Bible; Search the ſcriptures, theſe are they that teſtify of me, John v. 39. Here there are the declarations of the love of Chriſt to thy ſoul: here there are love-promiſes in theſe letters, that ſhall be yours. There is a love-covenant in theſe letters. Have you read and pondered them? And can you ſay that Chriſt ſpake them in to your heart? If it be a text that was preached upon, or if it be a ſingle word, O

Chriſt dropt that into my heart! and I think it will go with me to my death-bed, it came with ſuch life and power. In a word, Got you any gifts before the marriage-contract, ſuch as the gift of true conviction, ſuch as the gift of heart-contrition, the gift of real humiliation, the gift of ſelf-denial, the gift of faith? Theſe are given, ſome before, ſome at the contract.

2*dly*, Try by the conſtituents of the marriage.

1. If this marriage be made up betwixt Chriſt and thee, then thou haſt put away all lovers beſides Chriſt; the right hand will be cut off, the right eye put out; you will be divorced from all other huſbands, particularly from the law; ye muſt be dead to the law, that ye may be married to another huſband, even to Chriſt. But you will ſay, What is it to be dead to the law? I anſwer, It is not to lay it aſide as the rule of obedience; for the law ſhall ſtill be the rule and ſtandard of the believer's obedience, life, and converſation: but to be dead to the law, is to be ſenſible that the law cannot ſave us as a covenant of works. It is to diſclaim all hopes of being juſtified by the law, or by our works or obedience to it. I ſee Chriſt, the glorious huſband, hath brought in an everlaſting righteouſneſs, anſwering the law fully: this is the garment I muſt put on, and caſt off my old filthy rags.

2. Haſt thou given a cordial conſent upon the contract-day? Can you ſay you was enabled to take him, as the Pſalmiſt, O my ſoul, thou haſt ſaid unto the Lord, thou art my Lord; and thou art my God, my Head, my Huſband? Have you given a rational conſent to it? yea, a ſuperrational and ſupernatural conſent? a deliberate, chaſte, ſtayed, ſolemn, peremptory conſent? Did you ſay it with faith, and with an air of heaven, that he was yours, and ſhall be ſo for ever? It is true, perſons may be matched to Chriſt who cannot condeſcend on the preciſe time: the Spirit may work many times ſome way that we cannot know; yet it is his ordinary way with his bride, after many toſſings, to break in with raviſhing, conquering ſweetneſs, to draw forth her ſoul to a ſolemn remarkable cloſing with him, and conſenting to him. Have you then been engaged to make over yourſelf to the bridegroom, by an unreſerved reſignation of yourſelf to him, that you will not only take him wholly, and for ever, for holineſs and happineſs, for light and life, for grace and glory, but alſo make over yourſelf to him, ſoul and body, whatever you are, whatever you have been? Have you been thus made to yield yourſelves unto the Lord? Are you one with him? Have you one Spirit with him? Are you of one faith with him, of one way with him, endeavouring to walk as he walked? He that is joined to the Lord is one ſpirit, 1 Cor. iv. 17.

3. Can you ſay, that, upon the marriage-day, you got a marriage-gift from the Bridegroom? Among the Jews, the bridegroom was to give a marriage-gift to his bride: Now, what gift got you on this marriage-day? Can you ſay, indeed I got the wedding-garment; he clothed me with his righteouſneſs, which he ſpan out of his own bowels, weaved with his own hands, and dyed with his own blood; and thus all my guilt is covered, the curſe is done away? This is indeed what few get; yet ſome have been, and are able to ſay, I am delivered from the wrath to come; and there is no condemnation to me; and on ſuch a time I got alſo an ornament of the graces with the Spirit, which I wear as jewels, viz. faith, love obedience, patience, humility; and I got the promiſe of an hundred-fold here, and I am expecting more gifts yet, before the marriage be conſummate; I am expecting the aſſurance, I live in the hope of glory, I expect a ſealed pardon of all my ſins, and I look to get the earneſt of the Spirit, and more every day.

4. Another conſtituent of this marriage-contract is, the bride, on that day, puts off one vail, and puts on another. This was the Jews cuſtom, the brides put off the vail of baſhfulneſs, and put on the vail of ſubjection. Chriſt's bride, before the marriage, cannot look the Bridegroom in the face, is aſhamed to look upon him; but ſhe is made to put off this vail in the preſence of her former lovers, and to take Chriſt by the hand, and then ſhe puts on the vail of ſubjection, whereby ſhe promiſes, in his ſtrength, to ſubject herſelf to her huſband's will. Have we thus promiſed to be obedient to his commands, in his own ſtrength, whatever he injoins us to do or ſuffer?

3*dly*, Try by the conſequents of this marriage. Would you know if there has been a contract betwixt Chriſt and you? Try then by the immediate conſequents.

1. Did you ſee the King in his beauty, and ſuch a glory and excellency in him as could not be paralleled by all the glory of ten thouſand worlds?

2. What was your converſe with him on the contract-day? Can you ſay, he embraced me in his arms, and I embraced him in my heart, and there was ſweet communion and fellowſhip betwixt him and me?

3. Waſt thou crowned on the marriage-day, ſo as thou waſt known by others, as it were, to be the bride of Chriſt? The Jews, they not only crowned the bridegroom, but the bride alſo. You ſee what the crown is that Chriſt's bride ſhould have, Rev. xii. 1. There appeared a great wonder in heaven, a woman clothed with the ſun, and the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve ſtars. The bride of Chriſt is crowned with the doctrine of the twelve apoſtles.

4. The bride of Chriſt keeps at home, and delights in the bride-chamber. This is her delight all the days of her life, to dwell in the houſe of the Lord, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in his temple. Ordinances will be ſweet, being the galleries wherein the king is held.

II. Try by the qualities and duties of the bride, which are alſo the conſequents to this marriage.

1. If you be Chriſt's bride, then you will love the bridegroom. Love is what every wife owes to her huſband; much more doth the believer owe it to Chriſt, who hath expreſſed far more love to this bride than ever a huſband did to a wife; he loved her, and gave himſelf for her. He ſhed the hotteſt blood of his heart to ſave and redeem her. You will love him with a love of deſire; with my ſoul have I deſired thee in the night: with a love of delight; my meditation of him ſhall be ſweet: with a love of benevolence, wiſhing well to his intereſt; if I forget thee, O Jeruſalem, let my right hand forget her cunning; let my tongue cleave to the roof of my my mouth, if I prefer not thee to my chief joy, Pſal. cxxvii. 5, 6. They that habitually love huſband, wife, children, riches, or any thing more than Chriſt, have no reaſon to think that they are matched with him.

2. If we be married to Chriſt, we will truſt in and depend on our huſband. In whom can a wife truſt, if not in her huſband? The believer reſts on Chriſt for grace and glory; and commits all to him, ventures all on him, and expects all from him. The ſoul that is eſpouſed to Chriſt, looks on the infinite virtue of his blood, the infinite efficacy of his Spirit, the infinite fulneſs of his grace, the infinite dimenſions of his love, the infinite faithfulneſs of his promiſe: in all this he ſees an infinite ground of hope, and thereupon he ventures, and rolls all on him. Here, he ſays, I will ſtay and reſt, here I will build, here I am reſolved to ſtay, here I am reſolved to live and die.

3. If we be married to Chriſt, we will have a zeal for his glory. Some ſacrifice Chriſt's intereſt to their own honour; but the believer ſays, Let my Maſter increaſe, and me decreaſe. Though my name ſhould never be heard of in the world, let Chriſt be exalted. O, ſays Chriſt's bride, I would have all the world coming and adoring him! I would have all the world to love him! I would have all the world to praiſe him! Eſpecially when ſhe is under any lively influence, O then, ſays ſhe, if the greateſt enemies knew what were in our Lord, they would come and join with him, as I have done!

4. The bride of Chriſt cannot live without him. An honeſt wife will be hard put to it, to live many years without her huſband. O it is ſometimes like a hell to her to miſs Chriſt in ordinances! O the ſore moans and heavy groans of the deſerted ſoul, that has had the experience of the ſweetneſs of Chriſt! O that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his ſeat! Job xxiii. 3. O that it were with me as in months paſt!

5. If you be Chriſt's bride, you will be longing ſometimes for his ſecond coming; leſs or more you will deſire the day of judgment, and long for his appearance. The epilogue of all the ſpouſe's ſweet diſcourſes is, Make haſte, my beloved, be thou like a roe, or a young hart, on the mountains of Bether, till the day break, and the ſhadows fly away. And the concluſion of the whole Bible is, Come, Lord Jeſus, come quickly, Rev. xxii. 20. Can you ſay you have longed for his coming? I ſee the devil reigns here, corruption reigns here, and never will things be right till he come again in the clouds, and ſet heaven and earth in a flame, when theſe nuptial ſolemnities ſhall begin to be celebrated, and the marriage ſolemnized while eternity laſts.

6. If there has been a marriage betwixt Chriſt and your ſouls, then readily you have ſome of the love-tokens to preſent; I mean, ſome experiences and ſome expreſſions of his covenant-love: you can tell, that, ſome time or other, he brought you to the banqueting-houſe, and diſplayed a banner of love over you. Sometime he hath enlarged your ſoul with ardent and longing deſires after him, and ſatisfied you with the fatneſs of his houſe. The ſoul that is really eſpouſed to Chriſt, will readily have ſome experiences of his love to tell of.

7. The ſpouſe of Chriſt is a chaſte ſpouſe. Idols never get her heart as before; though now and then ſhe may give a ſquint look, yet idols never have that force and room in her affections once they had; ſhe is afraid of doing any thing that may be diſpleaſing and diſhonouring to him: hence we will find the ſpouſe of Chriſt breathing out earneſt deſires and requeſts to God, to be kept and led in the way of righteouſneſs; O that my ways were directed to keep thy ſtatutes, Pſalm cxix. 5. Hence ſhe groans up her caſe, O wretched one that I am! who ſhall deliver me from this body of ſin and death! Rom. vii. 24.

8. If we be Chriſt's bride, we will be a fruitful bride. Let us try; have we never a child of good works, or of grace? Thy belly, ſays Chriſt to the ſpouſe, is as an heap of wheat, Song vii. 2. You know wheat is very fruitful; the barren ſoul that never loved, never mortified, never repented, never gave alms, never appeared for God; that barren ſoul is not the ſpouſe of Chriſt; for the ſpouſe of Chriſt is faithful. — Thus much by way of trial.

4*thly*, For exhortation. Is there a ſpiritual marriage betwixt Chriſt and believers? O then! ſhall we not be perſuaded to come and cloſe with Chriſt for our huſband, and take our Maker for our huſband, our God for our huſband? If we be ambitious, here is the top of ambition, Jeſus Chriſt; if we be covetous, here is the true riches; whatever we are, whatever we have been, if we come to him, he will in no ways caſt us out: it is true, we cannot come of ourſelves, but let us cry, Lord, if I die, I ſhall be buried under the mercy-ſeat, praying, weeping, looking, as I can, and go to hell with Chriſt in my heart as much as I can. Come to him, and he will overcome your impotency; lay your caſe before him, ſaying, Lord, I am a wretched one in the higheſt degree; Lord, here is a great offer made, I have no heart to it; O come and give a diſcovery of a loſt ſtate, and of thy excellent glory. O draw out my heart, and let me die upon the ſpot, rather than reject Chriſt for ever!

Many motives might be adduced; conſider only,

1. The lovelineſs and beauty of Chriſt. His beauty is univerſal; he is lovely in his perſon, lovely in his natures, lovely in his offices, lovely in his eſtates of humiliation and exaltation, lovely in all his relations; his beauty is transforming, it will make the bride comely alſo; it is communicative, the bride is made comely through his comelineſs. When we ſpeak of the comelineſs of Chriſt, we ſhould let angels and ſaints above, that have the more immediate intuition of the radiant ſplendor of this bleſſed object, go forth to declare his glory. Every thing in him is lovely, and nothing is lovely without him, nothing is lovely but what proceeds from him, and goes to him; he is ſo lovely, that he cannot poſſibly be otherwiſe: he is the primary, original, and neceſſary lovelineſs.

2. Conſider, as he is lovely, ſo he is loving; his love is infinite, eternal, free, diſtinguiſhing, effectual; never man loved like him. O how many foldings are in this love, as can never be unfolded?

3. Conſider, if we cloſe with Chriſt, we will will give him a glad heart; his heart is glad in that day, when he takes a poor ſinner by the hand; the day of his eſpouſals is the day of the gladneſs of his heart. How many times have we grieved him by our hypocriſy, and formality, and backwardneſs? And would we now give him a glad heart, for all the grieved hearts we have given him? then let us embrace him as offered in the goſpel, and then he will be glad. Why? then he will ſee the fruit of election, the fruit of redemption, the fruit of his death, the fruit of his reſurrection, the fruit of his aſcenſion, the fruit of his interceſſion: then he gets back the temple of the Holy Ghoſt; the loſt ſheep is found again: then he gets back the member of his own body.

I might give ſomething by way of direction. You may ſay, What ſhall I do then, that I may be married unto Chriſt?

In one word, if you would have Chriſt for your huſband, O then entertain his ſuit, and hearken to his wooing and courting motions! Is he darting light into your hearts, and letting you ſee the evil of ſome ſin that formerly ye delighted in? O do not reſiſt his ſuit, by continuing in ſin after this!—Is he ſtrengthening that light ſo as to ſet conſcience on fire with the ſenſe of ſin, and apprehenſion of wrath? O quench not this fire till you get water out of the wells of ſalvation! otherwiſe ye reject his ſuit.—Is he carrying his ſuit farther, and ſtirring up your affections to deſire after Chriſt! O quench not this motion! but cry to him to faſten the nail ſure, and carry on the work, till the marriage be compleated.

Now, I might give a word of exhortation alſo to them that are married and eſpouſed to Chriſt.

All I ſhall ſay is this; O let Chriſt's bride live on him, and take all from him! as a poor woman married to a rich man, ſhe lives upon his riches. Many are ready to ſay, That if Chriſt would call us his bride, we would live on ourſelves; we would pray, repent, believe, etc.; but the bride of Chriſt muſt get all theſe things in him, and take all from him, and live wholly on him, and freely on him. When Joſeph's brethren did not know him, they were buying and ſelling with him, they would have nothing from him without money; but when they knew that he was a brother, for all the offences that they had done him, they were content to come down every man of them, and take all from him for nothing: this is the way ye muſt do with Chriſt, when matched to him; we muſt not, with the legaliſt, have repentance and duties of our own, we muſt take all from him, who is the repoſitory of all divine fulneſs, whereof the believer's part is, out of that fulneſs, to receive grace for grace.

SERMON II.*

The RENT VAIL of the Temple; or, Acceſs to the Holy of Holies by the DEATH of CHRIST.

MATTH. xxvii. 51.

And behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom.

SOME here may think, what will the miniſter make of that text, and what relation hath it to the work of this day? Indeed, I cannot promiſe to make any thing of it, unleſs the Lord himſelf make ſomething of it to you. But, with his help, we may find a feaſt in it to our ſouls; and a ſuitable feaſt on the back of a feaſt, ſuch as many of you have been celebrating. Chriſt hath been evidently ſet forth crucified among you, this day, and as you have been called to feaſt upon his paſſion, ſo now you are called to feaſt upon the fruits and effects of it. Have you ſeen him dying on a croſs for you! O come and ſee what immediately followed upon his death, Behold, the vail of the temple was rent from the top to the bottom.——That I may divide the words, and then explain them, you may notice here,

1. The connexion of this verſe, with what went before, in the particle AND, intimating the time of this miracle, that it attended the death of Chriſt, ver. 50. When he had cried, with a loud voice, he gave up the ghoſt. This loud cry ſignified, that his death ſhould be public, and proclaimed to all the world, as it hath been to you this day; and his yielding up the ghoſt, ſhewed, that he voluntarily reſigned his ſoul to be an offering for ſin, according to his undertaking as our Surety, Iſa. liii. 10. Death being the penalty for the breach of the firſt covenant, Thou ſhalt ſurely die; the Mediator of the new covenant muſt make atonement by means of death, otherwiſe no remiſſion. Now, he gave up the ghoſt, and immediately the vail of the temple was rent.

2. You have a note of admiration, Behold! intimating what a wonderful thing did immediately enſue. Several miracles, beſides the rending of the vail are here mentioned, but this ſeems to be the moſt remarkable. We are told, that the earth did quake, the rocks rent, graves were opened, and many dead bodies of the ſaints aroſe; but that which is put in the firſt rank of theſe

* This ſermon was preached on the ſabbath-evening, immediately after the adminiſtration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper at Carnock, July 12th 1719.; and hath already undergone four editions

miracles,

miracles, is, that the vail of the temple was rent in twain: and we find the evangeliſt Mark mentions this in particular, and none of the reſt of the miracles here named, as if this rending of the vail were the miracle moſt to be noticed, as containing ſomewhat myſterious and ſignificant therein, Mark xv. 37, 38. where we have the very ſame words, Jeſus cried, with a loud voice, and gave up the ghoſt; and the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom. And here it is uſhured in with a behold; turn aſide and ſee this great ſight; be aſtoniſhed at it. But what are we to wonder at? Then,

3. See this object of admiration; the vail of the temple was rent in twain, juſt as our Lord Jeſus expired; that vail of the temple which parted betwixt the holy place and the moſt holy, was rent by an inviſible power. In this, and the reſt of the miracles, Chriſt gave teſtimony to his Godhead; putting forth the power of his divine nature at the ſame time wherein his human nature, his ſoul and body, were rent in twain, like the vail of the temple. It is remarkable how the evangeliſt deſcribes the manner in which the vail of the temple was rent; ſhewing what a full and intire rent it was. Luke ſays, it was rent in the midſt; and here Matthew and Mark ſay, it was rent in twain: rent from the top to the bottom; an intire rent. But what was the meaning of all this? What did the rending of the vail ſignify?

(1.) It was in conformity to the temple of Chriſt's body which was now diſſolved: Chriſt was the true temple, in whom dwells all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily. When he cried, and gave up the ghoſt, and ſo diſſolved and rent the vail of his fleſh, the literal temple did, as it were, echo to the cry, and anſwer the ſtrokes by rending its vail.

(2.) The rending of the vail of the temple, ſignified the revealing of the myſteries of the Old Teſtament. The vail of the temple was for concealment; it was extremely dangerous for any to ſee the furniture of the moſt holy place within the vail, except the high prieſt; and he but once a year with great ceremony, and through a cloud of ſmoke: all which pointed out the darkneſs of that diſpenſation, 2 Cor. iii. 13. But now, at the death of Chriſt, all was laid open; the myſteries are unvailed, ſo that he that runs may read the meaning of them.

(3.) The rending of the vail of the temple ſignified the uniting of Jews and Gentiles, by removing the partition-wall betwixt them, which was the ceremonial law; Chriſt, by his death repealed it, and cancelled that hand-writing of ordinances, nailed it on the croſs, and ſo broke down the middle wall of partition; and, by aboliſhing theſe inſtitutions and ceremonies, by which the Jews were diſtinguiſhed from all other people, he aboliſhed in his fleſh the enmity, even the law of commandments, contained in ordinances, for to make in himſelf of twain one new man, Eph. ii. 14, 15. Juſt as two rooms are made one, by taking down the partition-wall.

(4.) The rending of the vail did eſpecially ſignify the conſecrating and opening of a new and living way to God. The vail kept off people from drawing near to the moſt holy place; but the rending of it ſignified, that Chriſt, by his death, opened a way to God for himſelf, as our bleſſed High-prieſt; and for us in him. 1. For himſelf; this was the great day of atonement, wherein the great High-prieſt, not by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood entered once for all into the holy place; in token of which, the vail was rent, Heb. ix. 7,——13. Though Chriſt did not perſonally aſcend to heaven, the holy place not made with hands, that is, to heaven, till above forty days after; yet he immediately acquired a right to enter, and had a virtual admiſſion; his entrance into the heavenly temple, into the holy of holies, began in his death; having offered his ſacrifice in the outer-court, the blood of it was to be ſprinkled on the mercy-ſeat within the vail, according to the manner of the prieſts under the law: but now the legal ſhadows were all to evaniſh; the great, the true High-prieſt having by his own blood entered, and ſo procured, 2. For us an open entrance into the true holy of holies, as the apoſtle applies it, Heb. x. 19, 20. We have boldneſs to enter into the holieſt, by the blood of Jeſus, by a new and living way, which he hath conſecrated for us through the vail. We have now free acceſs to come with boldneſs to a throne of grace, to a God in Chriſt, Heb. iv. 16. The vail of the temple did ſo interpoſe betwixt the people and the moſt holy place, that they could neither go in, nor look into it, but only the prieſt, in the manner that I ſaid before; but the rending of the vail ſignified, that the true holy of holies, heaven itſelf, is now open to us, by the entrance of our great High-prieſt, that we alſo may enter in by faith, as a royal prieſthood, following our Forerunner, who for us hath entered within the vail, Heb. vi. 19. Nothing can obſtruct or diſcourage our acceſs to God in his grace and glory, for the vail is rent.

Now I am to touch a little at the ſpecial myſtery here repreſented, Behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom.

OBSER. That Chriſt, by his death hath rent the vail that interpoſed betwixt God and us, and obſtructed our acceſs to him.

He gave up the ghoſt, and behold, the vail was rent, 1 Pet. iii. 18. Chriſt hath once ſuffered for ſins, the juſt for the unjuſt. Why? That he might bring us to God; and, in order thereunto, that he might rend the vail of guilt and wrath that interpoſed betwixt us and him, that he might take away the cherubims and flaming ſword, and open a way to the tree of life.

The method wherein I ſhall ſpeak of this ſubject, ſhall be, to ſhew,

I. What is that vail that interpoſed betwixt God and us.
II. How the death of Chriſt hath rent that vail.
III. In what manner is the vail rent.
IV. For what end is the vail rent.
V. Draw ſome inferences from the whole for application.

There may be ſome here that came to this occaſion, to enquire into God's temple, to ſee his beauty and glory there, and to get near to God; but ah! they are complaining, they have loſt their end; why? they apprehended a vail betwixt them and the glory of God, and thought it impoſſible to get through the vail; but, perhaps, you knew not that the vail of the temple was rent; and therefore you have not not ſeen the beauty of the Lord in his temple. If you had known that the vail was rent from the top to the bottom, you would have gone in more boldly to the moſt holy place; and if yet you will believe that the vail is rent, I can promiſe that you ſhall not miſs a ſight of his glory through the rent vail; Did I not ſay to thee, if thou wouldſt believe, thou ſhalt ſee the glory of God? But I proceed in the method propoſed.

I. What is that vail that interpoſed betwixt God and us? Not to ſpeak of the vail of Old Teſtament ſhadows and ceremonies, now rent and removed by the death of Chriſt, there are ſome vails that, in a ſpecial manner, obſtructed our acceſs to God; and they may be reduced to theſe three, the vail of a broken covenant, the vail of God's injured attributes, and the vail of man's ſin.

1. The vail of a broken covenant, or law of works. The covenant of works, you know, was, do and live, otherwiſe you ſhall die; In the day thou eateſt, thou ſhalt ſurely die. In which covenant, you ſee, there was a precept, a promiſe, and a penalty. The precept was do, or perfect obedience; the promiſe was life, or eternal happineſs upon obedience; and the penalty was death and eternal damnation, in caſe of diſobedience. Now, man by his ſin hath broken the precept of that covenant, and ſo forfeited the promiſe of life, and incurred the penalty of death. If ever we have acceſs to God, this broken precept muſt be repaired, this forfeited life muſt be redeemed, this penalty muſt be execute. Here is a vail that ſeparates betwixt God and us; a vail that neither men nor angels can rend, and yet a vail that muſt be rent, otherwiſe we die and periſh for ever; and this vail is the harder to be rent, becauſe of the following, namely,

2. The vail of God's injured perfections; particularly, his incenſed juſtice, and injured holineſs. Juſtice, infinite juſtice, was a black vail that obſtructed our acceſs to heaven; for God became an angry God, a God filled with fierce wrath againſt the ſinner. God hath ſet this penalty upon the law, commanding perfect obedience upon pain of death: God's juſtice was engaged to make this penalty effectual upon man's falling into ſin. Nothing can ſatisfy juſtice but infinite puniſhment; The wages of ſin is death: and God will, by no means clear the guilty: And ſo, if this vail be not rent by a complete ſatisfaction, the guilty ſinner muſt go down to the pit. The holineſs of God alſo was injured by the breach of the law; Sin is a tranſgreſſion of the law; a tranſgreſſion of the precept. Now, as God's juſtice ſtands up in defence of the threatening and penalty, ſo his holineſs ſtands up for the defence of the precept and command of the holy law. God cannot juſtify the ſinner, nor accept of him as righteous, unleſs he hath a complete righteouſneſs; not a lame, partial, and imperfect righteouſneſs; but a righteouſneſs every way commenſurate to the extenſive precept of the law, will ſatisfy an infinitely holy God. As infinite juſtice cannot be ſatisfied, without a complete ſatisfaction, anſwering to the threatning and penalty of the law; ſo the infinite holineſs of God cannot be ſatisfied without a perfect obedience, anſwerable to the precept and command of the law. Now, our natural want of ability to yield ſatisfaction, and our natural want of perfect conformity to the law, make juſtice and holineſs, and other perfections of God, ſtand in the way of our ſalvation, and of our acceſs to heaven, like a vail that can never be rent by us; eſpecially conſidering, that there is,

3. A third vail, and that is the vail of ſin on our part. This is a ſeparating vail betwixt God and us, Iſa. lix. 2. Your iniquities have ſeparated betwixt you and your God. Now, before we can get near unto God, this vail muſt be rent, the guilt of ſin muſt be expiated; for without ſhedding of blood there is no remiſſion: the filth of ſin muſt be purged; for, who ſhall aſcend to the hill of the Lord, and ſtand in his holy place, but he that hath clean hands and a pure heart? The power of ſin muſt be broken: there is, by nature, in us all a power of ignorance; our minds are become a dungeon of darkneſs, and this is ſuch a vail betwixt God and us, that unleſs it be removed, there is no hopes of mercy: therefore ſays the prophet, It is a people of no underſtanding; therefore he that made them, will not have mercy on them. There is in us a power of enmity, The carnal mind is enmity againſt God, etc. We are enemies to God by wicked works: this is another vail that muſt be rent by the arm of almighty power; for it is a vail and curtain that the devil hath ſtrongly wrought, like a web, with the warp and waft of pride, carnality, ſecurity, worldlineſs, and all other wickedneſs whatſoever, which are but ſo many threads and pieces of this web, this vail of enmity. There is a power of unbelief, that is another vail, that on our part ſtands betwixt us and the holy place, and ſeparates us from divine favour; He that believeth not, is condemned already.

II. The ſecond thing, How the death of Chriſt hath rent the vail: when he gave up the ghoſt, behold the vail was rent.

1. By the death of Chriſt the vail of a broken covenant was rent in twain, ſo as we might get to God through that vail of the law; for the law was fulfilled in every part of it, by his obedience to the death. Was the precept of the law a perfect obedience? Well, Chriſt by his obedience to the death, did magnify the law, and make it honourable, brought in an everlaſting righteouſneſs: his death was the finiſhing ſtroke, the higheſt act of that obedience whereby the law was fulfilled. Was the promiſe of life in the law, or firſt covenant forfeited by us? Well, Chriſt rent this vail, by redeeming the forfeiture with the price of his blood: he bought back the inheritance for us that we had loſt, making a purchaſe of us, and of eternal ſalvation for us. Was the penalty of death in the law ſtanding alſo in the way? Well, Chriſt comes in the ſinner's room, endures this penalty, by coming under the curſe of the law, becoming obedient to the death, enduring the wrath of God, and delivering us from the wrath to come: and ſo behold, the vail of a broken covenant was rent.

2. By the death of Chriſt, the vail of God's injured attributes, that ſtood betwixt God and us, was rent and removed. Chriſt hath ſatisfied the juſtice of God, by offering himſelf a ſacrifice, Eph. v. 2. This offering being through the eternal Spirit, it was of infinite worth and value: here the altar ſanctified the gift; the altar was the God-head of Chriſt, the offering was made upon the altar of the divine nature; and therefore this blood of Chriſt is called the blood of God. This ſacrifice was of infinite worth and value, for doing the buſineſs of poor man, in atoning juſtice, and ſo rending this vail. But now, as Chriſt hath ſatisfied the juſtice of God, by enduring the penalty and threatening of the law; ſo he hath vindicated the holineſs of God, by fulfilling the precept and command of the law, which he not only did through the whole courſe of his life, but perfectly finiſhed in his death. Now, if Chriſt hath fulfilled the law, ſatisfied the juſtice, and vindicated the holineſs of God, by his obedience to the death, then we may ſee and ſay, Behold the vail was rent. But,

gift;

3. There is the vail of ſin on our part; how is this rent by the death of Chriſt? Why, the Lamb was ſacrificed to rend and remove this vail, Behold the Lamb of God, that takes away the ſin of the world. By his death, the guilt of ſin is expiated; for God ſet him forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs for the remiſſion of ſins, etc. By his death the filth of ſin is purged; for the blood of Chriſt cleanſeth from all ſin, and that both meritoriouſly, and efficaciouſly; for, by his death, the power of ſin alſo is broken fundamentally, ſeeing by his death he purchaſed the Spirit; which, in due time, he pours out, and thereby actually removes the vail on our part, which he had done fundamentally and virtually on the croſs. By this purchaſed Spirit he rends the vails of darkneſs and ignorance: The God who commanded light to ſhine out of darkneſs, ſhines into the heart, etc. All the light of nature, reaſon, education, and human literature cannot rend this vail, till the man receive the Spirit of wiſdom and revelation in the knowledge of Chriſt. By this purchaſed Spirit he rends the vail of enmity, ſhedding abroad his love upon the heart; and indeed the view and apprehenſion of God's mighty love in Chriſt, can rend that mighty vail of enmity; for we love him whenever we ſee that he firſt loved us, 1 John iv. 19. When the ſoul ſees the God, whoſe majeſty he dreaded, is now a God in Chriſt, reconciled to the ſoul through the ſacrifice that Chriſt offered up, then the ſoul is reconciled to God, and ſo the vail of enmity rent in twain. By this purchaſed Spirit he rends alſo the vail of unbelief; for, as he is a Spirit of light to remove the vail of darkneſs, and a Spirit of love to remove the vail of enmity; ſo he comes into the heart as a Spirit of faith, and removes the vail of unbelief; he begins the rent of humiliation, when he rends the heart in twain with a ſenſe of ſin, and a ſight of its undone ſtate; when he makes the ſoul take with ſin, and juſtify the Lord, though he ſhould damn him for his ſin. He makes the rent of the vail wider by a gracious manifeſtation, like that, John ii. 11. He manifeſted forth his glory, and his diſciples believed on him. Thus he rends the vail of unbelief; and completes the rent of this vail when faith is turned into viſion.—Thus you ſee how by his death the vail was rent.

III. The third thing, In what manner was the vail rent? All I ſay on this head, ſhall be in alluſion ſhortly to the rending of the vail of the temple here; which we ſee, was in a wonderful manner uſhered in with a behold.

1. Behold, it was rent; not only drawn aſide, but rent. The curtain was not only drawn aſide, but torn to pieces, as if God had been angry at the vail of partition betwixt him and us; angry at the vail of ſeparation, and enraged that there ſhould have been any vail to intercept betwixt him and us. God's heart was ſet upon a reconciliation betwixt him and us, and therefore his hand tears the curtain that was hanging up betwixt him and us; gave it ſuch a rent, as it might never be whole again: all the devils in hell cannot ſew up the rent, ſo as to diſappoint God's deſign of bringing his people into union and communion with him.

2. Behold, the vail of the temple was not only rent, but rent in twain: the vail that was one, was made two, that God and man, who were two, might be made one. It was not half rent, but wholly rent; rent in twain, a full and complete rent; ſhewing, that Chriſt, by his death, would not be a half Saviour, but a complete Saviour, and the Author of a full and complete ſalvation; taking entirely out of the way whatever ſeparated betwixt God and us, not leaving ſo much as a ſtitch of the curtain to hold the two ſides of the vail together; no, the vail was rent in twain. And not only ſo, but,

3. Behold, the vail was rent FROM THE TOP to THE BOTTOM: the vail was rent from the TOP, the higheſt thing that ſeparated betwixt God and us was rent in twain; we could never have reached up to the top of the vail; yea, the hands and arms of all the men on earth, and angels in heaven, were too ſhort to reach to the top of the infinite juſtice and holineſs of God, that interpoſed betwixt him and us: the top of this vail, this wall of partition was higher than heaven: what could we or any other creature do for rending it from the top? But Chriſt put up his hand, as it were, to the top of the vail, and rent it from the top. The rent begins at the top, but it does not ſtop here: For,

4. The vail is alſo rent to the BOTTOM: the bottom of this vail, that did ſeparate betwixt God and us, did reach as deep as the bottom of hell: who could deſcend to hell for us to rend the vail to the bottom? According to the lamentation of one Joannes Seneca upon his death-bed, "We have here, ſays he, ſome that will "go to the quire for us, ſome that will play "for us, ſome that will ſay Maſs for us, ſome "that will pray for us; but where is there "one that will go to hell for us?" But, O happy believer, Chriſt is one that hath gone to hell for you, that he might quench all the flames of hell with his blood, and conquer all the powers of hell that were in the way betwixt you and heaven. He deſcended to hell, in a manner, that he might rend the bottom of the vail. But there is yet more here, he not only rends the vail at the top and at the bottom, but,

5. From the top to the bottom all is rent; both the top and the bottom, and all that is betwixt the top and the bottom, all the impediments betwixt heaven and hell are removed. Though heaven be purchaſed, and hell vanquiſhed, yet there might be ſomething in the earth, ſomething in the world, betwixt heaven and hell that might obſtruct the paſſage to the holieſt; well, but the rent is from the top to the bottom: all that comes betwixt the top and the bottom is rent as well as both ends; ſo that there is acceſs from the loweſt part of miſery to the higheſt happineſs, a long rent, in a manner, from the top of heaven to the bottom of hell. We fell as low as hell by ſin, but Chriſt by his death hath made an open way from hell to heaven; for, behold, the vail was rent in twain from the top to the bottom.

ven

IV. The fourth thing, For what END was the vail rent? I ſhall tell you only theſe two ends of it. 1. That Chriſt might enter into the holieſt as our High-prieſt for us. 2. That we might enter in alſo after him and through him.

1. I ſay, the vail of the temple was rent, that Chriſt our glorious High-prieſt might enter into the holy of holies in our name. I told you, that the vail of the temple was that which parted betwixt the holy place and the moſt holy, and which kept off people from drawing near to the moſt holy place. The vail was for concealment; and none might enter within the vail but the high-prieſt, and he was not to enter in without blood, the blood of the ſacrifice along with him, as you ſee, Heb. ix. 3, 7. Now, the moſt holy place was a type of heaven; ſo our Lord Jeſus Chriſt having ſhed his own blood, entered within the vail into heaven, the true holy of holies, carrying in with him the blood of his own ſacrifice, Heb. ix. 12. Not by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood, he entered in once into the holy place. Not that Chriſt did carry into heaven his own ſubſtantial blood in his hand; we are not to underſtand it ſo carnally, but that, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, and virtually, he did ſo. Under the law, the day of atonement was upon that day when the high-prieſt went into the holy of holies, Lev. xvi. 30.; on that day the people were pardoned all their ſins, and cleanſed from all their tranſgreſſions: when the high-prieſt had been within the vail in the holy of holies, then was the atonement actually made: though the blood was ſhed without the camp, yet the atonement was not made till it was brought into the holy place, Lev. xvi. 14, 15. What did this typify, but that our atonement was perfectly made upon Chriſt's going into the holy of holies, namely heaven? See Heb. ix. 24. For Chriſt is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true, but into heaven itſelf, now to appear in the preſence of God for us. Perhaps you have thought hitherto that the work of our redemption was perfectly completed on the croſs, ſo as there was no more to be done; but know, it was not enough for the ſacrifice to be killed without the camp, but the blood muſt be carried into the holy of holies; all was not done till that was done. Indeed when Chriſt died, the ſacrifice was ſlain, the blood was ſhed; there was no more ſacrifice to ſucceed, all was finiſhed in that reſpect; but yet all was not done until the true vail being rent as well as the typical: the blood of Chriſt was carried into the holy place within the vail, that is, into heaven. Though Chriſt did not perſonally aſcend to heaven, as I ſaid in the explication, till above forty days after, yet he immediately acquired a right to enter, and had a virtual admiſſion; ſo that his entrance began in his death; and when he aſcended into heaven he completed and perfected that in his own perſon, in the true holy of holies, heaven itſelf, which the high-prieſt did typically in the figurative holy of holies, which was of old under the law in the earth; and there hath Chriſt, in the power and virtue of his blood, made atonement: and as the high-prieſt did under the law, he carried in with him all the names of all the tribes of Iſrael on his breaſt; and by the power of this blood of the ſacrifice made a full atonement. But then,

2. Another end of rending the vail was, not only that he might make a way for himſelf, as our Prieſt, into the moſt holy place, but that he might make a way for us in him; that we might enter in alſo, and have acceſs to God through him; acceſs to heaven through him. See therefore how the believer is ſaid to follow in after Chriſt into the holieſt within the vail, Heb. vi. 19, 20. They are ſaid to flee for refuge to the hope ſet before them, which hope we have as an anchor of the ſoul, both ſure and ſtedfaſt, entering into that within the vail, whither the Forerunner is for us entered, even Jeſus, made an High-prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedec. Heb. x. 19, 20. We have boldneſs to enter into the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus, by a new and living way, which he hath conſecrated for us through the vail, that is to ſay, his fleſh. Where our way to heaven, or to the holieſt, is ſaid to be through the blood of Chriſt; or, which is all one, thro' his fleſh offered as a propitiatory ſacrifice; by which, as by the rent vail, we have boldneſs to enter. Now, this entrance into the holieſt, or acceſs to God that we have in Chriſt, is twofold, either inchoative here, or conſummate hereafter.

(1.) There is an initial, inchoative, or begun entrance that we have into the holieſt in time. In the moſt holy place was the golden altar, and ſymbols of God's preſence and glorious majeſty, and acceſs thereto was typical of our acceſs to God and heaven; which acceſs we have now with boldneſs even in time, through the rent vail by which our High-prieſt hath entered into the holy place. Heb. iv. 16. Seeing then that we have a great High-prieſt that is paſt into the heavens, Jeſus the Son of God, let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace. And ſo it is inferred from this ſame doctrine, Heb. x. 22. Let us draw near with a true heart, in full aſſurance of faith. Queſt. What is that nearneſs to God, and acceſs to him, that a man hath in time, when he is brought within the vail? Anſw. In a word, it lies not only in the firſt application of grace, and change of the man's ſtate, when in Chriſt Jeſus he that was afar off is made nigh by the blood of Chriſt: for, whenever the virtue of that blood comes upon us by the Spirit of Chriſt, God comes near to us, and we are brought near to God; but there is ſtill more and more nearneſs enjoyed by his people. Exerciſed Chriſtians are able to give a diſtinct account of their having this nearneſs at ſome times, and of their want of it at other times. He may be ſuſpected indeed for an hypocrite that hath no changes, Pſal. lv. 19.; for the true Chriſtian's ſky is never long clear and without clouds: change of weather, and change of way, is uſually found by travellers to heaven. Every believer indeed hath ſtill the Spirit of Chriſt dwelling in him; for if any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt he is none of his; but there are ſome ſingular outpourings of the Spirit promiſed and beſtowed, and well known by all believers, and they are precious enjoyments. This Spirit the world cannot receive, becauſe it ſees him not, neither knows him, ſays Chriſt; but you know him, for he dwells with you, and ſhall be in you, John xiv. 17. This acceſs to God within the vail, is ſometimes experienced in prayer; yea, moſt frequently in that exerciſe is the light of God's countenance lifted up, and the ſoul made to ſay, I love the Lord, becauſe he hath heard the voice of my ſupplication. Do not ye, believers, know this, that ſometimes you have been ſo troubled that you could not ſpeak? Pſal. lxxvii. 4.; that your hearts have been ſo bound and ſtraitened, that you could do nothing, and ſay nothing before the Lord, but ſit as dumb and oppreſſed, all dark above, all dead within, and all doors ſhut upon you? You durſt not neglect prayer, and yet you could not perform it; but behold, you have quickly found the two-leaved gates caſt open to you; your hearts enlarged, and mouths wide opened in aſking; the windows of heaven open, and the banks of the river of life broken down, and the ſtreams guſhing in upon you, like that in Iſa. xliv. 3. I will pour water upon him that is thirſty, and floods upon the dry ground. Alſo, this acceſs to God within the vail, is ſometimes experienced in ſweet communion and fellowſhip with God; Truly our fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt. This communion with God is a myſtery, ſweet indeed to them that have it, and ſurpaſſing all the delights of ſenſe and reaſon; but to them that have it not, it is incredible and unintelligible: a ſtranger intermeddles not with this joy. Ye that know not what it is, although the word be full of ſuitable and ſavoury expreſſions of it, yet it is a riddle and dark parable to you; it is only taſting of it that can declare its tranſcendent ſweetneſs. O taſte and ſee that God is good! You that know what it is, though you cannot expreſs it, yet you can reliſh and underſtand ſome ſound words about it. It may be, you feel it ſometimes in the ſecret retirements of the houſe, ſometimes in the fields, or under a buſh, as Nathanael under the fig-tree; but what you felt, you cannot make the world underſtand; only when the Lord directs the miniſter to ſpeak ſomewhat ſuitably to it, then you are ready to think, O it is juſt like the thing I felt at ſuch a time and ſuch a place; that which the miniſter is ſaying from God's word, hath a ſweet ſound of that which I got yonder, when none in all the world heard me or ſaw me: But (Nathanael) when thou waſt under the fig-tree I ſaw thee, ſays Chriſt: I heard you groning to me; I ſaw you wreſtling with me; I put your tears in my bottle, and poured in my comforts into your ſoul. O, know you what it is to be brought near to him, and to have the clouds and vails that are on your hearts, or on your faces, ſcattered, and the light of his countenance lifted up upon you? Have you not been ſometimes on the mount, ſo as to think, O how good is it to be here? Have you not known what the warm and healing beams of the Sun of righteouſneſs upon you are? Have you not taſted that in his company that hath made all the wells of worldly comfort, like puddle water, loathſome and unſavoury to you; yea, that hath made you grone in this tabernacle, and long to be at that complete and uninterrupted communion above, whereof all you taſted on earth is but a ſmall earneſt? However, the vail was rent, that you might enter within the vail into the holieſt, to a begun heaven even in time. Grace being the ſame ſpecifically with glory; there is but a gradual difference; and therefore the believer, even on earth, is ſaid to be come to mount Zion, the city of the living God, the heavenly Jeruſalem, to the innumerable company of angels, to the general aſſembly and church of the firſt-born that are written in heaven, to God the judge of all, and to the ſpirits of juſt men made perfect, Heb. xii. 22, 23. Why, when does the believer come to all this? Even when he comes by faith to Jeſus the Mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of ſprinkling, then he is come to heaven itſelf, the true holy of holies inchoatively, or by a begun entrance. But,

ſtill

(2.) There is a conſummative entrance into the holieſt, that the believer ſhall have, as a fruit of the rending of the vail, and that is when he comes to the heaven above, to the higher houſe, whither the Forerunner is for us entered, having rent the vail, which was rent, that we might have acceſs to God in glory as well as in grace, and then the believer will not be half in, as it were, but completely within the vail; for then will his communion with God be completed, then his knowledge of God, his love to God, his delight in God, his viſion of God's glory, his conformity to God's image, will all be complete; for that which is in part ſhall be done away, and that which is perfect ſhall come, 1 Cor. xiii. 10. O what a ſweet exchange will that be, when faith will ſay to viſion, I give place to you; when hope will ſay to fruition, I give place to you; when grace will ſay to glory, I give place to you; when partial communion will ſay to perfection, I give place to you; when ſhort paſſing blinks will ſay to uninterrupted everlaſting joys, I give place to you! Little wonder then, believers long to be wholly within the vail; (but I inſiſt not on it) for then indeed he fully enters into the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus.

Thus you ſee the two great ends for which the vail was rent, namely, that way might be made for Chriſt's entering into the holy of holies, and ſo for our entering in through him, and after him. But I come now to

V. The fifth thing, viz. the application. Is it ſo, that Chriſt hath by his death rent the vail that interpoſed betwixt God and us, and obſtructed our acceſs to him? Then, firſt for information: hence we may ſee,

1. What a full feaſt of love we have to feed upon on a communion-day, namely, the love of Chriſt, not only in dying, but in rending the vail, that he might enter into the holieſt for us. The apoſtle ſays, that Chriſt loved us; and how does he prove it? Eph. v. 2. He gave himſelf an offering and a ſacrifice to God for a ſweet-ſmelling ſavour: this ſavoury and ſweet-ſmelling ſacrifice, was the offering of incenſe; and where was the incenſe offered under the law? why, it was offered within the vail. God tells Moſes, that Aaron ſhould take his handful of ſweet incenſe beaten ſmall, and bring it within the vail, vail, Lev. xvi. 12. Now, Chriſt having given himſelf an offering and ſacrifice to God without the camp in this world, he rends the vail, and goes to heaven, and offers himſelf as incenſe within the vail. Perhaps you have ſeen and thought upon the love of Chriſt, in his dying upon the croſs, in his making himſelf a ſacrifice; but, O ſee his love alſo in his incenſe within the vail. We feed too ſparingly upon Chriſt; and therefore our faith is weak: we eat, for the moſt part, but of one diſh, Chriſt, as the paſchal Lamb ſlain on the croſs, but we ſhould learn to feed upon Chriſt as a Prieſt gone in within the vail: our faith ſhould not tarry on the croſs, but we ſhould carry it further, even after Chriſt, within the vail, into heaven itſelf. Our faith ſhould flee for refuge, to lay hold upon all the hope that is ſet before us: the anchor of our ſoul will not be ſo ſure and ſtedfaſt, as it might be, except it enter within the vail, Heb. vi. 19. As the apoſtle ſays of patience, Let it have its perfect work, ſo we ſay of faith, let it have its perfect work; let us follow Chriſt within the vail, and view him, not only ſhedding his blood, but entering into the holy of holies within the vail, and ſprinkling his blood upon the mercy-ſeat, and before it, Lev. xvi. 15. The prieſts under the law ſprinkled the mercy-ſeat, which was within the vail, all over, and when Chriſt went to heaven within the vail, he did that in ſubſtance, which the prieſts did in ceremony, in order to make a full atonement: and when faith is acted upon all this, then the believer is ſaid to be come to the blood of ſprinkling; and we act not our faith far enough, when we act it no further than the death of Chriſt; for the atonement was not actually perfected, though it was made fundamentally on the croſs, yet not formally, till upon the rending of the vail, our High-Prieſt entered into the holy place, and ſprinkled the mercy-ſeat with his blood; by which act mercy and juſtice are actually met, and kiſs each other.

2. If the vail of the temple be rent, hence we may ſee the glory of the New Teſtament diſpenſation, beyond that of the Old; the vail of the covering is rent, the darkneſs of that diſpenſation removed by the death of Chriſt, and Old Teſtament myſteries unvailed; ſo that now, he that runs may read the meaning of them. Now we ſee clearly, that the mercy-ſeat ſignified Chriſt, the great propitiation; the pot of manna ſignified Chriſt, the bread of life. Now we all with open face beholding the glory of the Lord, as in a glaſs, which helps the ſight as the vail hindered it; and that the vail of the temple was rent, it may give us ground further to expect, that the vail ſhall be taken away from the hearts of the Jews; for even to this day, when Moſes is read, the vail is upon their hearts; nevertheleſs when it ſhall turn to the Lord, the vail ſhall be taken away, 2 Cor. iii. 15.

3. If by the death of Chriſt the vail be rent, that interpoſed betwixt God and us, hence we may ſee what is the way to heaven, and what acceſs we have this way; why, We have boldneſs to come to the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus, by that new and living way, that he hath conſecrated through the vail. We may come boldly to the throne of grace, for the vail is rent; by the blood of Jeſus, the way is open. How ſhall the unholieſt of ſinners venture to come into the holieſt of all, or to God's preſence? Yea, ſays the Holy Ghoſt, by the blood of Jeſus, by the rent vail. There are many miſtakes about the way to the holy place; it is a dreadful thing to think, that many who have heard the goſpel, it may be, ten, twenty, thirty years, if they be aſked of the way to heaven, they will ſay, why, if we do juſtly, live honeſtly and civilly, and do as we would be done to, we ſhall ſurely be ſaved. But I tell you, you ſhall ſurely be damned, if no more be done. O ſad, that after all the light that hath ſhined about the way of ſalvation by the ſlain Son of God, that civility that is to be found among heathens, is all the title that a great many have to eternal life. Others, they hope to get to heaven by a better righteouſneſs, but it is a righteouſneſs of their own; they ſay they will do as well as they can; they muſt read, and pray, and hear, and the like, and ſo they find out a way to heaven for themſelves: ſome cannot endure to hear any thing ſpoken againſt ſelf-righteouſneſs, as if no perſon were in danger to be ruined by it; whereas this is a great part of the ſtrong man's armour, whereby he keeps poſſeſſion of ſouls. I tell you, Sirs, your falſe righteouſneſs, is ſo far from being the way to heaven, that true holineſs itſelf is but the buſineſs that people have to do who are in the way; there will never be another way to heaven but Chriſt: holineſs is the walk, Chriſt is the way in which we walk, Col. ii. 6. As ye have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him. I am the way, no man comes to the Father, but by me. This is the new and living way, conſecrated through the vail. The vail of the temple is rent, and the way to the holieſt lies through the rent vail. Every perſon thinks, that it is very hard to get to heaven, and that it will coſt a great deal of time, and pains, and ſtruggling; but, ſays one, here is the miſchief of it; people do not know, that it is hard to know the way to heaven, and that fleſh and blood cannot reveal it, till God himſelf ſend in a beam of light upon the heart, and give the Spirit of wiſdom and revelation in the knowledge of Chriſt, who is the way, having by his death rent the vail. O this way is little known, and yet we aſſure you, that there is free acceſs for you all this way; and nothing to hinder your acceſs to God and heaven this way, if it be not your own ignorant unbelieving heart; nothing to hinder your entering into the holieſt, for the vail is rent, the law is fulfilled, juſtice is ſatisfied, holineſs vindicated, ſin is expiated. Will you go to heaven this way, man, woman? for the door is open for you, the vail is rent for you; to you is the word of this ſalvation ſent, to you, man, woman, young or old; whoſoever hears me, to you is the way to the holieſt made patent; and whoſoever will, let him come and enter in; and him that cometh he will in no wiſe caſt out. What in all the world is to hinder you from coming in? The law, however holy, needs not hinder you, here is a righteouſneſs; juſtice, however awful, needs not hinder you, here is a ſatisfaction; your ſins, however great, need not hinder you, here is a ſacrifice: all theſe vails are rent, what ſhould hinder? Are there any other vails to be rent? O, ſay you, the vail of darkneſs, ignorance, enmity, and unbelief that is upon my heart. Well, let me tell you, that needs not hinder you neither to come to Chriſt, and employ him to rend

theſe

theſe vails on your part; that is but little for him to do, who could rend ſuch great vails as were on God's part. O he is good at rending vails; give him work, and the work is done. Did he not rend a greater vail, when he ſatisfied infinite juſtice, and ſtopt up the floodgates of divine wrath? and if he hath done the greater, O will you not employ him to do the leſs? Why, ſay you, if I knew that he rent that great vail for me, I would not fear, but he would rend the leſſer: why, man, the vail was rent for ſinners, and why not for you? Chriſt came to ſave ſinners. But ſay you, all ſhall not be ſaved and brought within the vail, and perhaps not I. I anſwer, Some ſhall be ſaved, and why not you? wherefore are not all that hear this goſpel ſaved, but becauſe they will not give employment to Chriſt to ſave them? Through unbelief they think he meant no favour towards them, when he rent the vail, and ſo ſtand aloft from him, ſaying, It was not for me; but I declare in his name, it was for you, man; for you, woman; whoever will have the benefit of it. The goſpel notifies in general, that the vail is rent for you all, ſo far as that God calls and commands you all to come in to the holieſt by this way, this new and living way conſecrated through the vail, and if you do not, you ſhall be damned for your neglect of it. But as for your particular perſonal knowledge of your actual intereſt in the benefit of this rent vail, it is impoſſible for you to have it, till you come to Chriſt and ſue for it: therefore let nothing hinder you to enter, ſince the vail is rent, and the way patent: you have nothing to do yourſelf, for you cannot rend any vail; all that you have to do, is to conſent that Chriſt ſhould rend all vials betwixt God and you; for he will be a complete Saviour; he will not leave a rag of the vail for you to rend, but with his own hand will rend all in twain from the top to the bottom. O ſay Amen to it, that he may get all the work, and all the praiſe.

Uſe ſecond, for examination. Try what intereſt you have in this privilege: if the vail be actually rent from the top to the bottom, with reſpect to you; try whether or not you have gone in within the rent vail of the temple, to the holy of holies. The vail was rent fundamentally, when Chriſt gave up the ghoſt; it was rent formally, when he entered into the holieſt. The vail is rent objectively, in the preaching of this goſpel; and now the queſtion is, if the vail be rent ſubjectively, and ſo as you have the actual ſaving benefit of it in your own perſon. It is not enough that the vail is rent doctrinally for you, ſo as you have liberty to go into the holy place, but whether is the vail rent effectually to you, and in you, ſo as you have ſtept in to the holieſt by the rent vail? And,

1. If you be a believer indeed, in whom the vail is ſavingly rent, then you have got a humbling ſight and ſenſe of the vail that interpoſed betwixt God and you, and have ſeen yourſelf to be without the vail. Did you ever ſee ſuch a vail of wrath on God's part, and ſuch a vail of guilt on your part? ſuch a vail of a broken law, incenſed juſtice, and injured holineſs on the one hand; and ſuch a vail of ſin, darkneſs, unbelief, and enmity on the other hand, as hath made you to deſpair that ever the vail would be rent by you, or any creature in heaven or earth, and made you to ſee yourſelf loſt and undone, crying out, Men and brethren, what ſhall I do to be ſaved? Did you never ſee your ſad ſtate, as having a black vail ſtanding up betwixt God and you? The exerciſe of perſons about religion is ſuſpicious, if they never ſaw the vail. Some will ſay, O I have ſeen many evils about me, and I have an evil heart, and an evil frame of heart; but I aſk, man, did you never ſee yourſelf to be in an evil ſtate, in a ſtate of diſtance from God; in a ſtate of ſeparation from God, by reaſon of the vail that was betwixt him and you? The effectual rending of the vail begins here, namely, at a humbling ſight of the ſeparating vail; the man ſees himſelf without the vail, and ſo within the flood mark of God's wrath.

2. If the vail be effectually rent in you, then you have ſeen the glory of him that rent the vail; and the glory of God through the rent vail; ſomething of the glory of God in Chriſt. The apoſtle tells us, Heb. x. 19, 20. That Chriſt's fleſh, that is, his human nature, is the vail for us to enter by to the holy of holies; that is, heaven or God's preſence, God's face: ſo that in this fleſh, or human nature of Chriſt, we may ſee the very face, the very brightneſs of the glory of God as in a mirrour. Now, if the vail be rent in you, and the face of the covering removed, then you have ſeen the glory of God in Chriſt; you have ſeen God's law fulfilled by him, God's juſtice ſatisfied in him, God's holineſs vindicated by him, and ſo God's righteouſneſs declared in the way of ſaving ſinners through him, as the propitiation in blood. Have you ſeen his glory as the only way to heaven, as God's way to you, and your way to God, as the Render of the vail on God's part and on yours; the glory of his death in the value and virtue of it; in the value of it, for rending of the vails that hindered God's acceſs to you; and in the virtue of it, for rending of the vail within you that hindered your acceſs to God? Have you felt ſomething of this virtue in rending the vail of darkneſs and ignorance that was upon your underſtanding, and ſhining in upon you with the light of life? The effectual rending of the vail makes a man ſee ſome glory that is within the vail; have you ſeen God's glory then through the rent vail, and that God's glorious attributes are all glorified to the higheſt in this way?

3. If the vail be effectually rent, then you have caſt the anchor of your hope within the vail, Heb. vi. 18, 19. After your ſoul, like a weary veſſel toſſed upon the waves of convictions, fears, terrors, could find no reſt, God hath brought you at laſt into this haven of reſt, to caſt anchor within the vail; you have fled for refuge to the hope ſet before you; which hope you have as your anchor, ſure and ſtedfaſt, entering into that within the vail, whither the forerunner hath entered. Whither have you fled for refuge, when the law and juſtice of God was purſuing you for your debt, when they were ready to condemn you to hell priſon? was you then made to flee for refuge to the Surety that God ſet before you, for paying of your debt, and to ſay, Lord, take bail of thy own Son for me? I deſpair of ever anſwering ſuch a charge as juſtice and the law hath againſt me; but O look for a diſcharge in the blood and righteouſneſs ouſneſs of Jeſus; and let that anſwer the charge. When Chriſt entered into the holieſt with his blood within the vail, he ſprinkled the mercy-ſeat, and when the ſoul takes hold of this blood and righteouſneſs of Chriſt, as the ground of his acquittance from the charge of juſtice, then he caſts anchor within the vail.

4. If the vail be effectually rent for you, then ſurely you cannot but have a ſuperlative love for that glorious High-prieſt, who, by his death, rent the vail, and went into the holieſt for you. O can you ſay with Paul, He loved me, and gave himſelf for me? Or, can you ſay with Peter, Thou that knoweſt all things, knoweſt that I love thee? Surely, they that love him not, know nothing yet ſavingly about the rending of the vail. It may be, ſome love him, and dare not ſo confidently ſay it as Peter did; but if you can ſay Amen to two texts of ſcripture, we may warrant you that you love him indeed. The one is a ſad text, If any man love not the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, let him be anathema maranatha, 1 Cor. xvi. 22. The true lover of Chriſt can ſay, Amen; let them be even curſed that do not love him, and ſhall not love him. They that can ſay Amen to that now, they ſhall ſit at Chriſt's right hand at the great day, and ſay Amen to the ſentence of the great judge, Depart from me, ye curſed. The other is a ſweet text, Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain to receive power, and riches, and wiſdom, and ſtrength, and honour, and glory, and bleſſing, Rev. v. 12. The true lover of Chriſt can ſay, Amen; worthy, worthy, worthy is the Lamb to receive all the praiſes, of all the redeemed, to all eternity. They that can ſet the Amen of faith to this now, they have begun to join with the triumphant company already within the vail; and they ſhall join with them for ever hereafter, ſaying, Salvation to our God that ſits upon the throne, and to the Lamb for ever and ever. Indeed, if you love Chriſt at all, you love him with a ſuperlative love; above huſband, wife, children, lands, houſes, goods, and worldly comforts. You do not love him at all, if you do not love him above all; and if you love him at all, the vail is rent, and you have got into the holieſt in part; and if you will have patience, yet a little while and you ſhall get in fully. It is impoſſible that a man that truly loves Chriſt ſhould ever go to hell.

5. If the vail be effectually rent, then all the vails on your part that continue to ſeparate betwixt God and you, are matter of ſad regret to you; the vail of indwelling ſin and corruption, the vail of darkneſs and ignorance, the vail of remaining enmity, the vail of unbelief, theſe vails are all whole and intire in the unregenerate; and though in believers theſe vails be rent, yet they are not removed; regenerating grace hath given them a rent that ſhall never be ſewed up or healed again; but yet, alas! they are remaining vails within the believer, while here; though they be rent, yet they hang there, and many times ſadly ſeparate betwixt God and him; and hence he cries, O wretched man that I am! who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death! O to be above corruption! O to be within the vail! that I may ſee him as he is, and be like unto him. O! when ſhall all vails be removed? when ſhall the day break, and the ſhadows fly away? O! when ſhall the curtain be taken down? Chriſt ſtands behind the curtain, and does not manifeſt himſelf. Hath he been a vailed Chriſt at this communion? then I am ſure, believer, your heart will be ſaying, O that the curtain were drawn! O that the vail were rent into ten thouſand pieces!

6. If the vail be effectually rent, then your heart will be effectually rent alſo; when the vail is rent, the heart is rent; and there is ſomething it is rent for, and ſomething it is rent from.

(1.) Something it is rent for: it is rent for ſin. Indeed the ſight of the rent vail, or of God reconciled by the blood of Jeſus, will rend the heart for ſin more than all the thunders of Sinai, or flames of hell; They ſhall look on him whom they have pierced, and mourn. When a man reads his ſins, as they are written upon the croſs of Chriſt, with the red ink of his ſin-pardoning blood, O then he reads them over with tears of joy, and his heart is kindly rent for ſin; then he cries, Behold, I am vile.——When the vail is rent, the heart is rent, not only for his own ſins, but for the ſins of others; Rivers of tears run down mine eyes, becauſe of the wicked that break thy law. I beheld tranſgreſſors, and was grieved. They that can ſee God diſhonoured, and hear men curſe and ſwear, and blaſpheme the holy name of God, and yet never be troubled about it, ſurely the vail remains upon their heart, otherwiſe their hearts would rend for the ſins of others, and of the generation: Set a mark upon the foreheads of them that ſigh and cry, for all the abominations that are done in the midſt thereof. ——Again, when the vail is rent, the heart is rent for the Lord's anger and abſence: nothing fears them more than the Lord's anger; O rebuke me not in thy wrath, neither chaſten me in thy hot diſpleaſure. Nothing affects them more than the Lord's abſence; for theſe things they weep: Mine eyes, mine eyes run down with waters, becauſe the Comforter that ſhould relieve my ſoul is far from me. O the little lamentation after an abſent God, an angry God at this day!—Again, when the vail is rent, the heart is rent for the calamities of the church, Jer. ix. 1. O that my head were waters, and my eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the ſlain of the daughters of my people. The miſeries of the church, and the ſins that bring them on, are heart-rending things to the people of God; and particularly, their hearts are rent for the rents of the church; For the diviſions of Reuben there were great thoughts of heart. For my own part, I am but a perſon of little experience in the world, and therefore I deſire to be modeſt at this juncture, about the preſent rent among us *. It is plain enough that the anger of the Lord hath divided us, and rent us in twain, like the vail of the temple, from the top to the bottom. God is angry becauſe we have ſinned. Surely, if we had been more valiant for the truth, and zealous for a covenanted work of reformation, when we had fair opportunities for it, our rent had not come to ſuch a height. But yet, though I cannot juſtify the ignorant zeal

* About this time the ſecond form of the Abjuration Oath was impoſed, which occaſioned different ſentiments both among miniſters and people: and the matter was carried ſo high by ſome, as almoſt to make it a term of commmunion. It is probably this that the author hath in his eye.

of

of many profeſſors, whoſe hearts are rent from miniſters, and they know not for what; they can give no reaſonable account of their ſeparating-courſes; yet, I hope, there is a ſerious remnant, whoſe hearts are duly rent for the rents of the church, and the ſinful cauſes thereof: and I hope the Lord will help ſuch to be regular in the way of their diſſenting, from whatever they reckon, upon ſolid grounds, to be the defection of the day they live in. But that I may not digreſs too far, I am telling you, that if the vail be effectually rent with you, then there are ſome things your heart is rent for, namely, for your own ſins, the ſins of others, the ſins of the land, the ſins of the church, the calamities of the church, the rents of the church. The Lord's anger with her, and abſence from her, may indeed make you weep when you remember Zion, and hang your harps upon the willow trees, while we are gone ſo far into captivity, and the glory is ſo far departed. In a word, if the vail be rent with you, your heart will be rent habitually for all theſe things, as alſo for all your heart plagues. Your heart will be ſo rent for your atheiſm, ignorance, enmity, carnality, hypocriſy, rovings, wanderings, worldlineſs, and ſuch like, that you will be ready to ſay as Rebecca ſaid to Iſaac, in another caſe, I am weary of my life, becauſe of the daughters of Heth.

(2.) If the vail be effectually rent, then, as there are are ſome things your heart will be rent for, ſo there are ſome things your hearts will be rent from. Why, your hearts will be rent from ſin as well as rent for ſin; your heart will ſay with Ephraim, What have I to do any more with idols? what have I to do any more with luſts? All that expect to get in to the holy of holies in the heavenly temple, are ſtudents of holineſs and purity: He that hath this hope purifieth himſelf even as he is pure. Chriſt having rent the vail, entered into the holieſt with blood; and believers are daily beſprinkling themſelves with that blood, that ſo they may enter in all ſprinkled over with that blood alſo. Believers want not ſin, and it cleaves to them here; but they are ſo far from cleaving to it, that it is the deſire of their ſoul to be rent from it; and therefore their daily ſins oblige them to make daily application to the blood of ſprinkling.——Again, if the vail be effectually rent, then your heart will be rent from the world. O but this globe of earth, and all the glory of it, looks but like a filthy mote, a piece of dung, to the man who hath got his heart within the vail. The glory of God in Chriſt darkens all created glory. What cares he for worldly pleaſures, who hath Chriſt for his delight? What cares he for worldly profits, who hath Chriſt for his gain? What cares he for worldly honour, who hath Chriſt for his crown of glory? What cares he for the world's all, who hath Chriſt for his all in all? His heart is rent from the world.—— Again, when the vail is rent, the man's heart is rent from the law: He that is married to Chriſt, is divorced from the law, Rom. vii. 4. The law, as a covenant of works, the believer hath nothing to do with it. He does not owe it a cup of cold water, as one ſays; for Chriſt hath perfectly fulfilled the condition of the covenant of works; and therefore, if the law challenge him, he ſends it to Chriſt for a perfect obedience; if the penalty challenge him, he ſends it to Chriſt for a complete ſatisfaction. He deſires, with Paul, to be found in Chriſt, and would not be found in his own righteouſneſs for ten thouſand worlds; he ſees ſo much unholineſs in his own holineſs; ſo much unrighteouſneſs in his own righteouſneſs; ſo much carnality, in all his ſpirituality; ſo much earthlineſs, in all his heavenlineſs; ſo much ſin in all his duties; that he is ſure God may damn him for his beſt duties as well as his worſt ſins: and therefore he hath no expectation from the law, but is rent from it, and joined to the Lord Jeſus, ſaying, In the Lord only have I righteouſneſs and ſtrength——In a word, when the vail is effectually rent, the man is rent from Self; it is very hard indeed to rend a man from himſelf; ſelf inſinuates itſelf into all our praying, preaching, and communicating. However, the power of ſelf is broken in all true believers. Inſtead of ſelf-eſtimation he is brought to that, Behold, I am vile; he hath never a good word to ſpeak of himſelf, not a good thought to think of himſelf; but every time he prays, every time he communicates, he cries out, Behold, I am vile. Inſtead of ſelf-juſtification, he is brought to that, I will lay my hand upon my mouth; I will not anſwer, I cannot juſtify myſelf, but muſt condemn myſelf, and juſtify the Lord. Inſtead of ſelf-love, he is brought to that, I abhor myſelf, and repent in duſt and aſhes. Self-loathing and abhorrence takes place. Inſtead of ſelf-will, he is brought to that, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Inſtead of ſelf-eaſe and carnal ſecurity, he is brought to that, O what ſhall I do to be ſaved? And after the firſt exerciſe about ſalvation hath landed in converſion, he is always exerciſing himſelf to godlineſs, and giving employment to Chriſt to carry on and complete his ſalvation, and reſtleſs till ſalvation be completed. Inſtead of ſelf-fulneſs and ſufficiency, he is brought to that, In me, that is, in my fleſh, dwelleth no good thing: he ſees himſelf empty of all good, and filled with all evil. Inſtead of ſelf-confidence and hope, he is brought to that, We had the ſentence of death in ourſelves, that we ſhould not truſt in ourſelves, but in God, which raiſeth the dead. They are brought to deſpair in themſelves. And inſtead of ſelf-righteouſneſs, of which before, they are brought to that, All our righteouſneſſes are as filthy rags.——Thus, in ſo far as they ſhare of the ſaving benefit of the rent vail, ſo far are they rent from ſelf: and thus, by theſe things you may examine yourſelves, what intereſt you have in this privilege of Chriſt's rending of the vail betwixt God and you.

Uſe third, For terror to unbelievers, who, though they hear that the vail is rent, and ſo a free acceſs to the holy of holies proclaimed, yet they are not at all concerned about entering in by this rent vail. The door of heaven is open to you, but you will not come in; the vail of the temple is rent, but you will not enter. O wretched creature, how can you anſwer that challenge, John v. 40. You will not come to me, that you might have life? You have no grace, no holineſs, no repentance, no good thing; but, ſays Chriſt, you will not come to me that you might have grace, you will not come to me that you might have holineſs, you will not come to me that you might have repentance, you will not come to me that you might have have all good things that you need. The vail is rent, the door is open, but you will not come in. O! what will you do in the day of viſitation? ——What will you do, when he that rent the vail ſhall rend your ſoul and body in twain, and ſay, O ſlighter of the Son of God, come and give account of what uſe you have made of the ſabbaths, ſermons, and communion-ſeaſons that you enjoyed? Perhaps you are little thinking on death, but what know you but God will ſay to you, Thou fool, this night thy ſoul ſhall be required of thee? I defy all the miniſters on earth to aſſure you that you ſhall live to get another offer of Chriſt to-morrow. Many here will not come again to-morrow; and many here may never have another venture for heaven. O! what will you do, when he that rent the vail that you might have acceſs to God, will rend theſe heavens, and come down to judgment? Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye ſhall ſee him! With what countenance will you look him in the face in judgment, when you did not care for a ſight of his face in mercy through the rent vail? O what a dreadful voice will that be to you, when he will ſay, Riſe ye dead, and come to judgment! Riſe ye undervaluers of the goſpel, and give an account of yourſelves! Do you know, that while you are neglecting the goſpel, and ſlighting the Son of God, you are ſaying with the Jews, His blood be upon us, and upon our children? The guilt of the blood of Chriſt is upon you, and upon the generation after you, that follow your example; and O! how terrible will it be, when he comes to make inquiſition for blood, for the blood of God which you trampled under foot! O! how will you then wiſh to be rent and grinded in pieces, when you ſhall find all the curſes of the Bible lighting upon you! O what will you do, when he that rent the vail, ſhall openly rend you from the company of God, ſaints, and angels, and ſet you with the goats on his left-hand! When you ſhall ſee ſome of your acquaintances that are here, ſtanding on his right-hand, how will you then think with yourſelf, O what hindered me, that I did not conſent to the goſpel, as well as they? You now join with them in the ſame congregation, but your hearts are disjoined from them; you ſeparate from them in your choice, your affections, your diſpoſition, and converſation; but ere long, there ſhall be another kind of ſeparation; you that will not come in among them through the rent vail now, there ſhall be a vail hung up betwixt you and them, that ſhall never be rent; yea, a vail betwixt you and the glory of God; for you ſhall be puniſhed with everlaſting deſtruction, from the preſence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power: he that rent the vail to pieces, will eternally tear you to pieces, when there ſhall be none to deliver. Now, the vail is rent betwixt God and you, ſo as you may come to God's preſence with boldneſs, through the new and living way that is conſecrated through the vail; and you ſhall have God, and Chriſt, and ſaints, and angels, all welcoming you; for, the Spirit and the bride ſay, Come; and whoſoever will, let him come, for the vail is rent; but if once you go down by the ſides of bottomleſs Tophet, the vail that then ſhall be placed betwixt God and you, will never, never, never be rent, ſo long as eternity laſts. You will never hear again ſuch a ſweet word; and O what would you then give for ſuch a word as that, Behold, the vail is rent, that you may come to God's favour and fellowſhip? but no ſuch news ſhall be heard in hell: now, only now, is the accepted time, now is the day of ſalvation; to day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts; but think of coming into the holy of holies, while you hear that the vail is rent, and nothing to hinder you.

Uſe fourth, for conſolation to believers, to whom the vail is ſo effectually rent in twain, that from the marks given, they may conclude, they have made ſome entrance within the vail, by coming to a God in Chriſt, and caſting their anchor within the vail. I have a word of comfort to ſay to you, though perhaps you are ſtill complaining of many vails that ſeparate betwixt God and you; yet a little while, and you ſhall have a triumphant entrance miniſtered unto you, into the holy of holies above, whither the Forerunner hath for you entered; for, behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom; therefore you ſhall come into Zion with ſongs, and everlaſting joy upon your heads; you ſhall obtain joy and gladneſs, and ſorrow and ſighing ſhall flee away, and then all vails ſhall be rent and removed for ever. I will tell you, for your comfort, of a few vails that then ſhall be rent; for the rending of the vail of the temple, promiſes the rending of all vails in a ſhort while.

1. Then, the vail of ſin and corruption ſhall be rent in twain; all the rents, all the ſtrokes that ſin gets by the word, the rod, the Spirit, never rends a body of death from you; but ſtill you are groning under a ſenſe of indwelling-ſin, that ſeparates betwixt God and you; but then, O then, believer, this vail ſhall be rent in twain from the top to the bottom, and from the bottom to the top; both root and branch ſhall be rent and removed; for, When he ſhall appear, you ſhall be like him: Your conformity to him ſhall be complete; you muſt go to heaven dragging a body of death after you; but whenever you come to the port of glory, there will be a joyful parting; for you ſhall take an everlaſting farewel of all your luſts and corruptions; then you will ſay, Farewel with all our hearts; and glory to God that we ſhall never meet again. Bleſſed be God, we ſhall never ſee your face again.

2. Then ſhall the vail of darkneſs and diſtance be rent in twain; for then darkneſs will give way to light, glorious light; and diſtance will give way to preſence, glorious and everlaſting preſence. Now you ſay, I cannot ſee him, he is far away; but ſays Chriſt, Father, I will that theſe whom thou haſt given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory: to be with me where I am; there is diſtance removed; to behold my glory, there is darkneſs removed. Darkneſs and diſtance now, create doubts and fears; but doubts and fears will then take wings and flee away, never to return again; for, The face of the covering ſhall be entirely removed, Iſa. xxv. 7, 8.

3. Then ſhall the vail of ordinances be rent in twain; now any view we have of God's glory, is mediate, through the intervention of means and ordinances; any glimpſe we get of his beauty is through the dim glaſs of duties and ordinances; for, Now we ſee through a glaſs darkly, darkly, ſays the apoſtle; but the time comes when the glaſs ſhall be broken, and we ſhall ſee him as he is, in an immediate manner; Rev. xxi. 22. I ſaw no temple there; for the Lord God almighty, and the Lamb, are the temple of it. And then ſhall the ſaints be able to ſay, the half of his glory hath not been told, when they ſhall ſee him face to face, and not his back parts, or the ſkirts of his garments only.

4. The vail of ſcanty enjoyments will be rent in twain; the vail of paſſing blinks and interrupted views. The life of the ſaint here, is moſtly a life of deſire; he can never get his deſire fully ſatisfied; and when you get any deſirable meeting with the Lord, why, it is but a blink and away; your deſires are but increaſed thereby, and your melancholy wants remain unſupplied: but within the vail all deſires ſhall be ſatisfied, all wants ſhall be ſupplied; for, In his preſence there is fulneſs of joy, and at his right-hand rivers of pleaſure for evermore. No clouds, no night, no deſertion there; no ſuch complaint as this, O why hideſt thou thy face? The beſt communion and enjoyment here admits of interruption; but that which is above, is uninterrupted; no tempting devil, no deceitful heart, no diſmal cloud to darken their day, or interrupt their viſion and fruition of God. Chriſt is here only paſſing by us, and as a way-faring man, that tarries only for a night; yea, hardly for a night: no ſooner does he enter, but he is away; no ſooner does the heart begin to open to him ſometime, than, alas! he is gone, Song v. 6. I opened to my beloved, but he had withdrawn himſelf, and was gone: but then their enjoyment ſhall be full, and everlaſting, and uninterrupted; for, So ſhall they ever be with the Lord. Partial enjoyments will give way to eternally full enjoyments; For when that which is perfect is come, that which is in part ſhall be done away.

5. The vail of church-diſorders and confuſion ſhall be rent in twain. Many times you have reaſon to ſigh and complain, that matters are all out of order in the church; the vail of confuſion and diſorder is upon it, and the glory departed; nothing but clouds in our ſky. Indeed we would gladly expect the rending of theſe vails that are upon the church, even in time, and even with reſpect to the church of Scotland. It is with the church, as it is with particular believers, the Lord uſually brings them to an extremity, before he give them a deliverance: the darkeſt night may uſher in the cleareſt day; to them that fear his name the Sun of righteouſneſs ſhall ariſe. Whatever dark eclipſes the ſun may be under at preſent, do not ſay the ſun is gone out of the firmament, becauſe it is a cloudy day; the clouds may grow thicker and thicker yet; yea, there may not only be clouds, but rain, and perhaps a terrible ſhower of wrath is coming; many things look like it: but though there ſhould be both clouds and rain, ſay not the ſun is gone, and will never return and ſhine again; he that rent the vail, will rend the clouds in his own time. Yea, the rending of the vail of the temple did foretel good to the church. It ſays, that he will rear up a more glorious temple, ſuch as is promiſed, Iſa. liv. 11, 12. O thou afflicted, toſſed with tempeſts, and not comforted! behold, I will lay thy ſtones with fair colours, and lay thy foundations with ſapphires; and I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleaſant ſtones. Why, what is the meaning of all this? See it in ver. 13. All thy children ſhall be taught of the Lord, and great ſhall be the peace of thy children. You ſay it is a time of great darkneſs in the church, ſo it is indeed; but here is a promiſe of light that ſhall ariſe, All thy children ſhall be taught of the Lord. Is it a time of great diviſion and contention? ſo it is; but here is a promiſe of great peace, great ſhall be the peace of thy children. We hope there will be a more full accompliſhment of this in the church, even in time; but when will all this come to paſs? why, we may come to be tried with another kind of tempeſt before it come to paſs; for, ſee how the promiſe is uſhured in, O thou afflicted, toſſed with tempeſts, and not comforted; then follows the promiſe of a pleaſant iſſue. But withal never expect a perfect church upon earth; we hope it will be more pure, but it never will be perfect, till that which is in part ſhall be done away. The time is coming, when the bride, the Lamb's wife, ſhall be preſented to him without ſpot or wrinkle; when the union of the ſaints ſhall be entire, and the communion of ſaints ſhall be perfect. There will be no contention, no diviſion, no diſorder in the general aſſembly and church of the firſt-born that are written in heaven.

6. The vail of militant graces will be rent in twain, and nothing but triumphant graces will have the throne; Now remains faith, hope, and love; but the greateſt of theſe is love. Why, love is a triumphant grace; and faith and hope will reſign to love the chair of ſtate. There will be no need of militant graces in the church triumphant; no need of faith, where viſion is; no need of hope, where fruition is; no need of patience, where all tribulation is at an end; no need of any fighting grace, where there is nothing but victory, light, life, love, liberty, joy, glory. You have a fighting life of it here, but then a ſong of victory; victory for evermore.

7. The vail of infirmities will be rent in twain; here believers have infirmities on their bodies, that have no ſmall influence on the actings of their ſouls; infirmities on their ſouls, darkneſs and dulneſs in their intellectual powers; infirmities of the new nature, though created in Chriſt Jeſus, though ſupported by his power, and guided by his grace; yet ſtill it is a weak thing, like a new-born babe; but none of theſe infirmities are in them that are within the vail; they are become perfect; Then ſhall we all come in the unity of the faith, to a perfect man in Chriſt, Eph. iv. 13. Then that ſcripture ſhall be fully accompliſhed, Iſa. xxx. 26. The light of the moon ſhall be as the light of the ſun; and the light of the ſun ſhall be ſevenfold, as the light of ſeven days.

8. The vail of mortality ſhall be rent in twain; for, This mortal ſhall put on immortality; this corruption, ſhall put on incorruption; and death ſhall be ſwallowed up in victory. The vail of fleſh, the clay tabernacle will be rent in twain; We know, that if the earthly houſe of this tabernacle were diſſolved, we have a building of God, a houſe not made with hands, eternal in the heavens: for in this we grone earneſtly, deſiring to be clothed upon with our houſe which is from heaven, 2 Cor. v. 1, 2. O was you ever brought to that man's ſaying, 'O mortality, mortality! O time, time! that 'will not haſte away, to let eternity come!'

Was

Was you never content to ſhake the ſand-glaſs of time to win to eternity? was you never content to take death in your arms; and ſay, Welcome, welcome; O friend, welcome news, that mortality ſhall be ſwallowed up of life?

9. The vail of incapacity will be rent in twain; now you are not capable of that glory which you ſhall be able to behold and contain in heaven; your eye is ſo weak, that you cannot behold the Sun of righteouſneſs ſhining in his ſtrength. Though light be the moſt pleaſing thing to the eye; yet the meridian brightneſs of the ſun cannot be looked upon without deſtroying the ſight; becauſe the faculty is not ſo ſtrong, nor capable to receive the object: ſo is it here, we want a capacity to behold the light of glory; but within the vail, or in heaven, the faculty will be ſtrengthened, and the capacity enlarged, to hold an exceeding great and eternal weight of glory; the want of which hath made ſome, in time, when their cup hath overflowed with conſolation, to cry out, 'Lord, hold thy hand, thy 'ſervant is a clay-veſſel, and can hold no 'more.' Indeed it is little we get here below, and it is little we can hold, though we ſhould get our fill; but in heaven the capacity will be ſo enlarged, that it will be able to hold a fulneſs of God, a fulneſs of glory, a fulneſs of the Spirit, fulneſs of joy at God's right-hand for ever and ever.

10. The vail of wearineſs ſhall be rent in twain; here we ſoon weary of praying and preaching; we ſoon weary of ſermons and ſacraments. I doubt not but many here may be wearied to the heart with this day's work. Indeed little wonder that the carnal heart ſay, What a wearineſs is all this work? 'For, as 'one ſays, you may take a carnal man, tie 'him to a poſt, and then kill him with pray-'ing and preaching only.' But even the ſpiritual man himſelf, while he hath a wearying body of death about him, he wearies of ordinances, he wearies of God's ſervice; but in heaven, within the vail, they ſhall ſerve him without wearying or fainting, Rev. xxii. 3.; there his ſervants ſhall ſerve him. Their weary ſervice here is hardly to be called a ſervice; but there his ſervants ſhall ſerve him indeed. O! will it not be a myſtery, and a great wonder, if we, who cannot pray half an hour to an end, and hardly hear an hour to an end, but will be toiled, as if we had done ſome marvellous work, ſhall be brought to heaven, and never weary of the ſervice of heaven? Here is comfort, believer, you ſhall through all the years of eternity, praiſe him, and never weary.

In a word, all the vials of trouble and trials will be rent in twain; There remains a reſt for the people of God.—The vail of ſorrow and anxiety ſhall be rent in twain; for, All tears ſhall be wipt from their eyes; Sorrow and ſighing ſhall flee away.—The vail of ſickneſs and uneaſineſs of body or ſoul ſhall be rent in twain; The inhabitants of that land ſhall not ſay, I am ſick; the people that dwell therein ſhall be forgiven their iniquity.—The vail of wandering thoughts and vain imaginations will be rent in twain; you ſhall not have a wrong thought or conception of God throughout all eternity; for all your heart-plagues, luſts, and corruptions, that you have been wreſtling with all your days, will leave you; and I am ſure you will leave them with ſuch pleaſure and ſatisfaction, and be ſo glad to part with them, that you will hardly ſhake hands with them; but rather ſay, the back of my hand to you; many a ſad hour, many a ſigh and groan have you coſt me; but it is well for me, that now I am quit of you for ever. And I cannot but ſay, that they who now have a glad heart to think of a parting with theſe, and a meeting with Chriſt for ever, they have gotten ſome communion with him this day.

Finally, The vail of time will be rent in twain; and the ſtreams of time will be ſwallowed up in the ocean of eternity. O how will you ſay with wonder then, O hath ſuch a black and ugly creature as I was, gotten glorious Chriſt in my arms, never, never, never to part again! O how will his kind looks dart a ſweetneſs and joy inexpreſſible into your hearts, when you ſhall be led with the Lamb about the rivers of living water, when time ſhall be no more!—Take all this comfort into your hearts, believers, for the God of conſolation allows you to rejoice for ever, and to rejoice in the hope of the glory of God, which you ſhall ſee and be for ever poſſeſt of within the vail.

Uſe fifth, For exhortation. All I ſhall now ſay, is this, if the vail be rent in twain by the death of Chriſt, O then come and ſee, come and take, come and wonder, come and enter, come and ſing.

1. Come and ſee: when the ſeal was opened, Rev. vi. then the voice cried, Come and ſee: ſo when the vail is rent, O come and ſee; come and ſee. Turn aſide and ſee this great ſight, the vail of ſeparation betwixt God and us rent in twain from the top to the bottom. What was to be ſeen within the vail of the temple, you are told, Heb. ix. 4, 5. There was to be ſeen the golden cenſer, the golden pot, the ark of the covenant, the tables of the covenant, and over it the cherubims of glory overſhadowing the mercy-ſeat. What all theſe did ſignify, I cannot ſtand to ſhew; but in ſhort, they all pointed out the glory of God in Jeſus Chriſt. Now the vail is rent; then look into the holieſt, and ſee the glorious myſtery of redeeming love; ſee the wiſdom, power, holineſs, juſtice, goodneſs, and grace of God, manifeſted brightly in the face of Jeſus, who by his death rent the vail, that we might ſee heaven, and the glory of it.

2. Come and take: the pot of manna was within the vail, as you ſee in that forecited text, which ſignified Chriſt the bread of life. Now, that the vail is rent; you may come to the holieſt and take manna: if you go away faſting this night, it will be your own fault; for you have liberty to come and take, ſince the vail is rent. Chriſt himſelf is the manna; and if you take him, you take all things with him that you need. Do you need a pardon? Why, the opening of the vail is a proclamation of pardon upon a jubilee-day. In the year of jubilee, the prieſts entered within the vail into the holieſt; and there was a diſcharge of debt, and liberty proclaimed; ſo here is our jubilee; Chriſt our High-prieſt having rent the vail, and entered into the holieſt, he iſſues out his proclamation of indemnity; he proclaims pardon of debt. Many a bankrupt drowned in debt is in this green; but behold, the cry is, Go forth ye priſoners of hope. There is a pardon in this pot of manna, if you will but take it;

it; yea, there is life to your ſouls, and death to your ſins in this pot of manna, if you will take it. Object. But you will ſay, I cannot take what is offered to me. Anſw. I wiſh you indeed knew your own weakneſs, and were ſenſible of it; No man can come to me, ſays Chriſt, except the Father draw him: But, O! hath God drawn you ſo far as that you are willing to take Chriſt, though you can do nothing; and willing that Chriſt ſhould take you? Do you know what it is to believe? It is not to do ſome great thing by your own power, no: it is a grace that hath two eyes; with the one it looks to a man's ſelf, and ſees his own utter weakneſs, ſaying, Not that I am ſufficient of myſelf to think any thing as of myſelf; and with the other it looks to God, and ſees his infinite power, ſaying, My ſufficiency is of God. So, that to believe, is to ſee that you can do nothing, and to employ the power of God to do all things for you, and in you that you need. Now, when you are called to take Chriſt, you are called to take and employ the power of God to do all things that you are called to do, but cannot do of yourſelf; this power of God is in your offer, and you may give employment to it: Iſa. xxvii. 5. Let him take hold of my ſtrength, that he may make peace with me, and he ſhall make peace with me. Did you ever know before that the power of God was at your ſervice? Take hold of his power, and give employment to his power, ſaying, Lord, let this power of thine be put forth upon an indigent creature, that I may take Chriſt. Behold, the Father offers him for wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification and redemption; there is manna indeed, which you have for the taking in this manner, ſaying, Lord, take me, and I will take thee. Let thy power and grace be glorified upon me. If you be in earneſt, it is a bargain; for he never called a ſinner to take his Son upon any other terms, but that they only conſent that Chriſt perform all the work, and take all the glory.

3. Come and wonder; Behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom. Come and wonder, that all hinderances are taken out of the way of your acceſs to God. Wonder at the love of God in ſending his Son to rend the vail; wonder at the love of Chriſt in rending the vail, that you might have acceſs to God; wonder that it was rent at all; wonder that it was rent in twain; wonder that it was rent from the top to the bottom; wonder at the thing, and wonder at the occaſion of it. Chriſt gave up the ghoſt, and the vail of the temple was rent. The rending of the vail coſt him his life, it coſt him his ſoul; his ſoul was made an offering for ſin, and then the vail was rent. O, is there no wondering at this? It would be an evidence of a good communion to you, if you were filled with wonder. A ſhort wonder is better than a long prayer.

4. Come and enter. Not only ſee and take, and wonder, but alſo boldly enter into the holieſt; not ſtanding in the outer-court, as it were, or behind the vail gazing, or only putting in your hand by the rent vail, but come in wholly, and enter boldly. The vail is rent in twain; O then, come and enter by the rent. You may all come boldly to the holieſt, by this new and living way that is conſecrated through the vail. O may ſuch a dog, ſuch a filthy dog as I come? Yes, we uſe to ſay, When doors are open, dogs come in; the door is open, the vail is rent; let dogs come in and get a crumb. The Gentiles are called dogs in ſcripture; and it is ſaid, Without are dogs, murderers, ſorcerers, whoremongers; but to all the dogs that are without the vail, we, in God's name, proclaim liberty to come in, and get what will ſave you and ſanctify you. You ſay you have nothing to bring with you, no grace, no good. I tell you, there is none here, but they have ſomething to bring to Chriſt with them. What is that? Have you not much ſin and miſery to bring with you? have you not much want, weakneſs, and wickedneſs, to bring with you? Come with all your ills, in order to get all good; come with your ſins, and get grace; come with your guilt, and get a pardon; come with your filthineſs, and get cleanſing; come with your wants, and get fulneſs. Let dogs come in and get a crumb; yea, a feaſt. There is nothing to hinder you, ſince the vail is rent. The law is not in your way, for that is fulfilled; the flaming cherubim is not in your way, for Chriſt hath rent the vail of God's wrath, and divided the red-ſea of divine vengeance, that you might paſs through. Have you a mind for heaven, man, woman? here is the way, it lies through the rent vail; and if you take not this way, you ſhall never enter there: For there are two porters that will keep all unbelievers out, namely, juſtice and holineſs. Juſtice will ſay, I muſt be ſatisfied; holineſs will ſay, I muſt be vindicated, or elſe you ſhall never enter here: but if you come by this rent vail, you ſhall have open entrance into the heavenly kingdom. Chriſt will ſay to juſtice, Let ſuch a man in, for I paid you all his debt; holineſs, let ſuch a man in, for I gave you a perfect obedience for him; look upon him in me. This will ſatisfy both theſe porters to let believers paſs. O then, come and enter through the vail that is rent. Chriſtleſs ſoul, who will ſatisfy juſtice and holineſs for you? Theſe porters will never be bribed by you. Therefore, O come, and enter by the rent vail, for there is no other way to heaven.

5. Come and ſing. If you have made entrance, O ſing, Glory to God in the higheſt, that ever rent this vail. You might go home ſinging, if you took up the true meaning of the text, and turned it to a ſong; and ſing it with underſtanding, Behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom. Behold, the vail is rent, and ſhall never be whole again. Behold, the work is completed by the Son of God; the work is done, and ſhall never be undone.—To the Author and Finiſher of this great work be glory for ever. Amen.

SERMON III.*

The SWORD of JUSTICE awakened againſt GOD'S FELLOW.

ZECH. xiii. 7.

Awake, O ſword, againſt my Shepherd, and againſt the man that is my Fellow, ſaith the Lord of hoſts.

HERE is a very wonderful text, Sirs, as ever a poor mortal man preached upon; for in it there is a cloud, a black cloud, a cloud of divine wrath and vengeance, a bloody cloud, the cloud of Chriſt's bloody paſſion which we are to celebrate the memorials of this day; but like the cloud that led Iſrael in the wilderneſs, though it had a black ſide towards Chriſt, yet it has a bright and light ſide towards all the Iſrael of God; for this cloud of blood diſtills in a ſweet ſhower of bleſſings unto poor ſinners: there is a light in this cloud wherein we may ſee a God in Chriſt, reconciling the world to himſelf.

This verſe preſents us with a clear prediction of the ſufferings of Chriſt; and the diſpoſition of his diſciples thereupon; Smite the Shepherd, and the ſheep ſhall be ſcattered; and I will turn mine hand upon the little ones: Which our Lord expreſly applies to himſelf, and his diſciples, Mat. xxvi. 31. Mark xiv. 27. So that we need not ſtand to enquire, of whom the prophet here, or rather, of whom God here ſpeaks; for, the words of our text are the words of God the Father, giving orders and commiſſion to the ſword of his juſtice, to awake againſt his Son, when he had undertaken to become our Surety. More particularly, in the words you may notice theſe three things.

1. A ſolemn call and ſummons given to God's vengeance, or vindictive juſtice, to rendezvous its forces, and march forth in battle array, in all circumſtances of terror: Awake, O ſword.

2. The party againſt whom this dreadful battle is proclaimed, this terrible ſword is brandiſhed; muſt it not be againſt ſinners? nay, but the ſinner's Surety: againſt my Shepherd, and againſt the man that is my Fellow: not againſt the ſheep but the Shepherd; not againſt a ſhepherd ſimply, but againſt my Shepherd: not againſt mankind, but a man; not againſt a man ſimply, a mere man, but the Man that is my Fellow, mine equal.

3. By whoſe orders, or at whoſe inſtance this ſummons to the bloody battle is given; why, it is the Lord of hoſts that ſays it: it is he that gives the commiſſion, and orders the ſword to be drawn.

Now, the ſummons is very awful, Awake, O ſword, againſt him; if he will be a Surety, he muſt be a ſacrifice; if he will be a ſacrifice, he muſt be ſlain; for, without ſhedding of blood, there is no remiſſion. It is not a charge to a rod to correct him, but to a ſword to ſlay him; for, Meſſiah, the Prince, muſt be cut off, though not for himſelf, Dan. ix. 26. It is not the ſword of war to which he gives this charge, that he may die in the bed of honour; but the ſword of juſtice, that he may die as a criminal upon an ignominious tree. This ſword muſt awake againſt him; it muſt not reſt, cannot be quiet nor ſatisfied, till it be drunk in his heart's blood. It is not called upon to awake and fright him, but to awake and ſmite him. Not with a lazy, drowſy blow, but an awakened one; even a horrible, terrible blow.

The party againſt whom the ſword is called to awake is very glorious; the deſcription of him here is very magnificent; Awake againſt my Shepherd, and againſt the man that is my Fellow; deſcribed in his office, my Shepherd: in his perſon, God-Man, My Fellow. Men thruſt him through as a fooliſh ſhepherd, and God thruſts him through as the good Shepherd, as his own Shepherd, the Shepherd of his own flock, that he might purchaſe the flock of God with his own blood. As Mediator, he is God's Shepherd, who undertook to feed the flock, and to lay down his life for his ſheep: and againſt the man that is my Fellow; or, the man my Fellow; the man who is God as well as man, who thought it no robbery to be equal with God.

Finally, The Party giving theſe orders to incenſed juſtice to awake againſt him is as wonderful; the Lord of hoſts; that Jehovah that has all the hoſts of heaven, earth, and hell at his call: the Lord of hoſts; that is, Jehovah, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, one God, eſſentially conſidered, giving a commiſſion to infinite juſtice to awake againſt the ſecond Perſon of the Godhead, conſidered as Surety and Mediator, God-man.

Now, from the words thus ſhortly opened, we might obſerve many doctrines, but I confine myſelf to this one, namely;

OBSER. That by ſpecial orders from Jehovah, the great God of hoſts, the man Chriſt, his Shepherd and Fellow, did fall a ſacrifice to the awakened ſword of infinite juſtice. Awake, O ſword.

When nothing among the creatures could be found to deliver the ſoul of the ſinner, from going down to the pit, God himſelf found a ranſom; he found an atonement, Job xxxiii. 24. by ſetting forth Chriſt to be the propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs,—that he might be juſt, and the juſtifier of him that believeth in Jeſus, Rom. iii. 25, 26. We ſinful creatures, both miniſters and people, ſhould all have fallen a ſacrifice to the ſword of God's wrath and vengeance for ever, becauſe of our ſins: but behold he finds a ranſom; he ſets forth Chriſt to be the propitiation. When ever he is ſet forth, the ſword falls upon him, and awakes againſt him who was the Shepherd, that the ſheep might eſcape.

* This was an Action-ſermon, preached immediately before the celebration of the Lord's ſupper at Dunfermline, July 3d. 1720, and never before publiſhed.

I might

I might here premiſe many uſeful particulars preſuppoſed in this doctrine, namely, That it ſuppoſes a covenant of works broken, and ſo juſtice inraged againſt men: A covenant of redemption made; a counſel of peace between Jehovah and Chriſt, for man's relief; and, which I reckon much the ſame with the former, a covenant of grace eſtabliſhed in Chriſt; he engaging to fulfil the condition of the covenant of works which we had broken; to obey the law, which we had tranſgreſſed; to ſatisfy the juſtice, which we had offended; to bear the wrath, which we had incurred; whereupon the ſword of the Lord awakes againſt him, and all the ſquadrons of enraged fury march forth againſt him, with infinite horror and terror: Awake, O ſword, againſt my Shepherd. But omitting all that might be ſuppoſed, and preſuppoſed to this doctrine, I ſhall endeavour to confine myſelf as cloſely as poſſible to the ſeveral parts of the text and doctrine, by proſecuting it in the following method; namely,

I. To enquire into the character of the perſon againſt whom this ſword does awake.
II. The nature and quality of this ſword that did awake againſt him.
III. How this ſword did awake againſt him; by ſhewing what may be imported in this expreſſion, Awake, O ſword.
IV. What ſpecial hand the Lord Jehovah, the Lord of hoſts, had in ordering or calling of this ſword, to awake againſt this glorious perſon.
V. The reaſons of the doctrine, why the Lord of hoſts ordered the ſword of juſtice to awake againſt his Shepherd, and the man that is his Fellow.
VI. Draw ſome inferences for the application of the whole, in a ſuitableneſs to the work of the day.

I. Who is this that the ſword of juſtice muſt awake againſt? The character of the perſon is very great and glorious, in the words of our text, My Shepherd, the man that is my Fellow; that is, in ſhort, God-man Mediator; for, being here deſcribed in his perſon and office, I ſhall touch a little at both in the following order.

1. His divine nature, as God's fellow. 2. His human nature, the man that is my Fellow. 3. The conjunction of both theſe in one perſon, The man that is my Fellow. 4. His mediatorial office, my Shepherd.

1ſt. Conſider this account we have of his divine nature; MY FELLOW, ſaith the Lord of hoſts. Let Arians and Socinians blaſpheme this wonderful perſon, here is an article of our creed, that Chriſt is God's Fellow, God's equal, Who being in the form of God, thought it no robbery to be equal with God: and therefore ſays, John x. 30. I and my Father are one. But here conſider, 1. Wherein he is God's Fellow: and, 2. Why, as our Redeemer, it behoved him to be God's Fellow.

1. Wherein, or in what reſpect is he God's Fellow? I anſwer, He is God's Fellow, not as he is Mediator, taking upon him the form of a ſervant, and becoming the Father's ſervant in the work of our redemption; but he is God's Fellow in theſe ſix reſpects.

(1.) He is God's Fellow in point of nature and eſſence; Chriſt is God eſſentially, as well as the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt, though perſonally diſtinct from both; for, neither the Father nor the Holy Ghoſt were incarnate, or took on our nature, but Chriſt the ſecond perſon of the glorious Trinity: who, though perſonally diſtinct, yet is eſſentially one with the Father and Spirit, John i. 1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God: And it is ſure there is but one God, Deut. vi. 4. Hear, O Iſrael, the Lord our God is ONE Lord, one JEHOVAH. 1 Cor. viii. 4. In Chriſt our Redeemer dwells all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily, Col. ii. 9. There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one, 1 John v. 7. and in the penult verſe of that chapter, We know that the Son of God is come, and has given us an underſtanding to know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jeſus Chriſt: this is the true God, and eternal life.

(2.) He is God's Fellow in point of property; even in all his eſſential properties, which is much the ſame with the former. Is God omnipotent? ſo is Chriſt; he is the wonderful counſellor, the mighty God. Is God omnipreſent? ſo is Chriſt; Lo I am with you always, to the end of the world. Is God omniſcient? ſo is Chriſt; Thou that knoweſt all things, knoweſt that I love thee, ſays Peter. Is God unchangeable? ſo is Chriſt; The ſame yeſterday, to-day, and for ever. Is God eternal? ſo is Chriſt; Before Abraham was, I am: He is the King eternal, immortal, the only wiſe God. He is God's Fellow in all theſe reſpects.

(3.) He is God's Fellow in point of will and conſent; what the Father wills, Chriſt wills; hence it was his meat and drink to do his Father's will, who ſent him; I delight to do thy will, O my God. It is true, as man, he had a will diſtinct from his will as God, and ſo diverſe from the Father's will; though yet this did act ſtill in ſubordination to the will of God; hence when the bitter cup is put to his mouth, he prays, O my Father, if it be thy will let this cup paſs from me; nevertheleſs not my will, but thine be done: yet, as God, his will is one and the ſame with the Father's will.

(4.) He is God's Fellow in point of work; John v. 17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work. Chriſt's works are not only like unto the Father's, but the ſame in ſubſtance, as flowing from one and the ſame eſſence and power; for, What things ſoever the Father doth, theſe alſo doth the Son likewiſe, John v. 19. He acts not as an inſtrument ſubordinate; but, as there is an unity in the work, ſo alſo in the manner of it; by the ſame power, wiſdom, liberty, and authority; only the order of operation being obſerved: and we find all the works proper to God aſcribed to Chriſt; as creation, All things were made by him: Preſervation, Upholding all things by the word of his power: Redemption; the donation of the Spirit; raiſing himſelf from the dead; the inſtitution of ordinances and offices in his church; and the judging the world: in all theſe he is God's Fellow.

(5.) He is God's Fellow in point of honour and worſhip: all men are to honour the Son, even as they honour the Father; they are to believe in him, Ye believe in God, believe alſo in me, John xiv. 1.; they are to hope and truſt in him, Kiſs the Son, leſt he be angry, and ye periſh from the way. If once his wrath begin to burn, bleſſed are all that truſt in him.

(6.) He is God's Fellow in point of happineſs and felicity, Rom. ix. 5. Of whom, concerning the fleſh, flesh, Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever, Amen. As he was blessed and happy from all eternity in his Father's bosom, being ever by him, and brought up with him, and being daily his delight; rejoicing always before him; and rejoicing in the habitable parts of the earth, and his delights with the sons of men, Prov. viii. 30, 31.: So he ever is, and will be, blessed with him. It is true, there was a time when the Son of God was humbled; when this God, blessed for ever, became a curse for us; but notwithstanding, his essential glory was never diminished; as God, he was as happy and blessed on the cross, and in the grave, as ever he was. Well, thus, as God, is he every way God's fellow. O! how fearfully was he humbled! God's fellow, and yet a babe, a servant, a sufferer, a sacrifice to the awakened sword of justice. The Governor of all becomes a subject: should an emperor become a fly, it would not be such a humiliation. O! how sadly was the world mistaken about Christ, that took him to be a base fellow, a pitiful fellow! but little did they know that he was God's fellow. O! how glorious is the love of Christ to sinners! God's fellow receiving the stroak of the sword of divine justice in their room.

2. Why he behoved to be God's Fellow that was our Redeemer? It was necessary that our Redeemer should be God's Fellow;

(1.) In regard of merit: his obedience to the death could not be sufficient to satisfy the law and the Lawgiver; to be a full ransom, and a full price of redemption, if it had not been truly and properly meritorious; and this it could not be, if he had not been God's equal, as well as man. Our sins were an infinite evil, and God's justice required infinite satisfaction; now, there could be no satisfaction, of infinite value, but by a person of infinite value; and there is no such person, but God: and therefore our Redeemer must be God's equal.

(2.) In regard of power: our Redeemer must be such an one as could go through all the difficulties that lay in the way of redemption; triumphing over all opposition from God, men, and devils, from heaven, earth, and hell. The weakest of these were too strong for human nature; therefore that our Redeemer might overcome death, bind the strong man, break down the gates of hell, cut in sunder the bar of sin, he must be God as well as man, even God's equal, God's fellow. And that he might be able for the application, as well as the impetration of man's redemption, not only able to save to the uttermost, all them that come to God through him, but able to draw poor stubborn souls to himself, by his own power, and make them willing.

(3.) Our Redeemer must be God's Fellow in regard of the dignity of the work: his honour and dignity, in being a Redeemer and Mediator between God and man, was too great for any creature, supposing any creature had been able for it; this crown of glory was not fitting for any mere creature's head. An office of dignity, on an unworthy person, is most unsuitable: this dignity was so great, that even Christ himself, though God's equal, might not take it upon him, till he was called to it of God, Heb. v. 4, 5.

(4.) Our Redeemer must be God's Fellow in regard of the covenant of grace, which was the ground work and foundation of all: since our Redeemer was to make a covenant with God for us, it was necessary that he should be with God at the making of it, and know the depths of God's counsel in it, and perfectly know for whom he was to satisfy, and upon what condition. Now, this covenant being as antient as eternity; and seeing God should have our Redeemer by him, to conclude the covenant and bargain with him, who of all the creatures were capable of this? who, of all the creatures have known the mind of the Lord, and being his counsellor have taught him? God might have said to all the creatures, as to Job, in another case, Job xxxviii. 4. Where wast thou, when I laid the foundations of the earth? Where was you when the plot of redemption was laid? when the names of my redeemed ones were put in the book of life? But our Redeemer was then by him, Prov. viii. 30. He becomes our everlasting Father; begetting us, with the Father, in the womb of eternal election.

(5.) Our Redeemer must be God's Fellow in regard of the place he was to have in the covenant, with respect to God: who among all mere creatures was fit to have all power in heaven and in earth committed to him? Power to bequeath such blessings as peace, pardon, reconciliation, justification, and eternal life; power by his blood to confirm and establish all the promises of the covenant? Christ Jesus did, through the eternal Spirit, (that is, his Godhead,) offer up himself, without spot to God; and then the apostle infers, for this cause, he is the Mediator of the new testament; yea, Christ was to be Surety of this testament; Surety for God to us; to make out all the blessings and promises of the covenant to us; and Surety for us to God, to satisfy law and justice in our room; what creature was able to do this? or if any creature should be supposed to be able, was it fit that God should put such a trust in any creature? No.

(6.) Our Redeemer must be God's Fellow in regard of the place he was to have with respect to us: our Redeemer must be the object of our faith and love; what creature in heaven or earth, could be a sufficient prop and foundation for our faith? Had any mere creature undertaken to be our Redeemer, we could never fully have depended upon him, but would always been afraid he had miscarried: therefore it was requisite to quiet our fears, that our Redeemer should be God's Fellow; see Isa. xxxv. 3. He is God, therefore fear not: our hearts could never have been at full rest otherwise. I remember, when Israel were going through the wilderness, they were to meet with much opposition; God promises to send an angel with them; it is said, all the people mourned for these evil tidings, that God himself would not go up; yea, Moses himself was fearful of the mismanagement of a mere angel; therefore says Moses, If thou go not with us, carry us not up hence, Exod. xxxiii. 2, 3, 4, 15. And again, ver. 12. Thou hast not let me know whom thou wilt send. They thought his sending of an angel, was as good as his sending none at all. Thus, you see, people's fears would never be quieted by the government of an angel, though one of them was able to destroy a whole host in one night: even so, our hearts could never be at rest, though God sent an angel for our deliverance; therefore God sent his own Son, his his Fellow, that he might fully truſt him, and depend upon him; that we might place all our ſatisfaction in him, as a full portion, ſo as to ſeek no further.—Thus you ſee, he is God's Fellow; and why, as our Redeemer, he behoved to be ſo.

2*dly*, Conſider the account we have of his human nature, The MAN that is my Fellow. Here I would ſhew you, 1. What kind of a man Chriſt became. 2. Why our Redeemer behoved to be a man.

1. What kind of a man he became? Why, The Word was made fleſh, and dwelt among us: Great is the myſtery of godlineſs, God manifeſted in the fleſh: He took not on him the nature of angels, but the ſeed of Abraham. More particularly,

(1.) He was a poor man; a man very poor and mean in outward reſpects: poor in his birth; he was not born of a queen, nor laid in a palace; but born of a poor virgin, and laid in a manger: He was poor in his life; ſeveral people miniſtred to him of their ſubſtance: yea, The foxes had holes, and the birds of the air had neſts, but the ſon of man had not where to lay his head. Though he was rich, yet for our ſakes he became poor. Let not poor people quarrel at their lot; Chriſt, God's equal, was a poor man.

(2.) He was a diſtreſſed man; A man of ſorrows, and acquainted with griefs: a man of the ſame infirmities with us, except ſinful ones: In all things it behoved him to be like unto his brethren; that he might be a merciful and faithful High-prieſt, Heb. ii. 17.; and, He was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without ſin, Heb. iii. 15. He was hungry, thirſty, weary, tempted, afflicted, and every way diſtreſſed. Let no diſtreſſed perſon think it ſtrange that they are ſo, ſince God's Fellow was a diſtreſſed man.

(3.) He was a true man; he had a true body and a reaſonable ſoul: his body was nailed to the tree; they pierced his hands and his feet: his ſoul was exceeding ſorrowful, even unto death. As man he went through all the ages of men; firſt, he was conceived; then, he was a babe; next, a youth; and at laſt, came to the perfect ſtature of a man. But,

(4.) He was a good man, an holy man; immaculate was the conception of the holy child Jeſus: we come defiled into the world, but Chriſt brought no ſin into the world with him; and all the devils could not make him ſin; for, The prince of this world could find nothing in him, either of original or actual ſin: He was made ſin for us, who knew no ſin; but was holy, harmleſs, undefiled, and ſeparate from ſinners. Never was there ſuch an holy man upon earth: ſee Heb. v. 7. He was heard, in that he feared; or, he was heard for his piety and holineſs. Since Adam fell, never was there a man but this, that was heard and accepted of God for his own piety and holineſs.

(5.) He was a wiſe man; the wiſeſt man that ever was: Solomon was very wiſe, but behold, a wiſer than Solomon is here. He anſwered the learned doctors, to their amazement, when he was twelve years old: Yea, all that heard him were aſtoniſhed at his underſtanding and anſwers, Luke ii. 47. And ſometimes aſked queſtions to which no man was able to anſwer a word, nor durſt aſk him any more queſtions, Mat. xxii. 46. and no wonder, for he was the power of God, and the wiſdom of God; and in him are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge: and hence he revealed the glorious truths that were before concealed. He was a wiſe man indeed. Yet,

(6.) He was a mortal man as we are, and he actually died as we muſt; he was put to a painful and ſhameful death; and his curſed death, which yet we may call his bleſſed death, we are to commemorate this day. This man fell a ſacrifice to the awakened ſword of infinite juſtice; the Shepherd was ſmitten and ſlain, for he was a mortal man; 'if it be lawful to 'call him a man,' as Joſephus, a Jew, ſaid. For,

In a word, he is a wonderful man; to all eternity his name ſhall be called wonderful, Iſa. ix. 6. This wonderful man is our peace-maker with God; This man ſhall be the peace when the Aſſyrian cometh into our land. This wonderful man is our only covert from the furious ſtorm of divine wrath; A man ſhall be an hiding-place from the ſtorm, and a covert from the tempeſt. But,

2. Why muſt our Redeemer be a man? Why, for the following reaſons.

(1.) He muſt be a man in regard of the tranſaction between the Father and the Son. Not only was God's truth engaged in the promiſe, that the ſeed of the woman ſhould be ſent; that to us a child ſhould be born, to us a Son given, and that a virgin ſhould bring forth a ſon, and call his name Immanuel, God with us, God in our nature; and not only was God, in his infinite wiſdom, reſolved in the weakneſs of our nature, to perfect his own ſtrength, and get the greater glory; and that as by one man's diſobedience, many were made ſinners; ſo by the obedience of one, many ſhould be made righteous; but alſo, it being agreed between the Father and the Son, in the covenant of redemption, or grace, that the Son ſhould offer up a ſacrifice for us; it was alſo agreed, that there muſt be ſomewhat to offer, Heb. viii. 3. Somewhat of greater value than all the world; for, nothing could be a ſufficient ſacrifice for the expiation of ſin. If Chriſt had not been man, he could have had nothing to offer up as a ſacrifice to God: God himſelf provided a ſacrifice, as he did a ram in the room of Iſaac: Sacrifice and offering thou wouldſt not; a body haſt thou prepared me. This body, this ſacrifice, was provided in the counſel of peace; and being thus provided, Chriſt comes chearfully to offer it, Lo, I come; I delight to do thy will, O my God.

(2.) He muſt be a man in regard of us; he would not have redeemed us, if according to the law, the right of redemption had not belonged to him as our kinſman, Lev. xxv. 25. and being man, he is fit to communicate to us the things of God in ſuch a way, as we are capable to receive. If God ſhould appear to us immediately, in his terrible glory, we would be afraid of him, as Iſrael were, and run away from him; and hide ourſelves, as Adam did: yea, thus we have a merciful High-prieſt, that is touched with the feeling of our infirmities. As man he had experience of our afflictions; are we ſorrowful? ſo was he; Sorrowful, even unto death: are we grieved? he was acquainted with grief: are we in poverty? ſo was he: are we ſmitten? ſo was he: are we deſerted? ſo was he: having a natural fibneſs to us, being bone of our bone, and fleſh of our fleſh.

(3.) He muſt be man in regard of juſtice: juſtice required that the ſame nature that ſinned ſhould be puniſhed for ſin, and make ſatisfaction for ſin: God ſaid, The ſoul that ſinneth ſhall die: now, die we muſt, either in our own perſons, perſons, or in our Surety, in our own nature. If any angel had fulfilled the law, what had that been to us? if an angel had ſuffered God's wrath, what had that been to us, to man? Though God allowed the change, or commutation of perſons, yet not the commutation of natures; the ſame nature that ſinned muſt ſuffer.

(4.) He muſt be man in reſpect of the devil; the devil conquered man, and man muſt conquer the devil: Satan muſt be foiled by the ſame nature that was foiled by him; The ſeed of the woman muſt bruiſe the head of the ſerpent. For this cauſe, therefore, the Son of God was manifeſted in our fleſh, that he might deſtroy the works of the devil.

(5.) He muſt be man in regard of ſin, which muſt be cured by the contrary antidote: our ſin was pride, Gen. iii. 5.: being but men we deſired to be Gods; therefore the cure is by humility, wherefore God becomes man. Man broke the law, and man muſt keep the law: by our ſin we tranſgreſſed the boundaries of God's law; Chriſt, therefore, is made of a woman, made under the law. Sin defaced the glory of God, therefore he who is the brightneſs of the Father's glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon, becomes of no reputation; and comes in the form of a ſervant. Sin is a Deicide, ſtriking at the being of God, ſeeking his life; therefore he that had a life equal with God's, laid down his life, for the ſatisfaction of this wrong. Awake, O ſword, againſt the man that is my Fellow.

(6.) He muſt be a man in regard of paſſibility or ſufferings; Without ſuffering, or ſhedding of blood, there was no remiſſion. He that will ſave us then, muſt die for us, and ſhed his blood for us; which he could not do, had he been merely God; For God is a Spirit. He becomes man, that he may be in caſe to enter the liſts with juſtice: juſtice could not get at him with one ſtroak; but as ſoon as he was man, then, Awake, O ſword, againſt the man that is my Fellow, ſaid the Lord of hoſts. But, why could not the ſword of juſtice awake againſt him till he was man? Why, as God, ſin could not get hold of him; and ſo juſtice could not get a hit of him for ſin: the law could not challenge him; the curſe could not reach him: but whenever he becomes man, our Surety, then they all flee about him; and compaſs him about like bulls of Baſhan. As he becomes man for us, he becomes ſin for us; and then he lay open to the curſe; and juſtice took him by the throat: the ſword awaked. When Chriſt ſaw the dreadful ſword of wrath, that was to be thruſt through his heart, indeed it put the man to his knees, Father, let this cup paſs from me; the human nature trembled, and ſwate great drops of blood, in his proleptic agony: However, the man was a God as well as a man, and therefore he wreſtled through. This might lead me,

3*dly*, To ſhew you the need of his being both God and man in one perſon: The man, God's Fellow. The cauſe of God, and the cauſe of man is referred to Chriſt; therefore he partakes of both natures, that he may be faithful to God, and merciful to man: a fit Mediator between God and man, to lay his hand upon both parties, while he partakes of both natures.—Our Redeemer muſt be both ſubject to the law, and fulfil the law meritoriouſly: now, if he had not been man, he could not be ſubject to the law; and if he had not been God, he could not have merited by fulfilling the law; but now, being God-man, by his obedience, he hath magnified the law, and made it honourable.—Our Redeemer was to give his ſoul an offering for ſin: now, if he had not been man, he could not have had a ſoul to offer; if he had not been God, his ſoul could not have upheld itſelf; but muſt have died when his ſoul was exceeding ſorrowful even unto death: but now, his divine nature did ſupport his human body, and his human ſoul, under the weight of that burden which would have cruſhed a world of men and angels.——Our Redeemer muſt both ſuffer and ſatisfy: now, if he had not been man, he could not have ſuffered; and if he had not been God, he could not have given ſatisfaction by his ſufferings: but, being God-man, his ſufferings are dignified with infinite value and virtue.—Our Redeemer muſt both die for us, and conquer death: now, if he had not been man, he could not have died; and therefore he took on our nature, that he might taſte death for every man: if he had not been God, he could not have deſtroyed death, conquered death; but now, he is declared to be the Son of God with power, by the reſurrection from the dead. There is the man that is God's Fellow. But now,

4*thly*, Conſider the account we have of his mediatory office, My Shepherd. Here you may a little view, 1. How he comes to be called a Shepherd. And, 2. How the Lord of hoſts comes to call him his Shepherd; My Shepherd.

1. then, How he is called a Shepherd. This will appear by noticing a few ſcriptures wherein he is ſo deſigned. He is called the ſhepherd of Iſrael, Pſal. lxxx. 1. He is called the ſhepherd of ſouls, 1 Pet. ii. 25. You were like ſheep gone aſtray, but you are returned to the ſhepherd and biſhop of your ſouls. He is called the good Shepherd, John x. 11. I am the good ſhepherd: O but it ſets him well to commend himſelf! I am the good ſhepherd; the good ſhepherd gives his life for his ſheep. He is called the great ſhepherd, Heb. xiii. 20. Now, the God of peace, that brought again from the dead, that great ſhepherd of the ſheep, by the blood of the everlaſting covenant, make you perfect, etc. He is called the chief ſhepherd, 1 Pet. v. 4. When the chief ſhepherd ſhall appear, ye ſhall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. He has all the qualities of a good and great ſhepherd. Does a ſhepherd take care to provide for his flock and feed them? ſo does Chriſt; The Lord is my ſhepherd, I ſhall not want: He feeds his flock like a ſhepherd, Iſa. xl. 11. He feeds them with the bread of life. Does a ſhepherd water his flock? ſo does Chriſt; he gives them not only meat for their nouriſhment, but drink for the refreſhment of his weary flock, even the water of life, that flows from below the throne, through the conduit of the goſpel; by which I underſtand the Spirit, that well of water ſpringing up to everlaſting life; and the influences of his grace, by which he ſtrengthens, purifies, and comforts his people.——Does a ſhepherd lead his flock to convenient paſtures? ſo does Chriſt; Give ear, O Shepherd of Iſrael, thou that leadeſt Joſeph like a flock: He leads them to green paſtures, and beſide the ſtill waters of goſpel-ordinances and promiſes: and theſe paſtures are ſweeter to them than honey or the honey-comb.——Does the ſhepherd heal his diſtreſſed flock? ſo does Christ; his name is Jehovah-Rophi, I am the Lord that healeth thee. Is there any here that are poor diseased sheep, plagued with atheism, unbelief, enmity, and pride? plagued with a backsliding heart? what think you of that Shepherd that says, I will heal your backslidings, and love you freely: Does the shepherd seek out the lost sheep till he find it? so does Christ; He came to seek and to save that which was lost.—Does the shepherd take special care of the poor tender sheep, that is so far behind that it can hardly follow the flock? so does Christ; He gathers the lambs in his arms, carries them in his bosom, and gently leads those that are with young.——Does the shepherd prevent the straying of the sheep, and bring back such as go astray? so does Christ; he prevents their total apostacy, according to his covenant, Jer. xxxii. 40. I will make an everlasting covenant with them, that I will not turn away from them, to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me. Hence comes it, that his sheep never go back into perdition, Psal. xxxvii. 24. Though he fall, he shall not utterly be cast down; for the Lord upholds him with his hand. Hence comes their recoveries after falls, because this Shepherd gathers and brings back his straying sheep. See a sweet scripture to this purpose, Ezek. xxxiv. 11, 12, 13, 16, 23. compared particularly with ver. 16. As this may be a sweet word to poor sheep, that have nothing, and see they have nothing; no good, no grace, no faith, no love, no repentance, no good qualifications of their own, nothing to recommend them to God, but their want and neceffity; and to the weak sheep, that finds he can do nothing, he cannot pray, cannot believe, cannot mourn, cannot communicate, and therefore sees an absolute need of Christ to be their righteousness and strength: so it may be an awakening word to the fat and strong sheep; these that are fat and full in themselves, and think they are increased with goods, and stand in need of nothing; they have a good heart to God; they are not so ill, they think, as some persons: and those that are strong, they think they can pray, and hear, and believe, and communicate well enough; what should hinder them? whereas the poor and weak will be fed with mercy; the fat and the strong, will be fed with judgment. Let the poor weak sheep, though sensible of great strayings, yet conceive hope; this Shepherd seeks that which was lost, and brings again that which was driven away. Was you driven away with a cheek-wind; driven away by the devil; driven away from your Shepherd by temptation and powerful corruption? Why, yet he brings again that which was driven away.——Does a shepherd defend his flock from troubles, and such as would make a prey of them? so does Christ; when grievous wolves, whether in church or state, would destroy the poor sheep, whether in their persons or principles; yet upon all the glory there shall be a defence: and no weapon formed against them shall prosper: for, There is no enchantment against Jacob, nor divination against Israel.——Does a shepherd know all the sheep of his flock, by his own mark upon them? so does Christ; The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his. As his sheep hear and know his voice from the voice of a stranger, so he knows them, and calls his own sheep by name, John x. 3. But,

does

2. How does the Lord of hosts come to call him HIS Shepherd? Awake, O sword, against MY SHEPHERD. Why, he is God, the Father's Shepherd in several respects; which I touch at only in a word.

(1.) He is God's Shepherd, because God made him so; he has the Father's commission for this effect, John vi. 27. Him hath God the Father sealed. Christ was appointed and authorized; he was elected for this effect; behold, my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul delighted. He transacted with him for this effect; I have made a covenant with my chosen. He formally called him to this employment, and set him up to be a Shepherd, Ezek. xxxiv. 23. I will set up one Shepherd over them, and he shall feed them; he shall be their Shepherd. He qualified him for this work, by a supereminent unction; I have put my Spirit upon him, and he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles.

(2.) He is God's Shepherd, because God gave him the sheep, John xvii. 6. Thine they were, and thou gavest them me: they were thine by election, and thou gavest them me, to be redeemed by me. This donation of the sheep to Christ is begun in election, and accomplished in effectual vocation; all that the Father hath given me, shall come to me.

3. He is God's Shepherd, because God recommends all his sheep to his special care, John vi. 39, This is the Father's will, which has sent me, that of all which he has given me, I should loose nothing. God has given him the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost ends of the earth for his possession. All whom he chose to be the objects of his special love, he lodges as a trust in the hands of Christ: he gave him the charge of the sheep, and his instructions are, not only to lose none, no not the least of them, the weakest of them; but to lose nothing: and as he will lose none, no person; so he will lose nothing, no part of the person; neither soul nor body.

(4.) He is God's Shepherd; Why? God appointed him to lay down his life for his sheep, John x. 18. I lay down my life for my sheep; I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up again: this commandment have I received of my Father. Christ suffered death, not only voluntarily, but in a way of subjection to his Father, that so the merit of his death might be every way full and acceptable to the Father. And so again, (5.) He is God's Shepherd, because God approves of his undertaking and work, as his Shepherd, and loves him, for this very reason, John x. 17. He approves of his doing and dying: his soul is delighted in this Shepherd; Mine elect in whom my soul delighteth. He openly declares his affection in him; This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. The Lord is well pleased for his righteousness sake.

(6.) In a word, he is God's Shepherd, because God the Father and Christ are equally concerned in keeping the sheep, John x. 27—30. The Father does so intrust Christ with the sheep, as yet he casts not off the care of them; they are in the Father's hands as well as Christ's: He and his Father are one; though personally distinct, yet essentially one. The man that is God's Fellow, in this has fellowship with the Father, that the Father's sheep are his sheep; and his sheep are the Father's sheep: and they are equally concerned and engaged in keeping ing the ſheep; only Chriſt, as Mediator, is engaged for them as the Father's ſervant and commiſſioner; my ſhepherd.—Now, thus much concerning the character of the perſon whom the ſword of the Lord of hoſts muſt awake againſt: and, O if we had a view, by a ſaving faith, of this glorious one, God's Shepherd, the man that is his Fellow, God-man Mediator, we could ſay no leſs than that he is white and ruddy, the chief among ten thouſands. The white and red of his infinitely fair face would charm and allure us. Now,

II. The ſecond thing, what for a ſword muſt awake againſt this man? Why, in general, it is the ſword of God's awful juſtice; which is metaphorically called a ſword, becauſe of its terrible piercing, wounding, killing nature. Now, the ſtroaks of this ſword are either mediate or immediate. 1. Mediate, by the hands of men; particularly the ſword of the civil magiſtrate. Or, 2. Immediate, by the hands of God himſelf, without the intervention of ſuch outward means. Now, the ſword of juſtice, that awaked againſt Chriſt, and ſmote the Shepherd, is to be conſidered in both theſe reſpects; for his ſuffering, as our Surety, by the ſtroak of juſtice's ſword, was both external upon his body, and internal upon his ſoul.

(1.) There was his external ſufferings in his body: and herein juſtice did ſtrike more mediately by the hand of man; and eſpecially in his ſevereſt bodily ſufferings; juſtice did employ and make uſe of the ſword of the civil magiſtrate. Magiſtrates have the ſword of civil power and authority put into their hands, and they ought not to bear the ſword in vain: they are a power which God has ordained, and armed with the ſword, for the puniſhment of malefactors; though this be the right uſe of the magiſtrate's ſword, yet ſometimes the magiſtrate makes unjuſt uſe of it; as in this caſe, when the civil government, Herod, Potius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Iſrael, were gathered together againſt the holy child Jeſus, Acts iv. 27. But whatever in juſtice was therein, on man's part, yet, on God's part, impartial juſtice did therein act, while it did thereby bring about the death and ſufferings of the Surety, which the hand and counſel of God determined before to be done, Acts iv. 26.

(2.) There were his internal ſufferings in his ſoul; and herein juſtice did ſtrike more immediately; for, it pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him, and to make his ſoul an offering for ſin, Iſa. liii. 10. Thus the ſword of juſtice was ſuch as pierced both his ſoul and body. This two-edged ſword was edged with the violence of earth, and with the fury of heaven; it was edged with the curſe of the law, and with the wrath of God. But more particularly, what for a ſword is this? O rouze up your ears and hearts to hear and conſider what for a ſword it was that awaked againſt the man that is God's Fellow!

1. It is a broad ſword; ſo broad that it covers all mankind, and hangs over all Chriſtleſs ſinners, who would all have fallen a ſacrifice to it, unleſs Chriſt had come between them and it. When this ſword did awake againſt Chriſt, he found it as broad as the curſe denounced againſt mankind, upon the back of our fall in Adam, which you may read, that you may the better underſtand what the man that is God's Fellow underwent, when he ſubſtitute himſelf in our room, and undertook to ſuffer the puniſhment due for our ſins, the curſe pronounced againſt Adam, and in him againſt all his poſterity, and which, in all the parts of it, lighted upon Chriſt; you read of it generally, Gen. ii. 17. In the day thou eateſt, thou ſhalt ſurely die; or, dying, thou ſhalt die: and more particularly, Gen. iii. 17, 18, 19. Curſed is the ground for thy ſake, in ſorrow ſhalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns alſo and thiſtles ſhall it bring forth to thee, and thou ſhalt eat the herb of the field. In the ſweet of thy face ſhalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground, for out of it waſt thou taken: for duſt thou art, and unto duſt ſhalt thou return. Where you ſee the curſe has three parts. 1. The frailties and infirmities that human nature was ſubject to after the fall. 2. The calamities incident to man's life; Thou ſhalt eat thy meat with the ſweat of thy brows: thorns and thiſtles ſhall the ground bring forth. 3. Death; duſt thou art, and to duſt thou ſhalt return: which has in it the death of the ſoul as well as the body. Here is an abridgment of all the curſes of the bible; and this broad ſword muſt awake againſt the man that is God's Fellow, and our Surety, for this curſe in all its parts ſeized upon him. The

(1.) Was the frailties and infirmities of human nature, a part of the curſe? this ſeized upon Chriſt at his incarnation; for his body was of the duſt like ours, ſubject to the like infirmities with ours; he took not on him our nature in its prime and glory, but after broken and ſhattered with the fall, Rom. viii. 3, He came in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh.

(2.) As to the calamities and miſeries that attended man's life, this part of the curſe ſeized on him alſo; he eat his bread with the ſweat of his brows, when he followed the calling of an handicraftſman; and after he entered into his public miniſtry, he travelled from place to place, watched whole nights in prayer; and thus might be ſaid truly to eat his bread with the ſweat of his brows. As for other calamities never one met with more; the world denied him a lodging; the fig-tree denied him figs; he was blaſphemed by his enemies, betrayed by one of his diſciples, and forſaken by them all.

(3.) As for the death threatened in the curſe; why, dying, he died indeed; for the ſword did run through his body and ſoul at once, when he endured the curſe, and deſpiſed the ſhame: his body was ſore tortured, and his ſoul was ſore amazed, and very heavy, Mark xiv. 33. His bodily ſufferings were extremely great, as you may ſee from the evangeliſts; and yet as nothing in compariſon of his ſoul-ſufferings, while he endured the wrath of God immediately upon his ſoul.—Here was a broad ſword indeed, as broad and extenſive as all the curſes of the law, all the wrath that the elect deſerved for their ſin; for God deſigned not to paſs one of their ſins, without a ſatisfaction made to juſtice, but to ſue the cautioner for them all: O but he needed a broad back that could bear the ſhock of ſuch a broad ſword! Well, ſo he had; for he was God as well as man; Awake, O ſword, againſt the man, my Fellow.

2. It is a long ſword: if we may ſo call it, in-infinite in length from the point to the hilt of the ſword: it is as long as eternity; and this makes the puniſhment of the damned eternal, becauſe the ſword of divine wrath, that pierces them, is ſo long, that it never can reach to the hilt, in ſuch finite worms as they are. The duration of the wrath and the curſe is eternal; becauſe the ſinner, being a mere creature, cannot at one ſhock meet with the infinite wrath of God, and ſatisfy juſtice at once; therefore God ſupports the poor damned creature for ever under wrath; becauſe it cannot, being finite, ſatisfy infinite juſtice: but our Shepherd, being God-man, the man, God's Fellow; and therefore being of infinite worth and value, of infinite ſtrength and power, was able to ſatisfy juſtice, and bear all at once, that which the elect could never have borne. Yet he met with the eſſentials of that which ſin deſerves, viz. death and the curſe; the hiding of his Father's face, and the ſuſpending and keeping back of that conſolation, which, by virtue of the perſonal union, flowed from the God-head to the manhood; and alſo, had the actual ſenſe and feeling of the wrath of God; the awakened ſword of the juſtice of God actually ſmiting him: ſo that, though men wondered how he could be dead ſo ſoon, not knowing what ſtroaks of infinite juſtice he met with; yet theſe ſtroaks lighting upon the like of him, the man God's Fellow, was equivalent to the eternal puniſhments and torments of the damned.

3. It is a bloody and inſatiable ſword: this ſword of juſtice was not ſatisfied with the blood of Sodom and Gomorrah; it was not ſatisfied with the blood of the old world; it was not ſatisfied with the blood of bulls, goats, and all the legal ſacrifices of old; yea, the blood of the whole creation cannot give it ſatisfaction, though it were bathed therein; without the ſhedding of more blood, better blood, there is no remiſſion, no ſatisfaction to juſtice, no real ſatisfaction with God; no ſalvation of the ſinner; therefore, Awake, O ſword, againſt the man that is my Fellow: till it be drunk with the blood of this man, it never gets a ſatisfying draught of blood. Well then, ſays this man, Lo, I come; let juſtice take a full draught of my blood: well, Awake, O ſword; let the blood of this man, my Fellow, be ſhed; ſhed at his circumciſion, ſhed in the garden, ſhed in his being crowned with thorns, ſhed in his being ſcourged, ſhed in his crucifying; well, thus the blood of God's Fellow was ſhed. What ſay you now, O ſword of juſtice? Are you pleaſed? Are you ſatisfied with blood? Yes, I have got my fill of blood; This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed; I am pleaſed and ſatisfied to the full with his obedience to the death; I have got all the ſatisfaction I wanted from my Shepherd, and I have no more to demand of him or his ſheep either. O glory to God, that ever this bloody inſatiable ſword did awake againſt one that could give it blood enough, ſatisfaction enough; and yet,

4. It is a dreadful, terrible, flaming, and devouring ſword: ſo it is repreſented, Gen. iii. 24. where it is ſaid, Cherubims were placed, and a flaming ſword, which turned every way to keep the way of the tree of life. The leaſt flame of this ſword of juſtice is enough to burn up the whole creation: and O! how terrible will this ſword be for ever to them that live and die in a Chriſtleſs ſtate! The dreadfulneſs of this ſword is no where to be ſeen ſo lively as in its awaking againſt the man that was God's Fellow: his human nature trembled at the ſight of it; John xii. 27. Now is my ſoul troubled, and what ſhall I ſay? He ſaw the dreadful ſtorm coming, the black cloud ariſing, and ſo much wrath in it, that he knew not how to expreſs himſelf, Mat. xxvi. 38. and Mark xiv. 34. There he cries out, My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful, even unto death. We never hear of one groan from Chriſt for all his bloody ſufferings; when crowned with thorns, ſcourged, and laid on the croſs; As a ſheep before her ſhearer is dumb, ſo he opened not his mouth: but on the firſt entrance of his ſoul-ſufferings, he fell a lamenting, My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful; the original words are moſt emphatic, he was begirt with ſorrow: he was plunged over head and ears in the wrath of God: all the faculties and powers of his ſoul were begirt with ſorrow; he began to be ſore amazed, Mark xiv. 33. The word ſignifies the greateſt extremity of amazement, and ſuch as makes a man's hair ſtand, and his fleſh creep; and it is added, he was very heavy; if we conſult the derivation of the word, it ſignifies, a ſinking of ſpirit; his heart was like wax melted at the ſight of that terrible wrath. But the evangeliſt Luke has yet a ſtronger expreſſion, Luke xxi. 44. Being in an agony, his ſweat was, as it were, great drops of blood, falling to the ground; being in an agony; engaged in a combat, as the Greek word ſignifies: he had before combated with principalities and powers in the wilderneſs; but now he is combating with the Father's wrath. He was in an agony, and ſwate great drops of blood; all ſweats ariſe from weakneſs and preſſures of nature; therefore a dying ſweat is a cold ſweat; but never one, but Chriſt, ſwate a bloody ſweat; and great drops of blood, in ſuch abundance, that it came through his garments, and fell to the ground; and this was all but the firſt onſet, a little ſkirmiſh before the main battle: for the main fight was to be on mount Calvary, after they nailed him to the croſs; then, on a ſudden, the curtain of heaven is drawn, the ſun loſes his light; he was now combating with all the powers of hell and darkneſs; and therefore the field he was to fight in was dark. The puniſhment of loſs and ſenſe both was due to us for ſin, therefore he ſuffered both: the puniſhment of loſs, for all comfort now fails Chriſt; angels appeared before ſtrengthening him; but now not an angel dares peep out of heaven for his comfort; yea, now his God fails him, in reſpect of his comfortable preſence: formerly his heart failed him, in ſome reſpects, but now his God; which makes him cry out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Never was there ſuch a cry in heaven or earth, before or ſince: yea, now he ſuffered the puniſhment of ſenſe alſo due to us; for now all the wrath of God was poured down immediately upon his ſoul: all the ſluices of divine fury are opened, and all the waves and billows of his vengeance paſſed over him. Darkneſs was over all the earth: all things huſhed into ſilence, that Chriſt might, without interruption, grapple with his Father's wrath, until he cried, It is finiſhed, and gave up the ghoſt. What think you of this dreadful ſword that awaked againſt our Surety, the man God's Fellow, when he was to expiate our ſins?

5. It is a bright ſword, a clear, a glittering ſword; there is no ſpot of ruſt or ſtain upon this ſword; no: the ſword is ſpotleſs. Juſtice, holy juſtice: there is no unrighteouſneſs with God. As there is no drop of unrighteouſneſs in the cup of the damned, who are all damned by an act of holy juſtice; ſo there was no drop of injuſtice in the cup of wrath, which Chriſt, as Surety, drank up to the bottom. Chriſt had ſaid of old, Lo, I come; I come to be cautioner, and enter myſelf in the room of poor ſinners, to pay their debt; juſtice, indeed, could not have required our debt of him, if he had not undertaken it; but having entered himſelf cautioner for our debt, he became liable to the payment of it: hence, when Chriſt ſaw the ſword, and was crying, Father, ſave me from this hour, he immediately corrected himſelf with a but; BUT for this cauſe came I into this hour, John xii. 27. And in the beginning of the twenty-ſecond pſalm, which you know is one of the moſt clear prophecies of Chriſt's ſufferings, after he had cried out, ver. 1. My God, my God; why haſt thou forſaken me? Which is not the expreſſion of any quarrelling complaint or diſcouragement, but of ſinleſs nature, when arraigned before the tribunal of God, affected with the horrour of divine wrath, and not being able eaſily to endure that there ſhould be a cloud between God and him; I ſay after theſe words he adds, ver. 3. But thou art holy: he cannot complain of injuſtice; thou art juſt and holy in exacting all the debt at my hand, which I became ſurety for: I have all the ſins of the elect to anſwer for; and therefore I juſtify thee, O Father, in giving me this ſtroak of thy awakened ſword: Thou art holy; thou art clear when thou judgeſt.——It is a clear, bright, ſpotleſs, and holy ſword.

6. It is a living ſword: do you think that God is ſpeaking to a piece of cold iron, when he ſays, Awake, O ſword? Nay, this ſword is God himſelf, the living God: God's juſtice is God himſelf, a juſt God. Of this living ſword you read, Heb. x. 31. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. They that fall into hell, they fall into the hands of the living God; and there they are an everlaſting ſacrifice to this ever-living ſword. Chriſt, when he came to ſatisfy juſtice, he fell into the hands of this living God; and if he had not been God's equal, God's Fellow, he could never have got out of his hands again. If this ſword be a living ſword, even the living God, O but it muſt be a great and ſtrong ſword, as the ſword of God is called, Iſa. xxvii. 1. It takes the ſtrength of God to weild it; and ſo he does here, Awake, O ſword: It takes the ſtrength of God to bear the blow of it, and ſo it is here; Awake, againſt the man that is my Fellow. One blow of it given to the angels and ſeraphims, would have brought them all down from the battlements of heaven to the bottom of hell. Awake, O ſword: God is here ſpeaking to himſelf; as if he had ſaid, Let me ariſe in my armour of vengeance and fury, and fall upon my Shepherd, the man that is my Fellow: it is a living ſword that can awake itſelf.—Thus you ſee what for a ſword it is that awakes againſt Chriſt. O to ſee and believe this truth this day!

III. The third thing was to ſhew, in what manner this ſword did awake againſt Chriſt, and what is imported in the phraſe, Awake, O ſword. How the ſword did awake againſt Chriſt has been partly declared already in the account of the ſword itſelf: however it may a little further appear, in the import of this wonderful call, Awake, O ſword, etc.

1. It imports, as if the ſword had been ſleeping, and now muſt awake againſt him: Chriſt having no ſin of his own to anſwer for, the ſword of juſtice had nothing to lay to his charge; and ſo was ſleeping, as it were, with reſpect to him, having nothing to ſay againſt him, being the infinitely holy God in himſelf, until once he made the bargain with his Father, to become our Surety and Cautioner; and whenever he became ſin for us, and took on him our debt, then juſtice had a right to purſue him; and therefore, Awake, O ſword.

2. Awake, O ſword, it imports, that not only while the counſel of peace was held between the Father and the Son, did juſtice delay the execution, though Chriſt was the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world, in the decree and counſel of God, but that after this glorious tranſaction, the ſword deſigned againſt the Son of God, had long ſlumbered: the ſword had ſlumbered above four thouſand years after Adam's fall; the Lamb was not ſlain all that time, but only in dark typical repreſentations of his death; but now, he muſt be actually ſlain; therefore, Awake, O ſword. God was now ſpeaking of the day of Chriſt, the goſpel-day in the firſt verſe of the chapter, where our text lies, ſaying, In that day, there ſhall be a fountain opened to the houſe of David, and to the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, for ſin, and for uncleanneſs: Now, how ſhall this fountain be opened? Why, the ſword of juſtice muſt pierce the ſide and heart of the Son of God, and ſo open a fountain of cleanſing blood; therefore, when the decree breaks forth, he ſays, Awake, O ſword.

3. Awake, O ſword; it imports, that the ſword of juſtice did not raſhly ſmite the man that is God's Fellow: A man in his ſleep, or half ſleeping, may give a raſh unadviſed ſtroak to his fellow; but before God gave the ſtroak to the man that is his Fellow, he did awake his juſtice, as it were, out of ſleep, and proceeded upon the matureſt deliberation; Awake, O ſword. It was no unadviſed ſtroak that Chriſt got by the ſword of juſtice; it was the fruit of a glorious tranſaction: neither did the ſword ſtrike him without a warrant, by particular orders from the Judge of all: It was warranted to brandiſh itſelf againſt him; Awake, O ſword.

4. It imports, that juſtice was lively and vigorous in executing the vengeance due upon our Surety for our ſin: Juſtice did not give him a ſleepy, lazy, drowſy blow; but a ſtrong, lively, awakened blow: as it is ſaid, in another caſe, Iſa. ii. 9. Awake, awake, put on ſtrength, O arm of the Lord; ſo Awake, O ſword, put on ſtrength. Well, juſtice ariſes, as it were, like one out of ſleep, puts on its cloaths of vengeance, and armour of power, rallys its forces, goes forth with warlike robes, and attacks the man that is God's Fellow with all its force; and acts, like itſelf, with impartial equity, without ſparing our Surety, becauſe of his quality, Rom. viii. 32. God ſpared not his own Son: Awake, O ſword.

5. Awake, O ſword, it imports, the great concern and earneſtneſs that was in God's heart to have his juſtice ſatisfied: O ſword; awake, O ſword. God ſpeaks here with affectionate concern: O ſword! O juſtice! thou muſt be honoured, glorified, and ſatisfied, one way or other: and ſeeing I have propoſed to my eternal Son to bear the ſtroak of vengeance in the room of elect ſinners; and ſeeing he has undertaken it, my very heart is ſet upon the accompliſhment of this glorious work; my juſtice is one of the pearls of my crown; I will not ſhew mercy to the detriment of my juſtice. A ſacrifice I muſt have, a ſacrifice I will have; therefore, Awake, O ſword.

6. I think it imports, not only God's concern to have his juſtice ſatisfied this way, but his great delight in the ſatisfaction; Awake, O ſword, againſt the man that is my Fellow. With what infinite pleaſure and ſatisfaction does the ſword of juſtice give the bloody wound to this glorious perſon? It pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him, and to put him to grief, Iſa. liii. 10. Why, how is this conſiſtent with the ineffable love he had to his eternally Beloved? Yes, moſt conſiſtent; for the Father loved the Son in dying, and for dying; John x. 17. Therefore doth my Father love me, becauſe I lay down my life, that I might take it again. He loved his Son for this very act of obedience which he yielded to him; Chriſt's obedience to the death was the higheſt and moſt acceptable worſhip and ſervice to God, that ever was, or ever will be: it is a ſacrifice of ſuch a ſweet ſmell that it drowned the ſtink of all the ſins of an elect world; a ſacrifice more pleaſing to God than all their ſins were diſpleaſing: and therefore, with infinite pleaſure and ſatisfaction, he ſays, Awake, O ſword. This leads me to

IV. The Fourth thing propoſed, What ſpecial hand Jehovah the Lord of hoſts, had in making this awful ſword to awake againſt this glorious perſon? Awake, O ſword,—ſaith the Lord of hoſts. It was the Lord of hoſts, the eternal Father of this eternal Son that muſtered the hoſts of vengeance againſt him, and had the main and principal hand in Chriſt's ſufferings, which we are to commemorate this day. Jehovah's hand was ſupreme in this buſineſs; and that in theſe four reſpects.

1. It was Jehovah the Lord of hoſts that determined all before-hand, and agreed with his Son for that effect. It was concluded in the counſel of God what he ſhould ſuffer, what ſhould be the price that Jehovah would have, and the ſacrifice he would accept of from his hands. It was not the Jews, nor the Scribes and Phariſees, nor Pilate, but principally it was the Lord's doing, and the accompliſhment of his eternal counſel, Acts iv. 27, 28. Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Iſrael were gathered together, to do whatſoever thy hand and thy counſel determined before to be done. In all they were doing they did nothing, but what was carved out before in the eternal counſel of God; and therefore ſays Peter, Acts ii. 23. Him being delivered by the determinate counſel and foreknowledge of God, you have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and ſlain.

2. As he, the great Jehovah, the Lord of hoſts, determined, that the ſword ſhould awake againſt him, ſo he prepared the ſubject capable to receive the ſtroak of juſtice's ſword; Heb. x. 5. A body haſt thou prepared me. He gave him a nature, a ſoul and body capable of ſuffering: the ſtroak of juſtice fell only upon the man Chriſt, upon his human nature; though the dignity of his divine perſon did infinitely inhance the merit of his ſufferings; yet his divine perſon, his divine nature was never reached, nor reachable, by the ſword of juſtice: the eternal Word was untangible and incapable of ſuffering, till the Word was made fleſh. Now, this fleſh, this human nature, he prepared.

3. It was Jehovah, the Lord of hoſts, that ordered and over-ruled all his ſufferings, when it came to the execution of his antient decree. He who governs all the counſels, thoughts, and actions of men, did, in a ſpecial manner, govern and overrule the ſufferings of the Mediator. Though wicked men were following their own deſigns, and were ſtirred and acted by the devil, who is ſaid to have put it into the heart of Judas to betray Chriſt; yet God had the ordering of all, who ſhould betray him; what death he ſhould die; how he ſhould be pierced; and yet not a bone of him broken.

4. It was Jehovah, the Lord of hoſts, that had an active hand in reaching the ſtroak to Chriſt; he was the chief party that purſued Chriſt with the ſword of juſtice in his hand; It pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him, and to put him to grief: It was he that was exacting the elect's debt of him; and therefore Chriſt looked over Pilate and Herod, and all the wicked inſtruments uſed in this work, as of no conſideration in this matter; he looked over them to the Lord Jehovah his Father, and ſays to the chief of them, Pilate, (that cowardly ſelf-condemned judge) Thou couldſt have no power over me, except it were given thee from above. It was this intereſt that his Father had in his ſufferings that made him ſay, John xviii. 11. The cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it? His Father purſued him as Cautioner in our room; and to his Father he cries when the ſword was running through his heart; My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? He ſpared not his own Son when he cried, but would have him drink out the bitter cup to the bottom; Awake, O ſword, againſt my ſhepherd, and againſt the man that is my Fellow, ſaith the Lord of hoſts; ſmite the ſhepherd. The meſſage comes from him, and he gave the ſword a charge, and orders it to ſmite him; it was this, more than the whips, the thorns, the nails, the ſpear, that made him cry out. Another and a higher hand brought his ſoul to more bitterneſs, than all the ſufferings he endured from men.—Thus his ſoul was crucified more than his body; and his heart had ſharper nails to pierce it than his hands and feet.

V. The Fifth thing, viz. The reaſons of the doctrine; Why the Lord of hoſts ordered the ſword of juſtice to awake againſt his Shepherd, the man that is his Fellow? Surely it was neceſſary, that the ſword ſhould awake againſt him; Ought not Chriſt to have ſuffered theſe things? ſays our Lord himſelf, Luke xxiv. 26. However innocent he was in himſelf; yet our ſins, which were laid upon him, deſerved to be thus treated; and therefore he, as our Surety, who had the guilt of the world lying upon him, ſays, Pſal. lxix. 5. Thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſs; and my wickedneſs is not hid from thee: They are the words of Chriſt, of whom David was a type. He had enough of ſin imputatively; and our ſins had never been expiate, our judge never atoned, our ſouls never ſaved, our ſtate never ſecured, juſtice never ſatisfied, the bond never cancelled, if the ſword had not awaked againſt him. Ought he not then to have ſuffered the ſtroak of the ſword? Yea, he gave his oath for it to his Father, from eternity; and all the promiſes, prophecies, types, and ſacrifices of old pointed out this. God was ready to come down with fury in his heart, and red-hot thunder-bolts in his hand, to ſink all mankind to hell: and ought not Chriſt to ſuffer and interpoſe? yea, glory to God, that he did. But more particularly,

are

1. The Lord of hoſts, the rector of the univerſe, deſigned by this method to rectify what was out of courſe, by the ſin of man, and to bring all things to rights. By the fall, the univerſal frame ſuffered a convulſion: the covenant of works was broken; the devil was reigning and raging in the earth; and all the honour of God's workmanſhip in the firſt creation, was like to be loſt. Now, the ſupreme Rector comes with the ſword of juſtice to rectify theſe diſorders, by drenching his ſword in the blood of his eternal Son. Was the covenant of works broken? behold here is the condition of it fulfilled, by his active and paſſive obedience; yea, both the two covenants of works, and of grace, were at once fulfilled in his obedience to the death: this is the proper condition of each of theſe covenants.—— Was the devil reigning and raging on the earth? Behold! by this blow of juſtice's ſword, given to Chriſt, the devil and all our ſpiritual enemies are deſtroyed; For this cauſe was the Son of God manifeſted, that he might deſtroy the works of the devil. Hence, when Chriſt is lifted up upon the croſs, receiving the ſtroak of juſtice's ſword, it is ſaid, Now, is the judgment of this world; now is the prince of this world caſt out, John xii. 31. By death he deſtroyed him that had the power of death; that is, the devil. By the bruiſe of his heel, his human nature, he broke the ſerpent's head, and his power.—Again, was all the honour and beauty of God's workmanſhip like to be loſt? behold, the man that is God's Fellow, ſuſtaining the ſtroak of Jehovah's ſword, reſtores all; Pſal. lxix. 4. Then reſtored I that which I took not away. What was taken away? why, the devil, Adam, and Eve took away the glory due to God, the obedience due to the law, and the happineſs that belonged to man in his firſt creation. Well, ſays Chriſt, it is much to bring them all back again; but I will do it; though I took them not away. I will reſtore to man his happineſs; he has loſt the favour of God, I will reſtore it in juſtification; he has loſt the image of God, I will reſtore it in regeneration; he has loſt the fellowſhip of God, I will reſtore it, being God's Fellow; I will bring them to fellowſhip with God, by ſuſtaining the ſtroak of the ſword which they ſhould have ſuſtained for ever. I will reſtore to the law its due obedience; yea, I will magnify the law and make it honourable, by my obedience to it, in ſo much that the Lord of hoſts ſhall be well pleaſed for my righteouſneſs ſake; and ſo I will reſtore to God the honour and glory that he loſt by the ſin of man. And this leads to a

2. Reaſon, why the Lord of hoſts made the ſword of juſtice to awake and ſmite his Shepherd, the man that is his Fellow? Why, that thus he might get all his divine attributes glorified to the higheſt. Glory to God in the higheſt, was the ſong of angels when he appeared in our nature, to receive this awful ſtroak. God's honour was not more impaired and embezzeled by the ſin of man, than it was reſtored and repaired by the death of Chriſt. If all mankind, and all the angels with them, had fallen a ſacrifice to the ſword of divine juſtice, it could not have repaired the honour of God for one ſin: though they had all been offered up in one whole burnt-offering, it could not have ſatisfied infinite juſtice; yea, though they had all been damned in hell, to all eternity, juſtice could never have got full ſatisfaction. But here is juſtice glorified to the higheſt; By one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are ſanctified; and at the ſame time vindicated the ſpotleſs holineſs and righteouſneſs of God, that it may be known that God is holy and juſt, who will needs avenge ſin in his own Son, the holy and innocent Cautioner, when he interpoſes in the ſinner's room. This is the declared deſign of God's awakening the ſword of juſtice againſt Chriſt; Rom. iii. 25. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation for ſin, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs, that he might be juſt, and the juſtifier of him that believeth in Jeſus. If God had exacted the ſatisfaction of the ſinners themſelves, by ſending them to hell, it might have declared his juſtice and righteouſneſs much; but here it is more glorioufly declared, and glorified to the higheſt: for, if we conſider Chriſt in himſelf, and the elect in themſelves, his death and ſufferings are more than if all the elect had ſuffered eternally in hell. Here is mercy alſo and free grace glorified to the higheſt, while the ſinner is liberate and not put to pay the debt in his own perſon. Here is divine power glorified to the higheſt; in the crucifying Chriſt whom the power of God ſupported under that load of wrath that would have cruſhed ten thouſand worlds. Here is wiſdom glorified to the higheſt; The manifold wiſdom of God, that there ſhould be two natures, yet but one perſon; that mercy ſhould be fully magnified, and yet juſtice fully ſatisfied; that ſin ſhould be puniſhed, and yet the ſinner unpuniſhed; that the ſinner ſhould eſcape, and yet God ſhould take vengeance upon ſin. O the wiſdom of God in a myſtery!

3. Reaſon why the Lord of hoſts ordered the ſword of juſtice to awake and ſmite the Shepherd, the man that is his Fellow; it was even for the honour of the Shepherd, and the glory of the man his Fellow. God deſigned that for his ſuffering of death, he ſhould be crowned with glory and honour, Heb. ii. 9. That for his humbling himſelf, and becoming obedient to the death, he ſhould be highly exalted above all, and have a name above every name, Phil. ii. 9. That for drinking of the brook in the way, he ſhould lift up his head; that after he had drunk of the brook of divine wrath in our room, he ſhould lift up his head above all principalities and powers, and have all power in heaven and earth given to him, and a number of elect to praiſe him for ever. O it is a wonderful thing to think, what he gave and what he got! What gave he? His body, his ſoul, his blood, his life: What got he?

Even

Even ſome of the black, ugly race of Adam to embrace him: he makes his ſoul an offering for ſin, and then he ſees his ſeed, he ſees the travel of his ſoul, and is ſatisfied. He thinks all his pains well beſtowed, when he gets his bride in his arms. O here is love! behold incarnate love! bleeding love! dying love! Shall not this glorious Lover be exalted of God for ever, and exalted by all the redeemed with the higheſt praiſes, for opening his breaſt to receive the wound of the awakened ſword of juſtice? yea, more, the ſong will be, Worthy, worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain. Thou waſt ſlain, and haſt redeemed us to God by thy blood. And this leads to the

4. And laſt reaſon, why the ſword of juſtice was ordered to awake and ſmite the Shepherd, the man that is God's Fellow, viz. That a fountain of blood might be opened for the benefit of the ſheep. The Shepherd was ſmitten with the ſword of juſtice, that the ſtroak might open a fountain for the watering of the ſheep: Zech. xiii. 1. There ſhall be a fountain opened for ſin and for uncleanneſs. A fountain for watering and waſhing of the ſheep. And how is it to be opened? even with the ſword of juſtice: Awake, O ſword, againſt the man, my Fellow. Now, the Shepherd's blood, ſhed by the ſword of juſtice, is for the benefit of the ſheep many ways: Why?

(1.) It is peace-ſpeaking blood; it ſpeaks better things than the blood of Abel: It ſpeaks peace and reconciliation with God, which is founded upon the blood of Chriſt: this is the wine that cheers the heart of God and man. The juſtice of God took a drink of this blood till it was cheared and ſatisfied; and when the ſoul of the ſinner gets a drink of this blood, O but this red wine rejoices his heart.

(2.) It is heart-cleanſing blood; the blood of the Shepherd ſhed by the ſword of juſtice, is for the waſhing of the ſheep; The blood of Chriſt cleanſes from all ſin. It cleanſes meritoriouſly from the guilt of ſin, in juſtification; it cleanſes efficaciouſly from the filth of ſin, in ſanctification: it cleanſes only; for no means, no duties, no tears, no prayers, no ſermon, no ſacrament, no ordinances, no communion-table, will cleanſe you from ſin, but only the blood of Chriſt. It cleanſes infallibly; for all the devils in hell, and all the evils in the heart, ſhall not be able to mar the efficacy of this blood, if it be ſprinkled on you by the hand of the Spirit. The whole company that are ſtanding about the throne, have waſhed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

(3.) This blood, which the ſword of juſtice draws from the Shepherd, is healing blood; for the healing of his ſheep: By his ſtripes we are healed. Were your diſeaſes never ſo deſperate, here is a healing medicine for them: it can heal the hardneſs of the heart; They ſhall look on him whom they have pierced and mourn: It can heal the barren ſoil of the heart, and turn it to a fertile ground; Hoſ. xiv. 6. From me is thy fruit found: from my Spirit, as the efficient; and from my blood, as the procuring cauſe.

(4.) It is a ſweet-ſmelling blood; it has a ſweet-ſmelling ſavour in the noſtrils of the Lord of hoſts; and perfumes the prayers and duties of the believer; We are accepted only in the Beloved. Our perſons, our prayers, our preaching, our communicating, would all ſtink, unleſs they be dipt in the blood of the Lamb.

(5.) This blood of the Surety, ſhed by the ſword of juſtice, is bliſs-purchaſing blood; and one of the grand bleſſings purchaſed is the Holy Ghoſt: the Spirit is one of the greateſt inſtances of the love of God in Chriſt. Whenever Adam ſinned, the holy Spirit left him, and the unclean ſpirit came in his room; but when the ſecond Adam came, he brought the Spirit of God again with him: I have put my Spirit upon him; and he ſhall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. And, O what is the world without the Spirit of God? what is a man, a miniſter, a ſacrament, a city, a nation, without the Spirit of God? What makes matters ſo far wrong in a land, but that there is ſo little of the Spirit with miniſters and people? There is no life where the quickening Spirit comes not: O we will have dead preaching, dead hearing, dead communicating, lifeleſs work this day, if the purchaſed Spirit do not come! When he comes, life comes with him. Can theſe dry bones live? can theſe dead, formal, lifeleſs, unbelieving, hypocritical, and carnal hearts live? Yea, undoubtedly they can, if the Spirit blow: O let your hearts cry, Come, O north-wind; blow, thou ſouth: Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon theſe ſlain that they may live. Cry for the purchaſed and promiſed Spirit, that we may live, and be lively in our work this day.

(6.) This blood has purchaſed all ſpiritual bleſſings: it has purchaſed pardon of ſin; We have redemption through his blood, even the remiſſion of ſin. It has purchaſed recovery after falls, and freedom from total apoſtacy to all that believe; I will heal their backſlidings. Though he fall he ſhall not utterly be caſt down; for the Lord upholds him with his hand, Pſal. xxxvii. 24. Good news to believers, ſay you, he has purchaſed, all good for them; but not to the like of me; ſuch an unbelieving impenitent ſinner as me. If that be your thought, man, it is an ignorant blunder; I tell you better news, this blood of Chriſt, ſhed by the ſword of juſtice, has purchaſed faith, to the faithleſs; repentance, to the impenitent; grace, to the graceleſs; and nothing did he purchaſe to any but as guilty ſinners, deſtitute of all good. Here is a good market for you that have no good, no grace: others that are increaſed with goods, and think that they have a good heart to God, good deſires and inclinations, and hope thereupon for God's favour, may be doing with their old covenant of works, where they and their money ſhall periſh: but for you that are poor, guilty, filthy, periſhing ſinners, deſtitute of all good in yourſelves, here is good news to you; here is grace, free grace, full grace, rich grace, all grace; grace to juſtify the guilty, grace to ſanctify the filthy, grace to ſtrengthen the weak, grace to ſupply the needy. You that want grace, may come here and get it; you that have grace, may come here and get more: this blood has purchaſed all grace, and the purchaſer ſtands ready to communicate it; for he has no other thing to do with his mediatorial grace, but to give it out to ſinners, to men, to rebels; He has received gifts for men, even for the rebellious, that God the Lord might dwell among them. O the noble purchaſe of this blood! It has purchaſed freedom from the law, both from the curſe and command of the covenant of works, in ſo much that the believer is neither under the mandate, nor the ſanction of the law, as a covenant of works: by by the obedience of Christ to the command of that covenant they are made righteous, Rom xv. 19. Who also hath redeemed them from the curse of the law, being made a curse for them, Gal. iii. 13. The believer indeed is under stronger obligations to obey the law, as it is a rule of life and holiness, than ever Adam was in a state of innocency; but as it is a covenant of works, and condition of life, he has not a farthing of debt to pay to it, if the righteousness of Christ be complete and full; yea, this makes the law of God his delight, when he attains to the faith of this, that he has nothing to do with it as it is a covenant.

In a word, by this blood, shed by the sword of justice, there is a purchase made of access to God. The Son of man was lifted up upon the cross, to open the gates of heaven, which our sin had shut; he rent the vail from top to bottom, and we have boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus. The sword awakened against the Son, that he might bring us to the Father; 1 Pet. iii. 18. Christ has once suffered for sin; the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God. We were at a distance from God, lying peaceably in the devil's arms; but they that were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ. All the sermons, all the means in the world, will not bring us near to God; the means by which he draws men to himself, is just by his blood and righteousness; when I am lifted up, says Christ, I will draw all men after me. Well, he was lifted up upon the cross, where he received the blow of God's awakened sword; he was lifted up into heaven, to his Father's right-hand, and he is lifted up upon the pole of this gospel; and has he said, I will draw all men after me? O say, Amen. Lord, let this be a drawing day.

VI. The sixth thing was the application. Now, many, many things might be deduced from this doctrine, by way of application. I shall at the time offer you but a few general inferences, and refer the rest to be accommodated more particularly to the rest of the work of the day, as the Lord shall please to guide and direct. Well, is it so, that by special orders from Jehovah, the Lord of hosts, the man Christ, his Shepherd and his Fellow, did fall a sacrifice to the awakened sword of infinite justice? Is it so as you have heard? then we may hence see, and behold,

1. The infinite malignity of sin, and the dreadful demerit thereof. Did it overflow the old world with a deluge of water? did it consume Sodom and Gomorrah with a storm of fire and brimstone? did it cast angels and men that are under it into Tophet, the place whereof is fire and much wood, which the breath of the Lord doth kindle; so as the smoke of their torments ascend for ever and ever? In all this may the demerit of sin be seen; but much more here in Christ, a sacrifice to the awakened sword of divine vengeance. Go to Golgotha, and see the man that is God's Fellow, drinking up the cup of his Father's indignation! suffering unto blood! suffering unto death! For God spared him not, being now in the room of sinners: behold the earth trembling under the mighty load of this terrible wrath; for there was a great earthquake while the sword of God's wrath was running through the man that was his Fellow; the heavens grew dark when this awful spectacle was exposed; the sun was eclipsed, contrary to the common rules of nature, which made an heathen philosopher cry out, "That either the frame of nature was "dissolving, or the God of nature suffering." And what shall we that profess to be Christians say to these things? what shall we that are sinners say concerning that abominable evil, sin, which wrought this bloody tragedy? It was sin, and our sin too; for he was wounded for OUR iniquities; the Lord laid on him the iniquities of US all, Isa. liii. 6. O! how heavy did the man that is God's Fellow find the weight of sin to be, when it pressed him to the ground, and made him sweat great drops of blood! when the sword of wrath, which he sustained in our room, was above his head.

2. Hence behold both the goodness and severity of God: his goodness, in finding out this way of satisfaction to his own justice, and wounding his own Son, that sinners, for whom he was Surety, might not be wounded eternally: and the severity and justice of God, in exacting such a full satisfaction, that though all the elect had been satisfying eternally in hell, justice had not been made to shine so splendidly and gloriously. O if we could think and speak aright of this wonderful mystery! O wonder that we are not more affected with it! that we, miserable wretched sinners, should have been pursued eternally by justice, and could do nothing to avert the stroak of it; and that such a great and glorious person, as the the Man, God's Fellow, should interpose himself; and hereupon the Father should spare the poor sinful enemies, and make way for them to escape, by diverting of his justice from pursuing them, and by making it take hold of the Son of his bosom; exacting the debt severely from him! O wonder that the Lord should pass by the enemies, and satisfy himself upon his own Son!

3. Hence behold the wonderful concurrence of the glorious persons of the blessed Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to carry on the work of our redemption; for here is the Lord of hosts, Jehovah, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, one God, essentially considered, prosecuting the work of redemption; and saying, with respect to Christ, the second person of the Godhead, considered as he became man and Mediator, Awake, O sword, against the man that is my Fellow. Not that God the Father delighted in the suffering, as such, of his innocent Son; for, he afflicts not willingly even the children of men; but considering the end and the effect that was to follow, the seed that he should beget to eternal life, and the captives whom he was to redeem; in this respect, It pleased the Lord to bruise him; when he might have suffered all mankind to ly still in their forlorn condition, it pleased him to give his life a ransom for many. Here the whole Trinity is in concert, each person to perform his own part; wherein all the bright perfections of the divine nature do gloriously conspire. O! how does God commend his love to us, in that whilst we were yet sinners, Christ died for us? Rom. v. 8. And, O how he loved us, who washed us from our sins in his own blood? Rev. i. 5. Again,

4. Behold herein the holy sovereignty of God, that over-rules all the actions of men, even these wherein they have a most sensible hand, and are moſt inexcuſable. Though Judas that betrayed, Pilate that condemned, the innocent Son of God, acted moſt ſinfully; yet the Lord himſelf had an active over-ruling hand in carrying on his own deſigns. What Judas and Pilate did, was not by gueſs, but juſt the execution of God's antient decree: how pure and ſpotleſs is God in venting and manifeſting his grace, holineſs, and juſtice, when men are venting their corruption, impiety, and injuſtice! Here is a principal diamond in Jehovah's crown, that he is able, not only to govern all the natural ſecond cauſes that are in the world, in their ſeveral courſes and actions, and order them to his own glory; but even devils, wicked men, and hypocrites, their moſt corrupt and abominable actions, and make them invariably ſubſervient to the promoting of his own holy ends and purpoſes, and yet be free of their ſin, for which they ſhall count to him: and as it was no excuſe to the crucifiers of the Son of God, that they did what before was decreed of God; ſo it ſhall be no excuſe to any man in a ſinful courſe, that God has a hand in every thing that comes to paſs, who yet is juſt and holy in all. This may alſo ſtay our hearts, when the devil and his inſtruments are, as it were, running mad, that they can do no more than what God permits; nay, ſome way commiſſionates them to do: no ſword of men, or devils, can do any execution, unleſs God ſays, Awake, O ſword.

and

5. In this text and doctrine we may ſee and behold, what a glorioufly well-qualified Redeemer we have; he is God's Shepherd, the man his Fellow: behold what intereſt he has in God! and that both by nature, being God's Fellow; and by covenant, being God's Shepherd: behold what intereſt he has in us; and that alſo both by nature, being man, and by covenant, by virtue of the covenant of grace, being our Shepherd by God's appointment and conſtitution. O how fit is he, who is the eſſential Wiſdom of the Father, to reveal the counſel of God's love from eternity! How fit is he, who is the middle perſon of the Godhead, to be the Mediator and Midſman! How fit is he, who is the eternal Son of God, to bring many ſons and daughters to glory! The eternal Word that made the world, alſo to redeem the world! How fit, as God-man; being man, to pay man's debt; as God, to give it a value: man, to deal with man; and God, to deal with God! What an able Saviour muſt he be, who is God's Fellow, able to ſave to the uttermoſt? Help is laid upon one that is mighty indeed! What a willing Saviour muſt he be, who is God's Fellow! He could not have been forced to ſuffer, nor dragged to the work, if he had not been willing: nay, with chearful willingneſs he flew, as it were, upon the point of the ſword; Lo, I come. What a ſufficient ranſom has he given, ſince he is God's Fellow! O this price of redemption cannot be over-valued! What a well-furniſhed Saviour is he, to give life to whom he will. God's Fellow, the party offended, dying to conciliate friendſhip with the party offending! O what a gift is Chriſt, when God ſo loved the world, as to give his only begotten Son; his Fellow, his equal! It is more than heaven, and earth, and the whole univerſe! O how ſure and permanent muſt this redemption be, that is managed by the Lord of hoſts, and his Fellow! What a ſure and ſweet way to the Father, is the man Chriſt, ſince he is God's Fellow! Think not ſtrange that he was able to triumph over all enemies, to outwit the old ſerpent, to riſe again from the grave, to conquer hell, and purchaſe heaven; for the man was God's Fellow. How highly is our nature advanced in Chriſt! though not changed into the divine, yet perſonally united thereto: Chriſt has not loſt his dignity, by becoming man; he is the man God's Fellow. O what a well-qualified and glorious Redeemer is he! qualified by the Lord of hoſts himſelf, who had made him his Shepherd, who is our Shepherd! The Lord is my Shepherd, ſays the believer; and he is my Shepherd, ſays Jehovah, though in different reſpects: I have made him the Shepherd of my ſheep. O if God's Shepherd be your Shepherd, poor ſoul; if your heart be pleaſed with the choice that he has made of a Shepherd; and God's elect be your elect, God's choice your choice, happy, happy were it for you, that ever you was born. O that a flock of ſheep were gathered to him today!

6. We may hence ſee the terrible ſtate of unbelievers and Chriſtleſs ſinners, on the one hand; and the comfortable ſtate of believers, on the other.

(1.) On the one hand, I ſay, we may here ſee the dreadful ſtate of unbelievers, and the damning nature of unbelief. The ſword of divine juſtice, the ſword of God's wrath, is hanging over the head of all thoſe who come not under the cover of the blood of Chriſt, that was ſhed by this awful ſword. It is a lofty, but a terrible word you have in Deut. xxxii. 40, 41. I lift up my hand to heaven and ſay, I live for ever; if I whet my glittering ſword, and my hand take hold on judgment, I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and a reward to them that hate me; I will make mine arrows drunk with blood. The ſword of God's vengeance muſt be drunk either with the blood of the ſinner, or the blood of the Surety, in the ſinner's room. Now, they who, through unbelief, deſpiſe and reject Chriſt, the ſacrifice to juſtice, which God has provided, they muſt themſelves be a ſacrifice thereto: ſee how fearfully this is ſet forth, Heb. x. 27, 28, 29, 31. If we ſin wilfully, after we have received the knowledge of the truth; that is to ſay, if we wilfully and finally reject Chriſt; if we live and die in unbelief, refuſing the remedy that God has provided, notwithſtanding it is made known to us in the glorious goſpel, there is no remedy for us but periſhing; there remains no more ſacrifice for ſin, but a fearful looking for of judgment, and fiery indignation, which ſhall devour the adverſaries. O ſinner, there is not a day you hear ſermon, and hear Chriſt offered, but if you ſlight him, you go away with a new load of guilt; hence the hell of profeſſors ſhall be the greateſt and hoteſt places in hell: the like of Corazen and Bethſaida, the like of Dunfermline, and the places about, where Chriſt is preached, ſhall go to the center of hell, when others ſhall not have ſo hot a hell. This ſin of unbelief is worſe than the murdering Chriſt; for they knew not that he was the Lord of glory: but this ſin wilfully rejects him, while you know he is the Lord of glory. The ſin of unbelief, what a dreadful thing is it! The man makes God moſt true, a liar, like the devil! and refuſes to let God have the honour of a full ſatisfaction to juſtice; will not let God get ſatisfaction for all his ſins, as he might have in the ſacrifice of his Son. O unbelief, unbelief! for a man to have continued all his days, from his infancy, under the drop of the word and calls of the Spirit and the bride, ſaying, Come, come to Chriſt, and yet the man lives and dies never hearkening.

to

(2.) On the other hand, here we may ſee the comfortable ſtate of believers in Chriſt, and the ſaving nature of true juſtifying faith. The believer cannot but be ſafe and happy; for the ſtroak of the ſword of juſtice has fallen by him, and has lighted upon his Surety, his Shepherd: the death of the Shepherd is the life of the ſheep. Though the ſheep may be ſcattered, and ſcarred with fatherly chaſtiſements; yet the Shepherd being ſmitten with the ſword of vindictive juſtice, no ſtroak of judicial wrath ſhall ever fall upon them; for Chriſt has borne their griefs, and carried their ſorrows, and by his ſtripes they are healed: and all that look to him by faith ſhall be healed, and ſaved in like manner. The object of juſtifying faith is the man God's Fellow, falling a ſacrifice to the ſword of divine juſtice. Though you ſhould believe all the Bible, the whole divine revelation, except this point, Chriſt ſet forth to be a propitiation in blood, you have no juſtifying faith; the doctrine of the blood of God, of a crucified Chriſt, this only is the healing balſam to the bleeding wounds of the ſinner, that has any ſenſe of ſin, or fear of wrath. Talk of the law to ſuch a man, it is juſt as if you ſhould bring a murderer to ſee the ghoſt of the man he had killed: O, ſays he, that is the law that I have broken, and ſo he is racked and tormented, leſt the ſword of wrath avenge the quarrel of the broken law upon him; but let him ſee a Chriſt dying on a croſs, with the ſword of wrath running through his heart; a Chriſt hanging between heaven and earth in his room, and all the debt of the elect upon his ſhoulders, here is a full cordial to a fainting ſoul; here is the act of juſtifying faith, the beholding of this ſacrifice, and acquieſcing in it as the price of redemption; relying on the blood that was drawn by that awful ſword, and laying the ſtreſs of our ſalvation upon it: that is a laying ſtreſs where God laid it, a coming under the covert of the blood of the man that is God's Fellow, as a ſcreen from the law and juſtice. Here is a noble foundation for faith; we may even dare to approach a provoked God, an angry Deity, the God who is a conſuming fire, and a flaming ſword; why, here is blood, worthy blood, to quench the fire; the man that is God's Fellow bleeding and dying in our nature. We may well ſay with Luther, "Lord, keep me "from a mere God, an abſolute God; a God "not in Chriſt, not reconciled by the death of "Chriſt." But here is the atonement and propitiation; and therefore faith may come boldly to the throne of grace.

7. Hence alſo we may ſee the malignity of an antichriſtian ſpirit; not only that of Papiſts, who bring in their works of merit upon the field of juſtification before God, as if any thing could pleaſe a dreadful God, beſides the blood of his Fellow; but alſo, all others that are enemies to the croſs of Chriſt; enemies to the glorious goſpel of a crucified Chriſt.——Here the Socinian ſpirit is condemned as antichriſtian, who ſay, "That God was never alienate "from man; and that God, out of his mere "bounty, without any interveening ſatisfac-"tion, pardons ſin:" But if ſo, why would there ever be ſuch a ſound as, Awake, O ſword, againſt the man that is my Fellow? Why would there have been an atonement, if it was not to avert the wrath revealed from heaven againſt all the ungodlineſs and unrighteouſneſs of men? In vain did the ſword awake and ſmite the Shepherd, if, without ſhedding of blood there was remiſſion.——Here alſo, the Libertine, and Latitudinarian ſpirit is condemned. O! what ignorant ſottiſh fools are they, who make a mock at ſin, which being imputed to the Lord Jeſus, made him ſweat and bleed in the anguiſh of his ſoul! O what madneſs are they guilty of, who prefer the ſatisfaction of their brutiſh luſts, to the ſalvation of their precious ſouls, the redemption whereof is ſo precious, that it ceaſeth for ever, unleſs the blood of God be ſhed for it!——Here alſo the Arminian ſpirit is condemned, and every Legal ſpirit, under whatſoever denomination, who make faith, or any act or part of it, or any thing elſe whatſoever, beſides the blood of Chriſt, to be our righteouſneſs before God; ſuch doctrine darkens grace, incroaches upon the prerogative of the Lord our righteouſneſs, and is contrary to the very nature of faith, which is a paſſing from, and diſclaiming all other foundations, and a running to, and pleading upon the blood of Chriſt, ſhed by the awakened ſword of juſtice. The doctrine of our text expoſes the malignity of a legal ſpirit, which is ſo natural to men, and rages ſo much at this day; as if men, by their terms and conditions on their part, could pacify a God of terrible majeſty, whom yet nothing will appeaſe, but the blood of the man that is his Fellow: ſurely they know not the perfection of God's holineſs, the terrour of his juſtice, the ſeverity of his tribunal, the ſpirituality and extent of his law, nor yet their own corruption, weakneſs, and wickedneſs by nature, who will dare to make any thing the ground and condition of their acceptance with God, but the doing and dying, the blood and righteouſneſs of Chriſt. Some make faith, others repentance and new obedience, the ſtrict and proper condition of the new covenant; but if we will not ſhut our eyes, we may ſee that Chriſt's obedience, ſuffering, and ſatisfaction is the only proper and ſtrict, ſo called, condition thereof: the parties of the covenant of grace, are God and Chriſt; Chriſt anſwering for all the elect therein: now, the condition of the covenant muſt be a condition performable and fulfilled by one of the parties, to wit, Chriſt; and the condition is, That he, in his obedience to the death, become a ſacrifice to the ſword of divine juſtice; and upon this condition all ſpiritual and eternal bleſſings are promiſed to the elect; faith, repentance, and all good are promiſed upon this ground; for, ſays God, upon his making his ſoul an offering for ſin, he ſhall ſee his ſeed: they ſhall get the good things promiſed; faith, love, knowledge, fear, and obedience, which are all the fruits of this grand condition of the covenant: faith is indeed of abſolute neceſſity, and the only means whereby we come to be juſtified; It is by faith, that it may be by grace; that is, faith renounces itself, and all other graces and good things, in point of acceptance with God, and looks for it only in the righteousness of Christ, which alone covers our iniquities, and makes us to be accepted of God. Not by works of righteousness that we do, nor by faith as a work, or as the fulfilling of a condition, upon which, being performed by us, or wrought of God in us, we may plead for God's making out his part of the covenant; O no: our only plea before God is this object of faith; the bloody sacrifice, made by the sword of justice, upon the man that is God's Fellow; even that our Lord Jesus has paid our debt, by fulfilling the law in our room, and satisfying for the breaches thereof. As faith is necessary, seeing without faith it is impossible to please God; so is repentance necessary; For, except we repent, we shall all likewise perish: holiness is necessary; For without holiness no man shall see God: they are necessary as qualities of the covenanted, purchased, and promised blessings of the covenant. None that are actually in the covenant, are without them; and so all that are without them will perish and die in their sins: but let our souls detest the bringing in these, or any thing else, in conjunction with Christ, and his blood and righteousness, so as thereupon to look for any benefit, favour, or acceptance with God; but let us look for all holiness, as well as happiness, only in and through Jesus Christ, and upon the account of his giving himself a sacrifice to the awakened sword of justice. And so I come to the

be

8. And last inference, that I name at the time, namely, hence we may see, What is the great duty of all who hear this gospel, namely, to embrace the man that is God's Fellow, to flock in to this Shepherd, and come to him as the sacrifice and propitiation in his blood, in whom the sword of divine justice has got satisfaction. Let me then exhort you, in the name of the Lord, to this duty, before I close. I may afterwards speak to different sorts of persons, and I may afterwards tell you whom I call to the communion-table, but at present I am calling you all to come to Christ. If you think of communicating; in God's name, stand aback from his table, if you will not come to his Christ; and whether you be thinking of communicating or not, man, woman, young or old, that hear me, I charge you, in Jehovah's name, to hear the word of salvation, and apply it particularly to your own souls, whoever you be. Is it so, that the sword of the Lord of hosts is bathed in the blood of the Shepherd, the man that is God's Fellow, then, as you would not fall a sacrifice to this sword of God's wrath for ever, O close with the man that is God's Fellow, as he that fell a sacrifice to this sword in your room. Have you no apprehension of the wrath of God, and of your dreadful condition by nature, wherein you are lying bound to be a sacrifice to the wrath of God, the Lord's hand being stretched out to lay on the stroak, and the wrath of God abiding on you, liable to the law's sentence, which is the curse of God, and the vengeance of his awakened sword, until once you get the man that is God's Fellow put in your room? All that the gospel aims at is this, that you would seek to change rooms with Christ: guilty sinners, here is the way to get your debt paid, your Judge pleased, justice satisfied, God atoned, sin expiated, and everlasting peace and reconciliation between God and you made up. The sword of the Lord of hosts is hanging over your heads, crying, Vengeance, vengeance upon the guilty sinner: This is the sad and certain tidings of the law, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things, written in the book of the law to do them. But behold the man that is God's Shepherd and Fellow; the curse of the law, the vengeance of God, the sword of Jehovah, has lighted upon him that it might not light upon you: there is the glad news and good tidings of the gospel. Is there not here a suitable object, and a sufficient foundation of faith, that Christ is set forth of God to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare the righteousness of God, that he might be just, and the justifier of them that believe in Jesus? Now, unworthy, wretched, guilty, filthy, bloody sinner, will you take a worthy match; the man that is God's Fellow? Will you go with this man? Will you take him in his garments rolled in his own blood, when the sword of justice did awake against him and smote him to death? The great God of hosts was in sad earnest, when he gave his Shepherd, his glorious Fellow, the bloody blow; and now he is in earnest in his call, swearing, by a solemn oath, As he lives, that he takes no delight in the death of sinners; and declaring, by his drawing forth the heart-blood of the man that is his Fellow, that he is willing to save you upon the account of this sacrifice, that his justice has got: only welcome the news as a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation: and put in for a share of the benefits of this sacrifice, for it is the best, and the last, that ever you will hear of; and if it be slighted, There remains no more sacrifice for sin. As the eternal God is willing, so his eternal Son is able and willing both to save you; and if he had not been so, he would never have sustained the stroak of avenging justice in the room of sinners, who is that good Shepherd that laid down his life for the sheep. When he was smitten, by the sword of justice, he willingly undertook and underwent it; he longed for the bloody baptism, and was straitened till it was accomplished. When he was smitten, by the hands of men, He hid not his face from shame and spitting, but was led like a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth: He never quarrelled or complained because it was for our cause. Would he not quarrel with these that smote him; and will he quarrel with a poor sinner that desires to come to him, and to plead the benefit of his satisfaction? No, no; he will rest in his love, Zeph. iii. 17. or, as the word signifies, He will be silent, or dumb in his love; he will not upbraid you for your falls, nor quarrel you for your former misdemeanours: he will be more content with your recovery, than ever he was discontent with your apostasy: he will be more pleased with your coming to him, than ever he was displeased with your sins, and departures against him. Come then, by the love and good-will of God in Christ, by the blood and bowels of the Lord Jesus Christ, I adjure and entreat you not to exclude yourselves, by unbelief, from all the benefits of this sacrifice, that Christ offered of himself to the sword of divine wrath, but accept of this this propitiation, and lay your poor guilty ſouls under the covert of the blood of this man that is God's Fellow: behold! God brings near this blood of Jeſus, to you, even to you, that are the moſt hardened ſinners in all this houſe: Iſa. xlvi. 12, 13. Hearken unto me, ye ſtout-hearted and far from righteouſneſs; behold, I bring near my righteouſneſs. Chriſt and his blood and righteouſneſs is ſo near to you, that you may lay hold on him, and touch the hem of his garments, and be whole. In the name of God, I proclaim the acceſs that you have all to come to Chriſt, and to look unto, and depend upon him for ſalvation; Look unto him, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye ſaved. I am warranted to preach this goſpel to every creature: there is no rational creature within theſe walls, that ſtand in need of ſalvation, but you have it, unleſs you wilfully reject it; Whoever will, let him come. Will you tell me, dare you ſay but you ſtand in need of Chriſt to come in between you and the ſword of the Lord of hoſts? Is the ſword, the awakened ſword of God's wrath and vengeance a light matter? are you content to bear the laſhes of it, in your own perſons through all eternity? If not, then will you be content to change rooms with Chriſt? content that he be made ſin for you, and that you be made the righteouſneſs of God in him? 2 Cor. v. 21. Content that all your ſin and guilt be laid upon him, and that all his merit and righteouſneſs be imputed unto you? If you be not pleaſed with this ſweet bargain, what in all the world will you do with your ſin and guilt? Can you anſwer well enough for it at God's tribunal? What will you do with all your plagues and maladies? Can you heal them yourſelves? What will you do with all the curſes and threatenings of God's law, when grim death will ſtare you broad in the face, and when the laſt fetch of your breath ſhall ſummon you to come and anſwer before the juſt tribunal of God? What will you do with the flaming ſword of wrath, that hangs above, hovers over your head, and will light upon you fearfully, as ſure as God lives, unleſs you be pleaſed with this bargain, that Chriſt bear all the weight of your ſalvation, and all the weight of God's wrath for you? God ſeeks no more, and he ſeeks no leſs than this. You will ſay, Who would not be pleaſed with this bargain? alas! Are there not many here that are not pleaſed? While you think that there muſt be ſome other things to pleaſe and appeaſe God; may be you think you ſhould have ſome good qualifications to pleaſe him; that your hearing, reading, praying, communicating, will pleaſe him; your tears, good motions and affections will pleaſe him: if you think ſo you do not think honourably of God. Will any of theſe things appeaſe the awful Judge, and ward off the avenging blow, when he ſays, Awake, O ſword! No, no. If you be not pleaſed with the man that is God's Follow, and him alone to be your Surety, his blood alone to be your covert from the ſword of wrath, God cannot be pleaſed with you, though you ſhould weep an ocean of tears, give all that you have to the poor, and give your body to be burnt; you both loſe your ſoul and all your labour to the bargain. The queſtion is, are you content that Chriſt alone anſwer for you? that he alone ſtand between you and the ſword? If you think to put any thing elſe along with Chriſt, to ſtand between you and the ſword, it is but a rotten rag, and the flaming ſword will burn through it, and get at you with its devouring vengeance. Chriſt alone then muſt have the whole ſtreſs of your ſalvation laid on him: are you content? will you have ſalvation freely, through the blood of Jeſus?

The glorious goſpel is much clouded at this day, with legal terms, conditions, and qualifications. If my doctrine were upon condition that you did ſo and ſo; that you believe, and repent, and mourn, and pray, and obey, and the like, then you ſhall have the favour of God; I dare not for my life ſay, that that is the goſpel: but the goſpel I deſire to preach, is, will you have a Chriſt, to work faith, repentance, love, and all good in you, and to ſtand between you and the ſword of divine wrath? Here there is no room for you to object, that you are not qualified, becauſe you are ſuch an hardened, unhumbled, blind, and ſtupid wretch; for the queſtion is not, will you remove theſe evils, and then come to Chriſt? but, will you have a Chriſt to remove them for you? It is becauſe you are plagued with theſe diſeaſes that I call you to come to the Phyſician, that he may heal them. Are you qualified for hell and damnation? and have you much miſchief and miſery about you? Why, there needs be no better qualifications for you to come to Chriſt: we would indeed have ſome good qualifications in theſe whom we invite to a communion-table; they ſhould be humbled, believing, penitent people; becauſe it is preſuppoſed that they have come to Chriſt, and received ſome good out of his hand: but when I call you to come to Chriſt, and ſeek no good qualifications of you at all, prior to your coming to him, but that you come with all your black and helliſh qualifications, that he may take them away, and put ſome good qualifications upon you; ſo that, whatever bad things be about you, it ſhould rather be an argument for your coming, than an hinderance of your coming to him; for never, never will you get your ills mended, till you come to him to do it for you.

But neither is there any room for you here to object, that your guilt is ſo great, and God's juſtice is ſo terrible, that you have no hope; for what am I telling you all this time, but that the terrible ſword of juſtice is ſatisfied and appeaſed, to the full, with the blood of the man that is God's Fellow? Here is the way that God himſelf hath laid down for getting ſatisfaction; and there is no other way: though you man, woman, had the guilt of all the world lying on your back, all that is required of you is juſt this, to be heartily pleaſed and content that God get ſatisfaction for all your ſins in this way: and if you be, the ſword ſhall be put up in the ſcabbard, and never reach you: God will get his juſtice ſatisfied more glorioufly this way upon you, than though he ſhould damn you in hell to eternity.

Come, come then, before I cloſe; away with all your objections, and let God be glorified, to the higheſt, in your embracing this way of ſalvation to your ſouls, and this way of ſatisfaction to juſtice. Behold! once for all, I make you the richeſt offer that ever was heard heard tell of; in the name of the Lord of hoſts I offer you the Man that is God's Fellow, to be a complete Saviour to you, to ſtand between you and the ſword of divine wrath, and to be the Burden-bearer for you; to bear the weight of all the curſes of the law, the weight of all God's wrath, the weight of all your ſalvation for you; and to do all your work in you and for you. O ſoul, am I not offering a ſuitable and worthy match to you? He is a man indeed, but a wonderful man, the man that is God's Fellow: What ſay you? Will you go with this Man? Will you match with this Man? It is true, I am unworthy to offer the like of him; for the latchet of his ſhoe no man nor angel is worthy to unlooſe; but, as I ſaid, it was in the name of the Lord of hoſts that I was making the offer: So I tell you again, it is the great Jehovah that is offering his Son to you this day; and it becomes ſuch a glorious God to make ſuch a glorious offer; and it becomes no vile ſinner here to refuſe the offer; and refuſe it or chuſe it you muſt, there is no mids; for, be what you will, I again offer, in the name of the Lord of hoſts, the Man that is his Fellow. Are you a child of wrath? I offer him as a Saviour to redeem you, and deliver you from the wrath to come. Are you a poor bankrupt? I offer him who is the heir of all things, and has unſearchable riches to pay all your debt. Are you a poor ignorant creature? I offer you him as made of God unto you wiſdom. Are you guilty? I offer him as made unto you righteouſneſs. Are you polluted? I offer him to you, as made unto you ſanctification. Are you miſerable and forlorn? I offer him to you, as made of God unto you complete redemption. Are you hard-hearted? I offer him in that promiſe, I will take away the heart of ſtone. Are you content that he break your hard heart, according to his promiſe? Come then, put your hard heart in his hands. Are you a wretched backſlider, that has backſlidden an hundred times, a thouſand times more than an hundred? I offer him in that promiſe, I will heal your backſlidings. Are your corruptions ſtrong and prevalent? I offer him in that promiſe, I will ſubdue your iniquities. Are you pleaſed that he do ſo? Are you afraid, that you revolt more and more? I offer him in that promiſe, I will put my Spirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my ſtatutes. I will put my fear in your heart, and you ſhall not depart from me. Are you afraid you was never elected? meddle not with that ſecret; but according to the revealed will of God, I offer God's chief Elect to you, in whom his ſoul is well pleaſed; and if your heart go in to the offer, and you make him your Elect too, by chooſing him, then your election is ſure. Are you afraid you have ſinned the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt? I tell you, that as your fear of that ſays you was never guilty of it, ſo I offer the Man that is God's Fellow; and if you be content to have him, you ſhall never be guilty of it. Are you full of enmity againſt God? I offer him as a Saviour that can kill your enmity: Do you conſent that he do ſo? Are you an impenitent creature, deſtitute of repentance? I offer him as a Prince and a Saviour, exalted to give repentance and remiſſion of ſin. Do you conſent? Have you received him formerly? I offer him anew, that you may receive him again, and take a more large armful of him than ever. Have you never received him to this day? I offer him, after all the ſlights you have given him, to be now received and believed in. Are you unable to believe in him? have you no power to cloſe with the offer? Why, I offer him to you as the Author of faith, to work it in you powerfully. Do you conſent that he put forth his power for this effect? What ſhall I ſay? Are you unwilling to believe? Though that be the greateſt let and impediment of all; behold, I offer the man that is God's Fellow, as a Saviour by power, as well as by price, to work in you both to will and to do. Are you content that he put forth his power to break your enmity, and make you willing? God knows it is neither in you to will nor do, and that you have neither will nor power of your own; and faith lies not in bringing forth ſome great things by your own power, but in employing the power of God to work all your works in you, and for you. Behold then, the power of God is in your offer, while the man that is God's Fellow is offered: the ſtrength of God is offered; Let him take hold of my ſtrength, that he may make peace with me, and he ſhall make peace with me; and ſeeing the ſtrength of God is offered, Oh! give it employment, ſaying, in your heart, O come, come powerful arm of Jehovah, and make me go in to his call. The goſpel call and offer uſes to be the channel of almighty power and grace.

Now, what in all the world have you to object more? Why, have you ſo many objections more, as you think all the miniſters of earth cannot anſwer them? I offer you the man that is God's Fellow, to anſwer them all: are you content that he take all the work, and get all the glory? If you conſent to this, he ſeeks no more of you. Are you a captive to the ſword of God's juſtice? I offer you the man that is God's Fellow, in whoſe bowels the ſword was bathed: and now the flaming ſword that guarded the way of the tree of life is taken away, and here is the tree of life full of the apples of grace, glory, and eternal ſalvation; and the branches of the tree are hanging down among your hands, in the midſt of the church of Dunfermline. O take, and eat, and live for ever. What ſay you now? I alude to the words of Jephthah, Judges xi. 9. If I fight for you and prevail, ſhall I be your head? O yes, yes, ſay they: ſo ſays Chriſt to you, if I ſatisfy juſtice for you; if I quench the flames of that fiery ſword, and drown all your enemies in the red ſea of my blood, ſhall I be your head? ſhall he be your head, man? ſhall he be your head, woman? Does your hearts ſay, Yes, yes? Does your hearts ſay, Amen, amen? Yea, ſay you, I think my heart ſays, Amen to the bleſſed offer, and that I would willingly and chearfully conſent; but my heart is deceitful, and I know not if my conſent be of a true ſort, or only a temporary flaſh, a preſumptuous confidence that will evaniſh: well, if that be your objection, come, I offer you the man that is God's Fellow, who can anſwer that among the reſt, and can ſay to your ſoul, Fear not, for I am thy God; I am thy ſalvation. Are you content to take him for this end, to diſcover the defect of your faith, and to work in you the faith of his elect? Can you ſay, That it is not in your faith, but in Chriſt himſelf, that you are ſeeking ſalvation? Can you ſay, Whatever be wrong about me, or about my faith, yet I see there is nothing wrong about Christ; and I would have him to right all that is wrong about me? Can you say, However I be in the dark about my faith, and whatever sort of faith it is that I have, yet sometimes I have found my unbelief, and that I could no more believe, than I could move the earth from its centre; but yet the joyful sound of gospel grace has touched my heart; and made me take up so much glory and excellency to be in Christ, that I think all the world nothing, in comparison of him; and I think my heart's desire is, O to have him for my prophet, to take away the darkness of my mind; for my priest, to take away the guilt of my sins; and for my king, to take away the power of my lusts. Is your heart saying, "Gladly would "I have him; gladly would I have him, that "I may thus be blessed in him, and that his "name may be glorified in me?" Are these the breathings of your soul? Then, upon my peril, I undertake to be the happy messenger, to tell you, in the name of the Lord, that whatever you think of your faith, and of yourselves, as the blackest monsters of sin and guilt that ever were out of hell; yet you have the faith of God's elect, and you are married and matched with the man that is God's Fellow: yea, the Lord of hosts is your Father and Friend, reconciled in him, so as there is no fear of the sword of justice with respect to you. You are the sheep, and it awaked in all its fury and vengeance against the Shepherd, that the sheep might escape; and in testimony thereof, he invites you to commemorate this bloody sacrifice in the sacrament of the supper, where you shall see the sword bathed in his heart's blood in your room, and hear the Lord of hosts giving his solemn orders, for that effect, that he might be smitten, and you spared, saying, Awake, O sword, against my Shepherd, against the man that is my Fellow.

yet

The End of the Sermon.

DISCOURSE before the SERVICE of the TABLE.

NOW, we are to proceed to the great work of the day: and that I may accommodate my former purpose to the present work, you may remember the doctrine I am upon is, That by special orders from Jehovah, the great God of hosts, the man Christ, his Shepherd and Fellow, did fall a sacrifice to the awakened sword of infinite justice, in the room of the sheep.

There are some general inferences I have drawn from this doctrine; and now there are these four more particular inferences may be drawn from it, with a more immediate reference and relation to the great sealing ordinance we have before us.

1. Hence we may see what is the nature and end of this sacrament.

2. Hence we may see who they are that stand debarred and excluded from meddling with these sacred symbols of the body and blood of Christ.

3. Hence we may see the character of these who have a right to approach, and are invited of God to it.

4. Hence we may see in what manner believers are to approach, and come to a communion table.

Now, a word to each of these, and then we shall proceed to the work.

1. Then, the doctrine I am upon, may give us some insight into the nature and end of this sacrament. Why, it is just a celebrating the memorial of the death of the man that is God's Fellow, when, as the glorious Shepherd, he yielded himself a sacrifice to the awakened sword of justice, in the room of the sheep. In this sacrament, Christ is set forth evidently crucified among us, and therein we may hear the Lord of hosts saying, Awake, O sword, against my Shepherd, against the man that is my Fellow; smite the shepherd. This sacrament is appointed to be a commemorative sign of the death of Christ; As often as you eat this bread, and drink this cup, you shew forth the Lord's death till he come. Do this in remembrance of me; of me, who became a sacrifice to the sword of justice; by which sacrifice all spiritual blessings, peace, pardon, reconciliation with God, grace, glory, and all good things, are purchased. The sword of justice having bathed itself, to satisfaction, in the blood of this sacrifice, the sacrament of the supper is a feast upon the sacrifice, 1 Cor. v. 7. Even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast. This is the feast of fat things, and of wines on the lees well refined. Upon the body and blood of Christ, represented by the elements of bread and wine, which is just a feeding upon, and viewing, by faith, the value and virtue of the sacrifice for satisfying God, for expiating sin, for vanquishing hell, and for purchasing heaven, and all the means that lead unto it; as also, for sealing the covenant of grace, and all the promises of it, which are all yea and amen in Jesus Christ, the testament being ratified and confirmed by the death of the Testator, Heb. ix. 16. But again,

2. From this doctrine we may see who they are that stand debarred and excluded from meddling with these sacred symbols of the body and blood of Christ in this sacrament; namely, in general, all unbelievers, who never having seen their wicked state, as liable to the stroak of divine wrath, because of their sin and guilt, have not fled under the covert of the blood of the Shepherd, of the blood of the man that is God's Fellow, who was smitten in the room of the sheep. What have these to do with the sign, who never apprehended the thing signified, namely, the propitiation of the blood of Christ? And therefore, in the great and awful name and authority of the great and glorious Jehovah, I solemnly debar and excommunicate, from the table of the Lord, all who never found themselves in any measure pursued by the avenger of blood, the sword of the Lord of hosts, and never have fled for refuge to the blood of Christ, the man that is God's Fellow, to stand between them and the avenging sword of justice; these that will not come to Christ, let them not dare to come to his table, nor come to abuse the symbols of his blood; who, by unbelief trample his blood under their feet, and will not make use of it as the sacrifice to satisfy justice in their room. But, that it may appear more distinctly, whom I here debar, in the name of the Lord, I shall tell you who they are, that never made any saving use of the blood of Christ, the man that is God's Fellow, but slight and neglect this sacrifice and offering for sin, which he has made of himself to the sword of justice, and so stand debarred and excommunicated from the table of the Lord.

fice

(1.) All these who think to make their peace with God, without minding the necessity of any thing interveening between him and them; not knowing that peace with God must be founded upon the blood of the man that is his Fellow. Some are utterly careless how their peace be made, or whether it be made or not, they hope for it, and think to come at it, but they cannot tell how; and are careless to know the way. Others presume, and think God loves them, because they love themselves; and though they know they have sin, they think God will not be so ill-natured as to reckon with them; they think God loves them, but they cannot give a ground for it. Others think that God is merciful, and therefore they conclude they will be pardoned and accepted; because a merciful man sometimes seeks no satisfaction, so they think much more will a merciful God seek none; not knowing, that though God be merciful, he will not shew mercy to the prejudice of his justice. But the thought of these people is upon the matter, that they would have obtained mercy though Christ had never become a sacrifice to the sword of justice, without respect to the mediation of the man that is his Fellow.—These therefore I debar, in God's great name, from the table of the Lord.

(2.) Another sort, who despise this sacrifice made to the sword of justice, is, all these who take the legal way of making their peace with God. Not as if they thought to appear before God without sin and holiness, as the covenant of works requires; but who think, that if they sin, they will make amends; and that either by something negative, that they have not done, or something positive, that they have done; or some internal qualification, that they rest upon. Some think to make amends to God by something negative; that they have not been so ill as other people; and if they go to hell, they think few will go to heaven; and if they were to die, they think they care not, they have done no person any injury; they have carried very harmlesly, like the Pharisee, God, I thank thee, I am not like other men; I am no drunkard, or adulterer, or oppressor, or swearer; and when they see any profane persons, they are puffed up with a good opinion of themselves, because they are not so profane as they: these I debar, in the name of the Lord. Others think to make amends to God by something positive; they do many good duties, like the same Pharisee, that boasted, I fast twice a week, I give tithes of all that I possess; if any duty be performed, or any good be done by them, their fingers are ready to stick to it; they rest there, and hope God will be pleased and pacified on this account: these I debar, in the name of the Lord. Others, upon this same head, think to make amends by some internal qualification, that they rest upon: if at any time they have liberty, and motions of affection in prayer, stirrings of conviction in hearing; and joys of heart, like the stony-ground hearers; any sorrow of heart, or sadness for sin, these they think will do their turn; and they think they need no other sacrifice to God, but a broken heart; sadly mistaking the nature of a true evangelical brokenness of spirit. It is certain, both from scripture and experience, that many hundreds of professors dash and perish on this stumbling-block; They call themselves of the holy city; yea, and stay themselves upon the God of Israel, Isa. xlviii. 2. They seek him daily, and delight to know his ways; yea, delight in approaching to God, Isa. lviii. 2. Expectation of happiness, grounded upon some weak performance, and some internal motions and qualifications, do cut the throat of many civil and discreet men, that are not grosly profane.—All these, therefore, that make any of these things the ground of their hope of peace with God, I debar and excommunicate from the table of the Lord, as being strangers to the true ground of peace, the Man that is God's Fellow, becoming a sacrifice to the sword of justice.

(3.) Another sort, who make no right use of this sacrifice offered to the sword of justice, are these, who, though they make use of Christ, as the object of their worship, yet make not use of his blood as the ground of their justification and peace with God: as if they would not altogether neglect Christ, and yet they neglect his offering, and would make use of himself, but not of his sacrifice; like the man that came to him, saying, Good Master, what shall I do, that I may inherit eternal life? he was going upon the ground of his own righteousness; so some they may come to Christ, to desire his help to enable them to do duty, that by doing thereof they may work out their own salvation; and be helped this way to make their peace with God: thus by grace, sought and received from him, they hope to be their own Saviour and peace-maker, with God; and so were never brought to ground the making of their peace with God, upon Christ's sacrifice and offering alone. These therefore I also debar from this holy table.

(4.) A fourth sort, that never made right use of this sacrifice to justice's sword, and propitiation in the blood of Christ, are all these, who never got such a view of the love of God, in this sacrifice, as to kill the love of sin in them, and to bring down the reigning power of sin; for the great end of Christ's sufferings was to bring us to God; the great end of his giving himself a sacrifice to the sword of justice, was to redeem us from all iniquity; and to purchase to himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. And hence they are yet strangers to Christ, who never felt any measure of the virtue of this sacrifice, in sanctifying, purifying, and making them study holiness. And therefore I debar from this table, all impenitent sinners and breakers of God's commandments; all whose names are in that black catalogue, Mat. xv. 19. Rom. i. 29,—32. all whose names are in that black list, Gal. v. 19,—21. and all whose names are in these black rolls, 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10. Rev. xxii. 15.—All Atheists that practically deny the being of God in their lives and conversations; and ignorant persons that know not the principles of religion, and the nature of this ordinance; and profane persons, who mock at ſacred things, neglect public ordinances, on week-days or ſabbath-days, and neglect family-worſhip, and ſecret prayer.—All profane ſwearers, whether by God, or the devil, or faith, or conſcience, or whatſoever is not more than, yea and nay.—All ſabbath-breakers, who put no difference between that and other days.—All that are unfaithful in their relative ſtations; as magiſtrates or ſubjects, maſters or ſervants, parents or children.—All murderers, and theſe who give way to the killing ſins of malice, paſſion, revenge; and the ſelf-murdering ſins of drunkenneſs, gluttony, and tipling.—All whoremongers, adulterers, fornicators, Sodomites, and unclean perſons, who never mortified the deeds of the body.—All thieves, oppreſſors, and cheats, that ſtudy to over-reach their neighbour in their dealing.—All falſe witneſſes and liars, that make no conſcience of ſpeaking the truth; perjured perſons, that make no bonds of unlawful oaths; covenant-breakers, and ſuch as are enemies to a covenanted work of reformation in theſe lands.—All covetous perſons, whoſe hearts are glued to the world.—In a word, I debar all formaliſts, and hypocrites, and legaliſts; all that never ſaw and bewailed their heart-plagues of atheiſm, enmity, pride, hypocriſy, and unbelief: all who know not the difference between the law and the goſpel; the covenant of works and the covenant of grace; and between legal and evangelical preaching.—All that never felt any thing of the power of God's word on their heart, in convincing them of ſin, original and actual, and drawing them to Chriſt, as their righteouſneſs and ſtrength, for juſtification and ſanctification.—I debar all who hate to be reproved of their faults, and contemn their reprovers: and all who can be witneſs to the ſins and faults of others, and yet never give any ſort of teſtimony againſt them.—I debar all who love not the godly, nor care for their company: all who love not the Bible, nor ſearch the ſcriptures: all who love not Zion, nor care how matters go with the church of Chriſt; whether its members be divided or alienate; whether its intereſt ſink or ſwim: All who can go lightly over the belly of their own conſcience, for fear of outward loſſes or croſſes, and eaſily croſs their light to pleaſe men.—I debar all that are not lovers of the truth, but eſpouſers of error; Socinians, Arminians, and Antinomians, who are properly ſo called, for ſome are wrongfully and ignorantly ſo deſigned.—I debar all that think they have believed all their days, and never were convinced of unbelief, nor found religion a work above them, and their natural powers.—I debar all who have no errand to the Lord's table but to take a little bread and wine, and think it an eaſy work to communicate; nor ever had any fears or jealouſies about their miſcarrying in that work: All who come only to keep up a name among profeſſors: and all that have no other tokens for communion, but that which they have got from their miniſters or elders: all who have been at no pains whatſoever to prepare for this work.—And all, on the other hand, who think they are prepared enough, and have no other thing to reſt upon but their own preparation.—All theſe, and others of that ſtamp, I do, in the name of the living and eternal God, debar from this holy table, as being ſtrangers to the Man that is God's Fellow, and ſtrangers to the ſacrifice whereby he has ſatisfied the awakened ſword of infinite juſtice: therefore as you would not take a cup of poiſon to deſtroy yourſelves, as you would not eat and drink damnation to yourſelves, and bring down the guilt of the blood of Chriſt upon your head, do not dare to venture to this holy table; for, He that eats this bread, and drinks this cup of the Lord unworthily, ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. And if you will venture notwithſtanding, remember, though you have got a token from me, or any perſon elſe, your blood is upon your own head, if you find yourſelf now debarred, and yet come to trample upon the blood of the Man that is God's Fellow.

But now, leſt I ſhould fright any of the children from their food, who are apt to take theſe things to them, more than they to whom they are principally directed, therefore I proceed,

3. To a third inference, with relation to this ordinance, that may be drawn from our doctrine, namely, Hence we may ſee the character of thoſe who have a right to approach, and are of God invited thereto; namely, in general, all believers, who, through grace, have been made to flee unto the covert of the blood of the Shepherd; into the covert of the blood of the Man that is God's Fellow, to ſcreen them from the ſword of divine wrath. As we dare not, for our ſouls, allow or encourage any to approach this ordinance, who are unbelievers, under whatſoever names and deſignations they may be called; ſo, on the other hand, we dare not, for our ſouls, diſallow, or diſcourage from this work, any the leaſt, the weakeſt believer in Chriſt, that has gone in with the call of the goſpel, and cloſed with, and embraced this ſacrifice whereby juſtice is ſatisfied: And therefore, in the name and authority of the ſame glorious God, and gracious Lord, I invite to this table of the Lord, all ſuch, whatever their ſins have been, though guilty of the ſins that I have named, or whatever elſe; all ſuch, I ſay, whatever their guilt be, who have taken this goſpel-method of getting their ſin and guilt expiate and removed, namely, by hiding their guilty ſouls under the wings of Chriſt's righteouſneſs, who gave himſelf a ſacrifice to ſatisfy the ſword of juſtice. But that it may be known more diſtinctly whom I mean by ſuch believers in Chriſt, as I am calling to the Lord's table, you may examine yourſelves more particularly from the doctrine, Let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat. I hope you that are to communicate as believers, have been examining yourſelves before this; but if you be yet in the dark, there are theſe four marks may be drawn out of our text and doctrine, for clearing whether you be believers indeed, that have cloſed with the man that is God's Fellow, as a ſacrifice to the ſword of juſtice in your room.

(1.) Have you ſeen, ſometime or other, the ſword of juſtice awaking againſt your own ſouls, the avenger of blood purſuing you? Have you heard ſuch a knell as that in your heart, Awake, O ſword; awake, O law; awake, O vengeance; curſes, and threatenings againſt a man for his ſins? Have you been ſo filled with the fear of hell and wrath, as you have been put to cry, Men, and brethren, what ſhall I do to be ſaved? Or, have you been put to more concern cern about ſalvation, than ever you was about any thing elſe in the world? And have you ſeen, in this caſe, the natural tendency of your heart to reſt upon ſome other thing for peace with God than this ſacrifice, which Chriſt offered of himſelf to the ſword of juſtice? There is ſuch a natural inclination in all to reſt upon ſome other thing for peace with God, and it is a good token when it is diſcovered, and becomes a burden and a ground of a challenge, that they have had a ſinful inclination to put duties, prayers, tears, enlargements, and the like, in Chriſt's room. Before the law came, I was alive, ſays Paul; and thought I had a ſtock of righteouſneſs in myſelf to be the ground of my peace with God; But when the commandment came, ſin revived, and I died: when, by the law, I got the knowledge of ſin, I died to all conceit of myſelf and my righteouſneſs; What things were formerly gain unto me, theſe I counted loſs for Chriſt. Now, if you have been thus purſued by juſtice, which you ſee no ſacrifice will ſatisfy, but that of the man that is God's Fellow, and have been burdened with your natural inclination to ſome other ſacrifice, I think the Lord has begun the good work upon you, and therefore I call and invite you to the table of the Lord.

(2.) Have you ſeen the glory and excellency of this ſacrifice? What a glorious ranſom God has found out for his own ſatisfaction, that thouſands of rams could not do it, but that one Lamb could do it, even the Lamb of God ſacrificed? Have you ſeen the ſword quenching its thirſt in the blood of the Lamb? and have you taken up the love and mercy of God in providing ſuch a Lamb, ſuch a ram caught in the thickets, when your neck, like Iſaac's, was upon the block? Have you ſeen him to be a worthy ranſom, becauſe of the worthineſs of the perſon ſacrificed, he being God's Fellow, God-man in one perſon, and ſo acting in his Father's name, and by his appointment, when he yielded obedience to the death, as being his Shepherd, whom he ſealed for this end? And has the view and apprehenſion of him, in this mediatorial glory, drawn forth your eſteem of him and of his offering and ſacrifice, ſo as you could venture heaven, and your eternal ſalvation upon it; ſo that you deſire to ſay, To him that loved me, and waſhed me in his own blood, to him be glory? Is the view of this ſacrifice that which chears and delights you moſt? and is it matter of wonder to you, now and then, that when the ſtroak of juſtice was ready to come upon you, Chriſt ſhould have interpoſed between you and the fatal deadly blow? Can you ſay, You count all but loſs and dung, that you may win Chriſt, and be found in him; ſo that you care not what be caſt over-board, if you but get to that ſhore, even Chriſt and his righteouſneſs? Then welcome are you to the table of the Lord; I invite you in his glorious name.

(3.) Have you found your ſouls in ſafety from the ſword of juſtice, under this ſhadow of the blood of the man that is God's Fellow? Nothing rightly ſatisfies the awakened challenges of conſcience, but that which ſatisfies the awakened ſword of juſtice; and that is the ſmiting of the Shepherd, and the blood of the Lamb that is his Fellow. Now, have you ſeen God's juſtice ſatisfied thereby, and found your conſcience ſatisfied with the ſame? Have you, ſome time or other, found your ſoul at peace under this covert of blood, knowing that the ſword was put up in its ſcabberd, it being fully ſatisfied with the blood of God? Here is a being pleaſed with what the Lord of hoſts is pleaſed; and you have thus, being juſtified by faith, had peace with God, through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Where go you, when under challenges for ſin? Do you find moſt peace in this ſacrifice, even when you have the deepeſt and moſt kindly impreſſion of your ſin? For the Legaliſt, he can believe well enough, when he has no challenges for ſin, but under theſe challenges, his faith fails him. But for you, believer, under all challenges, do you find this is always your ſhift, the blood of Chriſt, the ſacrifice of the man who is God's Fellow? Is this alſo your only ſhift when you think of death, or of appearing before the judgment-ſeat of God? Do you make ſuch uſe of Chriſt's offering to juſtice, as that it is your conſtant deſire to put Chriſt in your room? Is the language of your ſoul, O! I deſire no accompting and reckoning with juſtice; nay, I dare not count and reckon with Chriſt, but my ſoul, as it were, leaves Chriſt in its room, and runs away from reckoning with juſtice, to hide itſelf under his wings, who can count to the utmoſt farthing. Dear ſoul, who has attained to ſomething of this in reality, I invite you, in my Maſter's name, to come to his table.

(4.) Is it oft-times matter of exerciſe to you, to get over all other ſacrifices to this alone, whereby the awakened ſword of juſtice is appeaſed? Can you ſay, it has been matter of exerciſe to you, not only how to get over your ſins unto Chriſt, but alſo, how to get over your graces and duties to him, ſo as you might not truſt therein, to the prejudice of truſting in Chriſt? Paul not only, while in nature, but even after converſion, found an inclination to count ſome thing gain, beſide Chriſt; and therefore, in oppoſition to this inclination, he does with a doubtleſs, cry down all things, and count them dung and loſs, for the excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt, Philip. iii. 8, 9. Taking in his gracious actings, and actions, as well as others, and found a need to caſt away the good, as well as the bad, in point of juſtification. Did you ever find it a harder exerciſe to be quit of your duties, tears, and inlargements, in point of dependence, than to be rid of your ſins? The believer has one exerciſe of faith, how to be quit of ſin; and another new exerciſe, how to be freed from reſting on duties, and how to be ſingly ingaged in reſting on Chriſt: his mind is not quiet in all his duties, till he come hither, even to be found in Chriſt, to have his peace with God founded upon Chriſt, and not upon duties. The Legaliſt, when he gets duties performed, then he has peace; but the believer, though he ſhould be about duties a whole day, and is indeed more engaged in duties readily than the Legaliſt himſelf, that relies thereon; but let him be about duties a whole day, yet perhaps he has little or no peace, becauſe he would be over all duties, to Chriſt himſelf, as his reſting place; and ſo has no peace till he enjoy him to his ſatisfaction. Hence alſo, he is oft-times full of fears and jealouſies, leſt, through unbelief, he put ſome other thing in the room of Chriſt's ſacrifices. A natural man may, perhaps, ſuſpect his his duties, leſt they be wrong; but the believer is more taken up in ſuſpecting his faith, ſaying, Lord, I believe, help my unbelief: he dares not truſt his own faith, knowing his evil heart of unbelief that he has within him. Well, if this be oft-times matter of exerciſe to you, poor ſoul, to get over all other ſacrifices and ſervices, to this great ſacrifice, Chriſt Jeſus, in whom alone the ſword of juſtice is ſatisfied, I invite you, as a believer, to feaſt at the Lord's table, upon the ſacrifice. Does the faith of this ſacrifice purify your heart, ſo that you long to be perfectly holy, ſeeing and lamenting your own unholineſs and impurity, and deſiring daily to bring your impure ſins and luſts to the fountain opened, by the ſword of juſtice, in the heart of a pierced Chriſt?—I then invite you, in the name of the Lord, to this holy table, as one that has ſeen the value, and ſhared of the virtue, and participated of the efficacy of this ſacrifice, given by the man that is God's fellow, to the awakened ſword of juſtice.

In a word, is there any here, who, under a ſenſe of ſin, ſee an abſolute need of this ſacrifice; who under a ſenſe of their unworthineſs, are fearing and trembling to approach to the Lord's table, and yet would give all the world for a ſhare of the ſaving and healing virtue of this glorious ſacrifice; and ſee nothing in the wide world ſo fit for them as Chriſt? I invite them to the Lord's table. Are there any here lamenting the Lord's anger and abſence at this day? lamenting that things are ſo far wrong in the houſe of God, and that there is ſo little power and glory of God ſeen in the ſanctuary, and panting after communion and fellowſhip with him, crying, O that I knew where I might find him! O that it were with me as in times paſt! O for an heart to love Chriſt! O for a ſealed intereſt in him! O for the healing balſam of the blood of the Lamb to cure the ſad plagues of my heart, which I ſee to be as black as hell! O come and take a drink, poor ſoul, at the Lord's table, even a full draught of the blood of Chriſt, which cleanſes from all ſin! Is there any here, any poor creature, that ſees and laments his own weakneſs, and the power of ſin and corruption in him, pained to the heart with his numberleſs backſlidings from the Lord Jeſus? I would gladly have a knot caſt between Chriſt and his ſoul, that may never looſe, ſuch ſtrength of grace communicate, as that he may never go back from God: I invite you to come forward to the Lord's table, and get a ſtrengthening meal. Perhaps there is ſome trembling weak believer here, that is doubting, whether he has grace, or not; whether he be a believer, or not; O cry to the Spirit of God to be ſent to clear you, by ſhewing to you the things that are freely given you of God. I ſhall only aſk you, who are fearing you have no intereſt in him, no portion in the ſon of Jeſſe, the man that is God's fellow; tell me, will you quit your part of him? Could you freely chooſe to take the world, and your luſts, and let others take Chriſt who pleaſe? would you find in your heart to reſt contented with other things, and give any body your part of Chriſt? what ſay you to that, poor doubting ſoul? Is your heart now melting, burning, and relenting within you, and ſaying O miniſter! what is that you are ſaying? that wounds me to the bottom of my ſoul! quit all my part of Chriſt! O no, no, no! If I were ſure of my intereſt in him, I would not quit my part in him for ten thouſand, thouſand, thouſand worlds; and even as it is, though I dare not aſſert, that I have an intereſt in him, yet I would not ſay that I would quit my part in him, no, for all that lies within the boſom of the univerſe. Is that the language of your heart? Well, Chriſt hears that, and he will mind it as a token of ſome heart-kindneſs to him. Can you ſay, that God would be juſt and righteous though he ſhould ſend you to the bottom of hell, inſtead of allowing you to ſit at this table; and if ſuch a dog as you, get a crumb from him, it will be a miracle of mercy? Can you ſay, that though doubts and darkneſs, and innumerable evils be now ſurrounding you, yet, for what you know, it was a day of power you met with at ſuch a time, in which a ſaving work, as you thought, was begun, and now you would willingly have it cleared up to you? Can you ſay, that though you have a thouſand objections againſt yourſelf, and your own heart and frame, yet you have no objections againſt Chriſt? at leaſt if any reaſonings and high imaginations againſt him be riſen and raging in your heart, you would gladly take hold of him, that he may caſt all down, and take and keep the throne himſelf? Do you ſee the way of ſalvation, through free grace, and through his perfect righteouſneſs, to be an excellent way, worthy of God, and ſuitable to man, becoming the wiſdom and glory of God, and that you are well pleaſed with this way? Can you finally ſay, that you are one of the pooreſt creatures in all the world; poor and needy, deſtitute of all good, of all grace, of all faith, love, repentance, holineſs, and any other ſpiritual quality in yourſelves; but that you ſee an infinite fulneſs in Chriſt, that can ſupply you, and out of which you deſire to be ſupplied, with all that you need? and can appeal to heaven, that in him only you deſire to be found, who is all in all? Can you ſay, Yea and Amen to theſe things? Then, poor ſoul, I charge and command you, in the name of the Lord of hoſts, to venture forward to this table, as you would not diſpleaſe him, and grieve his holy Spirit by ſtaying away, when he calls you and commands you to do this in remembrance of him, and of his kindneſs to you. You know not if ever you will get another opportunity, poor ſtraying, wandering ſheep; though you be ſuch a weak creature, as that you think, if you be among the flock of Chriſt at all, you are the worſt among them all for ſin; and the laſt among them all for grace; and ſtraying ſo far behind all the reſt of the flock, that you will never get up among the reſt, unleſs the great Shepherd take you up in his arms, and carry you; I charge you, in his name, to come forward, and ſee the glorious Shepherd ſmitten with the ſword of juſtice in your room.—And now, hoping I have prevailed, or rather that the Lord has, and will prevail, with his little flock, to come to the Lord's table, and hear the Lord of hoſts ſacramentally ſaying, Awake, O ſword, againſt my Shepherd, the man that is my fellow, I cloſe with

4. A fourth inference from this doctrine with relation to this ordinance: hence we may ſee in what manner it is that believers ſhould approach to a communion-table, ſince the ſword of Jehovah's wrath is ordered to ſmite the Shepherd, the man that is God's Fellow. Then you ought to commemorate this ſacrifice, and come to his table, (1.) With wonder and aſtoniſhment. O come! wondering that the ſword of the Lord of hoſts, that infinitely juſt God, ſhould paſs by you, man; and you, woman, that was an enemy; and ſatisfy himſelf upon the man that was his Friend, the man that was his Fellow, by ſmiting the Shepherd in the room of the ſheep: that the man that is God's Fellow ſhould be made ſin for you; made a curſe for you; made ſhame for you; made a ſacrifice to juſtice for you; and made the channel in which the wrath and diſpleaſure of God ſhould run ſo as to run by you, and never light upon you. O wonder! wonder, men and angels!

(2.) Come with praiſe, gratitude, and thankfulneſs to the Lord of hoſts, and to the man that is his Fellow, for ſuch a wonderful contrivance of ſalvation. What poſture did grace find you in, poor believer? even lying open to the ſtroak of God's drawn ſword of juſtice; and our Lord Jeſus, on the one ſide, ſtept in and ſaid, Hold, Lord, let that ſtroak fall upon me, and let them go free; and upon their ſide, there was God's good pleaſure, condeſcending to accept of his offer, ſaying, Awake, O ſword; ſmite the Shepherd, and ſpare the ſheep. Poor ſoul, that deſires to flee to him for refuge! Chriſt has changed rooms with you, by interpoſing to keep the ſtroak off you, and receiving it into his own bowels: and, O what infinite obligations to love and thankfulneſs does this lay you under! How will he be praiſed for ever among the redeemed for this love! Come, ſinging unto him that loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins, in his blood,—to him be glory.

(3.) Come with boldneſs, confidence, and chearfulneſs. What a ſhame and diſhonour to the glorious Shepherd is it, that the ſheep ſhould be always trembling and quaking, while they are under ſuch a ſure and ſafe covert, as the blood and righteouſneſs of the Shepherd! If we were coming to deal with God about ſalvation, upon the footing of any thing in us, we might indeed be confounded with deſpair, and could not ſtand far enough away from God; but when you are to deal with him upon the ſcore of the God-pleaſing, juſtice-ſatisfying blood of the man that is his Fellow, we cannot come with too much boldneſs: on this ground let us come boldly to the throne of grace, having boldneſs to enter to the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus. Is it the blood of God's Shepherd, the blood of the man that is his Fellow! Is it not thy valuable blood, or not? Then, why ſhould you give way to diffidence? What a ſhame is it that we dare ſcarcely truſt to his ſacrifice! Therefore,

(4.) Come with full aſſurance of faith; aſſured of the love and good-will of God in Chriſt, in whom his ſword is pacified, and through whom peace with God is proclaimed, and a ceſſation of arms to all eternity. If you can attain to this full aſſurance of faith, poor weak believer, you will, no doubt, come forward, as the Lord ſhall help you, under covert of this honourable ſacrifice; come hoping againſt hope, and believing againſt unbelief; ſaying, Lord, I believe, help my unbelief. Come lamenting your unbelief, and crying to him for faith. Come depending on him for grace to communicate in a ſuitable way, and for grace to take a hearty draught of the ſword-ſatisfying blood of the man that is his Fellow.

SERVICE at the TABLE.

NOW, believers, what was Moſes's work when the angel of the Lord appeared in a flame of fire out of the midſt of the buſh, Exod. iii. 2. when the buſh burned with fire and was not conſumed? Why, ſays Moſes, I will turn aſide, and ſee this great ſight. That ſame ſhould be your work and exerciſe now, at a communion-table; turn aſide, and ſee this great ſight; what ſight? the greateſt ſight that ever was ſeen, the eternal Son of God in the buſh of our nature, and this buſh burning in the flames of divine wrath, for our ſakes, and in our room and ſtead, and yet the buſh not conſumed. O! with what holy fear ought you to look upon this great ſight! Put off thy ſhoes from off thy feet, ſays God to Moſes, for the place where thou ſtandeſt is holy ground: and Moſes hid his face, for he was afraid to look upon God. You may perhaps think, if you were as great a ſaint as Moſes, you would not be afraid; but, O the ſight of God is an awful thing to the greateſt ſaint on earth, and humbles them to the duſt! But, if you be a ſaint at all, I will tell you, you will be reckoning yourſelf the greateſt ſinner out of hell, the chief of ſinners; and if it be ſo, ſure I am, this great ſight may be more wonderful in your eyes to ſee the ſword of divine wrath drunk in the blood of the glorious Surety, in your room. Solomon ſays, He that is ſurety for a ſtranger ſhall ſmart for it, Prov. xi. 15. Behold the Son of God become Surety for you, that was a ſtranger and alien; but he muſt ſmart for it: or, as it may be rendered, He ſhall be ſore broken. So was the Son of God, our Surety; he was broken in ſoul, broken in body, broken to pieces; and we have here the ſymbols of his broken body; for, In the ſame night in which he was betrayed, he took bread, as you ſee us take it here, after his example.——

Now, ſpectators; now, communicants; if you have the eye of faith, you might ſee a broken Chriſt repreſented under this broken bread; now you may hear God ſaying, Awake, O ſword, againſt my Shepherd. All we like loſt ſheep had gone aſtray; and we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord, the Lord of hoſts, has laid on him the iniquities of us all. Sin brings down the ſword of vengeance; but, behold your ſin laid upon the Shepherd, and thereupon the Lord of hoſts ſaying, Awake, O ſword, againſt the Shepherd. O rare and raviſhing contrivance! O admirable and amiable contrivance! O beautiful and beneficial contrivance! Eternally bleſſed be the Contriver! and eternally bleſſed be the Shepherd! O infinitely kind and compaſſionate Shepherd, that laid down his life for the ſheep, and feeds his flock like a ſhepherd! yea, feeds them with his fleſh and blood; for, having broken it, he gave to his disciples, saying, Take ye, eat ye; this is my body broken for you: this do in remembrance of me.——ME! what for a ME, is this? who was it that was smitten by the sword of justice? Why, it is even the Shepherd, the man that is God's Fellow, his own Son: we have sinned, and he is smitten for it; the sword awaked against him, and we go free: O sinner, sinner! O guilty sinner, filthy sinner, wretched sinner! who in all the world would have done that for you that Christ has done? Who in all the world could have suffered that for you, that Christ has suffered? O communicant, apply, apply his doing and dying to yourself in particular, and say, O marvellous and matchless love! O boundless and bottomless love! He loved me, and gave himself for me! Or if you cannot attain to the particular application, that he did it for you; yet, O wonder, wonder, that ever he did and suffered so much for any; for he suffered the hell of all the elect; God made a gap or wound in the breast of Christ, with the sword of his justice, and then poured in a whole hell of wrath upon him. O! is it not good your part, to remember him, who remembred you when the sword of justice was ready to be sheathed in your bowels, and to drink in the blood of your soul? No sooner did the Son of God behold the sword at your breast, and the hand of justice fetching the bloody stroak, but he cries out, O Father, hold thy hand; let all that vengeance that is due to those poor guilty creatures, fall upon me; behold I open my breast to receive the stroak of justice in their room. They have broken thy law, but here am I to fulfil it for them; they have enraged thy justice, but here am I ready to satisfy justice for them; they have drunk up iniquity like water; but lo! I will drink up the gall and vinegar of thy vengeance for them: Lo! I come; let the sword light upon me with all its vengeance. Come, come then, my beloved Son, says God, the Lord of hosts, you know what this work will cost you; will you stand your hazard? Yes, yes, says Christ: what will I not do for thy glory, and for those miserable sinners? What will I not suffer for them? let it be infinite vengeance, I bear it for them.—Content, content, then says the Father; and therefore, Awake, O sword, against my Shepherd, and against the man that is my Fellow; smite the Shepherd. Well, the Shepherd, the man, the wonderful man, is smitten, and the bloody stroak opens a wide gap in his heart, from whence streams a river of blood; A river, the streams whereof make glad the city of God: and of this river you are called to drink this day. Christ having sacrificed himself a peace-offering to the Lord of hosts, He, as the antitype of Moses, did sprinkle the blood of the sacrifice on the people; and therefore, in the same manner, after supper, also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, this cup is the New Testament in my blood; this do, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me; for, as oft as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew forth the Lord's death till he come again.—Without the shedding of blood there is no remission; but there is blood shed; take it, and remission of your sins with it; it is worthy blood, the blood of the man that is God's Fellow: the sword of justice has got such a full draught of this blood, that it craves no more. As long as God's justice is demanding vengeance, no man can stand before God: but here justice has no more to crave; for the satisfaction Christ gave was full measure, heaped up, and running over; he offered himself to God, for a sweet-smelling savour; justice was pacified and satisfied, and love got a vent towards man: and hence, instead of a cup of wrath, you have a cup of love to drink. What was justice seeking from Christ, when the sword was running through his heart? Why, justice was even pursuing him for your debt, and exacting all of the Surety that was due by you. May it not affect the heart of any debitor, that has the least spark or remains of ingenuity, to see his cautioner dragged to prison for his debt? But here you see more, the sword of justice not only arresting your Surety, but running him through, and killing him. O may not this fill you with hatred of your sins, and love to your Surety, that was so well pleased to be thus dealt with for you! Let not unbelief say, that you cannot think that this blood was shed for such a hellish sinner, such a wonderful sinner as you; for it would not be such wonderful blood, if it was not for the cleansing of such wonderful sinners: be your sins what they will, lay them under the covert of this blood, the blood of the man that is God's Fellow; as sure as he was smitten you shall escape; for, He was wounded for our sins. True, when he was wounded by the awakened sword, he might have cried, O Father, these sins are not mine; these transgressions are not mine; these faults and miscarriages, these black crimes are not mine; why should I be smitten for them? No, no: there was never such a word in his mouth. Love breathed out some other language; 'I 'was content, as a Surety, to take all that sin 'and guilt upon me; and now, I am as con-'tent to bear the weight of all that wrath and 'vengeance that their sins deserved.' O mighty love!

Now, my dear friends, a time of a communion action should be a busy time, when you see the sword of justice awakened against Christ. O lay all the enemies of God, especially his enemies within you, under the stroak of this sword of justice: bring all your lusts and idols to the justice of God, saying, Awake, O sword of justice against these my sins, and smite them.—What think you of this love, believers? What think you of this love, communicants? What think you of this love, spectators? If it had not been for this, instead of weeping at a communion-table, you had been weeping in hell. Awake, O sword, against my lusts, and give this lust a stroak, and that lust a stroak; awake, O sword, against this pride and passion of mine, and give it a stroak; awake, O sword, against that enmity, unbelief, and legality of mine, and give them a stroak; awake, O sword, against my atheism, carnality, and worldly-mindedness, and give these a stroak; awake, O sword, against my filthiness and frowardness, my uncleanness and vileness of heart and way, my Delilah sins, and O give them a stroak. Bring forth all your sins, and particularly the sins that easily beset you, bring them forth to the sword, the sword of justice, to be hewed in pieces, like Agag, before the Lord; saying, Lord, let the sword that awaked against my Lord, awake against my lusts, that they may be crucified with him. O take vengeance on thy enemies within me! O it will be a blessed com-communion-day if it were but a day of vengeance upon your ſins and luſts. O! cry down the vengeance of the ſword of juſtice upon them.

And as you ſhould bring forth all your ſins, ſo bring forth all your wants: whatever you want to your own ſouls; to your friends; to your family; to your children; to your neighbour, and chriſtian acquaintance, that deſire you to mind them; lay all your wants before the man that is God's Fellow; who, as he is the ſacrifice for your ſins, ſo he is the ſtore-houſe for your ſupply; my God ſhall ſupply all your need, according to his riches in glory, by Chriſt Jeſus, Philip. iv. 19. Want you any thing for the church of Scotland? Our great want at this day is a ſpirit of zeal, a ſpirit of love, and a ſound mind; the want of God's holy Spirit makes much diviſion and diſorder; O cry down the Spirit! And do not wonder if the Shepherd be ſmitten, that the ſheep be ſcattered; this was fulfilled when all the diſciples were offended becauſe of him, in the night wherein he was betrayed; and all forſook him and fled; they were ſcattered, every one to his own, like ſo many timorous ſheep, and left him alone, John xvi. 32.—But I will turn my hand upon my little ones: ſome make that word a threatening, that, as Chriſt ſuffered, ſo ſhall his diſciples: they ſhall be baptized with the bloody baptiſm he was baptized with. Think not ſtrange, if a ſcaffold of blood ſhould be your trial; if you be a believer indeed, you ſhall notwithſtanding overcome by the blood of the Lamb, by the blood of the Shepherd, the man that is God's Fellow. I will turn my hand upon the little ones: ſome make it a promiſe, that God will gather together the ſcattered ſheep: the little ones among Chriſt's ſcholars, may be divided and diſperſed, but they ſhall rally again. O look for a time when he will return; and, in mercy, turn his hand upon the little ones.

Now, let all the little ones, the poor, weak, feeble ſheep of the flock, follow and lean upon the great Shepherd that was ſmitten for them, and he will ſupply all your wants, ſubdue all your iniquities, pardon all your ſins, and bear all your burdens, and ſanctify all your croſſes, and do all your work in you and for you. If you have not now gotten what you would have, cry to him, and wait upon him, and let it be the top of your deſires and endeavours, to have more and more fellowſhip with the man that is God's Fellow, eſpecially in his being the only ſacrifice to the ſword of juſtice in your room. Upon this ſacrifice wherewith God is ſo infinitely well pleaſed, let all your hope of grace and glory depend.

Now, go in peace, and may the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jeſus, that great Shepherd of the ſheep, through the blood of the everlaſting covenant, make you perfect, in every good work, to do his will; working in you that which is well pleaſing in his ſight, through Jeſus Chriſt; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

SERMON IV.*

CHRIST the PEOPLE'S COVENANT.

ISAIAH xlii. 6.

——I will give thee for a covenant of the people.—

MY dear friends, if your ears be open, there are three things that you may hear this day, 1. You may hear what miniſters will ſay; but that is a matter of ſmall moment; and it is but a poor errand, if you be only come to hear what a poor mortal, ſinful fellow-creature will ſay to you. Little matter what we ſay, if God himſelf do not ſpeak in to your hearts. Therefore, 2. You may hear what God ſays to you: this is matter of great moment; for God's ſpeaking can make us both hear and live, though we were as dead as ſtocks, or ſtones. He ſpake the old creation out of nothing, and he can ſpeak a new creation out of us, who are worſe than nothing. Indeed it will be a wonder, if he do not ſpeak terrible things in righteouſneſs unto us, becauſe of our ſins; and really if he ſpeak to us out of Chriſt, it will be dreadful. Therefore, 3. You may come to hear what God ſays to Chriſt, and this is the greateſt moment of all. To hear what miniſters ſay to the congregation, is a little thing; to hear what God ſays to you, is a great thing; but to hear what God ſays to Chriſt, is one of the greateſt things that can be heard. God in his word ſpeaks to the ſons of men, and perhaps you have noticed that. But he ſpeaks alſo to the Son of God, to his eternal Son; and perhaps that is what you have little noticed to this day. Why, what ſays he to Chriſt? Is it any thing that we the people are concerned with? Yes, what he ſays to Chriſt is of the greateſt concern to us, and it is this, I will give thee for a covenant of the people. O, might the great and eternal Father ſay to his great and eternal Son, who is one God with him and the eternal Spirit, behold there is a company of people meeting in Dunfermline about a communion-table, with a view to the ſealing of the covenant; but their work will be to little purpoſe, if they view not THEE, my beloved Son, to be the ſpring, the ſpirit, the life, the all of the covenant: their covenant will be but a poor bargain without THEE; and therefore, Behold, I will give THEE for a covenant of the people! O a ſweet ſaying as ever was ſaid in the world! and no wonder, for it is a part of a ſermon whereof God himſelf is the Preacher, and Chriſt is the text, and the Spirit is the voice

* This was an Action-Sermon, preached immediately before the Celebration of the Lord's Supper, at Dunfermline, Auguſt 19. 1722. To which is annexed, The Subſtance of ſome Diſcourſes, after the Sacrament, upon the ſame Subject. This piece has already undergone Six Editions.

voice that conveys it. If we had much of this Spirit with us, we might see how sweetly this glorious Preacher handles this wonderful text, from the beginning of the chapter: O how sweetly does he speak of him in the first four verses! and how sweetly does he speak to him from the fifth verse and downward!

1. How sweetly does he speak of him? Behold my servant whom I uphold, mine elect in whom my soul delighteth, etc. That Christ is the subject here treated of, you need not question, if you compare this first verse with Mat. 12. 18. where Christ expressly applies it to himself: and now, when the Father here speaks of Christ, every word is a word of commendation; he commends him for a good servant in his mediatory work, Behold my servant, whom I uphold; mine elect, in whom my soul delighteth: He commends him for a well-qualified Saviour, I have put my spirit upon him; and he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles: He commends him for a meek Saviour; He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street, ver. 2.: He commends him for a tender-hearted Saviour; A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench; he shall bring forth judgment unto truth, ver. 3.: He commends him for an able Saviour, that will go through with his work, maugre all impediments; He shall not fail, nor be discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth, ver. 4.; and the isles shall wait for his law; the isle of Britain not excepted, and not forgetting Scotland in the north-end it.

2. How sweetly does he speak to him from ver. 5, 6. And here notice both the divine preface to this part of the sermon, and then the divine discourse. 1. The preface, shewing the glorious dignity of the Preacher, ver. 5. Thus saith the Lord. Here the glorious JEHOVAH is commending himself, as it well becomes him, and none but him to do. Who is it that is speaking? It is the Lord, the great Lord of heaven, earth, and mankind: it is the Lord of all the heavens that is speaking; he that spread forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it: it is the Lord of all mankind that is speaking; he that gives breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that dwell therein.—Why then, he is the God that hath authority to make the following covenant with the Messiah, and give a commission to him. Therefore, 2. Notice the divine discourse itself, and what he says to Christ, ver. 6. I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, etc. He had spoken sweetly of him, and here he speaks as sweetly to him; and in this speech is opened up to us the great mystery of the covenant of redemption betwixt the Father and the Son from eternity; and the opening thereof in time makes it a covenant of grace to us. And here we may see several parts of the indenture he binds and obliges himself unto.

The first piece of the indenture is, I have called thee in righteousness. Here is the vocation; he takes not this office of being Mediator upon him, without being called thereto; and God called him thereto in righteousness: he was rightly called; for the right of redemption fell into his hand: he was rightly called; for he was able for the work, and fit for it: he was rightly called; for he was willing to the work, and voluntarily offered himself, Lo, I come; — I delight to do thy will, O my God: He was rightly called; for as God did him no wrong, so he did himself right, and provided for the glory of all his perfections in this way.

The second piece of the indenture is, I will hold thine hand; that is another thing he says to him: go, says he, and I will hold thee by the hand all the way; I will bear the expences of that hard service: Christ goes this warfare on God's charges; he bears equal burden in the work of our redemption. We misplace our love, if we love not the Father as well as the Son; the three glorious persons of the adorable Trinity had all one will to it, and they go hand in hand about it; I will hold thine hand.

The third piece of the indenture, or the other thing he says to Christ, is, I will keep thee; I, says the great JEHOVAH to the God-man Mediator, I will keep thee, when the sins of an elect world shall all meet upon thee; when the curses of the law, the terrour of justice, the vengeance of heaven, and the fury of earth shall invade and incompass thee, I will keep and preserve thee, and make all these red-seas to divide and make way for thee to pass through triumphantly.

The fourth piece of the indenture is in the words of our text, and it is one of the great and glorious things he says to Christ; I will give thee for a covenant of the people, a light to the Gentiles, etc. Whatever be their malady, I will give thee to be a suitable remedy. Have they broken covenant? I will give thee to be a better covenant. But what of that, while they are ignorant? Why then, I will give thee for a light to the Gentiles. But what though they have light, if they have not sight too? for a blind man hath no benefit of the sun; why then, I will give thee to open the blind eyes. But what though they have both light and sight, if they be still in a dark prison, bound and fettered there? Why, I will give thee for this end, To bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison-house. O but these are sweet promises made to Christ, and in him to us; and the leading one, that comprehends the rest, is in these words, I will give thee for a covenant of the people.—Where, without critical division, you may notice these two things. 1. The gracious designation and title that Christ bears, a covenant of the people. 2. His glorious ordinance and appointment thereto, I will give thee for that end.

1. The glorious designation and title of honour that he bears; he is called, a covenant of the people: and here he is described by his relation to the covenant, and by his relation to us by this means. His relation to the covenant is such, that he is designed, the Covenant itself; he is the head and heart of the covenant; he is the foundation and cape-stone of the covenant; the bottom and top of the covenant; the Alpha and Omega of the covenant; the first and the last letter of the covenant; the all in all of the covenant. The first covenant-head brake and fell; and he falling, all his seed fell. The second covenant-head stands; and he standing, all his seed stand in him; My covenant shall stand fast in him.—Again, his relation to us by this means. To whom is he a covenant? Even a covenant of the people, of the Gentiles. O good news to us poor Gentiles!

2. His

2. His glorious ordination and appointment unto this buſineſs; I will give thee: and here alſo every word hath ſome glory in it. Here is the glorious perſon ordaining him, in the pronoun I; I JEHOVAH do it: here is the glorious perſon ordained, in the pronoun THEE; I will give THEE: here is the glorious manner of the ordination, it is by way of free and gratuitous gift; I will GIVE thee: and here is the glorious reaſon and moving cauſe of the whole, even the ſovereign will of God; I WILL give thee. But the further explication of theſe particulars, I refer to the proſecution of the doctrine.

OBSERV. That by divine ordination, Chriſt is the covenant of the people.

The only ſcripture I name for the confirmation, is Iſa. xlix. 8. Thus ſaith the Lord, in an acceptable time have I heard thee: and in a day of ſalvation have I helped thee: and I will preſerve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to eſtabliſh the earth, to cauſe to inherit the deſolate heritages. Where you ſee the viſion is doubled, becauſe it is true.

The method I would endeavour, through grace, to follow, is,

I. To offer ſome remarks concerning the covenant in general.
II. Shew how Chriſt is the covenant, and in what reſpects he bears that name.
III. Enquire for whoſe benefit he is ſo; and thus ſhew that he is the covenant of the people.
IV. By whoſe authority he is ſo; and here ſpeak of his divine ordination, and being given of God for that end.
V. Offer ſome reaſons of the doctrine, why he is given to be a covenant, and why a covenant of the people.
VI. Draw ſome inferences for application.

I. The firſt thing is, To offer ſome remarks concerning the covenant in general; and I confine them to theſe four, which are imported in the text and doctrine.

1. The firſt remarkable thing imported in the text, is, 'That the covenant of works is broken, and 'cannot ſave us; and we are broken, and cannot 'ſave ourſelves.' There was a covenant of works made with the firſt Adam and his ſeed, before the fall; and therein God was upon theſe terms with man, Do, and Live; and if you do not, you ſhall die. In this law of works, there was a precept, and a ſanction. The precept is, Do this; that is, perform perfect and perſonal obedience: the ſanction is, If thou do not, thou ſhalt die; importing, that the reward of obedience was eternal life; The man that doth theſe things, ſhall live in them: and that the puniſhment of diſobedience was eternal death; The ſoul that ſinneth ſhall die, Gen. ii. 17. Now, as by the fall of mankind, the precept of doing is broken, and the penalty of dying is incurred, and eternal life forfeited; ſo our ſalvation is impoſſible without a perfect righteouſneſs; a righteouſneſs of obedience, performing the precept of the law, and ſo intitling to life; a righteouſneſs to ſatisfaction, undergoing the penalty of the law, and ſo delivering from death. The former is impoſſible for us; for, we are dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, and ſo can never perform any duty acceptable to God, far leſs complete and perfect obedience. The latter is impoſſible; for, being both finite and ſinful creatures, we can never give infinite and ſinleſs ſatisfaction; and ſo we are broken and loſt by the breach of this covenant. There are four things upon this particular, that I preſume, you all profeſs to know; namely, 1. The tenor of the covenant of works, 'That, when God had created man, 'he entered into a covenant of life, or works, 'with him, upon condition of perfect obedi-'ence, forbidding him to eat of the tree of 'knowledge of good and evil, upon the pain 'of death.' 2. The breach of this covenant, 'That our firſt parents, being left to the free-'dom of their own will, fell from the eſtate 'wherein they were created, by ſinning a-'gainſt God,' and particularly, 'by eating the 'forbidden fruit.' 3. Our concern in this original apoſtaſy and fall in Adam,' That the co-'venant being made with him, not only for 'himſelf, but for his poſterity, all mankind 'deſcending from him by ordinary generation, 'ſinned in him, and fell with him, in his firſt 'trangreſſion: For by one man ſin entered into the 'world, and death by ſin; and ſo death paſſed upon 'all men, for that all have ſinned, or, in whom 'all have ſinned.' 4. The fatal, woful effects of this fall and breach of the covenant of works; namely, 'That by this means we have fallen 'into a ſtate of ſin and miſery; that our ſtate 'is a ſinful ſtate, we being guilty of Adam's 'firſt ſin, wanting original righteouſneſs, and 'our whole nature being corrupted, whence 'proceeds all our actual ſin; and that our 'ſtate is a miſerable ſtate, having loſt commu-'nion with God, being under his wrath and 'curſe, liable to all the miſeries of this life, to 'death itſelf, and the pains of hell for ever. 'Why? The wages of ſin is death, and we are 'children of wrath; and, curſed is every one that 'continueth not in all things written in the book of the 'law, to do them.' It may be, it is long ſince ye knew theſe things in your catechiſms: but O, how long is it ſince you believed them? or, do you believe them yet? Have you ſeen your fall in Adam, and your woful, ſinful, miſerable ſtate by nature, through the breach of the covenant of works? If you were convinced of this, ſurely the news of another covenant would be welcome to you. But then,

2. The ſecond remarkable thing, imported in the text, is, 'That there is a covenant of grace 'provided, for the recovery of ſome, by Jeſus 'Chriſt, from a ſtate of ſin and death to a ſtate 'of righteouſneſs and eternal life;' or, you may take it thus, 'God having out of his 'mere good pleaſure, from all eternity, elect-'ed ſome to everlaſting life, did enter into a 'covenant of grace, to deliver them out of the 'eſtate of ſin and miſery, and to bring them 'into an eſtate of ſalvation by a Redeemer.' Hence ſuch ſcriptural expreſſions as theſe, By grace ye are ſaved;—not by works of righteouſneſs that we have done;—for if there had been a law, [namely, of works] which could have given life, verily righteouſneſs ſhould have been by the law, Gal. iii. 21. Now, this covenant of grace may be conſidered, either in its original tranſaction from eternity, or in its actual manifeſtation in time.

(1.) Conſider it in its original tranſaction from eternity betwixt the Father and the Son. God having in his eternal decree of permitting the fall, foreſeen the ruin of mankind by the breach and violation of the covenant of works; gra-graciously purposed not to proceed against all mankind, according to the demerit of their transgression, in the execution of that death upon them which that covenant threatened; and therefore a council of peace is called from eternity, and the proposal made concerning the shewing mercy to an elect number, in a way that should be to the honour and glory of God's holiness, which says, They must do perfectly; and of God's justice, which says, They must die eternally. Well, none in all the creation of men and angels were able to satisfy this proposal: then says Christ, Lo, I come, Psal. xl. 8. I offer myself to be their Surety, to give a perfect obedience to the law, which was the condition of the covenant of works, and to give infinite satisfaction to offended justice, in answer to the penalty incurred through the breach and violation of that covenant. Lo, I come; since the law cannot be fulfilled without doing, nor justice satisfied without doing, lo, I come to do both: and seeing this undertaking must be accomplished by one, who is both finite, that he may die; and infinite, that he may conquer death and wrath; I offer to do it in their nature, and by an unspeakable mystery to become flesh; Lo, I come; let the impannelled criminal go free. The Father being infinitely well-pleased with this consent, encourages his eternal Son, enters into a covenant with him, calls him, qualifies him, promises to uphold him in the whole work, and to give him for a covenant of the people; and that, for making his soul an offering for sin, he should see his seed, and see the travel of his soul, and be satisfied, Isa. liii. 11. This is called by many, The covenant of redemption; not that it is another covenant of grace, but I take it as another consideration of the same covenant. It was made with Christ as the second Adam, and in him with all the elect as his seed. As it is made with Christ, it is properly conditional to him; the condition being perfect obedience, and complete satisfaction; but as made with the elect in him, it is absolute; consisting of free and absolute promises to them. But,

(2.) Consider it in its actual manifestation in time: and here, omitting what might be said of the legal administration of it under the Old Testament, and the evangelical administration under the New, I shall only say, That as the transaction betwixt the Father and the Son from eternity, is the fountain, so this manifestation of it in time is the opening of the fountain; and the grace of God is manifested in this covenant of grace several ways. 1. In that he freely provides a Saviour for lost sinners, shewing, by the gospel, that he hath made this provision. 2. In that he freely offers to sinners a Mediator, and life and salvation in him. 3. In that he not only calls and commands them to come to him by faith, as the means to interest them in him, and to believe in him for salvation: but, 4. Promises his holy Spirit to work in them that faith, and all other saving graces. And though this, and all the other absolute promises of the covenant shall be certainly accomplished, and actually applied to the elect only; yet, in the eternal dispensation of the gospel, and administration of the covenant, they are revealed and exhibited in a general indefinite way and manner, with an universal offer and command to all and every one that hear this gospel, to plead them, and lay hold upon them; that in this way the hearers of the gospel may be left inexcusable that embrace it not; and that the elect may be gathered in, made to believe, and come under the bond of the covenant.

3. The third remarkable thing, imported in the text, is, 'That there is an oneness and iden- 'tity betwixt the covenant of grace, as made 'with Christ, and as made with us in him; both 'are one and the same covenant:' for here the Father is contracting with the Son, I will give thee for a covenant of the people; therefore, that with the Son and with the people belong to one and the same covenant: with respect to Christ, it had its constitution from eternity; with respect to us, it hath its application in time: on this account it is called, The grace given us in Christ before the world began, 2 Tim. i. 9. And eternal life, which God that cannot lie promised before the world began, Tit. i. 2. As the first Adam was our public federal head, and he and we included in one and the same covenant of works; so Christ, the second Adam, is our public head, and the covenant of grace with him and us, is the same covenant, though he alone is the Head, Surety, and Mediator, to whom some promises and precepts are peculiar: however, he being the covenant of the people, all things promised unto, or to be performed by the people, are secured in the contract with Christ; all the condition of life to be performed is found in him; yea, he undertakes, in that covenant, the removal of all obstructions and impediments from within that would hinder their attainment of covenant-mercy, being for a light to the Gentiles, to take away the inward blindness that is found in them; so that, not only all necessaries for redemption, but also necessaries for the powerful and effectual application of that redemption, are first promised in the covenant to him, and then to us in him, upon his fulfilling the condition of perfect obedience. Is justification promised? It is first to him, and then to us in him, Isa. liii. 11. By his knowledge, [or, by the knowledge of him,] shall my righteous servant justify many. Is sanctification and the Spirit promised? It is first to him, and then to us in him; verse first of this chapter, I will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. Is glorification promised? It is first to him, and then to us in him; Rom. 8. 17. If children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ.—He and the people are all in one and the same covenant: he, as the glorious Head, Surety, and Representative, having all fulness in him, both of grace and glory, for our use and behoof; and we, as members of that body whereof he is the head, and in a way of union to him by faith; for, all the promises, not only some, but all the promises of God are in him, Yea; and in him, Amen; twice in him, importing, That as the covenant of grace, which is the covenant of promise, is made jointly with him and us; so in the constitution of the covenant, the promises are all made to him; and in the application of it, they are made to us in him: primarily, and immediately, they are made to him; secondarily, and mediately, to us in him.

4. Hence the fourth thing remarkable, imported in the text, is, 'Christ is the centre, in 'whom all the lines of the covenant do meet;' and so by an usual figure, of the part for the whole, whole, he bears the name of the whole covenant; I will give him for a covenant of the people: the covenant of grace is said not only to be made with him, but he himself is the covenant. And this leads me to

II. The second thing, To shew how Christ is the covenant, and in what respects he bears that name?

We reply, 1. Christ is the covenant of the people radically and fundamentally, being the root, basis, and foundation upon which the covenant of grace stands; the alone foundation; Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ, 1 Cor. iii. 11. He is the sure foundation that God hath laid in Zion, Isa. xxviii. 16. The covenant of works, being built upon something in man, it was not sure work, and so the fabric tumbled down: but the covenant of grace and mercy is built upon a never-failing foundation; it is sure work to eternity; and therefore says God, Mercy shall be built up for ever: why? I have made a covenant with my chosen. Christ is the ancient and eternal foundation of the covenant; no other foundation is laid in Zion in time, but that which was laid in the counsel of peace from eternity. God hath promised nothing to us in time, but what he purposed and promised in Christ from eternity; He has chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, Eph. i. 4. and promised eternal life in him before the world began. He is the foundation of all the blessings and privileges of the covenant, Being made of God unto us wisdom, and righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. He is the foundation of all the promises, graces, and comforts of the covenant. This were a large field, but I go on.

2. Christ is the covenant relatively, in respect of the relations he comes under to it: we find in scripture, that he is called the Mediator of the covenant, Heb. ix. 15. Why? he brings God and man, that were at variance, to meet amicably: by the price of his blood, he brings God to us; and by the power of his Spirit, he brings us to God, and makes up the difference. He is called the Testator of the covenant, Heb. ix. 16. Where a testament is, there is the death of the Testator. He hath signed all the articles of it with his own blood, and so confirmed it, and made it a testament.—He is called the Messenger of the covenant, Mal. iii. 1. When God would communicate his mind to us, it is in Christ; when we would communicate our mind to God, it is in Christ: whatever message God hath to us, or we to him, Christ bears it, and makes the travel, be the journey never so dangerous; For this is he that came by water and blood, 1 John v. 6. He came by sea, by a sea of water for our sanctification; For if he wash us not, we have no part in him; and by a sea of blood for our justification; for, Without shedding of blood there is no remission: A dangerous voyage for bearing the message.—He is called the witness of the covenant, Isa. lv. 5. I will give him for a witness of the people: He is the true and faithful witness. As he was an eye and ear-witness to the whole transaction of the covenant from eternity; so he sets his seal to the articles of it in time, and bears witness by his word, by his blood, by his Spirit. This he does effectually, sometimes in the hearts of his people, when he conquers all their unbelieving doubts and jealousies of his word, and suspicions of his love, or of his Father's kindness.—He is called the Surety of the covenant, Heb. vii. 22. He is the Surety both for debt and duty: Surety for debt; the law demanded of us a debt of infinite suffering, the just demerit of our sins, which, if laid upon us, would sink us for ever; for, The wages of sin is death. And also it demanded a debt of perfect obedience and universal holiness and righteousness. Now, we are insolvent debtors, drowned in debt, and unable to pay a farthing; and unless there be a Surety for us, we cannot escape the prison of hell, and the everlasting wrath of the omnipotent God. Behold the Surety steps in, even in this hopeless state we are fallen into, pays the debt to the least farthing, and puts his name in our bond: Was made under the law, to redeem those that were under the law. And then he is Surety for duty, promising to put his Spirit within us, and cause us to walk in his statutes. He is Surety for both sides of the covenant; Surety that all that God hath said and promised shall be accomplished; and Surety that all that we are obliged to do, shall be done for us, and in us. O sweet and gracious covenant!—In a word, he is the Servant of the covenant, Behold my Servant whom I uphold, Isa. xlii. 1. Wist ye not, says he to his parents that were seeking him, that I must be about my Father's business? What business? What service? The hardest service that ever was, even to satisfy justice, to fulfil the law, to conquer Satan, to purchase heaven, to save an elect world, to endure the contradiction of sinners against himself, in accomplishing this service.—He is the Performer of the covenant; yea, the Performance itself. Christ, standing in all these relations to the covenant, may well be called the covenant of the people.

3. Christ is the covenant substantially, in respect of his being the very matter of the covenant; the principal part of it, the principal promise of it. He is the substance of all the promises, the first thing promised; and whatever is promised else, is for his sake. He is the promised seed spoken of to Adam and Eve, to Abraham, to David, Gen. iii. 15. Gen. xxii. 18. Luke i. 32, 33. He is the substance of the prophecies, To him gave all the prophets witness, Acts x. 43. He is the substance of all the shadows and Old Testament types: he is the true brazen serpent, that heals diseased souls; the true manna and bread of life; the true sacrifice and paschal lamb, whose blood, being sprinkled on the door-posts of the soul, saves from the destroying-angel: of all the types he is the Antitype, the substance of the whole Bible, and of all the scriptures, These are they that testify of me. It is a strange text, that a gospel-minister cannot find Christ in, since the whole scriptures testify of him; as if it said nothing else but Christ, Christ.—Thus he is the covenant substantially. Again,

4. Christ is the covenant eminently; in point of eminency, ornament, and excellency. He is the very ornament of the covenant, the excellency and sweetness of it; he is the blessing of all blessings of the covenant, the mercy of all the mercies; the soul of all the privileges of the covenant: no blessing of the covenant is a blessing without him, for all blessings come with him; How shall he not with him freely give us all things? Rom. viii. 32. The covenant is nothing without Christ, the blessings of it are nothing without Christ; he is the sweetness of all all the blessings of the covenant, the marrow of all the mercies of the covenant, and the fulness of all the promises of the covenant: they are all empty without Christ, for he is all in all. And therefore, O empty ordinances, without Christ; O empty sacraments, if Christ be not there; O empty ministers, if Christ be not with them; yea, O empty heaven, if Christ be not there; empty enjoyments, empty comforts without Christ.

5. Christ is the covenant meritoriously, and in point of acquisition and procurement. He does all that is necessary for the procuring the blessings of the covenant: his righteousness is the great condition of the covenant, the alone condition of it, properly so called; it is the cause, the procuring cause of all covenant-blessings. All that is promised to Christ or to us, is upon the account of his obedience; Isa. liii. 10, 11, 12. By the obedience of one shall many be made righteous, not by the obedience of any man for himself, Rom. v. 19. He is the procurer of justification, Rom. v. 18.; the procurer of remission of sin, Rom. iii. 24.; the procurer of peace, Isa. liii. 5.; yea, the sum of it, for, he is our peace; the procurer of our access to God, and communion with him; all that are afar off are made nigh, only by the blood of Christ; the procurer of sanctifying grace, Isa. liii. 10. 1 Cor. i. 30. and of eternal salvation: his death is the purchase of the heavenly inheritance: and so he is the covenant meritoriously, in procuring all the blessings thereof.

6. Christ is the covenant efficaciously, or efficiently: as he procures all by the price of his blood, so he applies all by the power of his Spirit. By this powerful Spirit of his in the efficiency of his application, by the means of the law, he discovers to men their sad condition, while under a covenant of works; by the means of the gospel, he discovers the excellencies of the covenant of grace, and also their claim to it, in and by the indefinite general dispensation of the gospel, and the promise of the covenant; so that whoever will, may come and put in for a share. But this is not all; Christ, in his efficiency, does persuade and enable the poor soul to take hold of this covenant, of Christ himself, as the ALL of the covenant, and that with particular application to itself, for its own relief; and not only to accept, but to trust to it for all grace and life, and that upon the warrant of God's word of grace, renouncing all other ways of salvation, and resting only upon this, 1 Tim. i. 15. Acts xvi. 6. Yea, after the person is brought within the covenant, Christ is the great performer of all covenant-duties, he performs all our works in us, Isa. xxvi. 12. We are to present no duty of our own to God for acceptance, or in order to obtain life and salvation by it; but to present him with Christ, he being the covenant to perform all for us and in us, which we are obliged to. In a word, he is engaged as the covenant of the people, to be all, and do all; to procure all, and to see all made effectual that concerns grace and glory: I will give him for a covenant of the people, says the Lord. I will not enter into covenant, or deal with them in an immediate way, as with the first Adam, but I will take a surer course, I will give thee for that end; thou shalt undertake all the matter therein; I will look to thee for the performance thereof. Man hath broken covenant; I will not trust him again; but thou shalt be the covenant; the promise of life shall be made only in thee, and the condition of life shall be found only in thee.—Thus he is the covenant.

III. The third thing was, to shew, For whose benefit he is a covenant; and so to shew that he is the covenant of the people. Men and women have a way of excluding themselves by unbelief; but I am sure, my text will exclude none this day, that are here, from a right to accept of this covenant, unless it be the devil himself. He indeed, and all the fallen angels, are excluded; and no doubt he is come here among us this day, to tempt people to exclude themselves, because he himself is excluded. But here is a foundation of faith for all the people that hear this gospel; Christ is the covenant of the people, insomuch that whosoever of all the people will subscribe to this covenant, and go in to it by faith, shall have the everlasting benefit of it.

QUEST. Why, say you, I am, it may be, none of the people here meant, none of the elect whose names are in that covenant and contract, and therefore my subscribing of it may be in vain. Answ. For the clearing of this, That Christ is the covenant of the people, you would know and remember, That there are two copies of this covenant; or rather, if we may so express it, two writs of this charter, the one is an original, written in heaven; and the other an extract, written in this Bible. 1. I say, as to the original, it is written in heaven, and hath all the names of the church invisible inrolled in it, Heb. xii. 23. They are called the church of the first-born that are written in heaven. In this writing are the names of all the elect, of all that ever were, are, or shall be actually taken within the bond of the covenant; and these are they of whom it is said, They are chosen in Christ before the foundation of the world, Eph. i. 4. And again, Whom he did predestinate, them he also called, Rom. viii. 30. And again, All that the Father hath given me, shall come to me; and, All that were ordained to eternal life, believed: And of them, Christ says, I lay down my life for my sheep. This original draught of the covenant, is a writ locked up in the cabinet of God's secret purpose; and secret things belong not to us, but the things that are revealed; therefore, 2. There is an extract of this original writ, and this extract is written in the Bible, which is the book of the covenant: this you have among your hands, and this copy of the covenant is sent open to you all to sign and subscribe, by giving faith's assent and consent to the covenant, or closing with Christ, the covenant of the people, as he is offered in the gospel. Now, though this extract be a true copy, answering exactly to the original; yet, for rendering all inexcusable, to whom these presents are sent, if they do not subscribe, and for gathering in all the elect, this fair extract is directed to all, and every one of you, giving you full and sufficient warrant to sign and subscribe for yourselves; for you cannot possibly see your names in the original, till once you have signified your consent, by subscription, to the copy that is among your hands, which is here let down to the earth, to see how you please it, this day. And if you sign the extract, as it is sent to you, then you may lay claim to the original, and see your name there, there, which alone is the privilege of these that make the extract their own by signing it; for the secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will shew them his covenant. He shews them sometimes their name in the original writ of the covenant. It is the settled order of heaven, that although some, who, by faith, subscribe the extracted copy, are kept in the dark about their names being in the original; yet none shall see their names there, but these who subscribe their names here.

QUEST. But, for what purpose serves my putting my name to the foot of a bond, if my name be not in the bond itself? Why, then read the direction of this gospel-covenant, and see if your names be there, and answer to your names; for I shall endeavour to be as practical, as I go along, as possible, that I may have the less to do in the application. For whose benefit then is he thus the covenant? Why, it is even for the advantage of these whose names are here set down; and though they may not here find their particular names, John, James, Mary, Martha, yet their general names; yea, both their more general and more special names, are here.

1. Their more general name is, the people; he is the covenant of the people; and here all sinners of mankind, who hear of Christ, have a claim to put in for a share in him, seeing the covenant is directed to them; whosoever they be that hear this gospel, all saving benefits are preached to them by Jesus Christ, according to the ministerial commission, saying, To you is the word of this salvation sent, Acts xiii. 26. And in this sense the apostle says, Titus ii. 11. The grace of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men: or, as it may be rendered, as you see it in the margin of some of your Bibles, The grace of God, that bringeth salvation to all men, hath appeared. Let them straiten the gospel-offer who will, they do it at their peril; our commission is wide and full, insomuch that this covenant is directed to all to whom these presents may come. If this be your general name, that you are one of the people, be what you will otherwise, then you are concerned to answer to your name, and put in for a share of the grace of this covenant, by subscribing and saying Amen to it. Why, say you, that is a general name indeed; I dare not deny but that is my general name; then man, woman, do not put that covenant from you. But, say you, Is there no more special name of the people, whose covenant he is? Yea,

2. Their more special name is here set down in black and white; for, who the people are, what people in a special manner is here meant, is cleared in the following words, A light to the Gentiles, to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness, out of the prison-house. And here you will find both the name and surname of the people intended; and I believe your names and surnames, that hear me, will be found in it. 1. The name is Gentile. 2. The surname is Gentile, dark and blind; Gentile, bound and imprisoned,

(1.) I say, the name of the people, whose covenant he is, is Gentiles; and, I suppose, this is the name of all that hear me, if there be not Jews here; if I thought there were any, I would drop some promise of Christ to, and concerning them, that might draw them to him also, if the Lord would put forth power with it. However it is to you, Gentiles, that I am speaking; and, O may I venture to say with Paul this day, To me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, to preach among you, Gentiles, the unsearchable riches of Christ! This is a part of the mystery of godliness Christ preached to the Gentiles, 1 Tim. iii. 16. It was a mystery to the Jews and primitive Christians, when Christ was first given by a preached gospel to the Gentiles, Acts ix. 17, 18. Why? the Gentiles were called the uncircumcision, Eph. ii. 11.; being abominable outcasts, whose entering into the temple, was enough to pollute it: but now the gospel declares, God will justify the uncircumcision by faith. The Gentiles were called aliens without God, without Christ, without hope; aliens from the common-wealth of Israel, and strangers to the covenant of promise, Eph. ii. 12. But now the covenant of promise is given and exhibited to the people that were aliens. Gentiles were called dogs; It is not meet to take the childrens bread and cast it to dogs, says Christ to the woman of Canaan, one of the posterity, it seems, of these accursed nations, that were devoted by that word, Gen. ix. 25. Cursed be Canaan: and indeed the Gentiles and Canaanites, as they were contemned by the Jews, and looked upon as dogs; so in comparison of the house of Israel, who were so much blessed, dignified, and privileged of old, Christ seems here to allow it, and assert that they were cursed, that they were dogs. But now the tables are turned, the Gentiles are called; and, in this woman, the Lord gives an instance of what mercy was in reserve for these dogs: and we Gentiles may plead the same privilege, at least, with that woman of Canaan, Truth, Lord, yet the dogs eat of the crumbs that fall from their masters table. The door of Bethlehem, the house of bread, is open, Acts xiv. 27. God hath opened the door of faith to the Gentiles, even to dogs: the door of the covenant is open, and we dare not shut the door upon any dog in all this house; and therefore, as we use to say, At open doors dogs come in; allow me in this homely comparison; for, as all the Gentiles, so all the wicked are called dogs; Rev. xxii. 15. Without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters. But the door being open to all sinners by this gospel, you may come to Christ for salvation, as freely as a dog will come in at an open door; yea, more freely and boldly; for dogs many times come in uncalled, and therefore we beat them out again; but here is both a call to come, and a promise of welcome; Whosoever will, let him come; and him that cometh, I will in no wise cast out. Well, I say, the Gentiles are called dogs, and if that be a part of your name, man, woman, answer to your name, and take with your name, and take the blessing that is offered to you by name. If you have no better name than that of a dog, come with that name, and set it down at the foot of the contract, by subscribing your consent to have Christ to be your covenant; and though it be a base name, he will not refuse to take in your subscription. In a word, the Gentiles are called heathens, Gal. iii. 8. The scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed. Good news to heathens and pagans, such as we in our forefathers were; and this is the gospel indeed, that was preached to Abraham long ago: In thee ſhall all nations be bleſſed; in THEE, what THEE? the ſame THEE that is in our text, which preacheth the ſame goſpel alſo; I will give THEE for a covenant of the people; even the people that are called Gentiles, and heathens, uncircumciſion, aliens, and dogs. Well, there is the name of the people whoſe covenant he is, they are Gentiles.

(2.) The ſirname of the people is Gentiles, dark and blind; Gentiles bound and impriſoned: and ſee if the ſirname be not yours, Sirs, as well as the name. There are eſpecially two ſirnames here that the people have. The firſt ſirname is dark and blind; this is imported in theſe words, A light to the Gentiles, to open blind eyes. Well, is this your ſirname? Are you darkneſs itſelf in the abſtract? Are you in the darkneſs of ignorance, darkneſs of error, in the darkneſs of corruption, in the darkneſs of confuſion, in the darkneſs of deſertion, in the darkneſs of deluſion? O! here is a brave covenant for you to ſign: It is a covenant of light; for he that is the covenant of the people, is the light of the Gentiles. But all the light in the world, without ſight, will be uncomfortable; and therefore, is another part of your ſirname blindneſs as well as darkneſs? Have you not only ſore eyes, and ſee ill, but are you blind, and ſee none at all? Are you blind with reſpect to ſin, and cannot ſee it in its power and guilt? Blind with reſpect to duty, and cannot ſee what to do? Blind with reſpect to God, and cannot ſee him in his beauty and excellency? Blind with reſpect to Chriſt, and cannot ſee him in his glory, fulneſs, and righteouſneſs? Blind with reſpect to ordinances, and cannot ſee the power and glory of God in the ſanctuary? Blind with reſpect to providence, and cannot diſcern the ſigns of the times? Blind with reſpect to your intereſt in Chriſt, and cannot ſee whether that be ſecured or not? Blind with reſpect to your warrant to intermeddle with Chriſt and his inſtitutions? Blind with reſpect to all ſpiritual and eternal things? Why, this covenant of the people is deſigned to open the blind eyes: And if darkneſs and blindneſs be the ſirname of the people, for whoſe benefit Chriſt is the covenant, and if that be your ſirname alſo, why then there is room at the foot of this covenant, to ſet down your name and ſirname both. This covenant of the people is a covenant of light, to the people that are dark; and a covenant of ſight, to the people that are blind. Let all them that find this to be their ſirname, ſubſcribe to this covenant, and ſay, I am one of the dark people, and I come for light; I am one of the blind people, and I come for ſight: there is my name, Lord; let it be recorded among the dark, blind people of which Chriſt is the covenant.—Again, the ſecond ſirname of the people, is bound and impriſoned: This is imported in theſe words, To bring out the priſoners from the priſon, and them that ſit in darkneſs out of the priſon-houſe. Now, whatever priſon you are in, Sirs, if your ſirname be a bound priſoner, our text ſpeaks to you. Are you in the priſon of ſin, a bond-ſlave and a ſervant unto luſts? Are you in the priſon of Satan, in the devil's priſon, led captive by him at his pleaſure? Are you in the priſon of the law, a debtor to do the whole law, and a debtor to bear the whole curſe of it? Are you in the priſon of carnality, clogged with things of this world? Are you in the priſon of a black league with death, and covenant with hell? Are you in the priſon of a natural ſtate, as a child of diſobedience, and a child of wrath? Are you in the priſon of temptations, either from without, or within, filled with dreadful ſuggeſtions, and blaſphemous injections? Are you in the priſon of affliction, either upon ſoul or body, ſtate or family? Are you in the priſon of doubts and fears and deſpondency, with your ſoul caſt down within you? Are you in the priſon of unbelief, concluded under it, ſo as you cannot for your life get an act of faith elicite? Are you in the priſon of wretched careleſneſs, unconcernedneſs, and indifferency, not caring whether you be looſed and delivered out of priſon or not? Are you in the priſon of atheiſm, and cannot believe a God, a Chriſt, a heaven, or hell? Are you in the priſon of death, and in bondage through fear of death? Or, are you in the priſon of ſecurity, fearing nothing, but ſleeping in the arms of the devil? What priſon-houſe are you in, man? Anſwer to your name; priſoner in ſuch a priſon-houſe that I have named. Is the door of the priſon-houſe bolted and barred that you cannot get out, and the heavy chains and fetters of hell about you, ſo as you cannot looſe them any more than you can unhinge the axle-tree of the univerſe? Behold, this covenant of the people is a covenant of liberty for the people that are in priſon. If I have not named the priſon, or the chamber of the priſon-houſe you are in, name it yourſelf, and ſay, I am priſoner in ſuch a priſon-houſe; I have been ſo long and ſo long in ſuch a dark priſon, and lo, I ſet down my name, to wit, a bound priſoner, conſenting to be liberate by the Son of God, and conſenting that he would work the conſent himſelf, and do all that concerns my liberty. Why, man, down with your name that ſame way; and if you be not ſet at liberty in God's own time and way, you will be the firſt that ever gave in a ſubſcription, and was not received: nay, marked and recorded it ſhall be; for the covenant ſpeaks to you by name and ſirname, ſaying, Go forth, ye priſoners of hope: The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, for he hath anointed me to preach and proclaim liberty to the captives. This covenant of the people then is drawn up already, and ſigned. See who hath ſigned it, ver. 8. I am the LORD, that is my name. He hath ſigned it by a name, by which he is known in heaven and earth, even JEHOVAH; I am JEHOVAH, I am the LORD, that is my name. O glorious name ſubſcribing this bond! That is his name; what is yours? Why, can you ſay, I am one of the people they call Gentiles? I am a dark, blind, bound priſoner; that is my name and ſirname both. Yea, be your name as vile and black as hell, yet down with it in capital letters; for the infinitely fair name of the firſt ſubſcriber will ſet it off; his name will anſwer for all the defects and deformities of yours: and if you wait till you be in a better condition, and have a better name to ſign with, you will wait till the day of judgment, and in the mean time inevitably periſh at death; and all the money of your terms, conditions, and good qualifications, which you will bring as price in your hands, will periſh with you. Nay, you have nothing to do in this covenant, but bleſs God that brought it to your hand, and ſign it with your heart. Chriſt hath a commiſſion from his his Father, and we in his name, to take in the ſubſcriptions of all the people, whoſe name and ſirname I have mentioned; and I hope I have not miſſed any one here.—Thus you ſee who the people are, for whoſe benefit he is the covenant; and that he is well deſigned the covenant of the people, ſeeing all the people here named have a right of acceſs to the covenant, a warrant to ſeal and ſubſcribe to it; and all the people, that are ſubſcribers, have a right of poſſeſſion to the whole good of the covenant, and to the ſeal thereof, the ſacrament of the ſupper.

IV. The fourth thing propoſed, was to ſhew, By whoſe authority, or by what authority, Chriſt is the covenant of the people; and ſo to hint at his divine ordination to this buſineſs, in theſe words, I will give thee. Where you have, 1. The glorious perſon ordaining, I. 2. The glorious perſon ordained, Thee. 3. The gracious manner of the ordination, Give. 4. The gracious motive and ground, I WILL give thee. A ſhort word to each of theſe.

1ſt, The glorious perſon ordaining Chriſt to this work, I will give thee; What I? I the LORD, I JEHOVAH, I the firſt perſon of the glorious Trinity. God the Father here is the firſt grand party of the covenant; yea, here is God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, eſſentially conſidered, contracting with the Son, and ordaining him, perſonally conſidered, to this work. Now, this glorious perſon ordaining Chriſt to this work imports,

1. The will of God and of the Father, that Chriſt, the ſecond perſon, ſhould come and bear the whole weight of the covenants: Hence Chriſt tells us, He had commandment from the Father, and that he came to do his will, John vi. 37, 38, 39. God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, by unanimous counſel, ordained and appointed the Son to come in his own perſon upon the errand of man's redemption; and God the Father being the firſt in the order of ſubſiſtency, and ſo the firſt in operation ad extra, therefore the giving is primarily aſcribed unto him.

2. His being the perſon ordaining, imports the divine authority of Chriſt's commiſſion, in that he is given of the Father, and came from the Father, John xvi. 28. and xvii. 8.; where Chriſt commends that faith which believes his divine miſſion, his divine ordination to this mediatory work.

3. His being ordained of God, imports, God's confidence in him, as being both able for, and faithful to perform the whole work that he gave him to do. He was confident that he would be a faithful and righteous ſervant; By his knowledge ſhall my righteous ſervant juſtify many. This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed.

4. His being the perſon ordaining, imports, the Father's zealous concern for the redemption and ſalvation of men; God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son: I will give thee. His hand is firſt at the bleſſed bargain, ſubſcribing this covenant; ſhewing, that he will do the whole work of the covenant by himſelf, and by his Son Jeſus Chriſt; and will get the whole glory of it: and hence the ſtrain in which he ſubſcribes, ver. 8. I am the Lord, that is my name, and my glory will I not give to another. He will let none ſhare of any of the glory of it but himſelf, either in the contrivement, commencement, advancement, or completement thereof.

2dly, The glorious perſon ordained, in the pronoun THEE, namely, Chriſt the ſecond perſon of the glorious Trinity, and the other party of the covenant; I will give THEE. And Chriſt being the perſon here ordained, imports,

1. His having cordially aſſented and agreed to the bargain; God would not have given him, if he had not conſented: but as he and his Father are one, ſo there is but one will betwixt them; and his conſent is recorded among the decrees of heaven; In the volume of thy book it is written of me, Lo, I come.

2. His being the perſon ordained, imports, the inſufficiency of all others for the work of man's redemption; Him hath God the Father ſealed: ſacrifice and offering thou wouldſt not, a body haſt thou given me. Though men and angels had put their ſhoulders to this work, it would never have been done; for the redemption of the ſoul is precious, and ceaſeth for ever, as to the creature. He alone is the Meſſiah, choſen, conſtitute, promiſed, typified, to whom all the prophets gave witneſs, and we are not to look for another: inſufficiency is ingraven and ſtamped upon all others.

3. His being the perſon ordained, imports, the alone ſufficiency of this glorious perſon for this glorious work. O the glorious excellency of this perſon here given! and, O the glorious ſufficiency of this perſon! I will give thee. I have laid help upon one that is mighty: this is he that is glorious in his apparel, travelling in the greatneſs of his ſtrength, mighty to ſave: this is he that comes from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah, who trode the wine-preſs of his Father's wrath alone, and of the people there was none with him.

4. His being the perſon ordained of the Father, imports, the unparallelled love both of him that gave, and of him that is given; both of the ordainer and ordained: Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and gave his Son to be a propitiation for our ſins, 1 John iv. 10. And herein is love, that Chriſt ſo chearfully undertook this work; He rejoiced in the habitable parts of the earth, and his delights were with the ſons of men, Prov. viii. 31. Here are both the parties of the covenant, God and Chriſt; that glorious I, and that glorious THEE; I will give thee: two wonderful Covenanters. God foreſeeing from eternity that mankind would be ruined, by violating the covenant betwixt God and man, ſet on foot a better project, even an inviolable covenant betwixt God and Chriſt: two unchangeable parties, mutually engaging for the relief and recovery of the loſt ſinner; and Chriſt bearing ſuch a part of the work, as to get the name of the whole; I will give thee for a covenant of the people.

3dly, The glorious manner of this ordination, is imported in the word GIVE; I will GIVE thee. A man's gift makes room for him, ſays Solomon, and gives him place among great men, Prov. xviii. 16. Men are eſteemed and reſpected for the valuableneſs of the gifts and benefits they give; how much more ſhould God's gift make room for him! Chriſt is God's gift; I will give thee for a covenant of the people. And this giving of Chriſt implies ſeveral things which cannot concern the manner of his ordination, to be a covenant of the people.

1. In general, and negatively, God's giving of Chriſt does not imply, that he was about to alienate his own right to Chriſt from himſelf to us; no, he is ſtill his only begotten Son: when we give a thing to another, we alienate our own right to it; but it is not ſo here: what God gives, we may have the benefit and uſe of it, but God ſtill keeps a right over us and it: hence ſays the apoſtle, All things are yours, for ye are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's. But,

2. More particularly, and poſitively, God's giving of Chriſt for a covenant of the people, implies,

(1.) His eternal deſtination by the Father for this end, to be the covenant of the people, before the people had a being: they were not ſo much as conſulted in the matter, when the contract was ſigned in the counſel of peace betwixt the Father and the Son; and we have no reaſon to complain of injury done us here, for we have nothing to contract on our part: the breach of the firſt covenant left us worſe than nothing; for the firſt Adam left us with a burden of debt, a burden of poverty and want; yea, a burden of curſes from the fiery law: and all that we can do, is to increaſe the debt, inſtead of being able to pay it off. Now, I ſay, God's giving him, includes his eternal deſtination by the Father for this mediatorial work, without our having any hand in it, or knowledge of it, or any obligation lying upon God ſo to do as he did, in the eternal tranſaction with his Son concerning the people, whom he deſigned to ſave. There was no obligation lying upon Chriſt, to come in our ſtead, to be our Surety, to take our guilt, and pay our debt, previous to his own conſent; nor any obligation upon God to accept of a Surety, inſtead of the principal debtor: therefore God's giving of Chriſt, muſt imply a tranſaction, wherein the Son conſented to be the covenant, to be the Mediator, to take our guilt upon him; and the Father conſented to ſend him, and accept of his ſuretyſhip for loſt ſinners.

(2.) God's giving of Chriſt, implies his actual qualifying, and ſending him to accompliſh that which was contrived from eternity. How he called and qualified him, you ſee in the preceeding verſe; he called him in righteouſneſs, and qualified him with a ſupereminent unction of the Holy Ghoſt; I will put my Spirit upon him, and he ſhall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles: Accordingly he received the Spirit above meaſure. How he ſent him, you ſee in ſeveral places of ſcripture; he gave him a body, a true body, and a reaſonable ſoul; and then he gave him to the death in the fulneſs of time; for it pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him: juſtice awakened againſt him; Awake O ſword, againſt my Shepherd,—ſmite the Shepherd. He was put in the wine-preſs of divine vengeance, and bruiſed there: he was not only bruiſed in his name, being called a mad-man and a devil; not only bruiſed in his eſtate, while the foxes had holes, and the birds of the air had neſts, but the Son of man had no where to lay his head; neither was he bruiſed in his body only, while they pierced his hands and his feet; but bruiſed in his ſoul, till it was exceeding ſorrowful, even unto death, and till the agonies of his ſoul preſſed the blood out of his body, even great drops of blood: no wonder, for he was plunged in the ocean of God's wrath, and ſuffered all the hell that was due to ſin: ſin being imputed to him as the covenant of the people, juſtice did not ſpare him; Rom. viii. 32. He ſpared not his own Son, but gave him to the death for us all.

(3.) God's giving of Chriſt implies, that the manner of his ordination of this work, was every way free and gratuitous: what freer than a gift? God gives Chriſt for a covenant of the people, without regard to any motive, merit, or ſolicitation of the people; yea, and in oppoſition thereto. This gift is free, in oppoſition to merit, either of condignity or congruity. If we be for merit of our own, we muſt be for hell, for that is all that we merit; if wretchedneſs, miſery, and a maſs of confuſion and enmity, be accounted merit, then we may lay claim to it, but no otherwiſe. This gift is free, in oppoſition to conſtraint, force, or neceſſity: God had nothing from without to conſtrain him to contrive the redemption of man, or to give Chriſt for that end; though all mankind ſhould have been for ever drowned in the flood of his wrath, God had remained as he was, as happy as ever; no force was upon him to contrive a remedy for man. This gift is free, in oppoſition to debt, God owed us nothing but wrath; but we owe many millions of talents to his infinite juſtice. In a word, it is free, in oppoſition to all motives from without God himſelf. There was nothing about us, to move him to pity us, ten thouſand things to move him to deſtroy us. Upon what condition in us could God be moved to give his Chriſt to us; ſeeing our beſt condition, before he gave him in poſſeſſion to us, is a condition of ſin and miſery, death, and thraldom? But then again,

(4.) God's giving of Chriſt for a covenant of the people, his giving him thus, I ſay, implies, a right and title that the people have to receive him; God's giving Chriſt, is the foundation of our title to receive him; faith, which is the only actual acceptance of the gift, is the mean of putting us in poſſeſſion; but it would be the height of preſumption, thus to take and receive, if there were no giving; John iii. 27. No man receiveth any thing, except it be given him from heaven. As this receiving then ſuppoſes a giving of Chriſt prior to the receiving, ſo this giving of Chriſt for a covenant of the people, implies the people's right, and title, and warrant to receive him. There is a twofold giving of Chriſt; 1. A giving of Chriſt in point of actual poſſeſſion; and thus he is given to the elect ſoul in the day of believing; and this giving is the foundation of his title to all things in and through him; for, How will he not with him freely give us all things? Rom. viii. 32. And till a man have an intereſt in Chriſt thus, he hath no ſaving right to any thing, no right to a communion-table; nay, no covenant-right to the food of his common-table. 2. There is a giving of Chriſt in point of exhibition, and goſpel-offer; and thus he is given to the whole viſible church, in the diſpenſation of the word; and this giving is a foundation of our title to receive Chriſt, and our claim of right to take this gift out of the hand of the Giver. A right of poſſeſſion none have, till they believe, and take the gift that is offered; but a right of acceſs and warrant to believe, all have, whether they believe or not, or whether they take this gift out of God's hands or not. That Chriſt is God's gift to a whole whole visible church in this sense, is a great privilege, whatever the world think or say about it, and it is a part of my errand this day, to tell you of it: if it be disgusting doctrine to any, and will not go down, we cannot help it; it is Bible-doctrine, and gospel-doctrine, and therefore we must preach it in his name, who commands us to preach the gospel to every creature. But I think, it should be welcome doctrine to all that hear me, That Christ is given to all the people in this house, in the same manner that the manna was given to all the people of old, John vi. 32.; where Christ speaking to all the promiscuous multitude, and making a comparison betwixt himself, and the manna that fell about the tents of Israel in the wilderness, says, My Father giveth you the true bread from heaven; where the revelation and offer of Christ is declared to be a giving of him, before ever he be received or believed on. It is such a gift and grant, as warrants a man to believe, and receive the gift; for this end is HE given to a perishing world; God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him, might not perish, but have everlasting life. As the brazen serpent was given for a common-good to the whole camp of Israel, that whosoever in all the camp, being stung with the fiery-serpents, looked thereto, might not die, but live; even so is Christ given as a common-good to poor stung sinners, that looking to him they may be saved. Christ is given to all, in the dispensation of this gospel. And, O it should be glad tidings of great joy to all people, That to us a child is born, to us a Son is given, whose name is WONDERFUL. This giving, in a general and definite manner, to all, in the gospel-offer, may be, and is, for the most part, where there is no receiving: but there can be no receiving of Christ for salvation, where there is not this giving; for, a man can receive nothing except it be given. This giving then, implies a right, and title, and warrant to receive: he is also given to you, that all that please the bargain, have warrant to take possession. He is your own already, man, woman, in the former sense, whether you take him or not; as he said to the Jews, He came to his own, and his own received him not. But faith's improvement of this gift and grant, among your hands, would make him your own, in a peculiar sense, by actual possession. —Thus we have the manner of his ordination, to be the covenant of the people; it is even by a free and gracious donation. The next thing here was,

4*thly*, The gracious motive, ground, and reason of this divine ordination, which is just the divine will; I WILL give. This verb must necessarily be borrowed from the former clause, I WILL hold thine hand, and give thee for a covenant of the people. I WILL GIVE, O sovereign reason! No gift in the world so free as Christ: when men bestow gifts upon one another, there is some impulsive cause that excites them to it, drawn from their relation to, or interest in one another; drawn from services and favours received, or expected from each other: but no such impulsive cause here; we have no relation to God, but as his enemies; we can do him no service, but sin against him; therefore can merit nothing from him, but his curse. His reason of doing, then, must be his own sovereign will. Men may rack their wit, and dispute about the reason of God's actions; but there would be more calm reasoning in the world, about gospel-truths, if all our reasonings did strike sail to the sovereignty of free-grace, and stoop to that: he will, because he will; I will give thee. I think this WILL imports, 1. A consent and agreement: the counsel of peace is concluded, parties are both agreed; I will. 2. A complacency and satisfaction; God is well-pleased with this device of his own infinite wisdom; well-pleased with the ransom and Ransomer; This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleased: I take pleasure in giving him to be a covenant of the people; I will. 3. I think it imports authority: supreme authority of the eternal Godhead, three in one, is interposed in this matter, for ordaining Christ to this work; I will. And 4. I think it imports an express command, I will give thee; and of this command Christ speaks, when he says, This commandment have I received of my Father, to lay down my life for my sheep: And when he says, Lo, I come to do thy will; by the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all, Heb. x. 10. In a word, it imports, That the sovereign will of JEHOVAH is the reason of all. And this may lead us to, and shall make me the more brief upon,

V. The fifth thing proposed, namely, the reasons of the doctrine; why is Christ given for a covenant of the people? And here I might shew, 1. Why he is given. 2. Why given for a covenant. 3. Why given for a covenant of the people, of the Gentiles.

1. Why is he given, or exhibit by way of gift? Why, the grand reason is told already, even his sovereign will. Christ, the great ordinance of God for man's recovery, is dispensed freely, by a gratuitous gift, that salvation may be by grace, and that free grace may get the whole glory of it, from the foundation to the cope-stone, with shoutings of grace, grace unto it. The giving of Christ to all, in the gospel-offer, is from sovereign grace, and must be absolutely free and unconditional; for what in all the world is the condition of the offer? If men be in a sinful condition, in a miserable condition, in a lost condition, that is all the condition and qualification, that I know necessary for making an offer of Christ as a Saviour to them. If any clog the gospel-offer with legal terms and conditions, they encroach upon the warrant ministers have to offer Christ to all, and the warrant that all have to receive him; yea, they encroach upon sovereign grace, which hath made this grant and offer of Christ, not to devils, but to men in the most extensive terms: To you, O men, do I call, and my voice is to the sons of men.—Again, the giving of Christ to some, in actual possession, is from sovereign grace also; for, though none can be possessed of Christ and his benefits, till by faith they receive him; yet this faith to receive, is given, as well as the gift received by it; Eph. ii. 8. By grace ye are saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. It is given, by virtue of an absolute promise of the covenant; such as that, Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power; and so, the hand to take the gift, being itself given out of the covenant, the covenant take hold of the man, before the man take hold of the covenant. But,

2. Why is Chriſt given for a covenant? I offer you only one great reaſon of it: he is given for a covenant, that God might have more glory out of the covenant of works, by the ſecond Adam's fulfilling of it, than he loſt by the firſt Adam's breach and violation of it. The law of eternal life and death was irreverſibly ſtated only by the covenant of works; and though we be changed, yet the covenant of works is unchangeable. And as, by virtue of the ſtability of it, all the Chriſtleſs world are condemned, curſed, and die eternally; ſo, by virtue of its being perfectly fulfilled by Chriſt, in whom only it is eſtabliſhed, all that are in him, are freed from condemnation, and live eternally. What is the covenant of grace? I may ſay, It is Chriſt's fulfilling, for us, the covenant of works. We were debtors to the mandatory and minatory part of the law, arraigned at the inſtance of divine juſtice, to pay the debt; Chriſt ſubſtituted himſelf in our room, came under the law, to pay the whole debt due thereunto; and now, God gets more glory by his doing ſo, than he loſt by our ſins. Herein he glorified his ſovereign Majeſty, whoſe authority was ſo hainouſly violated by ſuch a baſe creature as man is, in that he received him not into his favour, without a becoming reparation, made to his honour, by the intervention of a perfect obedience, and full ſatisfaction. Herein he glorified his infinite wiſdom, in finding out a man to reconcile juſtice and mercy; to puniſh the ſin, and yet to pardon the ſinner; to take vengeance on ſin, to the very uttermoſt, and yet to magnify his mercy, while the ſinner is juſtified, accepted, and ſaved, without his own ſuffering. This is that, πολυποίκιλος Σοφία τῦ Θεῦ, THE MANIFOLD WISDOM OF GOD. Herein he glorified his free love, goodneſs, and pity, in ſubjecting his life to ſuch a death, and his glory to ſuch a ſhame, and all to purchaſe ſuch vile and worthleſs creatures as we are, and to redeem us from eternal wo and miſery: as alſo, his almighty power is here glorified, in ſupporting the human nature of Chriſt under the vaſt load of divine wrath, and law curſes.—Herein he glorified his holineſs and faithfulneſs, in fulfilling not only the promiſe of the law as a covenant of works, even the promiſe of eternal life, made to perfect obedience; which, though we forfeited in our own perſons, yet we recover in Chriſt; the condition of life in the covenant of works being perfect obedience perſonal, and the condition of life here being perfect obedience and imputed; and ſo the promiſe of life, upon the ground of a perfect obedience, fulfilled to us in him: but alſo divine faithfulneſs is glorified, in fulfilling all the threatenings of the law, while we, who come under the ſentence of death in the firſt Adam, undergo that death in the ſecond Adam.—In a word, herein he glorifies his juſtice and righteouſneſs, in the remiſſion of ſins, through the propitiation of Chriſt; Rom. iii. 25. Whom God hath ſet forth to be the propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God. Herein is vindictive juſtice diſplayed, in its greateſt ſeverity, in Chriſt's being the ſacrifice and propitiation: and here is retributive juſtice illuſtriouſly declared, in the ſinner's being rewarded, juſtified, ſaved, upon the blood and ſacrifice, the obedience and righteouſneſs of Chriſt; yea, all the perfections of the great God ſhine glorioufly in the face of Chriſt, as in a beautiful and bright conſtellation, 2 Cor. iv. 6. And for this reaſon he gave him for a covenant.

3. Why is he given for a covenant of the people, of the Gentiles? Why? not only to ſhew his diſpleaſure at the unbelief of the Jews, as we ſee, Acts xiii. 46, 47. Rom. xi. 11, 19, 20.; but alſo to ſhew his ſovereignty, That he will have mercy on whom he will have mercy; and to ſhew his truth, in fulfilling the antient prophecy concerning the calling of the Gentiles. It is long ſince God promiſed to Noah, ſaying, God ſhall enlarge Japhet, and he ſhall dwell in the tents of Shem, Gen. ix. 27. Now of Japhet came the Gentiles, Gen. xii. 5.; and of Shem came the Jews. By the poſterity of Japhet were the iſles of the Gentiles divided. The iſles were ſolemnly by lot divided among them, (and probably this iſle of Britain among the reſt;) ſo that as Japhet's dwelling in the tents of Shem, is a clear prediction of the converſion of the Gentiles, and their ſucceeding to the Jews, in their church-privileges; ſo this directs us to underſtand the promiſe in the context, The iſles ſhall wait for his law. He is given for a covenant of the people, a light of the Gentiles. In a word, he is given for a covenant of the people, to ſhow the extent and all-ſufficiency of his grace, and the intrinſic value of his blood. Suppoſe a prince were ſetting up a ſanctuary, or city of refuge, the privileges whereof are not reſtricted to any ſort of men, but extended to all, Gentiles as well as Jews; would not this declare, that the privileges of the place are full and ample, ſo as, whoſoever comes to this ſanctuary, might be ſafe? Here alſo, in like manner, the ſufficiency of the merit of Chriſt, and the fulneſs of his righteouſneſs is declared, inſomuch that none can, with any ſhadow of reaſon, exclude themſelves, be what they will, People, Gentiles, Dark, Blind, Impriſoned; ſeeing all Gentiles, who are called Dogs, Aliens, Heathens, Uncircumciſed, are included; and ſeeing the motto written on the outſide of the door of the ſanctuary, is, Whoſoever will, let him come; all comers are welcome, and refuſers left inexcuſable.

VI. The ſixth thing propoſed, was the application of the whole. This doctrine would admit of a vaſt improvement, which we muſt confine to as narrow bounds as poſſible; and we may improve it,

1*ſt*, For information. If it be ſo, that Chriſt by divine ordination, is thus the covenant of the people; in the glaſs of this doctrine, we clearly ſee many precious goſpel truths. And,

1. Hence we may ſee, in what way it is, that the ruin we brought upon ourſelves, by the breach and violation of the covenant of works, is reparable. We have brought ourſelves into a moſt lamentable ſtate by ſin; and we are irrecoverably loſt indeed, as to all that we can do for our own help; O Iſrael, thou haſt deſtroyed thyſelf. Who can repair that ruin? There is a glorious ME that ſays, In ME is thy help, Hoſ. xiii. 7. Who that ME is, is explained in our text, even a God in Chriſt, the glorious I and THEE; I will give thee for a covenant of the people. There is no help, no juſtification for them now by a covenant of works; but I will give thee for a covenant to them; which, though it be all works to thee, yet it ſhall be all grace to them. The world is buſy caſting the law of works into this and the other handſome ſhape, and pleaſing themſelves with a fancy, that in this way of works they may have righteouſneſs and life, to the diſparagement of the way of grace, to the deſtruction of their own ſouls, and to the diſhonour of Chriſt, who alone is the covenant of the people.

of

2. Hence we ſee the greatneſs of the love of God towards poor ſinners, in giving ſuch a great and glorious perſon as Chriſt, and that for ſuch a great and glorious end, as to be a covenant of the people; God ſo loved the world, as to give his only begotten Son, that whoſoever believeth in him might not periſh, but have everlaſting life. Chriſt came not to be a covenant of the people without a commiſſion, call, and ordination from his Father. He had authority from the Father to do all that he did about the covenant; I will give thee for a covenant. Let not our notions of God be ſo groſs, as to think, that God the Father is of an implacable nature, full of ſeverity; and that the Son only is of a pleaſant, meek nature, full of lenity towards ſinners. Nay, God the Father was the firſt, in order of nature, that made the motion concerning man's redemption; Chriſt was appointed, authorized, and given of him: behold, the love of God hath gone to its utmoſt height in giving Chriſt, for he cannot give a greater gift; and the love of Chriſt hath alſo gone to its utmoſt, in conſenting hereto, and giving himſelf, and all this to be no leſs than a complete covenant of the people. Becauſe the people can do nothing, therefore he leaves them nothing to do of themſelves; I will give thee for a covenant of the people.

3. Hence we may ſee a teſt of the true religion. All ſchemes that centre not in Chriſt, are to be rejected; and all ſchemes of the covenant, that make not Chriſt to be the all of it, are to be renounced: If I can find nothing in the covenant but Chriſt, ſurely I find enough, and I find all that my text makes of it; and if the world make it a new ſcheme, at their peril be it. But this I ſay, that every ſcheme, that leads to ſelf, and takes off from Chriſt, is a falſe and ruinous ſcheme; yea, every doctrine that advances any thing to be a rival with him, and mingles our filthy rags with his excellent robes, is of a ſoul-ruining nature, and utterly to be deteſted. The ſecond Adam came not to patch up, and amend old Adam's coat, as ſome expreſs it, but to give us a wholly new garment of his own making, and dyed with his own blood: I will give thee for a covenant. Our chief buſineſs, as miniſters of the goſpel, is to trumpet forth the tranſcendent excellency of Chriſt, and deſire to know nothing but Chriſt, and him crucified, and as the all of the covenant, for making people both happy and holy.

4. Hence we may ſee the believer's freedom from the law as a covenant of works: he is not under the law, but under grace; having cloſed with Chriſt, Chriſt is now all the covenant that he is under: he is freed both from the do and the die, the command and the threatening of the covenant of works: they are made void to him through Chriſt; for he is not under it, either to be juſtified or condemned: he is not under its command, to be juſtified for his obedience; nor under its threatening and ſanction, to be condemned for his diſobedience, as it is a covenant; for, There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt. It is true, as the law is a rule of obedience, he remains under it, as much and more than ever, and ſtands obliged thereby to ſtudy perfection; and his diſobedience may bring upon him rods and ſtripes, and all the terrible effects of God's fatherly diſpleaſure upon ſoul and body; but as it is a rule of acceptance, a condition of life, or a covenant of works, he hath nothing to do with it, nothing to expect from it, nothing to fear by it: he hath nothing to do with it any more than a wife hath to do with a dead huſband. Rom. vii. 4. Ye are dead to the law by the body of Chriſt, that ye might be married to another, even to him that is raiſed from the dead, that ye might bring forth fruit unto God. He is not to bring forth fruit any more to the dead huſband, to the law; but to Chriſt, the living huſband. He hath nothing to expect from it; no life, no righteouſneſs, no happineſs, no holineſs by his own legal obedience, but only by Chriſt, a better covenant. And he hath nothing to fear by it; no hell, no death, no damnation, no condemnation, no liableneſs thereto. And hence,

5. We ſee what place the believer's obedience hath in the covenant of grace: His obedience hath no place here, in point of cauſality, or proper federal conditionality; for this were to turn it into the ſame place it had in the covenant of works, where, though there was no merit of condignity (I know few will dare to ſay ſo) yet there was a merit by paction; that is to ſay, there was a promiſe of life made to works and obedience, Do, and live. But, in the covenant of grace, we aſſert, againſt all popiſh doctrine whatſoever, that there is no ſuch reward of work, obedience, or perſonal holineſs, upon compact and promiſe; becauſe the tenor of this covenant runs upon the condition of Chriſt's obedience and righteouſneſs, apprehended by faith. Goſpel-holineſs is of manifold neceſſity in the new covenant; but the promiſe of life is not here made to the work, but to the worker; and to the worker, not for his work; but for the merit of Chriſt: As for inſtance, Be thou faithful unto the death, and I will give thee the crown of life; the promiſe is not made to fidelity, but to the faithful perſon, whoſe fidelity is a ſign that he is in Chriſt, In whom all the promiſes are yea, and Amen. If the law had now the promiſe of life to our obedience, we ſhould not have life and ſalvation any other way but by the law, and by the works thereof; Gal. iii. 21. If there had been a law given, that could have given life, verily righteouſneſs ſhould have been by the law; therefore our obedience now is not a cauſe or condition, but a neceſſary effect of the covenant, and qualification of all that are within the covenant; yea, all whom this covenant takes hold of, it makes them holy: And therefore, Without holineſs no man ſhall ſee God; becauſe without holineſs no man hath this effective evidence of his being within this holy covenant.

6. Hence we may ſee, what are the motives that now ſhould influence the believer in his obedience. If Chriſt be the ALL of the covenant, and that he is looſed from all his former relation relation to the covenant of works, he is not to obey either from a legal hope of heaven, or ſlaviſh fear of hell. Not from a legal hope of heaven; for the covenant ſecures the purchaſe of that by Chriſt's perfect obedience; not from a ſlaviſh fear of hell; for the covenant hath ſecured freedom from that by Chriſt's complete ſatisfaction. The principal motive is the love of Chriſt conſtraining; the love of a God in Chriſt, who is given for a covenant of the people. God deals not with believers now according to the covenant of works, neither ought they to deal with him as if they were under it. They ought to mourn for ſin, to repent, to confeſs, to beg pardon, but not in a legal way, as if they had to do with a wrathful judge, but as having to do with a merciful Father in Chriſt: they are to yield obedience to the law, not out of a ſervile fear of hell and wrath, but out of a child-like love and willing mind; ſo far as the believer acts otherwiſe, ſo far he is under a ſpirit of bondage. Neither ought the believer to act from a dread and fear of his being diſinherited; ſo far as he does ſo, it is not an act of faith, but of unbelief; for he cannot view this covenant, and yet ſee himſelf left at an uncertainty. There is no liableneſs to a forfeiture of its privileges; Chriſt is the covenant of the people.

7. Hence ſee, if Chriſt be the covenant of the people, by God's ordination, why the believer is to take the law only out of the hand of a Mediator, and yet is not without law to God, when he is under the law to Chriſt. He is not to view it in the firſt covenant-form, in the hand of an abſolute God, but only in Chriſt, and as it is caſt into a new covenant-form: and the original authority of the law is not here diſſolved, nor obligation to obedience diminiſhed, but rather ſtrengthened and ſweetened; in regard that this authority does now run only in this ſweet and bleſſed channel, by the Father's ordination; yea, the Creator's authority and ſovereignty is in Chriſt, and the whole fulneſs of the Godhead, and by the voice of God the Father from the excellent glory, ſaying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed; hear ye him. We are ſo much obliged, by the Father's appointment, to obey him, and take the law only out of his hand, that if we do it not, we condemn the authority of the Father, and run croſs to this divine ordination.

8. Hence ſee, if Chriſt be the all of the covenant, then believers have all things in Chriſt. Chriſt being the covenant of the people; this covenant is all his ſalvation, and all his deſire. All his ſalvation is here; and well may the believer ſay, in the exerciſe of faith, in Chriſt I have all things at once; neither need I any more that is neceſſary to ſalvation: this covenant is all my ſalvation.—He may ſay, in the point of juſtification, Chriſt is my righteouſneſs, my treaſure, my work, my covenant, my all; yea, my all in all; For in him dwelleth all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily; and believers are complete in him, who of God is made to them wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption.

9. Hence we may ſee, if Chriſt be given for a covenant of the people, that the goſpel ſtrictly and properly taken, is a bundle of good news, glad tidings, and gracious promiſes; our text is a ſum of the goſpel, and it is a free promiſe, I will give thee for a covenant of the people: there is no precept nor commandment here. The law is properly a word of precept, but not the goſpel: the law commands all, and the goſpel promiſes all. It were a diſparagement to the divine law, if it were not perfect and exceeding broad, if there were any duty we are called unto not enjoined therein: Why? are there no commands in the goſpel, ſay ſome? We are ready, Sirs, to confound the diſpenſation of the goſpel, with this goſpel itſelf; and this makes much wranglings on this head. The goſpel, largely taken for the diſpenſation thereof, hath the whole law in it, ſubſervient thereunto; but ſtrictly taken, it is a quite other thing than the law of commandments. Faith and repentance may be called goſpel-commands, if you ſpeak of the diſpenſation of the goſpel; but if you ſpeak of the goſpel itſelf, they come in under another conſideration. We are to diſtinguiſh betwixt duties and graces: Faith and repentance, as they are duties, are commanded in the law; but as they are graces, they are promiſed in the goſpel. We are to diſtinguiſh betwixt a new commanded duty, and a new preſented object: the goſpel preſents a new object of faith, a God in Chriſt; but the ſame law that was from the beginning, obliges us to believe whatever new revelation God makes. If we underſtand it ſafely, then we may ſay, the law obliges us to believe the goſpel, and therefore he that believeth not the goſpel, is condemned already by the law, John iii. 18. And this condemnation ſhall be more aggravated, than if this new object of faith had never been preſented, or if this light had never come into the world, ver. 19.

10. Hence learn, If Chriſt be given as the covenant of the people, then we may ſee the nature of faith, and its appropriating quality. When God ſays, I will give thee as a covenant of the people; faith ſays ſomething by way of anſwer, correſponding with the revelation and teſtimony of God: God ſays, I give; faith ſays, I take; God ſays, I give him for a covenant; faith ſays, I take him for a covenant; God ſays, I give him for a covenant of the people; faith ſays, I am one of the people; I take him for my covenant, my own all: it is the people's covenant in the general offer, but my covenant in the particular application of faith: faith breaks the ſhell, and eats the kernel. The general diſpenſation of the goſpel ſays, he is given for a covenant of the people; the particular application of faith ſays, he is given for a covenant to me: God ſays, I give him; faith ſays, I take him as a gift, a free gift: God ſays, I give him, it is I that gives him; faith ſays, I take him as thy gift, as God's gift: God ſays, I will give him, it is my will to do it; faith ſays, thy will be done, even ſo I take him according to thy will, Amen, ſo be it; and all the people ſhould ſay Amen; and every one for himſelf ſhould ſay Amen to God's offer, and receive and reſt upon him alone for ſalvation, as he is offered; and in ſo doing, believe, that through the grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, they ſhall be ſaved, Acts v. 11.

11. Hence ſee, If Chriſt be thus given for a covenant of the people, ſee the GROUND of faith that all the hearers of the goſpel have: Why? the offer is univerſal to all that hear the goſpel; I give him for a covenant of the people. Let Arminians maintain, at their peril, their univerſal redemption; but we muſt maintain, at our our peril, the univerſal offer: neceſſity is laid upon us, and wo to us, if we preach not this goſpel to every creature. Chriſt is ſo far given to all the people that hear the goſpel, that it is warrantable for them to receive the gift: it is no preſumption for them to take what God gives; they ſhall not be guilty of vitious intromiſſion in ſo doing; nay, they ſhall be guilty, they ſhall be damned, if they believe not, and take not God's gift. It is true, reprobates will exclude themſelves, but this goſpel-offer does not exclude them; they have as fair a revealed warrant to believe, as the elect have. We cannot ſay, you are an elect man, you are an elect woman, therefore believe; we have no ſuch commiſſion: nay, God, by this goſpel, caſts the covenant in among all the people, ſaying, Whoſoever will, let him take; whoſoever pleaſes, let him take, and in taking, he ſhall have a proof of his being an elect-veſſel. As it is ſaid of the Jews, To them belong the covenant and promiſes; ſo ſay I to you, Gentiles, the covenant belongs to you; The promiſe is to you, and your children: you have a right and a warrant to take all; and this right was ſealed to you in baptiſm, and is proclaimed to you in this goſpel; and you ſhall be inexcuſable if you improve it not: you will have none to blame for your damnation but yourſelves, and your own enmity and ill-will; You will not come to me that ye might have life. I would have gathered you, and you would not.

12. Hence we ſee the CERTAINTY of the converſion of the elect; whoſe converſion in particular, is God's great end and deſign in exhibiting Chriſt as a covenant to the people in general. It is with a deſign to give Chriſt to them in poſſeſſion, that he gives him to a viſible church in the goſpel-offer. It is for the elect's ſake that the reprobate have an offer of Chriſt; and if once all the elect were gathered, the ſound of this ſilver-trumpet of the goſpel ſhall be heard no more. The diſpenſation of the goſpel is the mean which he ſanctifies and bleſſes to that end, for working and begetting faith in all the elect, whoſe names, as I ſaid before, are all recorded in the original draught of the covenant, which is indeed a ſealed writ, that we have nothing to do with, till once we have ſubſcribed the open copy that is here before us all. However, this work is not left arbitrary to the will of men, otherwiſe none would ever be willing; for all are enemies, and the power of enmity is inſuperable by men: therefore our text promiſes, not only the means, the general donation of Chriſt in the indefinite offer, but alſo the power, the effectual application of the covenant of grace, to the converſion of all whom Chriſt did undertake for. Why? the covenant here exhibited, is propoſed as a covenant of light; light to the Gentiles, and to remove ſpiritual darkneſs; a covenant of ſight; to open blind eyes, and ſo to remove ſpiritual blindneſs: and a covenant of liberty; to remove ſpiritual bondage to ſin and Satan; all which denote effectual vocation, which is a being brought from darkneſs to light, and from the power of Satan unto God. And hence we ſee, how effectual vocation and ſaving faith followed upon this very goſpel-diſpenſation, Acts xiii. 47, 48. So that an effectual application of the covenant of grace is here promiſed to Chriſt, in behalf of all that were given to him; it is abſolutely promiſed, that he ſhall ſee his ſeed, and ſee the travel of his ſoul. The election ſhall obtain; and all that the Father hath given him, ſhall come to him: and yet we ſee that the accompliſhment hereof, is by ways and means of his appointment, in the general invitation and call of the goſpel. God, by his will of precept revealed, commands all, where-ever the goſpel comes, to believe; and he mocks none; for all that do believe ſhall certainly be ſaved: and though none have power to make the means effectual; yet the utmoſt attendance to the general call of the goſpel, is of the utmoſt concernment to your ſouls for eternity; for, who knows that he is not of that number, whom Chriſt covenanted for, and will make it effectual unto?

But ſo vaſtly copious and comprehenſive is this doctrine, that I might begin anew, to give a bundle of more inferences therefrom.

1. Hence we may ſee the miſerable circumſtances of all unbelievers, that hear this goſpel, and yet refuſe God's gift of Chriſt as a covenant. They continue under a covenant of works, both in its commanding and condemning power. That they are under its condemning power, is evident; for, ſays Chriſt, He that believeth not, is condemned already: And that they are under its commanding power, is evident alſo; for, ſays the apoſtle, They are debitors to do the whole law, Gal. v. 3. In Adam's covenant, they remain under obligation to duties and puniſhment, as long as they are not intereſted in the new covenant. Though by the goſpel they are obliged to ſeek a title to life through Chriſt's obedience, and freedom from wrath, through his ſatisfaction; yet while this covenant is ſlighted, they remain obliged, in their own perſons, to yield perfect obedience, upon pain of damnation; if they be not under the command with the promiſe, Do, and live, they are under the command with the threatening, Do, and be damned. They are in a miſerable ſtate; for the leaſt failure, in obedience to the command, brings them under the whole curſe of the threatening, and wrath of the eternal God, while they will not have a better covenant.

2. Hence we may ſee the folly of all that prefer any ruining covenant to this covenant, which God gives for our relief. The covenant of works is now a ruining covenant; yet many prefer this covenant to Chriſt, the covenant of the people. They prefer their doing to Chriſt's doing, while they cannot believe they ſhall have acceptance with God upon Chriſt's doing and obedience; and yet they will hope, that if they do their beſt, then God will accept of them. O proud devil, that thus makes the dung of thy duties of more account than the perfect obedience of the Son of God! The covenant with hell is alſo a ruining covenant; and yet the world prefers this alſo to that glorious covenant, while they are in league with their luſts, and prefer their baſe idols to the Son of God.

3. Hence we may ſee the difference betwixt the law and the goſpel; the covenant of works and the covenant of grace. The law promiſes nothing but upon our doing; the goſpel promiſes nothing but upon Chriſt's doing: he is the covenant of the people. The covenant of works promiſes life, if we obey in our own perſons; the covenant of grace promiſes life, if we obey in our Surety. The condition of the covenant of works, and the covenant of grace both, is perfect obedience; but here lies the difference; the condition of the covenant of works is perfect obedience personal; the condition of the covenant of grace is perfect obedience imputed, and conveyed to us by a faith of God's operation. Yet both law and gospel are sweetly subservient, the one to the other, and work to one another's hand, while the law declares what obedience God requires, and the gospel provides that obedience, and points out Christ as the all of it; so faith doth not make void the law, but establishes it, and makes it honourable, etc. Christ hath fulfilled the condition of the covenant, to the Father's contentment; The Lord is well-pleased for his righteousness sake, for he hath magnified the law, and made it honourable.

4. Hence we may see the difference betwixt God's covenant of grace, and our covenant of duties. Our covenant of duties is either private and personal, or public and national. If by personal-covenanting be either meant believing at first, and laying hold on God's covenant, or the believer's engaging, through grace, to serve the Lord, in all the duties of religion; it is indeed the duty and honour of every person, to be thus engaged. Public and national covenanting is also the duty and honour of a land: it was the glory of Scotland, that we were solemnly in covenant; wherein our forefathers, for themselves and their posterity, "engaged and swore against popery, prelacy, "superstition, and every thing contrary to the "word of God; and to the doctrine, discipline, "worship, and government of the reformed "church of Scotland;—and that as we should "answer to Jesus Christ at the great day, and "under the pain of God's everlasting wrath, "and of infamy, and loss of all honour and "respect in this world." And, O may not our hearts bleed to think on our defection from old covenanted principles, and violation of engagements; yea, of the burning and burial of our covenants, and many grave-stones laid upon the sepulchre; also the prevalancy of abjured popery in this land, without being duly lamented, and the open introduction of abjured prelacy, and English popish ceremonies and services, in many places of this land, without being duly testified against; but the zeal of many runs in another channel? Is it any wonder then, that the infamy and loss of honour, and respect in this world, mentioned in that covenant, hath come upon us, while our honour as a nation, and glory as a church, is sunk into the horrible pit and filthy mire of infamy, bondage, slavery, and contempt? However, covenant-obligation to duty is what we stand still under; though many be ashamed of, and refuse to own these obligations, yet it is the glory of our land, however it be now defaced. And therefore, let us even, in our approaches to a communion-table, go forward, lamenting our sinful defection from the covenanted reformation, acknowledging our solemn covenant-obligation; and hoping, that the Lord will, in due time, revive a covenanted work, and pour out a spirit of reformation. But let us withal remember, there is a vast difference betwixt God's covenant and our covenant, betwixt his promise, and our promise; we may break and change a thousand times, but the covenant of grace is unchangeable, and stands fast in Christ. Many poor Christians mistake matters sadly, by confounding their covenant and engagement to duty, with God's covenant of grace. They covenant to serve the Lord, and the next day they break it; O! says the man, the covenant of grace is broken. Gross ignorance! the covenant of grace is quite another thing. Therefore,

5. Hence we may infer, If Christ be given for a covenant of the people, the transcendent excellency of this, above all other covenants, whether of legal works, or gospel-duties. For here the Father is promising to the Son, that he should be a covenant of the people; and so it imports all the excellent qualities and properties that can be in a covenant.

(1.) If Christ be given of God for a covenant of the people; then it is a divine covenant, a covenant of God's making, and not of ours: it was made when we knew nothing about it; it was made when we were nothing; yea, when we were forseen to be a company of lost and undone sinners: God made it with his Son, and established all the articles, promises, and blessings of it, before the foundation of the world was laid; yea, it is God that makes the elect, in a day of power, to take up the extract of it, to read it, to love it, to sign it. Again,

(2.) If Christ be given for a covenant of the people, then it is a free covenant, altogether free; absolute, and unconditional to us. It is a covenant given of God; I will give thee for a covenant. Our legal hearts are still for giving something to God, and for giving him this and the other service, in hope of pleasing and pacifying him; and doing so and so in order to acceptance with him. Nay, but says God, your giving me, is vain, unless I give you; your giving is not the way of it, but I will give, and you shall take. The legalist is constantly for giving, but the believer is always for taking: you must know that here you have nothing to give, but to take. There is an order indeed observed in the covenant, and in God's giving: there is a condition of connexion betwixt one blessing and another; first the spirit of faith is given, and then by faith, the man takes other blessings; and receives of Christ's fulness, Grace for grace. Here God gives all, and faith takes all. All that is required, is given; and all that is given, is given freely. Faith itself doth but receive a right; it does not give one; it acts in a way of taking what God gives; it takes the covenant that God gives; it takes the righteousness of Christ, which is the meritorious condition of the covenant, and so is the means of our being accounted righteous. Not one promise of life, or of the eternal reward, can the believer lay claim to, but in Christ; for all the promises are in him yea, and in him Amen; IN HIM, IN HIM; twice over, as I said already: Why? we cannot claim any one promise in our name, upon performing any gospel-condition, though by the aids of grace; for then, though it were never so small, it were of debt to us: but our only claim is in him; that is, in the right of our elder Brother Jesus Christ: and thus it is of debt to him, but only of grace to us. And thus God is not a debtor to us, but to himself; to his own goodness and faithfulness, and to his Son Jesus Christ. 'If either faith or obedience were 'a condition, then there were a suspending the

'acts

'acts of God, upon ſome actings of the crea'ture; which, ſays an eminent divine [Dr.
'Owen] cannot be, without ſubjecting eter'nity to time, the firſt cauſe to the ſecond, the 'Creator to the creature.' Again,

(3.) If Chriſt be the covenant of the people, then it is a full covenant, having all things in it: it hath grace and glory in it; happineſs and holineſs in it; peace and pardon in it; yea, Chriſt, who is all in all, is in it; for he is the all of it. Who can tell me of a grace or gracious quality that does not ſpring out of this covenant and the promiſes of it? It takes in all the promiſes made to Chriſt and to us. Some promiſes are conſtitutive of the covenant, as theſe betwixt the Father and the Son, concerning a ſeed; and here, Chriſt hath ſome peculiar promiſes appropriate to him, which are not afforded to us in the ſame manner and degree. Others are executive, or referring to the execution and application of it, as Heb. x. 11, 12. Some are principal, and concern the end, eternal life; others leſs principal, and concern the means, whether internal, as the Spirit and faith; or external, as ordinances; all is comprized in the covenant. Again,

(4.) If Chriſt be the covenant, then it is a ſure covenant, The ſure mercies of David. This covenant is ſecured by the oath of God to his eternal Son; Once have I ſworn by my holineſs, that I will not lie unto David. He hath ſworn, that the bargain ſhall ſtand, inſomuch, that if all the devils in hell ſhould attack the weakeſt believer in Chriſt, or that ever looked towards a covenanted Chriſt, they cannot ruin him, it is impoſſible; for the covenant, in which he is wrapt up, is eſtabliſhed, drawn up, and concluded betwixt two unchangeable perſons, in preſence of that conſenting, unchangeable witneſs, the Holy Ghoſt, one God, and of one and the ſame will eſſentially with the Father and the Son; The Lord hath ſworn, and will not repent, Thou art a prieſt for ever. The parties of the covenant of grace are not God and man, but God and Chriſt; and the believer is no otherwiſe a party, but in Chriſt. And here is a bottom of everlaſting conſolation, that Chriſt and he are within one and the ſame covenant, and it ſtands as ſure to them as it ſtands faſt in him.

In a word, if Chriſt be the covenant, then it is a glorious covenant, a holy covenant, an everlaſting covenant; but I omit a great deal of particulars that I might here mention.

6. Hence we may infer, what is the marrow of the goſpel-feaſt in the ſacrament of the ſupper; it is even Chriſt, given of God to be the covenant of the people: for, in the ſacrament, 'Chriſt,
'and the benefits of the new covenant are re-
'preſented, ſealed, and applied to believers.'
To take the ſacrament, is nothing but a mock, if people do not in it ſacramentally, really, and believingly take Chriſt as the covenant of the people: yea, the ſacrament of the ſupper is the ſeal of the covenant, confirming, to the believer, all the promiſes thereof; This is the New Teſtament in my blood. The covenant is ſure enough in itſelf; but the believer is never too ſure of it, while he hath unbelief in him: and therefore God hath condeſcended to give us all that we could require of the moſt faithleſs and diſhoneſt man upon the face of the earth, that we may believe him; not only his word, and writ, and oath, but his ſeal too; and all hath enough to do to confirm the believer's faith; yea, nothing will confirm and ſtrengthen his faith, but the ſame almighty power of God which wrought it at firſt, even the power whereby he raiſed Chriſt from the dead. Yet, in theſe means, he uſes to convey his power for that end; and therefore the believer is to uſe them: I ſay, the believer, becauſe none, who, by unbelief, refuſe the covenant, are to meddle with the ſeal thereof, to profane it; yea, they that uſe the ſeal, and refuſe the covenant, they ſeal their own condemnation; for, being under the covenant of works, they ſeal no other covenant, than that which they are under; and ſo they ſeal themſelves up under the bondage and curſe of the covenant of works, which is the heavy curſe of the great God.—But now, paſſing all other uſes, I come to cloſe with a word

2*dly*, For exhortation. If God hath given Chriſt to be the covenant of the people, then the native exhortation is, 1. That all the people take the covenant that God is here giving them. And, 2. That all who take this covenant take the ſeal thereof in the ſacrament of the ſupper. But, at the time, I confine myſelf to the firſt of theſe.

The firſt exhortation is to all the people that hear me, That ſeeing God makes offer of his Chriſt to you, and gives him as a covenant of the people, you would take his gift off his hand. I am come to make an offer of Chriſt, as the all of the covenant, to you, in his name, who is the covenant, and in his Father's name, who gives him for a covenant of the people. If you go to a communion-table, and take the ſeal of the covenant, before you take the covenant itſelf, you will but mock God, and ſet a ſeal to a blank; yea, you will ſeal your covenant with hell, and trample under foot the blood of the everlaſting covenant. And therefore, I call you all, before-hand, to come and take the covenant. I know not how the call will be entertained; many will ſlight it, but yet we muſt make the offer in God's name, who commands us to preach the goſpel to every creature. I know that you cannot, and will not embrace the offer, without divine almighty power be extended; but he uſes to make the goſpel-offer the channel of his power to gain ſouls to himſelf. I know, moreover, that as you are unworthy of ſuch an offer; ſo you would mind, it is not me you have to do with, but the great and eternal God, that is offering his Son to you for a covenant this day: and as it well becomes ſuch a glorious God to make ſuch a glorious offer, ſo it becomes no vile ſinner here to refuſe the offer. And chuſe or refuſe you muſt; there is no middle; either you muſt receive or reject Chriſt this day, for he is offered univerſally to all the people here for a covenant. I know further, that it is one of the hardeſt things in the world, for men to perſuade themſelves, that God is in earneſt in offering Chriſt to them, and giving Chriſt to them in particular: and yet becauſe this is the very porch and avenue of faith, O plead that God would deliver you from ſuch blaſphemous thoughts as tend to give the lie to the God of truth, who ſwears by his life, that he will have no pleaſure in your death. Men ſhall find to their coſt, that he called them in earneſt to believe, when he damns them in earneſt for their unbelief; for, he that believeth believeth not shall be damned. I know further, that many deceive themselves with a temporary faith, thinking they take Christ when there is no faith of divine operation, but a counterfeit faith of their own forging: however, the covenant must be opened, and Christ offered, though he should be a stumbling-block to many, over which they fall and break their necks; for the covenant will draw some to it powerfully and sweetly, to raise a divine building on a divine testimony. I offer then a whole covenant, a whole Christ to you, in his Father's name, who gives him for a covenant; will not you take, when God gives? It is true, God is not speaking immediately to you in this text, but to Christ, saying, I will give thee for a covenant of the people; but still so much the better for you, seeing it is on your behalf, that God, who cannot lie, the eternal God, is speaking to his eternal Son in your favours. There is the surer ground, and stronger argument for your faith, that you may say, Lord, I take thee at thy word, and it is not thy word to me only; if it were directed immediately to me at the first hand, I am such a black, filthy monster of hell, that I durst not credit it; but it is thy word to the fair, fair IMMANUEL, who is thy heart's darling and delight; in whom thou art well-pleased; and I think thy word to him must be a sure word, and it is thy word to him concerning me: whatever I be, I am sure thou wilt not go back of thy word to him; and lo, I take thee at thy word, and upon thy faithful word to him, who is the true and faithful witness; I agree to that contract, and put in my name, consenting to have him for a covenant to me. O sure work, if that be the way of it! as sure as God is faithful and true to his eternally beloved Son. Well, man, woman; young and old, do you find in your heart thus to take the covenant in the bulk? Need I say any more for motives? Consider,

1. What for a state you are in, while you are out of this covenant: you are under a covenant of works, and so under the wrath and vengeance of God, under the bondage and curse of the law; yea, you are in covenant with hell and death by that contract; you have nothing to expect, but a terrible death shortly, and a horrible hell eternally.

2. Consider, that this covenant is the last bargain that ever God will make with you, or for you: the covenant of works is broken, and you are damned for ever, if you be not under another, for that bargain is blown up. This new covenant is a plank after shipwreck; though it was contrived and transacted before the first was broken; yea, from eternity; yet it is a new bargain proposed to us after the old is gone: and, if you refuse this, there is not another covenant to save you; There remains no more sacrifice for sin, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment, and fiery wrath, that shall consume the adversaries.

3. Consider, that this covenant is a bargain made ready to your hand: it is not a covenant of your own making; it was made before the world was made, and drawn up in the council of peace: and the all of it presented to you in Christ, who is the great ordinance, institution, and appointment of the Father, for your relief and recovery from sin and misery; for him hath God the Father sealed; sealed and authorized him to be the bread of life to perishing souls; sealed and given him for a covenant of the people; God hath sealed and made ready a covenant for you; and all that is required of you, is only, that you will not discredit God, and make him a liar; but through grace, set to your seal, that God is true; receiving his testimony concerning his Son.

4. Consider, that you have a good claim and right to this covenant; or a warrant to accept of it: you have a warrant, by the call and command of God, to believe; This is his commandment, that ye believe on the name of his Son. You have a warrant sealed to you already by your baptismal sacrament; it was a sealed right to believe in Christ, and to take him for a covenant; and you are obliged thereby to take hold of this covenant: and if you will not set your hand to it this day, you practically renounce your baptism, and the devil hath a firm hold of you. You have a warrant from the general, indefinite promise and publication of this covenant to you: The promise is to you, and to your children; and to you is the word of this salvation sent. I will give him for a covenant of the people, a light to the Gentiles. So that it is published and directed to you, man; to you, woman; you have a claim to take it for your own. It is a covenant for you, for every soul of you within the four corners of this house; even you that are thinking, O it is not me that is intended; yes, it is you. Away with unbelief, and let your heart say, This is a covenant for me. That is a believing with application; and wherefore am I sent here, but to tell you that covenant is for you? You are welcome to it, whosoever will.

5. Consider upon what terms you may have this covenant. On what terms? The condition of the covenant is already fulfilled; Christ hath brought in everlasting righteousness, and God hath accepted it, and is well-pleased with it; and on this account promises all other things freely; not a farthing have you to pay for this covenant, it is God's gift, I will give thee for a covenant. There are but two words necessary to make up this whole business; the one is a word from God, saying, I give him for a covenant; the other is from you, saying, I take him for a covenant to me. The first word is said already, I give; and if you want faith to say, I take, this the covenant hath in the bosom of it; the Spirit to work faith is promised in it; for he that says, I give him for a covenant, says also, I have put my Spirit upon him, and he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles: yea, with the same breath that he is given for a covenant, he is given for a light to open the blind eyes, and for liberty to open prison-doors. Now, faith to take is covenanted; and this whole covenant, and all salvation in it, is laid to your hand; all is given, when the covenant is given. Why, Sir, I think you leave nothing to do at all. Yea, as much as you can do, and that is just nothing. If you can believe by your own power, then I will take back my word; but that I know you cannot do: and I give you as much to do as my text allows, which offers all, when it offers Christ as a covenant to you. But will you tell me, what the worse are you, that you who can do nothing, get nothing to do; and that he who can do all things, gets all the work and all the praise? Are you not pleased with these terms, to have all freely, without money, and without price?

6. Con-

6. Consider, that the most part of the world rejects this covenant, and despises this free gift of God. The legal, unbelieving heart will not have Christ at that easy rate; the hellish proud spirit of man is not for taking a covenant from God, but for making a covenant with him, for as bad as they are at keeping covenants: they cannot believe that God will give all for nothing; and therefore they will not take, without making some bargain of their own; yea, they think, that this way of taking Christ for all, is an enemy to holiness: and because they thus contemn and reproach this holy covenant of free grace, which only can furnish them with holiness, therefore God hath blasted all their holiness; insomuch that there was never less holiness, nor more wickedness in a Christian world. I say, the most part of the world rejects Christ, the gifted covenant; few in the world will have him; few in Scotland will have him. And, Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? Do you think it a small matter, to see the world crucifying the Lord of glory, and interpretatively renewing the bloody tragedy again, that was acted at Jerusalem really? And will ye have a hand in the murder also? The more they be that reject him, the more should ye receive him. He hath long been set before you in a preached gospel, and you have long refused him; and you know not but this may be the last communion-offer that ever you will get of him; To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

7. Consider, that you cannot please God, nor glorify him so much any way, as by taking this gifted covenant out of his hand. As Abraham staggered not at the promise through unbelief, but was strong in the faith, giving glory to God; so to take this covenant of promise is the way to give glory to God. You will please him better than ever your sins displeased him; yea, it is impossible to please him another way; for, without faith it is impossible to please God: but in this way you will please him, and content his heart; yea, you will give more satisfaction to his justice for all your sins, than your everlasting damnation would do; for, this is a covenant with him by sacrifice; a sacrifice of a sweet-smelling savour, giving infinite satisfaction; for he that is given for a covenant, is given for a sacrifice; by which God is pleased, and glorified to the highest.

8. To name no more, consider that this covenant can answer all objections; and the very proposal in the text is such as may obviate all, on whatever ground you state them. I will give thee for a covenant of the people, a light of the Gentiles, to open blind eyes, and to bring out prisoners out of their prison-house. There is no room, no place for any objection here; for the tenor of the covenant answers all difficulties. Whatever be the prison-house you are in, this covenant not only knocks at the prison-door, but breaks open the door, and comes in, saying, There is my hand of power to help you out; will you take my help? O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself; but in me is thy help. Will you have it? Let your heart say, Lord, it is welcome. Are you in the prison of the lowest hell that ever any was in upon earth? This covenant comes so low as to lift you up, if you do not reject the counsel of God against yourselves. Would you wish to be free of all that deadness, hardness, blindness, stupidity, and enmity, which you reckon make you unfit, and unprepared for coming to Christ, and taking this covenant? Why, this covenant is adapted for curing these plagues; and when you take this covenant, you take it as a cure for all these diseases, which never can be cured till you take this remedy; for to cure yourselves, and then come to this covenant, is impossible; but to come to this covenant, and get the cure of all maladies that affect you, is God's instituted means of salvation. Would you wish to be free of that temptation, that you are no elect? Accept of this blessed bargain, and your election is sure. Who dare say that you are a reprobate? Poor worm of yesterday's date, will you speak as if you had been upon the privy-council of heaven from all eternity? Will you rather beguile the devil, by saying, Whatever I be, this covenant constitutes my duty, and therefore I will venture upon the covenant at the call of God? But, if I be not an elect, I will not get grace to venture, or grace to believe. What mean you, man, by grace to believe? Is not grace to believe conveyed by such a call as this? And therefore if you slight this call, you slight the grace that would make you believe; and therefore, O let not the devil make a fool of you.—Would you wish to be free of that temptation, that you have sinned the sin against the Holy Ghost, and that there is no mercy for you? Why, if you embrace this offer this day, you may be sure you was never guilty, nor ever shall. Tell me the clause of the text that secludes you from meddling with this covenant; and why will you debar yourselves? What is the case that this covenant cannot answer? Are there any here that hath false and unconstant hearts, that break all bonds? O here is a suitable covenant for you. If you cannot keep the covenant, the covenant will keep you. The bastard-covenants of your own making will not keep you, but this covenant will, Jer. xxxii. 40. Are there any here that want through-bearing in the world, and are feared for straits, and even temporal difficulties? Here is a covenant that says, Bread shall be given thee, and thy water shall be sure; yea, verily thou shalt be fed; and in the day of famine shall be satisfied. Are there any here that cannot get rest among all the creatures? Here is a covenant that says, Come to me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Are there any here, that think themselves poor, abject creatures, saying, O I am but a burden to myself, and a burden to all that are about me; no body cares for me, and, I fear God cares not for me either; I am cast out at all hands? O here is a covenant that says, He will gather together the outcasts of Israel. Is there any here afraid of death, and knows not how to get through that dark trance? O here is a covenant fit for you, that says, O death, I will be thy plague; and death shall be swallowed up in victory. Are there any here labouring under desertion? Here is a covenant that says, I will lead the blind in a way they know not. I will never leave you, nor forsake you. Are ye for this covenant? Is there any labouring under temptations? Here is a covenant that says, The God of peace will bruise Satan under your feet shortly; and my grace shall be sufficient for thee. Is there any here labouring under the power of sin and cor-corruption? Here is a covenant that ſays, I will put my Spirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my ſtatutes; I will ſubdue your iniquity: yea, he who is the covenant ſays, For your ſake I ſanctify myſelf, that you alſo might be ſanctified. And again, The water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing up to eternal life. Is there any here ſaying, I am a loſt creature? The covenant is ſaying, I come to ſeek and to ſave that which was loſt. Is there any here ſaying, O I have ſinned to the uttermoſt? This covenant ſays, He is able to ſave to the uttermoſt. If you ſay, you cannot believe; the covenant ſays, Chriſt, who is the all of the covenant, is the Author of faith; and the Spirit of faith is given when the covenant is given; all grace is given when it is given. Are you content to take this covenant, and all the grace of it? If you ſay, you cannot repent, the covenant ſays, Him hath God exalted with his right-hand, to give repentance. What is the caſe that the covenant cannot anſwer? Why, ſay you, you are calling us all, both wicked and godly, to accept of this covenant: but does not God ſay to the wicked, What haſt thou to do to take my covenant in thy mouth, ſeeing thou hateſt inſtruction, and caſteſt my law behind thy back. Very true, he ſays ſo, Pſal. l. 16.; Yea, the voice of God in the law, ſays, Vengeance upon you; and there is no eſcaping that vengeance, but by hearing and believing what the voice of God in the goſpel-covenant ſays, and by taking it, not in your mouth to abuſe it, but in your heart to love and improve it for your ſanctification as well as for your juſtification, for making you holy as well as happy. God's covenant is a holy covenant, and it works out ſin, and advances holineſs in all that are under it. What, would you have me believe in Chriſt before my life be reformed? may ſome ſay. Yea, I would have you believe in Chriſt, in order to reformation; and taking him for a covenant, in order to our ſanctification. Why then, ſay you, I will take Chriſt and my luſts both. I defy you, man; if you take him, you muſt let theſe go away; yea, it is impoſſible to take him, and keep your luſts too; for whenever the covenant of grace is embraced, the covenant with ſin and hell is abandoned. And therefore, if any come to this covenant to ſeek ſhelter to any one luſt under it, it is no coming at all; it is no faith, but fancy; yea, it is a mocking of God, and his holy covenant, and will bring a curſe upon you inſtead of a bleſſing. To come to this covenant, is to come to the Lamb of God, that takes away the ſins of the world; it is a coming to Jeſus to be ſaved from ſin. But O, ſay you, I cannot think that the covenant of grace ſays a good word to me; I have been making God to ſerve with my ſins, and weary him with mine iniquities. Indeed, the law and covenant of works ſays, You are a dead man; the ſoul that ſinneth ſhall die; but ſee what the covenant of grace ſays, Iſa. xliii. 24, 25. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſion for my name's ſake. Take this covenant then, and pardon with it, as well as purification. O! but what ſays the covenant to one who hath been neglecting prayer, and forgetting God all my days? Why, there is no word in the law for you but fury; Pour out thy fury upon the heathen, and the families that call not on thy name. The wicked ſhall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God. But there is a word even for ſuch in the new covenant; I am found of them that ſought me not. O come and take the treaſure you was never ſeeking after to this day, and it will ſweetly determine you to ſeek his face all the days of your life. O! but what will the covenant ſay to ſuch whoſe caſe you have not touched, and who think their caſe nameleſs, and that miniſters cannot find out a name for them, becauſe they are juſt hidden among the miſt of the bottomleſs pit, among the ſmoke of hell, ſo as they cannot be found out? Why, the covenant hath a word to you; Iſa. lxii. 12. Thou ſhalt be called, Sought out, a city not forſaken; there is a name for you, thou ſhalt be called, Sought out. This covenant is ſent this day to ſeek you out from the bottom of the dark priſon that you are in, whatever it be: will you take the benefit of this covenant? Are you for it, man, woman? Will you have a Chriſt to be a covenant to you? Young people, will you have him, that you may not live in the devil's ſervice? Old people, will you have him, that you may not die with the devil in your arms? Drunkard, will you have him, that you may get a drink of the new wine of conſolation? Unclean perſon, will you have him, to waſh you, that you may be fitted to walk with him in white? Swearer, will you have him, that your tongue may be ſhaped for a hallelujah? Man, woman, who haſt ſeven devils in you, will you have him, who hath the ſeven Spirits that are before the throne (that is, the eternal Spirit, with his various operations) that he may put the devil out of you, and put his Spirit within you? Whoſoever will may have a covenant this day, that will make you up for ever.

Is there any here who deſpiſes all this love, ſaying, I will keep my luſt and ſins ſay you what you will; it is but a new ſcheme, perhaps out of your own head; I have no fancy for that covenant? Say you ſo, man! then as the Lord lives, you have ſpoken this againſt your own life. I proteſt againſt you, in the name of God, and ſhake the duſt off my feet, in witneſs againſt you, That, on the ninteenth day of Auguſt 1722, at a communion at Dunfermline, Chriſt, and in him all the covenant of grace, was offered to you, and you refuſed him; and if you live and die in that mind, I ſummon you to anſwer for this refuſal, before his awful tribunal at the great day.

But, becauſe I am courting a bride for my glorious maſter, I would gladly ſpeak her fair on her marriage-day; therefore, O refuſer and deſpiſer of Chriſt, will you bethink yourſelf yet, and take your word again; many a ſlight have you put upon this glorious Chriſt, and yet he is content to take you for all that; he is loath to take a denial; and therefore I would aſk, in his name, before you give him a total refuſal, will you tell me, Where will you do better? Will a broken covenant of works be a better bargain for you? or will the black covenant with hell, and with your luſts and idols be a better bargain for you? or is the vain, periſhing world a better bargain? No, no; the devil himſelf does not think ſo whatever he ſuggeſt to you.

But again, before you give him a total denial and abſolute refuſal, will you tell me, how you will do without him? Or, if you make a ſhift while you live, O how will you die without him? and how will you ſtand in judgment judgment without him? and death and judgment may be at hand. There are many dead, and away to eternity ſince the laſt communion here; and this may be the laſt communion-invitation that ever you will get: if you refuſe Chriſt now, it may be the laſt offer that ever you will get of him; he hath taken many refuſals off your hand already.—And finally, before you refuſe him wholly, think again what you are refuſing: Is Chriſt a deſpicable perſon, of no more worth but to be ſlighted by you, and trampled under your feet? Is he a hateful object, whom yet the tongues of all the glorious ſeraphims are not worthy to adore? Is the everlaſting covenant a matter of moonſhine? Is the love of God, the blood of Chriſt, the eternal intereſts of your immortal ſouls, and the divine glory, all matters of indifferency to you? Is the great JEHOVAH, his giving Chriſt to be a covenant of the people, a contemptible thing? and is this a gift not worth the taking? O no, no, ſay ye; ſurely it is a worthy offer. Why then, by the awful authority of the eternal God, and by the blood and bowels of his eternal Son, I adjure you to take him and his Father's bleſſing; and all the bleſſings of the everlaſting covenant with him. O ſay you, I think I am gained and overcome by this offer and propoſal; but I know not if it be a paſſing thought that will evaniſh, or a real faith that will abide the trial; I fear it be but looſe work, and a temporary-flaſh. Why, man, the covenant can reſolve you in that difficulty; and it ſays, Fear not, for I am thy God; I will ſtrengthen thee; I am thy ſalvation. Are you content to take the covenant for this end, to diſcover the defects of your faith, and to work in you the faith of God's elect? Can you ſay, that it is not in your faith, but in Chriſt himſelf, that you are ſeeking ſalvation; that you are not building your faith upon your faith, nor your hope upon your hope, but both your faith and hope upon the covenant? Can you ſay, that whatever be wrong about you and your faith, yet you ſee there is nothing wrong about Chriſt and the covenant, but that it is well-ordered in all things and ſure, and ſuch as can right all that is wrong about you? Can you ſay, however I am in the dark about my faith, yet I have ſometimes found out my unbelief; and, that I could no more believe than I could move the earth from its centre; but yet the joyful ſound of goſpel-grace hath touched my heart, and made me take up ſo much glory and excellency in Chriſt, that I think all the world nothing in compariſon of him; and I think my heart's deſire is, O to have him for my Prophet, to take away the darkneſs of my mind; as a Prieſt, to take away the guilt of my ſins; and as a King, to take away the power of my luſts! Gladly would I have him, that thus my ſoul may be bleſt in him, and his name may be glorified in me. Why then, whatever you think of your faith, and of yourſelf, as the blackeſt monſter of guilt that ever was out of hell, yet it ſeems you have the faith of God's elect. I would gladly hope, that ſome ſouls in this aſſembly are taken hold of by the hand of grace, and content to ſign this covenant with their heart: and woe's me that there ſhould be any here that would let all this love and grace, and this good prize go by them, and they never have a heart to it. But yet ſome that have a heart to ſign, may be ſaying, O I cannot write, I cannot believe, I cannot ſubſcribe, though I think I could do it with a thouſand good-wills. Say you ſo, man? I will tell you good news, Chriſt hath the book of the covenant in the one hand, and the pen in his other hand, ready to ſet down your name, and to ſubſcribe for you; only declare before witneſſes that you cannot write, and do you touch the pen, ſaying, Lord, ſet down my name, conſenting to every article of the covenant, and pleaſed with the whole frame of it. Say you ſo? Well, it is done, for he hath the pen of a ready writer; your name is within the bond already. But if grace will help you to a new act of faith, a ſtronger act, read over the covenant again, and hear how the great Jehovah is ſpeaking, and not I; and ſpeaking to his only begotten Son that lies in his boſom, ſaying, I give thee for a covenant of the people. Now, let faith ſay, Lord, I take thee at thy word; I hear thee ſpeaking to thy beloved Son concerning me a poor, dark, blind, and bound Gentile; wilt thou ever go back of thy word to thy Son? No, in deſpite of the devil, I think that is the ſureſt word that ever was ſpoken; it is to him thou ſpeakeſt, and to me in him; and therefore, behold, I take thee at thy word; black and ugly as I am, the covenant can make me fair and clean: thy grace hath conquered me, thy love hath drawn me, and I am pleaſed with the bargain; and I ſee it is the beſt bargain that ever was made, for advancing thy eternal glory, and my eternal good; I ſee it is all my ſalvation, and all my deſire; I ſee it is well-ordered in all things, and ſure. Why then, the Lord be thanked that it is a done bargain, and that God's gift is taken off his hand. And therefore, having taken then the covenant, never ſtand to take the ſeal in the ſacrament of his ſupper.

The SUBSTANCE of ſome DISCOURSES after the Sacrament, on the ſame Subject.

NOW, my friends, it were not fit I ſhould detain you, by ſpeaking to the ſeveral ſorts of people here; I ſhall only drop a few words in the general. I think, if my heart deceive me not, the great thing I was helped to ſeek, ſome time before this ſolemnity, was not only aſſiſtance to miniſters, and to myſelf, ſo as to be carried through the work, for I thought that would ſoon come to little account; but I would have had a day of power among you that are the people, that the glory of the Lord might ſhine among you. And now, what ſhall I ſay? O! To whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? Hath the right-hand of the Lord done valiantly, even the man of his right-hand, whom he hath made ſtrong for himſelf? Hath the Lord appeared, as yet, for as much of the work as is over? Or, ſhall we expect that he will appear in the work that is yet to follow? Or, ſhall our prayer juſt only turn to our boſom again? I would aſk you, What welcome entertainment hath Chriſt, the Father's gifted covenant, got among you this day? He hath given him for a covenant of the people; and who of all the people have welcomed the Father's gift? I fear there are many fools here, that have a price in their hand, but no heart to the bargain. But to all the deſpiſers of Chriſt, and all the refuſers of Chriſt

Christ, in Dunfermline this day, in case the Lord may seize you with a word yet before you go, I have a word to say to you, whether you have been at the Lord's table or not, although the sacrament table be drawn, yet the covenant table is not drawn, it is covered yet, and Christ is set upon it, and you are all welcome; for all that have eaten, there is bread enough, and to spare, in his Father's house; Christ, as the covenant, is offered to you, man; to you, woman; to you that are before me, and behind me, and round about me, in every corner of this place; though I do not see you, yet God's eye is upon you, and his word is directed to you: yea, this covenant is directed and offered to you, he is the people's covenant; let the people come, be who they will, even the vilest monster of sin out of hell; God's giving him in this gospel, is your warrant for taking him: and if you will not hearken to this gospel-offer of Christ for a covenant to you, I charge you, in God's name, and as you will answer at his tribunal, to declare before him and your own consciences, what ye have to say against him; is it that you are not holy? Nay, you shall not have that to say, for to the unholiest soul here this covenant is offered, for this end to make you holy; and never shall you be holy till you come and accept of it. Is it that you have not grace to come? Why, man, when this covenant is offered, Christ and all the graces in him is offered, and among the rest, grace to draw you: and if you will not put away this grace from you, it will take hold of you. Is your objection this, I fear my unbelief, enmity, and ill-will, put away all that grace? why, that is the thing most to be feared; and yet, if that be indeed your fear, there is the less ground of fear; for this covenant is offered to you, to take away your ill-will and enmity. Are you content to have God's gifted covenant for that end? Really I know not what good thing it is in all the world that you want or need, but what is offered to you in this covenant: for Christ is the all of the covenant; and he who is the all of it, is all in all: and therefore, I charge you again, before you bid him farewel, to declare what you have to say against him, whom God is giving for a covenant: Shall I take your silence for a confession, that you have nothing to say against him? Then, by the glory of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, by the eternal salvation of your immortal souls, by all the joys of the redeemed, and torments of the damned, I charge you all, and every one of you, to welcome the covenant of the people that God is giving, and that by your hearty saying, Even so, I take him, as the Father offers him in the gospel, to be a whole covenant to me, to do all my work in me, and for me. What say you, drunkard, swearer, whoremonger, scarlet-coloured sinner in Dunfermline? What say you, communicant and spectator? It may be, the thing that keeps you back, is; O I am unworthy to have him; true, but unworthy monster of hell as you are, if you think him worthy to be received, I charge you again, by all the blood that he shed at Jerusalem, and by all the bowels of compassion that move within him, that you do not refuse him, but welcome God's gift, welcome God's Send, saying, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord. If, after all, you are saying, stay a little, Sir, let me take it to advisement for some days; No, no, man, woman; I have no commission to allow you a day, or an hour's delay; To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your heart: If you refuse to-day, I know not but you may be in hell to-morrow. What if the next hour the breath should go out of your body? and if your soul flit out of your body before it flee in to Christ, you are gone, you are undone for ever: if God's omnipotent grace and almighty power, which only can make you willing to accept of his offer, be not accompanying this call, he needs not our apology; he is the Sovereign, that is obliged as a debtor to none but himself, and his own pleasure, and his Son's righteousness; yet still you are obliged to obey his call, and your wilful rejecting, is inexcusable. And therefore, if, after all, this gift of God for a covenant of the people, be slighted by you, you not being content that God should rent and tear the old contract that was betwixt you and your lusts, but esteeming it above this covenant, betwixt God the giver, and you the refuser, be it; let him and you reckon together, I hope I am free of your blood this day, for there will be blood in the case: if you will not have the blood of the everlasting covenant to wash you, to justify you, to sanctify and save you, nor believe that God gives it to you to be received for that end, then there will be blood for blood; He that believeth not, shall be damned. Remember what a free offer of Christ you have got this day; you have nothing to pay for this covenant; I will give thee for a covenant: you have nothing to pay for a pardon; the condition of the covenant is fulfilled by Christ, and in it is a full payment of all debt; and therefore, so freely is the pardon, and life offered to you, that you cannot have it till you have nothing to pay for it. See how the creditor deals with the debtor in the parable, Luke vii. 42. When they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Now, the legal old covenant-heart of many says, with the wicked servant, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all; I will grow a better man, I will fall a repenting and reforming, and then I hope God will pardon me: that man hath something to pay, at least he fancies so, and therefore he hath no forgiveness. But when a poor soul is brought to this, Oh! I have nothing to pay; if I be the payer of my own debt, it will never be paid for me; the debt of satisfaction will never be paid for me; the debt of obedience, the debt of duty; I have nothing to pay my debt, nay, not the least farthing of the debt, were it but a good thought, it can never be paid by me: Why then, that man stands fair for a full remission, according to this free covenant; When they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Are you for this new covenant-way of it, to come and bring nothing, and get all freely out of the covenant, that belongs to grace and glory, debt and duty, happiness and holiness? Now, what shall I say to God, when I go back to my closet, where I was pleading the last week, that he would shew his glory, and draw some of you to himself? shall I go with a complaint upon you, and say, Lord, they will not come; they prefer their base lusts to the glorious Lord Jesus; the drunkard prefers his cups to thee; the whoremonger prefers his whoredom to thee; the covetous man prefers the world to thee; the

legalist

legaliſt prefers his own righteouſneſs to thee? Shall we complain to this purpoſe? Or, will you give occaſion to Chriſt to complain upon you to his Father, ſaying, Father, thou didſt give me to be a covenant of the people, but there is a people in Dunfermline, that care not for me, and deſpiſe thy gift; They will not come to me that they might have life? O! will not the Father frown upon you, when the Son complains upon you? And, O if you continue of that mind, he will frown you to hell. But, O may we hope that ſome at leaſt have ſubſcribed their names to the covenant this day? We would go back to God with a ſong of praiſe in our mouths, and glorify his name for the wonders of his grace; yea, if I may ſo expreſs it, Chriſt would with a glad heart ſhew his Father the copy of the covenant that you have ſigned, and that was offered and directed to you, as to the Gentiles; to theſe that were under darkneſs, blindneſs, and bondage, and in the priſon of ſin, death, and wrath. Will not the Father be pleaſed when the covenant-roll is read over, with the names of all the ſubſcribers and aſſenters to the covenant, and your name among the reſt? There is one that ſubſcribed his name thus, I, one of the people, one of the Gentiles; I, one of the blind and bound priſoners, aſſenting and conſenting. Well, may God ſay, was not the covenant directed and offered to the people of that name? Yes, Father, it was. Why then, let the name ſtand there regiſtrate to eternity, it ſhall never be blotted out for me; Him that cometh, I will in no wiſe caſt out. Since they had no better name to ſign withal, than the name of ſinner, apoſtate, backſlider, criminal, leper, blackamoor, ſlave, and hell's drudges; yet aſſenting and conſenting to this covenant; this covenant that they have ſubſcribed, ſhall make their names better than that of ſons and daughters. They ſhall have a name among the living in Jeruſalem; even a new name, and the white ſtone, that no man knoweth, but he that receiveth it.

Now, as we have a commiſſion from the Lord to tell you, that you are welcome to him; ſo, Oh! ſhall we have a commiſſion from you, to tell him that he is welcome to you? Since God the Father declares, that you are welcome to his Son, ſaying, I will give him for a covenant of the people; ſhall we go and tell him, O God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the people at the ſacrament in Dunfermline, have taken thee at thy word, and are ſaying in their hearts, thy Son is welcome to them? O if Chriſt and you welcome one another this day, whether it be the firſt welcoming to ſome of you, or a confirming welcoming to others; if he and you, I ſay, be welcoming one another this day, Glory, glory to God that ever this day dawned. Eternity will be duration little enough to praiſe him for this day. Glory, glory to God for the three happy meetings; glory to him for the happy meeting betwixt the divine and human nature in one perſon, and that is the glorious perſon given to be a covenant to you; glory to him for the happy meeting betwixt juſtice and mercy, who have kiſſed one another, and ſaid, We are both pleaſed, and are honoured by him, who is given for the covenant of the people; and glory to him for the happy meeting betwixt the Saviour and the ſinner, betwixt the covenant and the people: Is it a meeting indeed! Hath the Lord God of the Hebrews met with you in Dunfermline? Hath the Covenant taken hold of your hearts? O glory to him, for it is a meeting never to part; the Covenant will never quit its holding again: and therefore, As you have received Chriſt, ſo walk you in him; as you have received God's gifted covenant, ſo make uſe of it, and improve it. When you find you have no righteouſneſs, look to the covenant to furniſh you; For his name ſhall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. When you find you have no ſtrength, look to the covenant to furniſh you; for it ſays, My ſtrength ſhall be perfect in thy weakneſs. When you find you have no life nor livelineſs, look to the covenant to furniſh you; for it ſays, I am the reſurrection and the life. When you feel little of the Spirit's influences, look to the covenant to furniſh you; for it ſays, I will pour water upon him that is thirſty, and floods on the dry ground. When you find you have much ſin and guilt in and about you, look to the covenant for pardon; for it ſays, I, even I am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions for my name's ſake. When you find your luſts and corruptions to be powerful and prevalent, look to the covenant for mortification; for it ſays, Sin ſhall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the law, but under grace. When you find little or no holineſs taking place in your hearts and ways, look to this holy covenant, and it will make you more holy than ever the covenant of works could do; for this covenant of grace does preſent the law with a perfect holineſs, whether you take it as the law of works, or a rule of life in the hand of a Mediator. As the law is a covenant of works, the believer hath, by this covenant, a perfect holineſs in his hand, a divine righteouſneſs anſwering to that: and as the law is a rule of life, in the hand of Chriſt, the believer hath, by this new covenant, a perfect holineſs alſo, not only by virtue of his union to Chriſt the fountain of holineſs; but in his own perſon; he hath a perfection of parts here, and a perfection of degrees hereafter. But as to this perfection of parts in time, it is indeed many times ſo low, that the believer can hardly diſcern it. Why, may one ſay, The thing that frightens me is, leſt I be a practical Antinomian, and a goſpel-hypocrite; becauſe, though I think my heart goes in to the offer of Chriſt as a covenant, yet I can never find the powerful and ſanctifying virtue of this covenant, to deſtroy my luſts and corruptions, but ſtill iniquity prevails againſt me; and can I take comfort in the covenant in that caſe, without abuſing free grace to licentiouſneſs? For clearing this, I ſhall only ſay to you, that if you can nouriſh and cheriſh ſin, and yet take comfort in the covenant, that comfort is ſuſpicious-like, and flows from a fancy, and not from the faith of God's operation; for, He that hath this hope, purifieth himſelf, even as God is pure. Faith purifies the heart, where-ever it is in exerciſe; and to take comfort in or from the covenant, and yet take pleaſure in ſin, at the ſame time, is a dream, and a deluſion that the believer cannot be under, unleſs he be in a fit of temptation. But as to ſin prevailing; ſin may prevail againſt a believer, and yet he may have comfort in the covenant; as David had, when he ſays, Iniquities prevail againſt me; they are againſt my will, againſt my heart, againſt my prayers, againſt my inclinations; and he imme-immediately adds, As for our tranſgreſſions, thou ſhalt purge them away, Pſal. lxv. 3. But thou, poor ſoul, that ſays you never found the ſanctifying virtue of the covenant; Why, did you never get grace to wreſtle againſt ſin? that is ſome virtue. Doth prevalency of ſin never humble you to the duſt? that is ſome virtue. Do you ſee and lament your own unholineſs? that is ſome virtue. Doth the ſenſe and feeling of the power of ſin never make you long for complete victory and freedom from ſin? that is ſome virtue. Did the power of a body of death never make you look upon yourſelves as wretched, ſaying, O wretched perſon that I am! who ſhall deliver me from it? that is ſome virtue. Did the prevalency of ſin never force you to the blood of Chriſt, the fountain open for ſin and for uncleanneſs? that is ſome virtue. Are you glad of any victory you got over your corruption? yea, that is ſome virtue. How do you find it with you, when the light of the covenant is ſhining on your ſoul? Do you not find your heart riſing againſt ſin? then that is ſome virtue. How do you find it with you between hands, when iniquity is prevailing? Do you not find yourſelf uneaſy, and out of your element, ay till the Lord return? that is ſome virtue.—Do not deny the ſanctifying virtue of the covenant: and what can be the reaſon of it, that though you ſign the covenant, and go in to it, yet you find ſo little of its powerful ſanctifying virtue? I will tell you one reaſon of your inſtability and inconſtancy this way: It may be, when you ſigned the covenant, you put not your name at the foot of the bond, but ſet your name too far up, as if you were a party-covenanting; you are to ſign as a party-conſenting, but not as a party-contracting: The covenant was drawn up, and ſigned by two unchangeable parties from eternity, the Father and the Son; and you, forſooth, would have your name in the midſt of the contract, as if you were promiſing and contracting ſomething for your part conjunctly with him, who is the firſt and the laſt, and the all of the covenant. Remember you are but a poor aſſenter at beſt; and therefore put your name lower down; for your work is juſt to do nothing, but to conſent to take him, to do all your work in you, and for you: for, ſays the Lord in my context here, My glory will I not give to another. He accounts it the ſtanding of his glory, to perform all that is within the covenant; and he will not let any black ſcullion of hell, like you or me, count our doits ‡ among his gold. The higher place that you take for your name in the covenant, the more unconſtant are you; but the lower place, the more ſtable: Therefore, when you ſign the covenant anew, put your name farther down, below his who is the covenant of the people: let him be the all of the covenant to you; the worker of all your work, and you but an onwaiter; for his glory he will not give to another.

Perhaps ſome may be ſaying, O Sir, the thing that fears me at this occaſion, is this, I am put all in confuſion with the differences that are among you that are miniſters *. What do I know, but the reproach of a new ſcheme does juſtly belong to ſome of you, and that I may be in a deluſion? What do I know, but your way of opening the covenant of grace may be ſuch as others will call an enemy to the law, and to holineſs? Why, what ſhall I ſay to you, poor creature? Let God be true, and every man a liar. The Lord forbid that we ſhould ſpeak wickedly for God, and talk deceitfully for him. If there be any perſon here, that never found this doctrine of grace have any other tendency than to lead them to licentiouſneſs, I will pledge my life, that he is not a believer, but a perſon ignorant of the myſtery of the goſpel. But what ſay you, believer? cannot your experience bear witneſs for God, and his gracious covenant, that however vile and unholy you find yourſelf to be, yet when the new-covenant-cord of free grace is wrapt about your heart, does it draw you to the love of ſin, or to the love of holineſs? The more lively faith you have of Chriſt's being your treaſure, your righteouſneſs, your covenant, your all for debt and duty both, do you not find holineſs the more lovely to you, and his love conſtraining you the more to delight in his ſervice? Let the word of God, and the experience of all the ſaints, in an agreeableneſs thereto, decide matters of this ſort. But, O poor believer, do not fall out with Chriſt, though even many of his friends ſhould differ with one another; be not ſtumbled in a day of reproaches and offences; Bleſſed are they that ſhall not be offended at Chriſt: Let your hearts go in to the offer of Chriſt as a covenant, to make you both holy and happy.

Now, if you have got little this day, leave the complaint upon yourſelves, for God and his ordinances are not to blame; your iniquities do ſeparate betwixt you and your God: and yet, ſay not you have got nothing, if you have got but a crumb; for a crumb is ſomething that indicates that there is yet more coming in the Lord's time and way. Why, what is a crumb? If you be made more humble than you was, that is a crumb. Have you got more inſight into the covenant? that is a crumb. Have you got more deſire after Chriſt? That is a crumb. Are you longing more to be free of ſin, and like unto Chriſt? that is a crumb. Have you got ſo much as gives you a ſtomach for another marriage-ſupper? that is a crumb. If you have not got ſo much as a crumb, believer, it may be waiting for you in a cloſet, or a ſecret corner; and in the mean time, the Lord may be calling you to reflect upon ſome old by-paſt experience, when you got a more ſenſible hold of the covenant than now; and to live by faith, and wait at wiſdom's door. And you that have been fed, and feaſted this day, O reſolve, through grace, henceforth, a ſtated war againſt all Chriſt's enemies within you and without you; and all you can, to keep the ground you have gained upon enemies; and ſit not down ſecure, otherwiſe Satan will ſoon trip up your heels: ly not down to ſleep after meat; for God hath fed you, to run the race that is ſet before you, and to ſtrive who ſhall run faſteſt in the way to heaven, following Chriſt the Forerunner. You are to follow none, but as they follow Chriſt: the moſt godly miniſters are but limited examples; you are to follow them ſo far as they follow Chriſt, but no farther; Be ye followers of me, ſaid Paul, as I am of Chriſt. Take the word of God for your rule, and goſpel-truth for your ſtandard, and the rather that there are many in this generation, who would be content that ſome goſpel-truths were ſcratched out of the Bible; but let your prayer be, Lord, ſend forth thy light and thy truth, that they may guide me.—In a word, your life muſt be a living by faith upon the covenant, the unchangeable parties, the Father and the Son. Here is a ſure ground of faith; whereas the reaſon of your ſtaggering is, becauſe you put in yourſelf as the one party, who art but a changeable creature, that alters every moment: but it is concluded betwixt two unchangeable parties, whereof none of them ever repents the bargain. O, ſays the poor ſoul, though I have been helped to conſent to this covenant, and ſubſcribe it with all my heart, yet I fear I play the devil, and my heart break looſe again. Yea, it may be ſo, but this covenant ſays, I will draw you to heaven, if you were a devil: I will draw you back again though you were even in the very mouth of hell. And I think, you will find he hath done ſo heretofore, believer, when you thought you was ſo far down in the pit, that the Lord would never return again to lift you up: he hath returned, and ſurprized you; and, it may be, hath done ſo, at this occaſion. O bleſs him, and ſerve him, and improve his covenant; yea, let me tell you, believer, you having embraced the covenant, it lies upon God's honour to keep you, becauſe he ſtands engaged to his Son; his word of honour is paſt.

‡ An ancient piece of ſmall Scots copper-coin, in value the twelfth part of a penny ſterling; at that time current, but not ſo now.

* At the time when this Sermon was preached [viz. Auguſt 19. 1722.] the conteſt about the Marrow doctrine was upon the field: Firſt occaſioned by a new impreſſion of a book, intitled, The Marrow of Modern Divinity, with a recommendatory preface, by the Revd. Mr. James Hog, miniſter of Carnock, as a book deſigned to vindicate the doctrine of Free-Grace; which book the General Aſſembly 1720. by their fifth Act, ſeverely animadverted upon, and condemned ſeveral precious and important truths, through the ſides thereof: And though a Repreſentation was given in by ſome miniſters (among whom our Author was one) to the Aſſembly 1721. laying open the dangerous conſequence of the ſaid Act, yet the Aſſembly 1722. by their ſeventh Act, farther explained, corroborated, and confirmed the ſaid fifth Act.——As this affair occaſioned a very conſiderable difference, both among miniſters and people; ſo this much may ſerve as a key to this paſſage.

Some, it may be, are ſtill queſtioning their right to believe, their right to take Chriſt, their right to ſubſcribe to this covenant; they ſtand, as it were, at the back of the door, ſaying, What right have I? Indeed, if you were a party and actor in this covenant, you might ſpeak at that rate; but that you are not: you are only to be aſſenter and conſenter. Your legal heart dreams always, that God will not accept of you, unleſs you do ſo and ſo: but know that God and Chriſt do all here; and they have bound themſelves, by this covenant to do all: and if you do any thing, ſtay till you be able to do more than God hath done, than Chriſt hath done; and that will never be. God engaged, in this covenant, to hold Chriſt's hand, and to uphold him in the work of redemption: the Father bears equal burden in the work; and all the three perſons of the glorious Trinity had an equal will to it; and therefore, ſeeing a Trinity hath done it, the work is completely done. O what fools are they then, that refuſe to join in with this covenant, becauſe of their own ſhort-coming, and becauſe they cannot do ſo and ſo? Why, you can do all that you are bound to do in this covenant, and that is juſt nothing at all; for Chriſt is the covenant, and the all in all of it. If ever you do any thing in God's ſight acceptable, it is the covenant of grace that does it in you. But now, as to your right to come to this covenant; what right would you have, but much miſchief and miſery to be a right on your part; and the offer, call, and command of heaven to be a right on God's part? There is all the right to believe that I know. You would have a right founded upon ſome righteouſneſs of your own; you would have in your clouted cloke with his fair robe; but God will have none of your blackened righteouſneſs. The right is now, welcome a hard heart, to get ſoftening grace out of this covenant: welcome, guilty ſoul, to get pardoning grace out of this covenant: Welcome, filthy ſinner, to get ſanctifying grace out of this covenant: welcome, chief of ſinners, ſinner above all ſinners, welcome to come and get ſalvation out of this covenant. Will you then object, and ſay, O I cannot turn from ſin, and I muſt do that before I come? Why man, will you tell me, who but the devil taught you to take Chriſt's room, and to take his work and employment out of his hand? His name is Jeſus, becauſe he ſaves from ſin. O let him in, and he will ſpeak for himſelf; he will ſpeak to the devil, Stand by, for I have broken your head; he will ſay to ſin, Stand by, for I have condemned you by the ſacrifice of myſelf; He condemned ſin in the fleſh: yea, he will ſay to juſtice, Let me through to heaven, with all my ranſomed at my back; for I have given you full ſatisfaction. O let him ſpeak for himſelf. Chriſt hath got the guiding of all about the covenant; and when we take him, we take holineſs with him; we take perfect holineſs in him for juſtification; and we get an imparted holineſs from him for ſanctification. What is the reaſon of your want of holineſs? Becauſe you do not take Chriſt: what is the reaſon that ſome who take Chriſt, have little holineſs about them? Even becauſe they take him very aukwardly, if I may ſo call it; they take him backwardly. If we were better at taking what God gives, we would find more holineſs ſpringing up; whole taking of him would make whole holineſs to you; but your broken taking of him makes broken holineſs. O! he is the Performer of the covenant, and the performance itſelf; the Doer of all our work in us and for us. And if our taking him, and believing on him were more perfect, our holineſs would be more too; for faith purifies the heart: a poor lean faith makes poor lean obedience and ſanctification. O if you could get Chriſt once in your arms, you get all that the Father hath promiſed: but poor ſoul, the beſt way for you, when you find your own weakneſs and wickedneſs, and fear the Father's wrath, is to take Chriſt, as it were, and ſhut him into the Father's arms, and that will pleaſe him: when you get Chriſt in your arms, you want no more, you have all you need; and when God the Father gets Chriſt in his arms, he wants no more, he hath all that he ſeeks; This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed.

Know this covenant, as it is enlarged upon, in the text and context.

1. It is a covenant for light; a light to the Gentiles. Chriſt is the wiſdom and light of poor ſouls, and teaches them all the good

leſſons

leſſons that they learn: what leſſons? Why, he tells them what is the way to heaven, ſaying, I am the way: he preaches himſelf, and it well becomes him to do ſo.—He ſhews them how a man is made full by emptying himſelf; When I am weak, then am I ſtrong. If any ſay, I will do my part of the covenant, he his part; why, that is all wrong: if you make him not the all of the covenant, you make him nothing.—He teaches a man how to diſcern his voice, My ſheep hear my voice. He cauſes them to diſcern a ſpiritual preaching, a goſpel preaching; a ſpiritual prayer, a ſpiritual exerciſe. Some will tell us, it is the great and learned men of the world that know preaching beſt: true, ſome learning may make them know how words are ranged together; but he who is the light of the Gentiles, makes all, whom he ſavingly enlightens, to know his voice in a preaching; The ſpiritual man judges all things.—He teaches them to read God's will out of a providence; and to ſee more of God in ſome providences, than others ſee in all his ordinances; he teaches them to make uſe of the enemies weapons againſt themſelves. Why, ſays Satan, will ſuch a vile thing, as thou art, come to Chriſt? Yea, ſays the ſoul, becauſe I am vile, I am the more fit.—He teaches them how to dwell beſide the fountain, and how to live near God; and the man that doth this, cannot always live upon two prayers in the day. You that never knew any more about prayer than your morning and evening ſet-times of prayer, it ſeems you was never taught by him that is the light of the Gentiles. O take him, and he will teach you how to cry, ABBA, Father; and to rejoice and work righteouſneſs. O when Chriſt comes, and diſcovers himſelf to the ſoul, with his robes royal on him, that ſoul is filled with joy and peace in believing.

2. It is a covenant for ſight; to open blind eyes: a man that is called JESUS, opened mine eyes, ſays the blind man. O there are many ſorts of blind people, that need to go to Chriſt for opening their eyes: ſome are blind Atheiſts, who ſay in their hearts, There is no God; they ſee not the majeſty of God, they ſee not the juſtice of God, they ſee not the grace of God, etc. O that they were flocking to him who is the opener of blind eyes.—Some are blind Civilians; they are very civil in their walk, but as far from grace as the former: they do not diſcern the things of God; know nothing about caſes of conſcience: there are ſome men's prayers and preaching they underſtand not, if they be ſpiritual and evangelical: the man knows not himſelf, but is pure in his own eyes: his neighbours, it may be, will call him a good man, an honeſt man, and he judges himſelf to be what people call him; and yet he is a rebel and traitor to God: he hath not much ill that men can challenge; but O there are many things that God can challenge him for. God can ſee his vice in the thing that he thinks to be virtue and innocence; he may pray, and is content and conceited to hear himſelf pray, and he ſees no fault in his prayers. O have not ſuch need of Chriſt to open their eyes?—Some are blind in the matter of religion; they think all their ſins are ſins of infirmity: no doubt we are ſinners, ſay they, and great ſinners; who wants their faults more than we? O blind ſouls! know that Chriſt is the opener of blind eyes. There are blind perſons that know their bodily caſe, but not that of their ſouls; they obſerve bodily providences, but not ſoul providences: they know not down-caſtings nor upriſings of ſoul. O! go to Chriſt, and he will let you ſee.—Some are blind with reſpect to any diſtinct knowledge of the goſpel; they ſee not the ground of faith; they would build their faith on their little piece of holineſs, rather than on God's holy covenant, that only can make them holy; and hence their holineſs is always to ſeek: they ſee not how a man is juſtified in a moment, by an inward righteouſneſs complete and full; they ſee not how juſtification can be complete, without ſomewhat of their own, to make it look fair in God's ſight. O ſeek in to Chriſt, that he may open your eyes!—Again, many are blind with reſpect to true faith; they cannot give a reaſon of their faith; they have loſt their text, and cannot give a ground upon which they believe: it may be, they will ſay, they have believed all their days. O ſtranger to faith! The Son of God is given to be the opener of blind eyes, he is a covenanted Eye-ſalve for all blind people. But then,

3. It is a covenant for liberty; to bring the priſoners out of the priſon-houſe. The Son of God is the looſer of priſoners, by his covenanted indenture with the Father; The Spirit of the Lord God is upon him; for he hath anointed him: Why, Chriſt knows all the priſon-houſes, and all the bands; he was made like unto us in all things, ſin only excepted; Such an High-prieſt became us, who is holy, harmleſs, undefiled, ſeparate from ſinners. Yea, Chriſt carries all the keys of the priſon-houſe; The keys of hell and death are in his hand; he opens, and none ſhuts; and ſhuts, and none opens. The devil, it may be, hath the poor ſoul bound hand and foot in the priſon; but in comes the King of nations, the gingle of whoſe keys makes all the devils tremble, and he orders the jaylor to remove his chains; then, Dumb and deaf ſpirit, I charge thee to come out of him, ſaid Chriſt to the poſſeſt man in the goſpel; ſo ſays he, when he comes to looſe a priſoner, Thou wicked, unclean ſpirit, I charge thee to come out: thou covetous and worldly ſpirit, I charge thee to come out; thou atheiſtical, unbelieving ſpirit; thou lying and ſwearing, thou drunken and debauched ſpirit, etc. I charge thee to come out, let that ſoul go free; and, if the Son make you free, then are you free indeed. It may be the law hath the man in chains; for, by the law is the knowledge and conviction of ſin. The law comes and ſeeks his maſter's rent, ſaying, Pay what thou oweſt; and the Spirit of God comes along with the law, and convicts the man, and he every day hears himſelf proclaimed over the croſs, as it were, and put to the king's horn, there being many bonds regiſtrate upon him; he is carried to priſon, and there he lies, fearing the wrath of God, and the execution of the curſe, and threatening of the holy law. But behold, the Son of God comes, ſaying, Open to me the gates of righteouſneſs: his name is, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. The law is exceeding broad, but there is a righteouſneſs as broad as it can be. Many are long in this priſon, becauſe they take a threatening, and dwell upon that; but believe the goſpel-promiſe, and take hold of the goſpel-righteouſneſs, and you ſhall be looſed. Others dwell long in this priſon, becauſe, if they take a promiſe, they take a conditional promiſe, and make no right uſe of it; ſuch as that, To you that fear my name, ſhall the Son of righteouſneſs ariſe. There is a ſweet promiſe, the Son of righteouſneſs his ariſing; but then the condition of fearing his name, that cuts off their fingers, and hinders them from applying it, becauſe they think they want the condition: therefore, man, either take an abſolute promiſe, that hath no condition in it at all, promiſing the condition too; or elſe, if you apply the conditional promiſe, take Chriſt for the condition to make up all to you, and then you will find a looſing of priſon-bands. If you will not be content every day and every hour of the day, to be in God's common, in free grace's common, you will ly and rot in your priſon. Many abide long in this priſon, becauſe they would willingly live to two huſbands, both Chriſt and the law. We cannot live to Chriſt, unleſs we be dead to the law, Gal. ii. 19.; but the man would embrace Chriſt for a huſband, and yet ſtand ſeeking to anſwer the demands of the law: but whenever the law demands any thing of you, you muſt ſend the law to Chriſt, that he may anſwer it; and then you will be looſed. Some abide long in priſon, becauſe they build the faith of God's love on the work of God, and not on the truth of God; and hence it is, that when God's work within them languiſhes, their faith languiſhes alſo; but faith will never be firm and ſtable, till it build more upon the truth of the covenant. The ſtable Chriſtian lives by bills of exchange; but the weak, unſtable ſoul counts all by what he hath in his pocket; by what he hath in hand, and not by what he hath upon bond. But how does Chriſt, the covenant of the people, open the priſon-doors? Why, he even teaches the ſoul to ſay, Let Satan, ſin, juſtice, and the law come along with me to Chriſt; and what I cannot anſwer, he can; what I want, he hath enough to ſupply. Come, and lay all my ſins on my back, that I may away to Chriſt with them, and get more mercy and grace; for Chriſt is the all in all of this new covenant: and in this way the priſoner is looſed, to the devil's ſhame, and to Chriſt's honour. Stand to your liberty, poor ſoul, and let your ſins and wants haſten, and bring you forward to venture upon Chriſt, that he may looſe you. O that the day of the Son of man were come, when Zion will get a thouſand atheiſts at a draught, when Chriſt will get a multitude of priſoners liberate!

and

4. It is a glorious covenant, contrived wholly for glorifying God, and debaſing ſelf; therefore it follows, I am the Lord, that is my name; my glory will I not give to another, nor my praiſe to graven images. God accounts it the ſtanding of his glory, to perform all that is in this covenant, and not to give any creature a ſhare of it: he will not break his credit, having once engaged himſelf in covenant; and he will not ſuffer any to gather up the rent and revenue of it but himſelf; My glory will I not give to another. It ſtands on his glory; his word of honour, his word royal; he himſelf will do all, and no inſtrument ſhall have the glory of it. If you give inſtruments any of the glory, it is the way to blaſt the inſtruments; and blaſted may they be, rather than that Chriſt ſhould want any of the glory due unto his name. Therefore, for the Lord's ſake, if ye get any thing this day, do not give the glory to any inſtrument; for, ſays God, I am the Lord, that is my name, and my glory will I not give to another. And, for his glory's ſake, do not think of doing any part of the work yourſelves; there ſhall none get any of his glory but himſelf. Means belong to you; and, in God's name, I charge you to make uſe of them; and the obligations to duty lies upon you; but, if you have any regard for the glory of God, let God have the glory of the whole performance: not I, but grace; either the Lord will bring you to this, or he will bring you to nothing. Let it be your maxim in religion, to make always much room for the free grace of God in Chriſt.

What ſhall I make of this you have been telling me? Why, have your hearts gone into the covenant of free grace? Then I call you to a duty, ſuch as you have, ver. 19. Sing unto the Lord a new ſong, and his praiſes from the ends of the earth. Whence you may notice, that when God is giving a full and free covenant, then it is a fit time to injoin a duty; for then the man is at this, O! what ſhall I render to the Lord? Nothing advances holineſs ſo much as the getting a full and free covenant: why? becauſe Chriſt walks in the midſt of the covenant; and he is the covenant, and the whole of the covenant: and when the covenant comes, he comes; and his very preſence warms the heart, and that warmneſs enlarges it, and then the man is at that with it, I will run the way of thy commandments, becauſe thou enlargeſt my heart. Yea, when the free covenant comes to a man, and gets the throne, then holineſs will run of courſe. The narrowneſs of your thoughts of free grace hinders all your holineſs; for Chriſt will not ſit down where the covenant gets not the throne. When the free covenant comes, it makes Self go to the door, and bids pride be gone; for holineſs hath a charge never to lodge in the ſame room with pride. When the covenant comes in, pride goes out; and when pride goes out; holineſs comes in; for, he gives grace to the humble; and the moſt ſweetly humbling thing in all the world, is a view of the free covenant, where God gets all the glory, and Self nothing of it: nay, when the covenant comes, it makes Self think ſhame of itſelf, and hide its face with bluſhes. In a word, when the covenant comes, it contains in its boſom all the furniture that is neceſſary for making a man holy; and alſo, this covenant ſhews to a man that much is forgiven him; and when much is forgiven him, he loves much. And where there is much love, there is true holineſs, for the love of Chriſt conſtrains him. therefore, where this covenant never comes holineſs never grows; but when the covenan of grace in its freedom and fulneſs takes place with a ſoul, there holineſs flouriſhes. Would you know wherefore there is ſo much wickedneſs, and ſo little holineſs in Scotland, for all the talking of holineſs, as if the free diſpenſation of goſpel-grace would marr it? The very reaſon is, Little of this covenant is known; men keep faſt hold of their ſins, becauſe they will not take hold of this covenant. Where there is nothing of this covenant, there is no holineſs; where little of this covenant, there there is little holineſs; and where much of this covenant takes place, there is much holineſs.

The new covenant brings in the new ſong, ver. 10. Sing unto the LORD a new ſong; and the new ſong is the new obedience; and the new obedience is the obedience of faith and love; and that obedience of faith and love is goſpel-holineſs. O then, let the goſpel-covenant have room, or holineſs will never thrive and increaſe: take in the covenant, and it will make you ſing; Sing to the LORD a new ſong, and his praiſes to the ends of the earth; for he that offereth praiſe glorifieth God: and the more you glorify God, the more will your holineſs be like that of the redeemed above, who are ſinging the new ſong in the new Jeruſalem.

SERMON V.*

PREVENTING LOVE; or, GOD's Love to us the Cauſe of our Love to him.

1 JOHN iv. 19.

We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us.

THE great deſign of the goſpel, goſpel-ordinances, and ſacraments, is to commend the love of God in Chriſt. The ſacrament of the ſupper is a love-feaſt; and they that have their ſenſes ſpiritually exerciſed therein, will find readily all their ſenſes filled with love. What do they hear, but love! What do they ſee, but love! What do they taſte, but love! What do they feel, but love! What do they ſmell, but love!—It is a ſweet account we have of God, ver. 16. Hereby perceive we the love of God, becauſe he laid down his life for us. O happy they that have ſo learned the goſpel-catechiſm, from their experience, as to be able to anſwer to that queſtion, What is God? And to ſay, God is love! He is eſſential, boundleſs, bottomleſs, infinite love. It is true, if we look to him in the glaſs of the law, we will ſee him to be all wrath; a conſuming fire out of Chriſt; but look to him in the glaſs of the goſpel, and you will ſee him all love; a God in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf: and the ſight thereof produces love: for we love him, becauſe he firſt loved us.

The text gives us a ſhort account of the whole buſineſs betwixt God and a believer: they love one another. Here is love deſcending, God in Chriſt loving his ſaints; and here is love aſcending, the ſaints in Chriſt loving God; and the former begetting the latter. When love hath deſcended from heaven to earth, it hath finiſhed the half of its courſe; but when it aſcends from earth to heaven again, then the circle is completed.

Here is, 1. A deſcription of God's love; he loved us firſt. 2. A deſcription of our love to God; we love him for this cauſe. And,

1. We have God's love deſcribed; He FIRST loved us. If we were to make a critical diviſion, we might notice how it is deſcribed. 1. In the act, loved. O wonder that ever the heart of God ſhould have acted that way towards any ſinner of Adam's race. 2. The ſubject loving; He loved: O! a glorious He, the infinitely holy and juſt God. 3. The object loved; He loved Us; poor wretched apoſtate us. 4. The quality of this love, he loved us, and firſt loved us; intimating, both that it is an ancient love, for it is in the preterite time, he loved; yea, loved from eternity; and alſo that it is antecedent love; he FIRST loved us, before we had a being, before we were capable to love him; yea, while we were yet enemies.

2. We have the ſaints love deſcribed; we loved him, becauſe he loved us; which is alſo deſcribed in theſe four: 1. The act, love; and indeed this love of ours is but a drop of the ocean of his love. 2. The ſubject loving, we; we believers, we that got a taſte of his love. 4. The object beloved, him; we love him, who deſerves our love above all things in heaven and earth. 4. The riſe and ſource of this love of ours, We love him, becauſe he FIRST loved us; his love is the incentive and productive cauſe of your love. But I refer the further explication of the text to the proſecution of a doctrine. Many things might here be obſerved: As,

1*ſt*, None can truly love God, but ſuch as are beloved of him. Many ſpeak of the love of God, as if it were natural to them: but as true love is a ſpark of heavenly fire; ſo there is no love natural to man but the love of ſin.

2*dly*, That God hath a people in the world that love him, becauſe they are loved of him. There is in God a common love, whereby he loved the whole world; and a ſpecial love, whereby he loves the ſaints: and ſo there is in the ſaints a common love, by which they love all God's creatures; and a peculiar love that belongs to God only, whom they prize above all other things.

3*dly*, That divine love works freely. God does not trade with us upon any terms, conditions, or valuable conſiderations in and about us. We can neither buy heaven nor beg it; it muſt be given. Let not the greateſt civilian preſume; let not the greateſt prodigal deſpair: God's love is firſt on the field.

4*thly*, That as God and his ſaints love one another, ſo the reaſon of ſaints loving God, is God's loving them: there is no reaſon of God's love, but becauſe he loves. But there is reaſon enough for our love, becauſe he loved us. The believer loves God upon God's account, and for good

* This ſermon was preached after the adminiſtration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper at Portmoak, June 3d. 1723. and hath undergone three impreſſions.

reaſon;

reaſon; God loves us without any reaſon, or any cauſe from without himſelf; but we have all the reaſon in the world, why we ſhould love God. Many ſay, they love Chriſt, but they have not any reaſon for it; they that love him know why they do ſo. There are three things create love, viz. Beauty, intereſt, love. 1. Beauty; and O, but Chriſt is white and ruddy, and altogether lovely. 2. Intereſt; the more a man ſees Chriſt to be his own, the more he loves him. 3. Love; the love of God is the great parent of love; it begets love; We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us.——But having taken this ſhort view of the text, the doctrine I fix upon is this.

OBSERV. God's love to his people is the ſource of their love to him. Their love is influenced by the faith of his love; his love is the cauſe of theirs; We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us.

Now the general method that ſeems moſt native is,

I. To ſpeak of God's love to his people.
II. Of the ſaints love to God.
III. The influence his love hath upon theirs as the cauſe of it.
IV. Apply the whole in ſundry uſes.

I. To ſpeak of God's love to his people: and indeed to ſpeak of it is to ſpeak of that which is unſpeakable and inconceivable, for it paſſeth knowledge; only we may notice a few things that the ſcripture ſays of this love. I would offer ſome remarks concerning this love of God; and then ſhew more particularly, the import of this expreſſion, He firſt loved us.

1ſt. I would offer ſome remarks concerning the love of God.

Remark 1. That the fountain of this love is GOD the Father. Love begins in order of nature with the Father; hence, ſays Chriſt, I will not ſay, that I will pray the Father for you, for the Father himſelf loveth you, John xvi. 26. Chriſt prays for all the fruits and emanations of the Father's love to his people; but not for the Father's love itſelf. You miſtake greatly, Sirs, if you think that Chriſt doth purchaſe and pray for the Father's love to his people; nay, it was the Father's love that ſent Chriſt to purchaſe all the fruits and communications of his love. God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son. The love of God cannot be purchaſed; there is no need of any mediation here; I will not ſay that I will pray the Father, in this reſpect, for the Father loves you. Here is the fountain of the love. But,

Remark 2. That the channel through which this love of God does run, from this fountain, is the LORD JESUS CHRIST. God's love does not vent itſelf towards any ſinner, to the diſparagement of his infinite holineſs and juſtice; and therefore it vents and flows in and through Chriſt, Whom God hath ſet forth to be the propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs, for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt, Rom. iii. 25. God hath taken a marvellous way to manifeſt his love: when he would ſhew his power, he makes a world; when he would ſhew his wiſdom, he puts it in a frame and form that diſcovered vaſt wiſdom; when he would manifeſt the grandeur and glory of his name more, he makes a heaven, and puts angels, archangels, principalities, and powers therein; and when he will manifeſt love, what will he not do? It is a pity [illegible]d deny this love; becauſe God hath ta[illegible] a great and myſterious way of manifeſti[illegible]t in Chriſt; his death, his blood, his righteouſneſs: here is the channel.

3. The ſtreams of divine love, that flow from this fountain, in this channel, are vaſtly great; viz. Pardon, peace, ſafety, adoption, juſtification, ſanctification, audience of prayer, a bleſſing on all providences, and everlaſting triumph in heaven. I cannot enlarge upon theſe, or any other of the ſtreams that flow from this love of God; the ſtreams are ſo many, ſo great, that we ſhould loſe ourſelves there, as well as in the fountain, if we were to dive thereinto; only we are bleſſed in Chriſt with all ſpiritual bleſſings; and this love of God, and all the fruits of it, is to be enjoyed in the fellowſhip of the Spirit, 2 Cor. xiii. 13.; where we read of the grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the love of God, and the communion of the Spirit; where Chriſt is firſt mentioned, becauſe he is next to us, as being the channel through which the love of God is vented; and this love of God, and grace of Chriſt, is enjoyed in the communion and fellowſhip of the Holy Ghoſt; and that this love is from the Father, as the fountain; in the Son, as the channel; by the Holy Ghoſt, as the immediate conveyance.

4. The veſſels into which theſe ſtreams are vented, or this love is poured, are ſinners; even to them it is declared that he is the Lord, The Lord God merciful, and gracious, pardoning iniquity, tranſgreſſion, and ſin; and that God is love. This motto, that God is love, is inſcribed on the gates of heaven; and none will think ſtrange of that, becauſe the love of God, in bringing any ſinner of Adam's race there, is manifeſted to the higheſt. But we would think ſtrange, if one ſhould ſay, that this is even the inſcription written upon the gates of hell, that God is love; why? his love to himſelf, and his own juſtice, is manifeſted there; yea, not only ſo, but millions are damned, becauſe they ſlight redeeming-love; and their conſcience galls them, for contemning all the offers of love. But that which concerns us eſpecially, is, that we may read this inſcription daily upon the beautiful gate of the temple; I mean, in goſpel-ordinances, that God is love; for therein he manifeſts his love to ſinners, even to ſinners of Adam's family, in the general diſpenſation of the goſpel; and particularly to the veſſels of mercy, in the ſpecial operation of the Spirit upon them in the fulneſs of time; wherein he hath deſigned to pour out his Spirit, and ſo to pour in his love. But to omit many things here, I come,

2dly, To ſhew the particular import of this expreſſion, He firſt loved us. And,

1. It ſays, That his love is eternal love, and from everlaſting: He firſt loved us. I have loved thee with an everlaſting love, Jer. xiii. 3.; as it is to everlaſting, ſo it is from everlaſting; as it will never have an end, ſo it never had a beginning, but is as antient as the eternal God is. O! what an amazing thought is this, that God ſhould have had thoughts of love towards any poor ſinners, like you and me, from the beginning of his being, which is without a beginning!—But, to prevent miſtakes, you would know that the love of God is twofold; his love of deſtination, and his love of approbation: his love of deſtination and purpoſe, whereby he

he is said to have chosen us in Christ, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy; having predestinate us to the adoption of children, Eph. i. 4, 5.; and this love he is said to manifest even before a man's conversion, 1 John iv. 19. In this was manifested the love of God towards us, because God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved him, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sin.——Again, there is his love of approbation and friendship; such as that spoken of, John xiv. 23. If a man love me, and keep my words, my Father will love him; and we will come to him, and make our abode with him. Now, the object of the former love, to wit, the love of destination, is every elect soul, and that from all eternity, as well as in time, even before their conversion and union to Christ; the object of the latter, to wit, his love of approbation and friendship, is every believer united to Christ, to whom he begins to manifest his everlasting love personally; for, though he loved and approved of them from eternity in Christ, yet they cannot be said to be actually loved and approved in their own persons, till once their persons are unite to Christ. Though God's love be everlasting and immutable as himself is, yet there is a time wherein he begins to manifest his love: there is no variation or shaddow of turning in God's love; all the change is in the person beloved, not in God. It is mere blasphemy to say, that God begins to love them whom before he hated, in a proper and strict sense. It is true, the elect are children of wrath, even as others, by nature, whatever they are by divine destination, being ever the object of God's love in this sense; yet in some sense, he begins to love them, in respect of the manifesting of his love to them, and the outletting of his love upon them; when his love is taken, not so much for his immanent act, as for his transient act, not for any thing in himself, but for what flows from him to them; the love that is in himself is still the same, but the acts of love that flow forth to them, these begin to appear, when he manifests himself to them, as he does not to the world; when he comes to them for their salvation, and reveals his Son in them: and here also he is still before hand with them; He first loved us.

2. He first loved us; it says, that his love is antecedent love; as it is first in point of time, yea, from all eternity, so it is first in point of order of time. We cannot manifest our love to him, till first he manifest his love to us. Men may feign love to God and Christ, before they know any thing of God's love in Christ towards them, but they truly have no love to him; even the elect themselves have no love to him by nature, they are enemies, and without God, and without Christ in the world; buried in the grave of sin and corruption even as others; dead in trespasses and sins, and slaves to divers lusts; the devil dwelling in them, working in them, reigning in them, as a man dwells in his house, or works in his shop, or reigns upon his throne: they have no more acquaintance with him, or love to him, than others, till by grace they be regenerate, and made to come to God in Christ, and be raised up to a new and lively hope. Common favours indeed, they may have, and God is always sure to notice his elect, and to have a care of them; and many remarkable deliverances will they meet with, even while unconverted. You will find few gracious persons but they will have even good things to tell of the Lord's kindness to them in their youth; but yet love and hatred cannot be known by these things that are seen; for bad men have had the like deliverances, and manifold common mercies, and common grace perhaps also; but all this while they are strangers to true love to God, till once some rays of his everlasting love go before them, and make way for the breaking of their enmity, and engaging them to love him.

3. He first loved us; it says, that his love is absolutely free love. If he first loved us, before we have any love to him, or loveliness in us, O how free is it! His love is free in several respects. It is free love in that it is without force or constraint; we must even put ourselves in his reverence, and not think to compel God, as if he could be obliged to it; nay, if we get any thing, we must be in grace's debt, and ly at grace's door, as poor beggars, for an alms for Christ's sake.—It is free love in that it is without reluctancy; it is with all his heart. There are some objects come to our door, and though we give them an alms, yet it is with some reluctancy; we are not so free-hearted towards them as to others whom we have a kindness for; these we will give to, with all our heart; we give them with as much pleasure as if we were getting to ourselves: so God's special gifts are given with all his heart; he takes pleasure in giving; he delights in shewing mercy.—It is free love, in that it is without merit and motive; his love is neither desired nor deserved, and yet he loves; I will love them freely: I will do it undeservedly, even while they deserve to be thrust down to the lowest hell; Not for your sakes do I this, be it known unto you.—It is free love, in that it is without price; he seeks nothing for what he gives, he takes nothing for it; nay, he deals with us as poor beggars that have nothing to offer for what he gives, and nothing wherewith to recompense his kindness, after he hath given.—It is free in opposition to all proper terms and conditions. Papists tell us of the merit of congruity, and the merit of condignity; and many ignorant protestants think they do enough when they exclude the word merit, but in the room of merit they bring in a world of conditions; and tell us, upon condition you do so and so, then God will do this and that to you; telling us, God hath made a covenant with us, not like the covenant of works, but upon easier terms, requiring only some little things accommodated to our weakness: "It cannot be called merit, "say they, for there is no proportion betwixt "what we do, and what we get; it is, say "they, but as if one should hold out a penny, "and get a kingdom for it." Many such subtile reasonings of men there are, that tend to exalt self, and self-righteousness, which would all evanish before the light of this very text, if viewed in a spiritual and evangelical manner. He first loved us.

4. He first loved us; it says, that his love is a preventing love; it prevents our love, and all the good that can be about us; for he prevents with the blessings of his goodness. I might here illustrate this by shewing, 1. The object of his love, whom he prevents. 2. The time of his love, when he prevents them. 3. The dawning of his love upon them, whereby he prevents them. 4. The fruits and effects of his love in them, wherein he prevents them.

dawning

(1.) The object of his love, whom he prevents. If we view whom he loves, we cannot but see it to be preventing love. The love of God lighted upon fallen men, not fallen angels, though much more noble and spiritual beings; and why? even because he hath mercy on whom he will have mercy: his love falleth upon the poor, foolish, weak nothings of this world for ordinary; not upon the wise, noble, and mighty; not many such are called; he reveals these things to babes, not to the wise and prudent of the world. We must not think, that outward things, such as wisdom, and learning, and worldly advantages, move God to set his love upon any; Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight: yea, his love vents ordinarily upon the most stubborn and rebellious sinners in the world, more than upon the most civil and moral persons, that have led a better life than the generality of their neighbours; who have had more of the righteousness of the law than other people; who have been better-natured, in respect of their pleasant natural disposition, than others; and who have had a liberal education, so as to be trained up, not only in manifold arts and sciences, but in manifold religious duties from their childhood. Grace many times passes by such persons as these, and falls upon more knobby, rugged persons. The young man in the gospel may be put to say, All these things have I done from my youth up, and yet go away from Christ, when a bloody Manasses, and persecuting Paul are received into favour and mercy. In a word, whomsoever he makes the object of his manifested love in time, they are persons unworthy of his love; they are full of enmity against him, and bent to backsliding from him, and wofully averse from returning to him. That God should love sinners, and great sinners, O what preventing love is it!

(2.) The time of his love, when he prevents them, does also illustrate this. Many a time he make his grace to reach them, not when they are in their best frame or mood; but behold a Paul going to Damascus, with the knife in his hand, ready to cut the throats of the saints; grace out-runs him, seizes him, lays hold upon him, and the love of a God in Christ overcomes him; he is made Christ's prisoner, vanquished and brought to subjection. I do not say, that it always holds, that a person gets the revelation of grace, when going on in sin; but the first efflux of grace towards them is many times, when in a very bad case: the Lord arrests them, many times, when they have been about some wicked act of sin; the Lord will fall in at such a time upon their conscience, fill them with terror, and humble them under his mighty hand; and never leave them till he hath quickened them, and made them live; When thou wast in thy blood, I said unto thee, Live. But what need we say more concerning the time of his love, to show the preventing nature of it, than what God himself says, Rom. ix. 11. Jacob have I loved, and Esau have I hated; the children being not yet born, neither having done good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth? Before the man was born, or had done either good or evil, behold he is an object of divine love; Jacob have I loved.

(3.) The dawning of his love upon them, whereby he prevents them, may further illustrate this, That he first loved us. By this dawning of his love, I understand, not only the love and grace that is objectively displayed in the glorious gospel; but especially the first glimmering of the subjective light, or the dawning of the day of power, wherein the person is made willing when the gospel comes, Not in word only, but in power; when he girds his sword upon his thigh, even his glory and his majesty, as that word may be read, Psal. xlv. 3.; for the display of the glory of his grace and love, is the sword whereby he subdues and conquers his enemies: and till this will-conquering day of power take place, what is in the will but impotence and insufficiency, to think any thing as of ourselves? and not only impotency, but aversion from every thing that is good; and not only aversion, but opposition and contrariety to the holy nature and will of God; The carnal mind is enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. This dawning then of the day of power, to make them willing, must take place before there can be any gracious motion in the soul towards God; for all the legal conviction and humiliation that goes before this, works only from a principle of self-love, and self-preservation, till this great master-faculty of the soul, the will being conquered, carry the rest of the faculties of the soul towards God.

(4.) The fruits and effects of his love in them, wherein he prevents them. And here I will tell you some of these things that his love prevents, in regard that they are fruits of his love. And,

1. His love prevents our holiness; for that is a fruit of his love. I hope you know that sanctification and holiness is a work of God's free grace, and so an effect of his free love; and yet, I fear, you bewray your ignorance of the gospel in thinking, O must I not be holy before ever God love me? Must not a man be somewhat holy, and therefore God will love him, and give him more? O great ignorance to think so; What hast thou but what thou hast received? Is not the very first beginning of holiness from God? Is it not he that infuses the habit of grace, and takes away the heart of stone, and gives the heart of flesh; and so his love prevents our habitual holiness, and also our actual holiness, and all our good works? Surely you may know this; for you have learned to say, that as it is by his free grace, that we are renewed in the whole man, after the image of God, so it is by the same free grace that we are enabled more and more to die unto sin, and live unto righteousness. If any good work, truly good, be wrought by you, is it not the fruit of God's creating power? For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus, unto good works.

2. His love prevents our faith; for that is a fruit of his love. You will say, it is true, he must make us holy, but must we not come to him for it? Is it not upon condition that we believe, that he loves us, and saves us? My dear friends, whence is it that we get faith? If ever we have any true faith, is it upon the account of foreseen faith that God loves any man? that is rank Arminianism. Is it because we had faith before? O! does faith come out of our own shop? Or, is it spun out of our own bowels, and forged upon our own anvil?

Can we bring faith out of our own head or heart? Can dry bones live, or raise themselves out of the grave? Nay, it is as impossible for us to believe, and raise ourselves up to the life of faith, as it is for a carcase of clay to put life in itself; nay, is not faith the gift of God? Is not Christ the author and finisher of faith? Who says, When I am lifted up, I will draw all men to me? It requires the same power that raised Christ from the dead. O then! Let not your imagination in this matter cross the very first principles of religion, so as to think that your faith, if you have any, is the cause of God's love, while his love is the cause of your faith; He first loved us.

3. His love prevents our repentance; for that is a fruit of his love: Why, say you, must we not repent, and reform, before God set his love upon us? And ought we not, by the exercise of our common gifts and abilities that God hath given us, work up ourselves to something of this, in order to our obtaining the favour of God? Alas, for such ignorance, and such a gospel-darkening religion, as is like to come in fashion in this generation! O! is not repentance as much a gift of God, and fruit of his love, as any other graces and fruits of the Spirit? Acts v. 31. Christ is exalted a Prince and a Saviour, by the right-hand of God, to give repentance to Israel, as well as remission of sin. We have a great deal of noise made about the necessity of gospel-repentance before, and in order to justification, and that even as a condition and qualification; here is indeed a new scheme of divinity, of which there is no foundation in our standards of doctrine. It is true, repentance is so necessary, that none can expect pardon without it; and so say I, holiness and sanctification are so necessary, that none can expect pardon without them: but is therefore holiness and sanctification necessary in order to justification? I think it is hard to maintain this without running to Rome, and making sanctification before justification, and in order to it: for if actual gospel-repentance be not a part of sanctification, I know not what it is; yea, as described in our Catechism, it comprehends the whole of sanctification.——But to return; why, may one say, may we not repent of our sins, in some measure, and reform our lives, and humble ourselves, and mourn? At least, can we not shed a tear? Can we not leave off our tippling, and quit our lusts, and think upon death, judgment, and eternity, so as by the meditation of these we shall get ourselves wrought up to a strong and strange mortification to all things in the world; yea, become as eminent in this as any saint in all the country, for all their boasting? Well, much good may your repentance do you; and would to God that you were doing more than you do. But I would have you suspect your repentance; yea, I tell you assuredly, that even by the utmost use of the highest common gifts and graces, you cannot repent; and when you have brought yourself by these means to the greatest measure of legal repentance, yet there is no promise in all the Bible to that repentance; For all the promises are yea, and amen, in Christ Jesus; and till you get in to Christ, by a faith of his operation, your common legal repentance is a sinful repentance; For whatsoever is not of faith, is sin; and so it is a God-displeasing repentance; For without faith, it is impossible to please God. In a word, your repentance, which you so much magnify in your heart, for I suppose you are not so destitute of sense, as to speak thus before the world; this repentance, I say, is so far from disposing you for Christ, that it tends effectually to make you oppose Christ; why? you find heart-melting and mourning, tears and sorrows, great flashes and love-floods of affection, and then you think all is right; you see no more need of Christ, and come short of him, instead of being drawn into him. "A man in this case, as one fitly expresses it, is like one that comes to court a "lady; but having got a sight of the hand-"maid, he falls in love with her, courts her, "and marries her, who yet was but the person "that should have led him to the lady he was "proposing to match with: so here, Christ is "the match, the law and the duties thereof "are the hand-maid; well, thou falls to du-"ties, sorrowing for sin, and the like; you "have fallen in love with that, and seek no "further." Why, you will say, by this means you would have no preparatory work at all. It seems by this doctrine, say you, a man must come to Christ at the first leap, reeking out of his sins, before his life be reformed; nay, Sirs, I must tell you, in the Lord's name, that the design of a right preparatory work, is to force you out of your feigned repentance and reformation, and out of your false hopes and confidence, and to sweep away your refuge of lies: and if ever God prepare you for Christ, he will bring you to say, "O, I cannot repent, I can-"not reform, I cannot mourn; and give me a "world I cannot command a hearty sigh, or a "sob for sin: I can do nothing; I am hard like "a stone, and black like a devil; and unless "Christ help, I am utterly and eternally un-"done." And this tends to give the soul a great demonstration of the freedom of his love, that it prevents our repentance: He first loved us.

4. His love prevents our prayers; for that is also a fruit of his love. You will say, though we cannot attain to be holy, and cannot believe and repent, yet we must pray, and seek, or else we cannot get his favour and love. Wo is me that people should have such dark and dangerous notions of the method of salvation! Pray, whence comes your prayers, if they be worth the name of prayers? Do they not come from heaven, and from the Spirit of grace and supplication? If you have any desires that are worth the naming, they come from above: and if they come wholly out of your heart or head, they are not worth; yea, whatever desire you have out of Christ, and whatever prayer is not put up on this altar, the name of Christ Jesus, and by the help of the Spirit of Christ, there is no promise made to it: for, however several promises are made to God's ordinances and institutions, which oblige you to be about his hand in the use of the means; yet no promise is made to your performance out of Christ. Expect then no favour for, or upon the account of your duties; for if that be your way of doing, you need to pray that God may force you out of your prayers. Let none think now that I am discouraging any from the use of means, and the performance of duties; nay, I take witness, that, in God's name, I call you to the use thereof; and declare you are obliged thereto by the command and authority of Father,

Son,

Son, and Holy Ghoſt. But, in the ſame name, I call you to the right uſe of the means, the goſpel-uſe of the means; for that legal notion of praying and ſeeking, that I find for ordinary among people, as if their ſeeking would prevent God's love, and procure his favour, is derogatory to the goodneſs of God; and hath a tendency to make a Chriſt of their prayers, yea, more than a Chriſt; in regard it would be aſcribing a cauſality to our prayers, which is not even done to the merits of Chriſt in this matter: for, as I ſaid before, the love of God in itſelf, cannot be procured; Chriſt himſelf did not procure it; for God's love prevented Chriſt's miſſion, and ſent him to procure all that he did procure and purchaſe: and therefore, if you think your prayers will purchaſe God's love, you make more than a Chriſt of your prayers; and they are offenſive to God, diſhonouring to Chriſt, and prejudicial to your own ſouls. The ſaints themſelves know that it is not by their duties that they obtain his love; but in duty ſometimes they get a ſenſe of his love. Why, may ſome ſay, we need pray none at all, if we get no good by our prayers. Really, man, theſe prayers of yours, which you make your righteouſneſs, and for which you expect to be loved, and juſtified, and ſaved, they are the moſt abominable to God, and unprofitable to you, in the world. To what purpoſe is the multitude of your ſacrifices? Therefore bring no more vain oblation: your incenſe is abomination to him; he cannot away with it, it is iniquity, even your ſolemn meeting, Iſa. i. 11, 13. See Iſa. lxvi. 3. Therefore you have need to pray, that God would learn you the myſtery of prayer; for you will never find it a pleaſant, comfortable, and profitable exerciſe, while you ſet it before his love, as a cauſe of it; whereas it follows after his love as a fruit of it. Hence all that ever prayed to purpoſe, or wreſtled with him for the bleſſing, have found that they could not pray, more than they could move the earth from its centre, until his grace prevented their prayers; and they can all ſet their ſeal to that word, Iſa. lxv. 1. I am found of them that ſought me not. None ever ſought him aright, till free grace ſought them out, and found them in ſome reſpect.

Queſt. But is it not ſaid, Ezek. xxxvi. 37. For theſe things will I be enquired of by the houſe of Iſrael? True, betwixt gracious ſeeking, and finding, there is a certain connexion; for gracious and ſpiritual ſeeking preſuppoſes grace to ſeek, and that his love hath already prevented our prayers; and when he gives grace to ſeek, to be ſure he will give more and more, not for our ſeeking, but for the ſake of his promiſe in Chriſt Jeſus, and upon his account. But if we underſtand that word as an encouragement to all, whether gracious or graceleſs perſons, For this will I be enquired of by the houſe of Iſrael, then the meaning is not, I will give you none of theſe things, to wit, the new heart, the new ſpirit, there promiſed, and the Spirit to be put within you; I ſay, the meaning is not, I will give you none of theſe things, but for the ſake of your prayers, and till your prayers produce them; nay, that expoſition would be croſs to the very context, which ſays, Not for your ſake do I this, O houſe of Iſrael; be it known to you, and be aſhamed, and confounded for your own ways: you may be aſhamed of your prayers and duties, as well as your ſins and iniquities; and therefore it is not for the ſake of your perſons or prayers either, be it known unto you; and therefore the meaning of the word is, that as all Iſrael hath a right of acceſs to theſe promiſes; and all poor ſinners that hear tell of them, may come to a throne of grace, and plead for the accompliſhment of them to themſelves, in a way of free grace; ſo in the diligent uſe of all theſe means and ordinances of my appointment, they ſhall find, that I will yield myſelf exorable and eaſy to be entreated; and ſo it is an encouragement to prayer, in expectation that God will confer the promiſed bleſſings, and not that our prayers will obtain them; and therefore the more that a man turns ſuch a ſcripture to a covenant of works, as if he were upon terms with God, that upon condition that he pray and ſeek, God will give him the promiſed bleſſings; the more he does ſo, I ſay, the further is he from all theſe bleſſings; whereas the leſs hope and expectation that a poor ſoul hath from his prayers, he will always find, that he will come the more ſpeed.

In a word, the prayer you ſpeak of, man, is either a natural or a ſpiritual prayer; if it be a natural prayer, then, as the natural man is bound to pray, and yet hath nothing to expect, but of ſovereign free grace; ſo there is no connexion betwixt his prayer and the promiſe, unleſs we turn rank Arminians: If it be a ſpiritual prayer, then to be ſure, the promiſe hath prevented his prayer; for to ſay that none of theſe promiſes are given, till a man pray in the Spirit for them, is croſs to the whole current of ſcripture, and ſpiritual reaſon; for, how can a man pray in the Spirit till that promiſe be accompliſhed in ſome meaſure upon him, I will put my Spirit within you? Thus his love prevents our prayers, it prevents our deſires and endeavours: He firſt loved us.—And ſo much ſhall ſuffice for the firſt general head.

II. The ſecond thing propoſed was, to ſpeak of believers love to God and Chriſt; We love him: This is but a ſmall ſtream that flows from, and runs again to the ocean of his love. We may take up this love of the ſaints towards God in the following conſiderations.

1. We may conſider this love in its nature. It is not a ſpark of natural kindling; it is not from natural reaſon or common grace, no; it is from the ſaving operation of the Holy Ghoſt, circumciſing the heart to love God; the fruits of the Spirit are faith, love, and the reſt of the graces: it is altogether ſuper-natural; for the natural mind is enmity againſt God: we naturally hate God. Sirs, though the worſt perſon in the world will ſay they do not hate God, yet they really do it; and their hatred appears in their averſion from him and his ways, their oppoſition to his commands and counſels, their contempt of his promiſes, and neglect of his ſalvation, and his Chriſt; for they will not come to him, that they might have life. It is God's prerogative to turn the heart from enmity to love, from darkneſs to light, and from the power of Satan unto God: no man can turn himſelf more than the Ethiopian can change his ſkin, or the leopard his ſpots, Jer. xiii. 23. Men, by their improvement of their natural faculties, and by common grace, which moſt part of men have ſomething of, come to a ſermon, and go to their knees, carry with ſomewhat of morality and modeſty, but they are not able to command command themſelves to love God; nay, duty is a burden; the word is a wearineſs to them; they are mad upon idols; they make the Lord to ſerve with their ſin; and their duties to ſerve as a covering to their luſts; and make uſe of duty for this, that they may be looked upon as good men, and not Atheiſts: but let them do their beſt, they cannot expel that curſed habit of enmity, nor introduce the contrary habit of love, till the power of God come along diſcovering the bounty and glory of Chriſt, and transforming the ſoul after the ſame image; for this love imports a ſaving knowledge of this glorious object beloved, a high eſteem of the object thus known, a hearty choice of him whom we thus eſteem, and a ſweet recumbency in this choice. The underſtanding is made to ſee, the judgment to eſteem, the will to chuſe, and the ſoul to acquieſce in him.—But theſe things I cannot enlarge upon.

2. We may conſider this love in the kinds of it. And here I would ſpeak only of two kinds in general, namely, a more common, and a more ſpecial love.

(1.) There is a more common love, which even hypocrites may have, and may have it as a fruit of God's Spirit in this common operation, while yet they are not renewed in the whole man. As they may have a temporary faith, ſo they may have a love proportioned to this. The ſeed of the word falls into the heart, as into ſtony ground, and it quickly ſprings up in ſome flaſhes of affection, and fair flouriſhes of a profeſſion, ſo as they may ſeem, to themſelves and others, to be among the beſt of Chriſtians, while yet it is not any ſpecial work of God's Spirit, but a common gift and grace. The Lord deſigns to tame and civilize ſome, as well as to ſave and convert others. Now, this love, however great and vehement it may be in appearance, yet it is but a land-flood: at the beſt it hath not a ſpring; it is nouriſhed as a pool of water, not as a well of water; the water which the Lord, gives to his people, it is in them as a well of water, ſpinging up to everlaſting life, John iv. 14. But the hypocrite's love is a returning to the Lord, but not with the whole heart. It is a love as is deſcribed in the Jews, They ſerved the Lord, and they ſerved Aſhtaroth: to pacify their conſciences, they will ſerve the Lord; but to ſatisfy their affections, they will ſerve their luſts: they never ſell their all for the pearl of great price; they never reſt upon him as their preſent, only, and greateſt good, nor find full ſatisfaction in him. They never come to that with it, Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none in all the earth that I deſire beſides thee. There is ſomething beſide Chriſt that they deſire; they have ſome eſteem of him, when he ſmiles on them in his providences, when they get eaſe to their conſciences; and, by their falſe hopes of heaven, apprehend matters to be well-enough with them. But when the Lord begins to frown, and the courſe of his providence is turned, then their love is turned into hatred; and the hatred wherewith they hate him, is greater than the love wherewith they loved him. As John's hearers rejoice in his light for a ſeaſon, and but for a ſeaſon; and Chriſt's hearers cry this day, Hoſanna, and the next day, Crucify him; and, as many people followed Chriſt for the loaves, becauſe he fed them; ſo many ſtill follow Chriſt, ſome for outward things, and becauſe of his general merciful diſpenſations; yea, ſome for inward things: O, ſay they, ordinances are pleaſant; it is a ſweet thing to get a tear at a ſermon, and to be raviſhed with ſomething of the glory of heaven, and privileges of the ſaints: no doubt the joy with which the ſtony-ground hearers received the word, had its ſweetneſs and pleaſure, and thereupon their hearts are aloft, and they think they love Chriſt above all things; but yet their root is rottenneſs; they never truly come to Chriſt, to get reſt to their hearts and conſciences from the filth and guilt of ſin. But,

(2.) There is a ſpecial love, whereby the whole ſoul is carried out towards the Lord, as its chief, preſent, and only good, and whereby the ſoul ſees nothing in heaven or earth deſirable in compariſon of him; and that acts towards a preſent Chriſt, in rejoicing in him; and towards an abſent Chriſt, by lamenting after him: it acts by cleaving to him, when they have the greateſt temptations to go away, and it appears moſt when Chriſt threatens to depart; and it cleaves moſt to him, when many are departing from him; To whom ſhall we go, thou haſt the words of eternal life. It counts all but loſs and dung for him: Chriſt gets the throne of their hearts, the cream of their affections, the very ſoul of their ſouls, their moſt vehement love; whatever other things they love, it is but in a ſubordination to him; whatever other things they rejoice in, he is their chief joy; I will go to the altar of God, to God my exceeding joy; Pſal. xliii. 4. Their joy in him exceeds the joy that they have in any thing elſe in a world.

3. We may conſider this love in the degrees of it. I would not be for the breaking a bruiſed reed, or quenching a ſmoaking flax; my heart's deſire is, that all that love Chriſt, even in the weakeſt degree, if it be a ſpecial love, may go away rejoicing in him; therefore I tell you of theſe four degrees of this love.

(1.) There is a love of deſire after Chriſt, that is not yet arrived at a full complacency in him; The deſire of our ſoul is to thy name, ſays the Church. A poor creature may have a rooted deſire after Chriſt, that is not yet come the length of a rooted delight in him; becauſe through unbelief they queſtion their ſpecial intereſt in him: but bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs; for they ſhall be filled. If a gracious deſire after Chriſt be rooted in the ſoul, there is true love. Yea, further, this deſire hath ſeveral degrees alſo: ſometimes the deſire is like a ſmoaking flax, hardly can one diſcern the ſpark of red fire, only they ſee ſmoke as a ſign of fire; a ſmoaking flax.—This deſire may be ſtrangely chocked, ſometimes through the prevalence of unbelief: even the children of God, that have ſound and ſaving deſires, may become ſo heartleſs, as that they have no boldneſs to come to the Lord, and expreſs their deſires; all they can ſay is, that there is ſomething about the bottom of their heart of an earneſt wiſh, that the Lord would come to them, when they cannot come to him: all they can ſay is, O, when will he come to me! Or, when will he give me a viſit! O, there is none in the world needs a viſit ſo much as I!—Sometimes their deſires are more vivid and lively, more bright and ſhining, and break forth in ardent prayers and pantings of ſoul after him; As the hart pants after the water brooks, ſo pants my ſoul after thee, O God: my ſoul thirſts for God, for the living God. With my ſoul have I deſired thee in the night, and with my ſpirit within me, will I ſeek thee early.—Sometimes again their deſires become ſo ſtrong, as that the perſon is made to put on a reſolution, as David did, I will neither give ſleep to mine eyes, nor ſlumber to mine eye-lids, till I find out a place for the Lord, an habitation for the mighty God of Jacob. Lo, we heard of it at Ephrata, we found it in the fields of the wood, Pſal. cxxxii. 4, 5, 6.—Their deſires may be ſuch as to make them reſtleſs, till they get their hearts made a fit habitation for him; they may be ſuch as to carry their ſouls aloft above all temporary enjoyments, and make them mount up on wings as eagles; and to look down upon all the enjoyments of time, and ſublunary comforts, as altogether contemptible. But then,

thee

(2.) As there is a love of deſire, ſo of delight and complacency, whereby they take up their reſt and ſatisfaction in him, ſaying, Though the fig-tree ſhould not bloſſom, nor fruit ſhould be found in the vine, etc.; yet will I rejoice in the Lord; I will joy in the God of my ſalvation. Indeed, they that have found ſaving deſires after the Lord, are unſatisfied till their deſire be turned to delight, and till they attain this, Whom having not ſeen we love; in whom, though now we ſee him not, yet believing, we rejoice with joy unſpeakable and full of glory. When the Lord manifeſts himſelf to them, as reconciled in Chriſt, when he manifeſts his love to their ſouls, and opens the flood-gates of his Spirit's influences, O then they cannot but delight in him, and be ſatisfied as with marrow and fatneſs; for then they have a feaſt of fat things, and of wines on the lees, well refined. O ſenſualiſts, that never had a more pleaſant hour all your days, than when you ſat down to a hearty meal of meat or drink, you are but a miſerable creature; There is meat to eat that you know not of, and joy that you intermeddle not with. O the joy and triumph that there is in the enjoyment of a God in Chriſt; Thanks be to God, which always cauſes us to triumph in Chriſt; ALWAYS CAUSES TO TRIUMPH! It is true, the ſouls of believers may ſometimes wander from the Lord, even after they have experienced this enjoyment; and never more readily than on the back of a ſweet communion: their deſires may wander after other things; they may fall aſleep; they are not yet perfect, nor delivered from a body of death; and therefore after that, they may come under doubts, and great fears; and theſe may bring them very low, and may much alienate their hearts from the Lord; yea, but they are as the needle in the compaſs, that can never reſt or ſettle till it comes to the right point. They can never reſt till they get into his boſom again: they find their caſe a wilderneſs caſe, wherein they are wandering from mountain to hill, and therefore they ſay, Return unto thy reſt, O my ſoul: they are made again to return to him, and take more delight in him than ever; and, by delighting in him, get an earneſt-penny of heaven.

(3.) There is a love of benevolence and good-will towards Chriſt, and his intereſt in the world, that all his concerns in the world may go right, and that no weapon formed againſt Zion may proſper. By this love, all theſe things, whereby God makes himſelf known, his word, his ordinances, his people, his precepts, his truths, are precious. And to this we may join,

(4.) The love of beneficence, whereby they do all they can for the honour of Chriſt, the good of his church, the credit of his truths, and for bearing down every intereſt oppoſite to his. —But theſe things may perhaps fall under another head.

4. We may conſider this love in the dimenſions of it: as God's love towards his people hath height, and depth, and length, and breadth, ſo there is ſomething like dimenſions of that ſort in their love to him.

(1.) Their love is a high love, it hath a height; it is a tranſcendent love; they love him above all things; they love him more than father or mother, ſiſter or brother, profit or pleaſure, credit or preferment; yea, doubtleſs, they count all things but loſs and dung in compariſon of him. The language of their ſoul is, None but Chriſt: in all things he hath the pre-eminence.

(2.) Their love hath a depth; for it is rooted in the heart, and does not float in the fancy. The love of many is but like a thaw, that will ſometimes be on the face of the ground, by the heat of the ſun, while there is a hard froſt below in the earth; ſo their love is but ſuperficial, upon the ſurface of the ſoul; there is ſome thaw, but the heart is hard: true love hath a deep root.

(3.) Their love hath a breadth: they not only love his mercy and grace, but his faithfulneſs, juſtice, and holineſs: they love not only his covenant promiſes, but his kindly threatenings; not only his favourable providences, but alſo his fatherly chaſtiſements: they love every thing that hath any thing of God in it; his people, becauſe they are his image; his ordinances, becauſe they are his galleries: they love the place where his honour dwells; and every thing that hath a divine ſtamp and ſuperſcription.

(4.) Their love hath a length in it, as well as a height, and depth, and breadth. It is not like the hope of the hypocrite that periſheth. Their hope and love, who are hypocrites, is built upon an airy fancy and empty imagination; it is built upon ſand, and ſo it falls to the ground; but the believer's love is built upon the faith of the promiſe, and the faith of the love of God; it is built upon the rock of ages, and ſo the building ſtands. Some will have a love to a thing to-day, and quit it to-morrow; but love to Chriſt will never go quite out. It is true, their love is not always exerciſed, or always equal in its exerciſe; for ſometimes it is like a coal below the aſhes, yet all the power of hell cannot quench it; for many waters cannot quench love: it may be overtoped with the weeds of corruption, and out of view; for the fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit; and the fleſh may be ſtrong, and the Spirit or grace weak, but ſtill the root remains, and ſhall grow up to perfection.

5. We may conſider this love in the properties of it. Some of them have been touched in the preceding heads, therefore, in ſhort,

(1.) True love to God in Chriſt is a free and voluntary love. Some people force themſelves up, as it were, to an eſteem for Chriſt, by uſing manifold arguments; and after all, it is but imaginary and mercenary love: they are not under under the conſtraint of goſpel-grace, but the conſtraint of legal hope; expecting ſome reward for their love and ſervice: but here the perſon loves the Lord for himſelf, and ſerves him without legal compulſion or coaction; or by legal fears of hell, or legal hope of heaven. As he loves them freely, in oppoſition to merit, ſo they love him freely in oppoſition to legal compulſion.

(2.) True love is a ſincere love; Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jeſus Chriſt in ſincerity. It is a loving the Lord with all the heart, ſoul, mind, and ſtrength; it is hearty, and hath its abode in the inner chambers of the heart. It does not ly in the tongue or lip, or the outward profeſſion only, but in the heart, and affection, and ſoul of man.

(3.) True love is an ardent love: it is compared to fire that hath a moſt vehement flame: it is like fire for light; it is the diſcovery of Chriſt that makes the ſoul to love him, and it makes the man's light to ſhine before men, ſo as his heavenly Father is glorified. It is like fire for heat; it heats the breaſt, and warms the affections, and flames towards Chriſt when he is ſeen. It is like the fire for its conſuming quality; it conſumes luſts and corruptions; Many waters cannot quench it; no water of ſin, of affliction, of deſertion, or temptation.

(4.) True love is active love; it makes the ſoul to act for God, and for Chriſt, ſaying, O what ſhall I do for him? What ſhall I render to the Lord for all his benefits? It conſtrains to ſervices and ſufferings for Chriſt.

(5.) True love is an uniting love: it carries out the ſoul towards union and communion with God in Chriſt; he affects communion with him in his thoughts and meditations; My meditation of him ſhall be ſweet. Communion with him in his ordinances, communion with him in his grace, and communion with him in glory.

(6.) True love is a ſolicitous and careful love: it is careful to avoid whatever is offending to God, careful to provide whatever is pleaſing to him; careful and ſolicitous leſt it ſhould loſe his company; careful and ſolicitous to recover a ſight of him when he abſents himſelf.

(7.) True love is a bold and venturing love; it will adventure upon reproaches, perſecution, dangers, difficulties, yea, and death itſelf, for the ſake of the Lord Jeſus. When there are greateſt difficulties, true love will cleave moſt to Chriſt; when there is a general apoſtacy, true love will appear moſt for Chriſt, as the two witneſſes, Rev. xi. 3. When men make breaches upon the truth of God, the true lover of Chriſt will caſt himſelf into the breach, as Pergamus did, Rev. ii. 13. In a word, when love cannot ſtand in the breach, it will mourn for the diſhonour done to Chriſt, and weep in ſecret places for it. All theſe proceed from the invincible valour of love.

(8.) True love is a perſevering love: when faith and hope, in ſome reſpect, will carry us no further than the grave, love will go over the border of time, and remain in heaven for ever.

(9.) True love is a conjugal love, a marriage love: and as conjugal love is a loyal love; ſo is true love to Chriſt; it calls Jeſus LORD and KING: He is thy Lord, and worſhip thou him, Pſal. xlv. 11. As conjugal love is a chaſte love; ſo true love to Chriſt cannot endure a rival; it allows no mate, no luſt, no Delilah, to come in Chriſt's room, without the utmoſt abhorrence. As conjugal love is a reverential love; ſo true love to Chriſt carries towards him with holy fear and reverence, and filial regard. And as a congugal love is a fruitful and fruit-bearing love; ſo true love to Chriſt is a love that bears fruit to him; Ye are dead to the law by the body of Chriſt, and married to another, even to Chriſt, that ye might bring forth fruit unto God. Again, (10.) True love is an aſſimilating love; it changes the perſon in whom it is, into the image of the glorious and beloved object, and makes him deſire, above all things, to be like unto Chriſt; ſaying, O, to be holy! O, to be free of ſin! O, to be full of God! O, to be conform to the image of Chriſt! yea, the more love, the more likeneſs.

(11.) In a word, ſometimes it is an extatical love, as if the man were beſide himſelf, and out of himſelf: hence that proverb, Amantes, Amentes; like that of the apoſtle, If we be beſide ourſelves, it is to God, 2 Cor. v. 13. It carries the ſoul out of itſelf, ſaying with the church, The voice of my beloved, behold he comes: it is an abrupt kind of ſpeech, like that of a perſon tranſported, raviſhed, and in a rapture; The voice of my beloved, behold he cometh: ſometimes there is a ray of glory, a bright glance of the ſun of righteouſneſs.

6. We may conſider this love in the effects of it.

(1.) This love vents itſelf in prayer and ſupplication; O God, thou art my God, early will I ſeek thee, Pſalm lxiii. 1.

(2.) It vents itſelf in praiſe and commendation; My beloved is white and ruddy, the chief among ten thouſand, Cant. v. 10.

(3.) It vents itſelf in wonder and admiration; Behold what manner of love the Father hath beſtowed upon us, that we ſhould be called the ſons of God.

(4.) It vents itſelf in obedience and obſervation of his law; If you love me, keep my commandments.

(5.) It vents itſelf in hatred of ſin, and every falſe way; Ye that love the Lord, hate evil.

(6.) It vents itſelf in loving every thing that belongs to God. And this might lead me to ſhew how,

7. We may conſider this love in the object of it, and in the extent of its object: why, the true lover of Chriſt, he loves a whole Chriſt.

(1.) He loves him in his perſon, as he is the brightneſs of the Father's glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon, Heb. i. 3.

(2.) He loves him in his natures, as he is God-man; IMMANUEL, God with us.

(3.) He loves him in his offices; as he is a Prophet, to take away his darkneſs; a Prieſt, to take away his guilt; and a King, to take away his ſin; and to ſubdue his luſts.

(4.) He loves him in his relations; as he ſtands related to God, being his eternal Son; as he ſtands related to the covenant, being the Mediator, Witneſs, Surety, and Teſtator, and all of it; and as he ſtands related to his church, being their Head and Huſband, and all relations to them. You ſee what a large field I might here go through.

(5.) He loves him in his righteouſneſs, both active and paſſive, as having fulfilled the law, and ſatisfied the juſtice of God in our room.

(6.) He loves him in his merit and purchaſe; he

he loves him in his Spirit and grace; he loves him in his commands, promiſes, and comforts; he loves him in his work and wages; he loves him in his miniſters and people; he loves him in his goſpel and ordinances; he loves him in his crown, honour, and glory; he loves him in his croſs, his reproach, and ſuffering; he loves him in every thing about him, and eſpecially in himſelf, as being altogether lovely. And this leads to another conſideration.

8. We may conſider this love in the grounds of it. Indeed it is a God in Chriſt they love: more particularly, if you aſk, what are the grounds of the ſaints love to Chriſt? Why,

(1.) Their love to him is grounded upon his worth, beauty, and excellency; the ſoul loves him, becauſe of his own amiable excellency. When the ſoul gets a view of Chriſt's own beauty, and of the glory of God in him, his power, wiſdom, holineſs, grace, mercy, and other properties, his heart is raviſhed with love within him. O the thoughts of his worth, and his fulneſs of grace and good-will is overcoming! Becauſe of the ſavour of thy good ointments, thy name is as ointment poured forth, therefore do the virgins love thee, Song i. 3.

(2.) Their love to him is grounded upon his undertaking for them, and accompliſhing that undertaking: they love him becauſe of what he did undertake from eternity, and perform in time; Who loved me, and gave himſelf for me! They love him, becauſe he put himſelf in their nature, for their good: they love him, becauſe he put his name in their debt-bonds and bills: they love him, becauſe he put their names in his laſt-will, and in the book of life: they love him, becauſe he put his Spirit, his nature, and his Father's image into them.

(3.) Their love to him is grounded upon his Father's love to him, and ſatisfaction in him; The Lord is well-pleaſed for his righteouſneſs ſake, ſaying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed. And, O but Chriſt be deſervedly the object of the ſaints love, becauſe he is the object of the Father's love, who loves him, both as he is his Son, and as he is our Surety; and therefore as the ſum of all,

(4.) Their love to him is grounded upon his love to them; We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us. This leads me to

III. The third general head, viz. The influence that his love hath upon theirs as the cauſe of it. And here I would, 1. Clear and demonſtrate it, that his loving us is the cauſe of our loving him. 2. Enquire what influence his love hath upon ours.

1. As to the firſt of theſe, to clear this point, we would offer the following conſiderations.

(1.) Conſideration is, That a natural man, that looks upon God, can never have a heart-love to him, whatever he pretends. It is true, many fancy God loves them, and pretend they have a love to him, like ſome in the church of Epheſus, who ſaid, they were apoſtles, and were not, but were found liars; ſo many pretend they know God, and love him, who yet in works deny him; and by their practice are found liars; and the viſion of their heads is like to end in utter darkneſs. It is true alſo, that all that have a love to God, have not the full aſſurance of God's love to them: ſome may live under his frowns, who yet are in a ſtate of favour; there may be ſome true love, where yet there is but little joyful aſſurance; yet, I ſay, theſe who have no faith at all of God's love in Chriſt, but look upon God as an implacable enemy, they can have no hearty love to him; nay, conſcience of guilt, and fear of wrath make them run away from God as an enemy; the ſpirit of ſlaviſh fear, which all awakened ſinners are naturally poſſeſt of, till God ſhew them his love and favour in Chriſt, will rather harden men in their enmity, than melt them into love. If there were nothing but the terror of the Lord to be known, converſion would be impoſſible.

(2.) Conſideration is, That the greater the ſenſe of God's love in Chriſt is, the ſtronger will our love to him be. Hence there are ſuch different degrees of love to God among the ſaints, and even in the ſame ſaints, or believers, at ſeveral ſeaſons, according as they have more or leſs of the comfortable apprehenſion of the love of God in Chriſt: for, although the love of God be not variable, yet our views and apprehenſions of it are. Every believer hath his dark and gloomy days, as well as his bright and pleaſant days; and the leſs ſenſible views he hath of God's love and favour, the more ſenſible deadneſs in duty, and decay of love to God takes place. When the believer wants the faith of God's love, his wings are clipt; but when his heart is fraughted with a large meaſure of the faith of God's love, then he mounts up on wings as an eagle; then the love of Chriſt conſtrains him; and his heart is enlarged to run the way of God's commandments.

(3.) Conſideration, That the love of God diſcovered, breaks the power of all theſe things that hinder our love to him. Is ſelf-love a ſnare to keep us from the love of God? Well, a diſplay of God's love breaks the power of ſelf-love. When Job got a diſcovery of the glory of God's grace, then he abhors himſelf. When we know that God is pacified towards us, it makes us loath and abhor ourſelves, Ezek. xvi. 63. A ſinner is never ſo odious in his own ſight, as when he is perſuaded of his being precious in God's ſight. Does the flattery of the world allure men from the love of God? Well, but the diſplays of God's love make the world to be crucified to us, and us to the world. Chriſt's love diſcovered obſcures all the ſeeming glory of the world, as the ſun darkens the leſſer lights, and as the works of nature ſpoil the reputation of the works of art. Do the frowns of the world ſcar us from the love of God and his way? Well, but the diſplay of God's love to us is a noble ſecurity againſt this temptation; for little matter, who be againſt us, if God be for us; His loving-kindneſs is better than life: therefore, though the rage of men ſhould reach our lives, yet what compariſon is betwixt the breath of our noſtrils, and the favour of an eternal God? We do not love God in Chriſt, becauſe we do not know him; but when his love is diſplayed, then he is known in the light of the Spirit, As a Spirit of wiſdom and revelation in the knowledge of Chriſt: the Spirit comes as a Spirit of light; and thus the love of God is ſhed abroad upon the heart by the Holy Ghoſt.

(4.) Conſideration, When God diſplays his love, he at the ſame time transforms the ſoul to whom he diſcovers himſelf, and makes it a new creature. Now, the new nature is a grateful and loving nature: depraved nature may reward evil for good, and hatred for love; but it is not ſo with the new nature, it natively renders love for love; it is native to the ſoul upon the diſcovery of God's love, his everlaſting love, to be conſtrained to his ſervice and obedience; If you love me, keep my commandments. Now, this love, that is the product of God's love, is virtually all obedience; and therefore love is ſaid to be the fulfilling of the law: and when loves takes place, his commandments are not grievous, but pleaſant; yea, when the love of God is in the heart, then the law of God is in the heart. But then,

it

2. To enquire more particularly what influence God's love hath upon ours: We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us: our love is juſt the reflex of his, as the ſun ſhining upon a glaſs. Why, how does his love to us influence our love to him? (1.) It hath a moral influence, in point of motive. (2.) A phyſical influence, in point of power.

(1.) It hath a moral influence, in point of motive; and ſo it is the moral cauſe of our love; the incentive, the argument. What will move us to love, if the diſplay of this infinite love does it not? We cannot but love ſuch a good God, who was firſt in the act and work of love; that loved us when we were both unloving and unlovely; that loved us at ſuch a rate, as to ſeek and ſollicite our love at the expence of his Son's blood. O amazing love! Is there any motive can be ſtronger to engage us to love him again? Shall not the love of Chriſt conſtrain us to love him again? What in all the world will endear a ſoul to God, if the love of God do it not?—So much as we ſee of the love of God, ſo much we love him, and delight in him, and no more. Every other diſcovery of God without this, will but make the ſoul to flee from him. If the faith and apprehenſion of his free love, of his antient love, his antecedent love, his preventing love, ſuch as I have ſpoken of, be no motive or argument to influence us to love him, there is no argument in the world will prevail.

(2.) It hath a phyſical influence, in point of power; and ſo it is not only the moral, but the productive cauſe. There is a power in his love that conquers, captivates, and overpowers the man, ſo that he cannot but love: God's love hath a generative power; our love is brought forth by his love, James i. 18. Of his his own will begat he us; that is, of his own free love and good-will. Divine love makes ſuch an impreſſion, that it inſtamps love upon the ſoul. As his love hath a generating power, ſo it hath a creating power; his love infuſes and creates love in the perſon. Beloved, it works good in the man, that is the object of it: his power and will are commenſurate; what he wills, he works; and when the time of love or of manifeſting love comes, the time of power comes; Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of thy power. His love hath a conſtraining power; The love of Chriſt conſtrains us; and his love hath a drawing power; I have loved thee with an everlaſting love; therefore with loving-kindneſs will I draw thee. He draws with the cords of love, and thereby draws the heart towards him in love: and hence never a ſoul taſted the ſweetneſs of his everlaſting love, but at the ſame time he felt the power of it warming the heart, and kindling a fire of love there. O how does his mighty love break the power of their mighty enmity! Was ever pardoning mercy and love intimated, but the pardoned ſoul behoved to read the pardon with tears of joy; and to love much when much was forgiven? Can they chuſe but love him, Who are the called according to his purpoſe of love? Rom. viii. 28.—We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us.

IV. The fourth general head, was the application. Is it ſo, that God's love to his people is the ſource and cauſe of their love to him? Then we may apply it for information; and,

1. Hence ſee the difference betwixt God's love to the ſaints, and the ſaints love to God. It is true, their loves agree in ſeveral things: his love to them is a love of complacency, he delights in them; and their love to him is a love of complacency, they delight in him: he loves them in Chriſt, and they love him in Chriſt; but yet vaſtly great is the difference betwixt his love and theirs. 1. His love is eternal, their love is but of yeſterday's date. 2. His love is the original cauſe, their love is the native effect of his. 3. His love is an antecedent love, it goes before theirs, as the father loves the child when the child knows not the father, much leſs loves him; yea, they are by nature haters of God. And ſurely all muſt begin on his ſide; Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that God loved us: yea, his love not only goes before our love, but before every thing that is lovely in us; God commends his love towards us, in that while we were yet ſinners, Chriſt died for us. Sin imports all unlovelineſs and undeſireableneſs that can be in a creature; yet he loves: but then our love is a conſequential love. 4. His love being free and eternal is always equal and unchangeable; for, The Strength of Iſrael is not a man that he ſhould repent; but our love to him is unequal and changeable, up and down: his love is like the ſun, always the ſame in its light, though a cloud may ſometimes interpoſe; our love is like the moon, hath its waxings and weanings: his love, I ſay, is like the ſun, always the ſame in its light. It is true, as the ſun is ſometimes under a cloud; ſo the fruits and manifeſtations of God's love may change; now he ſhines, now he hides his face, as it may be moſt for our profit; but ſtill his love in itſelf is the ſame. Whatever changes affect the ſaints, whether as to ſin or ſuffering, yet God's love to them is unchangeable. Why, were it not blaſphemy to ſay, that God loves his people in their ſinning, as well as in their ſtricteſt obedience? If ſo, who will care to ſerve him more? To which it might be replied, The love of God in itſelf is no more changeable than God himſelf; and what then? Loves he his people in their ſinning? by no means; he loves his people, not their ſinning. Alters he his love to them? No; not his love, but the diſcoveries of his love: he ſmites them, rebukes them, and fills them with a ſenſe of indignation. But wo would be to us if he changed in his love: nay, He is God, and changes not; therefore the ſons of Jacob are not conſumed. Theſe very things which ſeem to be demonſtrations of the change of his affection, do as clearly proceed from love to them, even his chaſtiſements, as any other diſpenſations. Well, but will not this encourage to ſin? "O ſure he never taſted, as one "ſays, of the love of God, that can ſeriouſly "make this objection." The doctrine of grace may be turned into wantonneſs, but the principle of grace cannot. His love, I ſay, being free, eternal, eternal, and preventing love, is in itself always equal and unchangeable; but our love to God is an ebbing and flowing love. We are scarce a day at a stand. This hour we may be at this, Though all men forsake thee, yet will not I! and yet the next hour at this, I know not the man. When was ever the time that our love was equal one day to an end?

2. Hence see the difference betwixt justification and sanctification; and the priority of justification to sanctification: We may here notice the difference betwixt the one and the other. Many are the differences betwixt them, but I confine myself to what the text imports. 1. In justification, God loves us, and shews his love in Christ; in sanctification, we love God, and shew our love to him: for the comprehensive sum of active holiness is love, Which is the fulfilling of the law. 2. In justification, we have the favour of God; in sanctification, we have the image of God; and the special part of his image is love. 3. In justification, we are passive, as when God set his love upon us; but in sanctification, we are active, while his love causes us to act in loving him. 4. Justification is God's act of love without us, in and through the merit and righteousness of Christ imputed to us; sanctification is God's work of grace within us, by the Spirit of Christ imparted to us as a Spirit of love, as well as of other graces. 5. Justification is perfect, equal, and always the same, like the love of God, the original cause, and the righteousness of Christ the meritorious cause of it; but sanctification is imperfect, unequal, and changeable; for the love of the saints, as I said, is up and down. 6. Justification is the cause; sanctification the effect; even as God's love is the cause of our love. 7. Faith in justification is an instrument receiving Christ, as the Lord our righteousness, and apprehending the love and mercy of God in him; but faith in sanctification is an agent, employing Christ as the Lord our strength, to enable us to manifest our love to him. Thus we see the priority of divine love and favour, and acceptation and justification before any work of ours; and so, how any can maintain, that actual gospel-repentance (which must be a work of ours, and a piece of sanctification at least) doth go before, and is necessary in order to justification, let the judicious consider, without receding from our standards, and binding their faith to the belt of any fallible creatures, councils, or acts. That legal repentance, or humiliation and conviction, and sense of sin, does go before justification, in order of divine operation, is plain; and that habitual sanctification, or regeneration, and the infusing of all grace into the soul, is also previous, is not denied: But that gospel-repentance, or any part of actual sanctification, is necessary in order to justification and pardon, I do not see how it is possible to maintain that, without running into the Roman camp, and fighting with popish weapons, and inverting the order of our text, making any part of our love to God necessary first in order to God's loving us. But sure God's method of doing will stand in spite of hell and earth: We love him, because he first loved us.

3. Hence we may see, that as the persuasion that is in the nature of faith lies in the apprehension of the love and mercy of God in Christ to a man's self in particular; so this doctrine of faith does not make void the law, but establish and fulfil it, if we consider love as the fulfilling of the law; for the language of this text, when read in the singular number is, I love him, because he first loved me; He first loved me, there is faith's apprehension of the mercy of God in Christ. It is true, a believer may say, I know not whether he loved me or not; but sure I am it is not his faith that says so, but unbelief; but the stronger that his faith is, to be sure the more will he be able to say, He loved me; and the more he can say this, the more can he say the other also, I love him: and there is obedience, gospel-obedience, the obedience of faith, which is a loving obedience; for the law of Christ is a law of love: it is blasphemy against the love of God to reproach it, as a mother of licentiousness, and a nurse of carnal security. They that have the love of God in their eye, can take no encouragement from thence to sin; for sin tends to cloud that light wherein they rejoice. If it were possible for a believer to think that God loves him, and thereupon should take encouragement to sin, then I am bold to say, it is not the faith of God's operation takes place at that time with him, but only a fancy, and a strong temptation of Satan, working upon that fancy: for a true faith of God's love, brings holiness, love, and obedience along with it, as natively as the rising-sun brings light. God's love of bounty displayed, does as natively bring in our love of duty, as it is natural for the fire to bring heat. Is it possible that God's communicating his thoughts of peace to a child will embolden him to new acts of treason? No; if the sense of God's love did not wear off, and security and unwatchfulness wear on, the believer's love would always be flaming in the fire of God's love. They have no experience of the love of God, who think that the discovery thereof would give them a licence to transgress.

4. Hence we see, that as the believer is perfectly free from vindictive wrath, from the curse and penal sanction of the law, so his gospel-obedience is not influenced by slavish fear of hell, but by the love of God. How can the man that is actually justified, and accepted in the Beloved, and so the actual object of God's everlasting, unchangeable love, ever fall under his vindictive wrath, which is the threatening and sentence of the law as a covenant of works? And, how can the believer that is obliged to believe this love, be ever obliged to serve from a fear of hell and vindictive wrath? That he may, through unbelief, apprehend God's vindictive wrath, and fear to be thrown into hell, is plain from common experience; but that the fear of hell should be either a gospel-grace, or a believer's duty, is some of the new divinity of our day. Filial child-like fear, which is the believer's duty at all times, is every way consistent with love, yea, supposes and imports the faith of God's fatherly love; but slavish fear of hell, and vindictive wrath, excludes and opposes it. See the context, ver. 18. There is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth out (slavish and tormenting) fear.

5. Hence we may see, the difference betwixt the covenant of works and the covenant of grace. The order of the covenant of works is, in some respect, quite cross to the order here set down in our text; for, in the covenant of works, our love of duty was first to take place; and after that God's love of bounty, as the reward of our our perfect love and obedience, according to the old covenant paction; whereas, in the covenant of grace, God firſt ſhews his love of bounty, and then follows our love of duty. Never does the ſoul turn his affections towards God, if the heart of God be not firſt ſet upon him. Herein differ works in the new covenant, (for love, as I ſaid before, is the ſum of all work and obedience) from works in the old covenant. In the legal covenant, our love and work is firſt, and then God's favour and juſtification; but in the goſpel-covenant, God's love and favour in juſtification is firſt, and then our love and obedience follows. As the ſame day that the waters went off from the earth, and were gathered into the ſea, the earth was adorned with graſs and flowers, and was fruitful; ſo when the deluge of wrath goes off from the conſcience, and the favour of God appears in juſtification, then it is preſently adorned with the graces of the Spirit, and love among the chief of them, ſpringing up: whatever other motive engages to obedience here, yet love is the moſt prevalent motive; and here gratitude influences to obedience. In a word, the covenant of works was properly conditional to us, but the covenant of grace, however conditional to Chriſt, who hath performed the whole condition in his obedience to the death, yet to us it is abſolutely free and unconditional. Upon what condition have we God's love and favour? Does not his love prevent all conditions? He firſt loved us: his love prevents the true proper condition itſelf, namely, Chriſt's obedience; for his love ſent him to perform the ſame, much more does it prevent all that men call conditions. O! how far is our obedience, even the obedience of faith, from having any cauſality, or proper federal conditionality in obtaining ſalvation, ſeeing our imperfect love and obedience here is not the cauſe, but the effect of God's love and favour partly diſplayed, and our perfect love and obedience in heaven will be the effect of the full viſion of his glorious grace in heaven, Where we ſhall be like him, becauſe we ſhall ſee him as he is?

6. Hence we may ſee the blaſphemy of theſe who ſay, they are believers in Chriſt, and yet are not lovers of God; and who pretend to believe the grace of God, and yet turn his grace to laſciviouſneſs, by continuing in enmity againſt him, and diſcover their enmity by their ungodly practices; The grace of God, that brings ſalvation, teaches us quite the contrary; what the law teaches preceptively, the goſpel teaches effectively, viz. To deny ungodlineſs, and worldly luſts, and, to live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly, Tit. ii. 11, 12. She is not the ſpouſe of Chriſt, but an adultereſs, that impudently abuſes his love. They can have no true evidence of God's love to them, who have no love to him; for our love to him is the native reſult of his love to us; We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us. The love of God diſcovered, knocks down the natural enmity, which is the root of all diſobedience; and influences to love, which is the ſum of all obedience.

7. See hence the eminent privilege of the ſaints, whatever low thoughts the world may have of them. It is an honour to ſtand in the preſence of princes, though but as ſervants; what honour then have all the ſaints to ſtand with boldneſs in the preſence of God, and enjoy his boſom-love? The queen of Sheba pronounced a bleſſing on the ſervants of Solomon, who ſtood before him and heard his wiſdom; how much more bleſſed are they who ſtand continually before the God of Solomon, hearing his wiſdom and enjoying his love? As they are happy, ſo they are ſafe. Here is a ſafe and ſweet retreat to the ſaints in all the trials, reproaches, and miſrepreſentations they undergo in the world. When a child is abuſed in the ſtreet by ſtrangers, he runs with ſpeed to the boſom of his father; there he makes his complaint, and is comforted. In all the hard cenſures and tongue-perſecutions which the ſaints meet withal in the ſtreets of the world, they may run to their Father, and be comforted; his love can counterbalance all the world's frowns. O! how are they privileged beyond all the hypocritical world! Hypocrites, for the moſt part, cannot be known or differenced from ſaints, in regard of their external duty and enjoyment; but while they are living in the love of their luſts, the ſaints are ſweetly wrapt up in the boſom of God's love; they have this meat to eat, and refreſhment in the banqueting-houſe, wherein others have no ſhare.

8. Hence ſee where it is we may get our enmity killed, and our love quickened; it is even in the love of God. What is the reaſon that the world have no love to God? Why, they cannot believe his love and good-will through Chriſt; and ſo they live in enmity. What is the reaſon that believers have ſo little love to God? Even becauſe their faith of his love is ſo weak. It is by faith we know that God is in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf; it is by faith we ſee the King in his beauty, and ſo cannot but love him; it is by faith that we hear his voice, and underſtand his words of grace, and ſay; It is the voice of my Beloved: it is by faith we embrace the promiſes, which are ſo many meſſages of love: it is by faith we receive out of Chriſt's fulneſs, grace for grace; or, as the word may be rendered, Love for love. Faith breaks the ſhell of the promiſe, and then eats the kernel of God's love and grace that is there. Faith is the bucket wherewith we draw, Chriſt is the well, God is the fountain, and love is the water that we draw: O! what get you in Chriſt, poor ſoul, whenever you go to him? Can you not ſay, O, I get more love to God than I had! I never approached near him but I got a large draught and ample fill of love to God; Out of his fulneſs, we receive grace for grace, and love for love. In a word, by faith we behold the glory of the Lord as in a glaſs, and are changed into the ſame image; and the image of God is love. O then, the little faith that takes place in our day, makes little love to God and his people; faith and love are like twins that are born together, and live and die together. Go to the root of all our backſlidings, and you will find it unbelief; An evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God.

Uſe of examination. Try your ſtate by this doctrine, whether or not you be in a ſtate of favour with God, and the objects of his love in a ſpecial manner. How ſhall I know, if he hath loved me? You may know it by that fruit and evidence of it in the text: if he hath manifeſted his love ſavingly to you, then you will love him, becauſe he hath loved you.

QUEST. How ſhall I know, if I have that love to him, that is the fruit and effect of his firſt loving me?

Anſw.

Answ. 1*st*, If your love to him be such as is the fruit of his love to you, then you have been convinced of your natural enmity, and that you never had any love, nor could have it, unless the Lord in love had, in some measure, manifested himself in his grace. Many speak of their loving God all their days, as if it were natural for them to love God; poor creatures, they never saw or considered, that they were born with a dagger of enmity in their hearts against God. These that truly love him have seen their want of love, and something of the power and strength of their enmity; and got it, in some measure, broken in a day of power.

2*dly*, If you have such love to him, as is the fruit of his love to you, then you have seen his glory, and particularly the glory of his grace, and love to draw out your love towards him: Shew me thy glory, says Moses to God; yea, says God, I will make all my goodness pass before thee. His goodness and his love is his glory. If you have seen his glory, surely you count all things but loss and dung, in comparison of him.

3*dly*, If you have such love, as is the fruit of his love, then his loveliness and excellency hath engaged you to chuse him; to chuse himself, for your God; his Christ, for your husband; his covenant, for your charter; his precepts, for your rule; his people, for your companions; his purchase, for your jointure; his Spirit, for your guide; his promise, for your cordial; his glory, for your aim. If you have chosen him thus, and resolve to abide by your choice, it is a fruit of his chusing you from eternity: You have not chosen me first, but I have chosen you.

4*thly*, If you have such love to him, as is the fruit of his loving you, then it is the faith of his love, that, in a special manner, will influence you to obedience, in all the duties of religion; If you love me, keep my commandments: yea, the faith of his love will influence you to such a love to him, as will bring forth all the fruits of true love. And here I will tell you some of the fruits of true love to God, by which you may try your love to him.

1. One fruit of true love is this; true love will make you love to be with him on earth, and long to be with him in heaven.

(1.) On the one hand, true love will make you love to be with him on earth; and this love will make you rejoice when he is present, saying, O! my soul shall rejoice in God my Saviour: and it will make you lament when he is absent, saying, O that I knew where I might find him! You will love to be with him in your desire, saying, He is the desire of all nations, and the desire of my soul. You will love to be with him in your delight, saying, A bundle of myrrh is my beloved to me, he shall ly all night betwixt my breasts. You will love to be with him in your walk and conversation, desiring to have your conversation in heaven, and to walk with him. You will love to be with him in your esteem, saying, Whom have I in heaven but thee, and there is none in earth that I desire beside thee. You will love to be with him in your thoughts and meditations, saying, My meditation of him shall be sweet. You will love to be with him in your duties and performances, in reading and hearing, and singing, in communicating, in praying. You will love to be with him, and to have him with you: particularly to be with him in prayer, is the most frequent thing with the believer: how does he love to embosom himself to his God! The Legalist may do the duty, but to be with Christ in it, is what he is not much taken up with; the believer is taken up with prayer, as a mean of communion with God. O! I cannot stay away from him, though he shut the door upon me, and cover himself with a cloud, that my prayer cannot pass through; I cannot be absent from him. It is one of the main things that makes earth tolerable to the believer, that he hath sometimes access to God, in Christ, by the Spirit in prayer. If it were not for some sweet meetings that he hath with the Lord this way, he would even be crying, O what a weary place is this earth! O let me out of it! I say, the true lover loves to be with God, and to have God with him. How does he love to have God with him, by his sanctifying grace, by his enlightening, enlarging, enlivening, and comforting grace? True lovers love one anothers company. And,

(2.) As the true lover of Christ loves to be with him here, so on the other hand, he longs to be with him hereafter. O to be in the place of perfect love, where there will be an eternal emanation of the love of God! O to be in the place of perfect likeness to Christ! For when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. Though they are reconciled to his will, and made content to abide here, while he pleases, yet they are even longing for that day, when they shall have the immediate fruition of him, and be delivered from all sin: they desire to be dissolved, and to be with Christ, which is best of all. A carnal man may say, O to be out of an evil world! but the heart of the true lover says, O to be with Christ! It is true, when the believer's love is in fresh exercise, he will even sometimes be willing to abide in this world, notwithstanding of all the troubles and trials that are in it, if so be he may glorify God in it; whether by suffering for him, or giving a testimony against sin, and for the truth and honour of the Lord Jesus. O! if I may be of any use to any of thine; if I may be of any service to thy Majesty, and glorify thee by doing or suffering; if thou wilt help me to serve and honour thee in my life, let me even beg from door to door in the wilderness; through grace I will chearfully endure any trouble, and glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me. This submission is not inconsistent with his longing to be with the Lord.—Thus, I say, true lovers of God, they love to be with him on earth, and long to be with him in heaven.

2. True love will make you long to be like him, saying, O to be holy, as God is holy! O to be conform to the image of his Son! O to be like unto Christ! Indeed, the man that hath most of the image of God, will readily see himself the most unlike to him; and look upon himself as the most unholy person on earth. O! my understanding is like a dark dungeon, my will is like a devil, and my heart like a hell; and yet something of the light of God it is that thus discovers him to himself, so unlike to God; and something of the love of God it is that makes him love to be like him, and desire above all things to be quit of sin, which is the devil's image, and to be endued with holiness, which is God's image.

3. True love will make you love to live upon him:

him: you will love to live upon God the fountain of living water; and love to live upon Chriſt, for wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption. The lover of God is one that loves to live by faith on the Son of God; To him to live is Chriſt: Chriſt is the Alpha and Omega of his life; the food and medicine of his life; the Author and Reſtorer of his life; and the whole buſineſs of his life. Many have little buſineſs with Chriſt; but the true believer, the true lover, Chriſt is the whole buſineſs of his life: like the woman that, they ſay, took the body of her dead huſband and grind it to powder, and drank the powder in her daily drink, and ſo made her body a living tomb for her dead huſband. The believer is to live ſtill upon a dead and crucified huſband.

4. True love to God will make you love to reverence him: godly fear is a true mark of love; you will have a holy fear of diſpleaſing him; you will have a jealous fear, leſt your deceitful heart lead you aſide from him: We receiving a kingdom that cannot be moved, let us have grace, [or, let us hold faſt grace,] whereby we may ſerve God acceptably, with reverence and godly fear: for our God is a conſuming fire, Heb. xii. 28, 29. All this is inconſiſtent with the ſlaviſh fear of hell: for the faith of receiving the kingdom that cannot be moved, and the fear of hell, which is a being excluded from that kingdom, are contradictory; but let us fear our God in Chriſt, who hath diſcovered himſelf in Chriſt to be even a conſuming fire; for this fire of infinite juſtice took hold of the man Chriſt Jeſus. When God dwelled in the buſh of our nature, the buſh burned in the flame of divine wrath, and juſtice was ſatisfied this way: herein God gave a more awful inſtance of his being a conſuming fire, in taking vengeance upon ſin in the Surety, than can be given by all the flames of hell, in which the wicked burn for eternity. But here God being in the buſh, the buſh burnt, but was not conſumed; He that was dead, is alive; and behold he liveth for evermore. But we may turn aſide and ſee this great ſight, the buſh burning, Chriſt ſatisfying divine juſtice: and what in the world ſhould more influence to a holy fear than this?

5. True love will make you to think well of him, and think no evil of him: Love thinketh no evil, ſays the apoſtle. You will entertain good thoughts of God; and conſtruct all he does in the beſt ſenſe: though in affliction a ſaint may have harſh thoughts of God, and under a fit of temptation, yet habitually he entertains good thoughts of all God's dealings towards him. This or that diſpenſation or affliction, however ſevere, is either to mortify ſome luſt, or to exerciſe ſome grace, or to diſcover ſome corruption, and remove it. "O! "how good is he that will not let me alone "in my ſins, nor let me go with my faults, "nor ceaſe to be a Reprover! Love thinks no "evil."

6. True love will make you love what he loves, and hate what he hates; and alſo love as he loves, and hate as he hates.

[1.] True love will make you love what he loves, and hate what he hates; and particularly to love his friends, and hate his enemies.

1*ſt,* To love his friends; his friends in office, and his friends in heart.

(1.) His friends in office; his miniſters, whoſe office it is to commend Chriſt: ſurely they that love God, will love his friends; they that love Chriſt the Bridegroom, will love the friends of the Bridegroom, whoſe work it is to ſet him forth: How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of them that preach the goſpel of peace, that bring glad tidings of good things, that publiſh ſalvation! Iſa. lii. 15. Rom. x. 15. The reaſon why they love ſuch, is, becauſe it is their work to open Chriſt's love-letter that is ſent to his bride, and to read it, and explain it to the bride; and becauſe they love the ſweet doctrine of the goſpel. Some pretend a great love to the precepts of the law, but for the doctrine of the goſpel, and free juſtification without the works of the law, they ſuſpect that as Antinomian ſtuff, oppoſite to the law; they will mock at Chriſt's meſſengers when they preach the doctrine of grace. But I ſeek no further evidence of an enemy to Chriſt than that. Some love all preachers, and all preaching alike; they cannot diſcern betwixt the one and the other: if you preach the doctrine of the goſpel to them, they love that; if you preach the covenant of works to them, and deſire them to do ſo and ſo, and thereupon they ſhall be juſtified before God, they love that too; all is fiſh that comes in the net with them: but the ſheep of Chriſt know his voice; and the voice of the ſhepherds, that convey his voice and mind to them, is ſweet, and beautiful, and lovely to them.

(2.) They love his friends in heart, as well as his friends in office; the ſaints, the excellent ones of the earth, are theſe in whom is all their delight. He that loves him that begat, loves him that is begotten. They love the brethren, as in the verſe following the text; How can you ſay that he loves God, whom he hath not ſeen, when he loveth not his brother, whom he hath ſeen? He that loves the parent, will love the child: they that love God, will love his children, that have his image, as a man will love the very picture of the perſon whom he loves: they love the ſaints, though poor, as a man will love gold, though in a rag; and alſo will love them, though afflicted, even as mettal in a furnace may be loved.

2*dly,* As the true lovers of God will love his friends, ſo they will hate his foes and enemies, whether it be his open enemies without, or his ſecret enemies within.

(1.) His open enemies without, even all the wicked and ungodly world; Do not I hate them that hate thee, and am grieved with them that riſe up againſt thee? They that can delight in fellowſhip with theſe that are drunkards, ſwearers, and blaſphemers of the name of God, ſurely they cannot have the love of God at leaſt in exerciſe: the true lover of God hates the wicked as ſuch. It is true, as they are the children of Adam, Bone of their bone, and fleſh of their fleſh; as they are poor miſerable creatures like themſelves, they love them with a love of pity; but as enemies to God, and in rebellion againſt him, they can have no delight in them; their company is a burden to them.

(2.) As they hate his open enemies without, ſo they hate his ſecret enemies within; and theſe are their own luſts and corruptions. They hate ſin, who love God; and are engaged in a warfare againſt ſin, and hate their own luſts. He that loves God hates ſin, whether in himſelf or others: he hates ſin as God's enemy, and as that which is diſpleaſing and diſhonouring to him; him; and as that which mars communion with God, that provokes him to anger, and unfits them for his ſervice. O that loathſome, ugly thing ſin! that evil of evils, and devil of devils! The man purſues it to death, and cannot reſt till he gets his hands embrued, as it were, in its heart's blood: they have taken up arms againſt it, in the name of the Lord, and reſolved never to lay them down, till it be mortified and killed. They find indeed ſometimes ſin very lively and ſtrong in them, and themſelves led captive by the law of ſin; but this animates them ſo much the more to purſue it to death. And as they hate ſin in themſelves, ſo alſo in others; I beheld tranſgreſſors, and was grieved. I would not give much for your pretenſions to love, if you have no zeal againſt ſin; love is the fire, zeal is the flame: they that love the Lord will ſhew forth indignation againſt ſin.—Thus, I ſay, true lovers of God will love what he loves, and hate what he hates.

[2.] True love will not only hate what he hates, and love what he loves, but hate as he hates, and love as he loves.

1*ſt*, They will hate AS he hates; they will hate ſin, as God hates it; I ſpeak not of degrees, but of ſimilitude.

(1.) God hates ſin with a natural hatred, as oppoſite to his nature, will, and law, and diſhonouring to him; ſo the true lovers of God will hate ſin with a natural hatred; I mean, by virtue of his new nature, he will hate it as oppoſite to God's nature and will, and diſhonouring to his God.

(2.) God hates ſin with a perfect hatred, and ſo does the true lover of God; they ſay of God's enemies within them, as David, Pſal. cxxxix. 21. I hate them with a perfect hatred; their hatred is going on to perfection.

(3.) God hates ſin with an everlaſting hatred; he will never be reconciled with it: ſo the true lover of God hates ſin with an everlaſting hatred; a durable hatred: they will never be friends with it.

(4.) God hates ſin with a grievous hatred; ſin grieves his Spirit; and is, as it were, a burden to him: he is preſſed under it as a cart under ſheaves: ſo the true lover is grieved with the body of ſin and death, and preſſed under it.

(5.) God hates ſin with a parting, ſeparating hatred; he caſts it away with loathing and abhorrence, being of purer eyes than that he can behold iniquity: ſo the true lover hates ſin ſo as to part with it, and ſeparate from it: and while he cannot get himſelf rid of it, he loaths himſelf for it.

(6.) God hates ſin with an avenging hatred; he takes vengeance upon it where-ever it is; even when it was found but imputatively in Chriſt, he took vengeance upon it in the Surety: ſo the true lover of God hates ſin with an avenging hatred; yea, what revenge does he meditate againſt it! 2 Cor. vii. 11. He would ſometimes be at Sampſon's work, to pull down the houſe of that tabernacle upon the Philiſtines to be avenged upon it, and cannot reſt till it be deſtroyed: he looks upon himſelf as wretched, ſo long as it remains with him: O wretched man that I am! who ſhall deliver me from the body of this ſin and death?—Thus he hates as God hates.

2*dly*, They love AS God loves. It is true, God's love to them is infinite, their love is but finite; his love to them is the love of a God, their love to him is but the love of creatures; yet their love bears ſome reſemblance of his love.

(1.) God's love to his creatures is a remembering love: he never forgets them; Can a woman forget her ſucking child, that ſhe ſhould not have compaſſion on the ſon of her womb? Yea, ſhe may; yet will I not forget thee, ſaith the Lord. So, true love to God is a remembering love: they cannot forget God; they remember his love more than wine. I will never forget thy precepts, for by them thou haſt quickened me. I can never forget ſuch a word, ſuch a glance, ſuch a viſit, ſuch a day, ſuch a ſermon, ſuch a bank, ſuch a valley, ſuch a chamber, where God manifeſted himſelf.

(2.) God's love to his people is a hearty and cordial love; he loves them with all his heart: ſo, where true love is, it will be with all the heart, ſoul, mind, and ſtrength: as with the heart man believes, ſo with the heart the believer loves.

(3.) God's love to his people is a manifeſted love; he does not conceal his love, but diſcovers it: ſo true love to God will be a manifeſted love; it will manifeſt itſelf, and vent itſelf in prayer, in praiſes, in zeal, in obedience; If you love me keep my commandments. The true lover will vent his love by deſiring to keep Chriſt's words, keeping them in the heart; Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I may not offend thee; keeping them in the practice, by ordering the converſation aright.

(4.) God's love to his people is an uniting love; it brings them to union with himſelf: ſo true love to God is uniting; deſires union, and cleaves to the Lord; it affects nearneſs; more and more nearneſs; and ſtill more and more nearneſs.

(5.) God's love to his people is a prevailing love; it had many hinderances in its way; mountains of guilt, mountains of ſin, mountains of provocation, yet he did not call back his love again: even ſo, true love to God, notwithſtanding of hinderances and oppoſition from earth and hell, and corruption within, yet is not drawn back, but labours to prevail; and will, through grace, fight its way through all difficulties; for love is ſtrong as death.

(6.) God's love to his people is a rejoicing love; he rejoiceth in his love; ſo where true love to God is, the man will rejoice in his love; delight in God and Chriſt, and be joyful in the God of his ſalvation.

(7.) God love to his people is a reſting love; Zeph. v. 17. He reſts in his love; when it comes, it never thinks of removing any more; This is my reſt, here will I ſtay: ſo where true love to God is, it is a reſting love; it ſays, Return to thy reſt, O my ſoul. The true lover of God hath no other reſting place but a God in Chriſt.

(8.) God's love to his people is a communicative love; his love inclines him and engages him to make over himſelf, and all that he hath, for the good of his people: ſo, where true love to God is, it is ſuch a communicative love, that it makes the ſoul to give himſelf, and all that he is, and hath, to the Lord; he commits his ſoul, body, and all the concerns of his ſalvation to him.

(9.) God's love to his people is a diſtinguiſhing love; he loves them above all others; Since thou waſt precious in my ſight, thou haſt been honour- honourable; and I have loved thee, Isa. xliii. 3, 4. So their love to him is superlative love; they love him above all things; and in all things he hath the pre-eminence.

(10.) God's love to his people is in Christ; they are accepted in the Beloved: so, true love to God is a love to God in Christ; out of Christ they cannot love him, but fear and flee from him; but in Christ he is amiable and lovely to them.—Now, by these things you may try whether you love God, so as your love is a fruit of his first loving you.

Use of exhortation. Is God's love to his people the cause of their love to him? then be exhorted, 1. To seek the view of God's love to you. 2. To render him love for love.

1. Seek a view of God's love to you; say not in your heart, Alas! all are not loved of God, and it may be not you; but rather say, Many are the objects of his love, and why not me? Why, say you, the first object of faith cannot be to believe that God hath loved me. Indeed you cannot know God's love to you till he manifest the same; and he does not manifest his love but in Christ, in whom is proclaimed peace on earth, and good-will towards men, because Christ hath brought in glory to God in the highest; and therefore the way to know the love of God to you, is to believe his love and good-will in him; and in coming to him, the love of God is known and believed. How do the saints get to know the love of God to them? It is even by believing his love in Christ; 1 John iv. 16. We have known, and believed the love that God hath to us. If you look to God out of Christ, you never see his love to you, or any sinner like you, but wrath and vengeance issued out against you: but if you look to God in Christ, then you may see good-will towards men; for, God is in Christ reconciling the world to himself.—Why, say you, I cannot find any love in my heart towards God; and therefore, how can I believe his love, or heart to be towards me? Indeed, man, you will never love God till you take up something of his love and good-will towards you; your way of doing is a preposterous course, and a way to rob God of his glory, to think you must love him first, and then expect that he will love you: lay down your carnal reasoning, and seek grace to apprehend the mercy of God in Christ, and that will open your soul to let out your love towards him.—Why, say you, I see no ground why he should love me! there is no cause, no reason in the world, but all the reason in the world, why he should not love me; and therefore, how can I be persuaded of his thoughts of love towards me? To this we might reply, That God speaks love, mercy, and good-will towards you man, you woman, by this gospel, as particularly as ever he did to any elect soul, the day before he met with the day of power; for the general tenders of grace in the gospel are to all: and as for a cause of love, he hath as much cause to fix his love on you as ever he had upon any of the children of men; that is, he had no cause at all without himself: and if you can attain to believe his grace and good-will towards you, and that by a faith of his own operation, you shall not be deceived. When I call you to believe thus, I am not calling you to fancy that God loves you, or to persuade yourselves in a natural way; nay, I call you to a saving faith, which I know you can never attain unto without a pull of omnipotency; and if that power accompany the call, then the duty called to will be put in practice, and not otherwise: therefore, O seek the power of God to persuade you of the good-will of God in Christ. All that hear me are obliged to receive Christ, as a token of God's love; For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him, and receiveth him, might not perish, but have everlasting life. He that believeth, shall be saved; he that believeth not, shall be damned. If there be insuperable difficulties and objections in your way, I cannot help it; the God who calls you, can remove them; but it is at your peril, if you reject his call: you shall never have it to say in hell, that the good-will and favour of God was never proclaimed to you; for I take the mountains and hills that are in your view, to witness, that I proclaim, through Christ, Peace on earth, and good-will towards men; and that God is in Christ reconciling the world to himself. Why, would we have the greatest sinner, and vilest debauchee among us all, to believe the love and good-will of God towards them? To this we reply, Whilst you are in a sinful state, you are indeed under the wrath and curse of God; and if you continue therein, you will be damned for ever, as sure as God lives; and you will continue there for ever, unless you come to get the apprehension of the mercy of God in Christ; but whenever you get this apprehension of God's love, then I defy you to continue in a state of sin, or in a course of sin and enmity. Will a man receive Christ, and believe the love of God in him, and yet keep fast hold of his lusts? No, I defy him, it is not possible; and therefore it is to kill your enmity, and destroy your sin that God would have you to believe his good-will in Christ. I remember that story of a godly man, that said to a witch, when nothing else could soften her heart, "I do, says he, in the name of the "Lord Jesus, charge you to come to Christ "for salvation; to come to him for faith, re- "pentance, and remission of sin, and you shall "have acceptance, and be received into the "favour of God in him." The poor witch was made to say, "O, Sir, shall I believe your "word? My life for you, says he, if you rely "upon Christ." Immediately her bands were loosed; and the Lord brought her to a deep humiliation for sin, and sense of the favour of God, so as she gave evidence, by the testimony of discerning persons, that the Lord had shewn mercy to her. O if you knew how the Lord is saying to his servants, O fy upon you! will you not compel those people to come in and close with Christ, as the great pledge of God's love? O! go to God, when you can get an opportunity to be alone, and say, Lord, I have been called to believe, but my heart is hard, and thou only can break it: O! come and save the chiefest of sinners, whereby thou wilt get more glory than ever thou had by any of Adam's posterity: cry to him, Lord, I believe, help thou my unbelief.

2. I would exhort you to render him love for love; and this exhortation concerns believers particularly. O, love him, because he first loved you. What a shame is it for you, believer, if you do not love him who first loved you! And to engage you, consider,

(1.) Whose

(1.) Whose love it is; it is the love of him, who in himself is all-sufficient, who hath no need to go forth with his love to others; the love of a God, O what a vast consideration is it!

(2.) Consider who you are that are the objects of his love; so wicked, so wretched, so unworthy of his love. That God should love the glorious angels is no wonder; for they are messengers and ministers executing his pleasure: that he should love inanimate creatures is not strange; for hail, snow, vapour, and stormy wind fulfil his word: but to love you is a wonder; and to love you while enemies.

(3.) Consider what sort of love it is. It is eternal love; before the foundation of the world, his delights were with the sons of men, from eternity: the very thoughts of this is enough to make all that is within you, like the babe in the womb of Elisabeth, to leap for joy, that you lay in the bosom of his love from eternity: and will you not love him!—His love is a free love: if you deserved his love, his love would be of less value; but that which is eternally antecedent, must be absolutely free.—His love is unchangeable love; though you change every day, his love is unchangeable. Could any provocation turn away his love, it had ceased long since; but as he set his love upon you, notwithstanding all the faults you were, and he knew you would be, guilty of, so it continues notwithstanding all.—His love is a distinguishing love; why should he have fixed on you, and past by millions from whom you differ not by nature? Why hath he past by your father, mother, brother, sister, and set his love upon you? And, O! will you not love him?—His love is a bountiful love; with his love he gives himself, his Christ, his Spirit, his grace, his glory, and all. See how the psalmist extols this love, Psal. ciii. 1. Bless the Lord, O my soul, who pardons all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases, etc. Who pardons all thine iniquities! O, it is no small thing to forgive or to pardon three or four sins, but it is yet more to pardon three or four thousand sins: Who can conceive of that love! but to forgive many millions of millions of faults; O what love is here! And so he deals with these whom he loves; He multiplies to pardon; yea, more, he heals all your diseases. O poor sinner, have you not many plagues, many diseases, yea, more than you are aware of? If you knew the plagues of your own heart, you will be crying out, O the plague of my mind, the plague of my will, the plague of my affections! O my atheism, unbelief, hardness, blindness! etc. O what innumerable evils compass me about, say you! O what horrible evils! yea, why do I call them evils, they are so many devils within me; yea, but for as many as they are, He heals all thy diseases; and for as grievous as they are, He supplies all your wants: such also is his bountiful love, My God shall supply all your wants. Are you not made up of wants! Do you not want light, life, love, faith, repentance, joy, assurance, peace, communion with God? Yea, but sometimes even on earth he supplies all wants, so as to make you say, I have enough. O does not this bountiful love, call for love?

(4.) Consider the channel in which this love runs: Christ is the means of the communication of the love of God; you have the love of God the Father, in the Son, by the Holy Ghost: Christ is the channel. Love in the Father is like honey in the flower; it must be in the comb, before it be for our use: Christ must extract and prepare this honey for us. And, O how sweet is that love, that runs through such a glorious channel!

In a word, consider the excellency of the grace of love. Love to God is the fulfilling of the law; all that it requires is love: love is the great qualification of the saints above; the more love you have, the more like heaven you will be: and the more love, the more meetness for heaven; heaven would be a burden, and a weariness to you without love; if you had not love, you would throw yourself out of heaven into hell. If you have love, you will find it make every duty pleasant; the obedience of love is sweet obedience. Yea, love will make all your crosses to be comforts; where there is little or no love, the cross is insupportable; the man crys, O a bitter cross! O the gall and wormwood! yea, but love would be like the tree cast into the waters of Marah, to make them become sweet. If you have much love, it will make you say of affliction, O this is the cup that my kind Father hath put in my hand! And shall I not drink it? Welcome whatever he sends.

O love the Lord, ye his saints, and manifest your love by your obedience: will you render him hatred for love? O let his love to you warm your heart with love to him; and in order thereto,

1. O do not doubt of or question his love to you; beware of renouncing that which engages you to love him: it is the devil's great aim to have you mistrusting God's love, that so you may not love God again.

2. Attend all his love-visits, and thankfully receive them; think not little of his ordinary visits, when in any measure he manifests his love through the lattices of ordinances; Despise not the day of small things: and especially, O make much of his extraordinary love-visits, when he mounts you up at any time into the chariot paved with love!

3. Take heed of abusing his love; beware of spotting your garments with the flesh, after God has spread his skirt over you. To sin against love is a dreadfully aggravated sin. It was a sad blot upon Solomon, that his heart was turned from the Lord, After that the Lord God of Israel had appeared to him twice, 1 Kings xi. 9.

4. Beware of confidence in the flesh, and expecting that your love should influence God to do you good; the love of Christ must constrain you: think not that your duties and obedience should constrain him: O beware of inverting the gospel at this rate, and turning it upside down! If his love excite you to love and obedience, then your love and obedience does not excite him to love you. We might fear every day, that the heart of God would be turned to hate us, if our hopes of abiding in his favour were built upon our best love and obedience.

I would send away the haters of God with a word of terror. Know that if you cannot be persuaded to the love of God, if his love does not break you in time, his vengeance will break you to eternity: The enemies of the Lord shall be like the fat of rams, they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away. If you love not Christ, know what the apostle says, If any man love not our Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema.

I will

I will tell you what is ſad, the day is coming, wherein you ſhall ſay to the rocks and mountains, fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that ſitteth on the throne, and from the Lamb: for the great day of his wrath is come; and who ſhall be able to ſtand? You will ly for ever under the fiery mountain of divine vengeance. I will tell you what is yet ſadder, and you will think ſtrange what that can be; it ſhort it is ſad, that before this day eight days, all that I am ſaying will be forgotten; yea, before the morrow at this time, the impreſſion of all will be gone.

I would ſend away the lovers of Chriſt, the lovers of God with a word of comfort. You love God, and God loves you, and God's love to you is ground of comfort.—Comfort in what you have; what you have in poſſeſſion, you have it with a bleſſing; what you have in expectation in the promiſe, is in love: and therefore the promiſe is free, becauſe of God's love in it; the promiſe is firm, becauſe of his love in it.—Comfort in what you want; ſince you have God's love, you ſhall not want.—Comfort in what you fear; You need fear no evil.—Comfort in what you do; All your ſervices will be accepted; all your ſins pardoned, though he ſhould take vengeance on your inventions.—Comfort in what you ſuffer; you ſhall be ſuſtained and ſupported; and though you may ſuffer the loſs of gifts, goods, liberty, life, yet you cannot loſe God, Chriſt, the Spirit, grace, heaven, or God's everlaſting love.——O go away with the comfortable ſenſe of his diſtinguiſhing love!

In a word, Are you lovers of God? O go away rejoicing in it, that he firſt loved you; he is not behind hand with you; He loved you before you loved him. You were elected by the grace of God from eternity; you were redeemed by the blood of Chriſt, you are certainly effectually called; For they that love him, are the called according to his purpoſe; and the day comes, when you ſhall enjoy the object of your love in a full manner. If you be true lovers of Chriſt, I certify you, the time is coming, when you ſhall ſee Chriſt as he is, and be for ever with the Lord, and enjoy him for evermore; and love without decay, and love without wearying ſhall be your everlaſting exerciſe: you ſhall rejoice in an immediate enjoyment of him. You were upon his heart from eternity; you are upon his heart this day in heaven, for you his eternal Son came to the world; for you he lived, for you he died; your love to Chriſt is a reflex of his and his Father's love to you; and there is not a true lover of Chriſt here, but hath as good ground to ſay as ever Paul had, He loved me, and gave himſelf for me. Your love to him is an infallible pledge of his antient love to you, a pledge of his preſent love to you, and a pledge of the future enjoyment of him. O let your heart, and life, and tongue, and all that is within you, and about you, vent love to him, and ſay, We love him, becauſe he firſt loved us!

SERMON VI.*

The MILITANT'S SONG; or, the BELIEVER'S EXERCISE while here below.

PSAL. ci. 1.

I will ſing of mercy and judgment: unto thee, O Lord, will I ſing.

I HOPE, the ſubject I am here in providence directed to, will natively lead us, if the Lord bleſs it, to a ſuitable exerciſe upon a thankſgiving-day after a communion; even with gratitude of ſoul to ſing the praiſes of a God in Chriſt, and that whether we have met with a ſmile or a frown from heaven, or both, at this occaſion. If any here have got a ſmile, or found him to be a ſmiling and a preſent God, they may ſing of mercy; if any here have got a frown, or found him to be a hiding God, they may ſing of judgment; or, if any here have got both a ſmile and a frown, they may ſing of both, and ſay, I will ſing of mercy and judgment: unto thee, O Lord, will I ſing.

The words contain the pſalmiſt's holy reſolution to praiſe and glorify God for all his diſpenſations towards him, now that he was advanced to the kingdom of Iſrael: and in them you may ſhortly notice, 1. The ſweet work that is reſolved upon, namely, to ſing. 2. The ſweet ſinger that thus reſolves, namely, DAVID; I will ſing. 3. The ſweet ſubject of the ſong, namely, mercy and judgment. 4. The ſweet object of this praiſe, and the manner in which he would ſing it; Unto THEE, O LORD, will I ſing.

1. The ſweet work that is reſolved upon, namely, to ſing. It is the work of heaven, and a very fit work after a communion, to ſing a ſong of praiſe to God, in the manner which we may afterwards explain.

2. The ſweet ſinger; I will ſing. The title of the pſalm ſhews it was David's, the man after God's own heart; the man anointed by the God of Jacob, and the ſweet pſalmiſt of Iſrael; for ſo he is called, 2 Sam. xxiii. 1.

3. The ſweet ſubject of the ſong, or the matter of it, namely, mercy and judgment. God's work towards his people is chequered work; a mixture of mercy and judgment: and when he exerciſes us with both, it is our duty to ſing of both, and to be ſuitably affected with both; whether our circumſtances be joyful or ſorrowful, ſtill we muſt give glory to God; and, in every thing give thanks: neither the laughter of a proſperous condition, nor the tears of an afflicted condition muſt put us out of tune for the ſacred ſongs of praiſe.

* This ſermon was preached at Carnock, on Monday, July —, 1723, being a thankſgiving day immediately after the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper there; and hath already borne four impreſſions.

4. The

4. The ſweet object of this praiſe, and the manner in which he reſolves to ſing it, Unto THEE, O LORD, will I ſing. It is in the moſt ſolemn manner that he addreſſes the Lord JEHOVAH, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, and dedicates his ſong to the praiſe of a God in Chriſt; Unto THEE, O LORD, will I ſing. But I refer the further explication to the proſecution of a doctrine from the words.

OBSERV. That, as the people of God have both mercy and judgment in their lot in this world; ſo, from both they may have matter of a ſong of praiſe unto God.

They have occaſion in this world to ſing both of mercy and judgment. We find the pſalmiſt frequently ſinging both of mercy and judgment; as Pſal. xxx. 6,—9. Pſal. xlii. 7,—11. You have an elegant deſcription of the lot of God's people, while here, as conſiſting both of mercy and judgment, and ſo affording occaſion to ſing of both, 2 Cor. vi. 8, 9, 10.; where you will ſee the blink and the ſhower; the mercies and judgments that are in their lot; how God hath ſet the one over againſt the other: By honour and diſhonour, by evil report and good report, etc. Thus they have occaſion to ſing both of mercies and croſſes, while they find the Lord ſupporting them under trials, and remembring mercy in the midſt of wrath, and making all things work together for good to them: I will ſing of mercy and judgment; unto thee, O Lord, will I ſing. The Chaldee paraphraſe of this text is remarkable, and ſuitable to the doctrine I have raiſed from it, namely, it is as if the pſalmiſt had ſaid, 'If thou beſtoweſt mercies upon me; or 'if thou bringeſt any judgment upon me; be-'fore thee, O Lord, will I ſing my hymn for 'all.'

The method I propoſe, for proſecuting this doctrine, through divine aid, is the following,

I. I would ſpeak a little of the mercies that the people of God meet with; and what it is in theſe that affords them matter for a ſong of praiſe.

II. I would ſpeak a little of the judgments they are triſted with; and what it is in judgment that may be matter of a ſong of praiſe to God.

III. What this ſinging imports; and how we are to ſing of mercy and judgment: where we may notice what is imported in the pſalmiſt's reſolution, and the manner of expreſſing it; I will ſing of mercy and judgment; unto thee, O Lord, will I ſing.

IV. Why it is ſo ordered of the Lord, that his people are made to ſing, both of mercy and of judgment.

V. Draw ſome inferences for the application.

I. I am firſt to ſpeak a little of mercy, of which they ought to ſing; and here I would ſhew, 1. What this mercy is; and, 2. What it is in mercy that may be matter of a ſong, or afford ground of ſinging.

1*ſt*, What this mercy is. Mercy, in God, ſignifies a propenſity or readineſs of mind to help and ſuccour ſuch as are in miſery: and it carries in it an inward commotion and moving of bowels, as God ſays of Ephraim, My bowels are troubled for him; I will ſurely have mercy upon him, Jer. xxxi. 20. God, to accommodate himſelf to our capacity, ſpeaks after the manner of man, aſcribing human affections to himſelf. I might here ſpeak of the general mercy of God towards all, both juſt and unjuſt: for, He is good to all, and his tender mercies are over all his works, Pſal. cxlv. 9. He makes his ſun to ſhine; and his rain to fall upon good and bad: and all ſhould ſing of his mercy, if it were no more but for life, and health, and ſtrength from him. There are ſome common gifts that all men have from him, and ſome common graces that ſome have more than others; but I ſpeak eſpecially of ſpecial mercies; and indeed there are of theſe, that the viſible church hath, beſides the reſt of the world, even the wicked among them; and, if they could, they ſhould ſing of theſe mercies; ſuch as, their hearing the goſpel, and the joyful ſound; their getting the offer of Chriſt, and ſalvation through him: but I ſpeak mainly of the ſpecial mercies, that bear the ſtamp of his everlaſting love towards his choſen and hidden ones: mercy bred in God's breaſt from all eternity, whereby he made choice of ſome of the fallen maſs of mankind in Chriſt, who is the channel wherein this mercy does flow in various ſtreams: and I ſhall mention a few of theſe, for there would be no end of ſpeaking, to mention all that might be ſaid, or yet to enlarge upon all that may be mentioned.

1. There is the mercy of God, in ſending Chriſt to be the Saviour. We find the angels ſinging of this mercy, Luke ii. 11, 14. ſaying, To you is born in the city of David, a Saviour: Glory to God in the higheſt, on earth peace, and good-will towards men. Good-will and mercy towards man, becauſe there is peace on earth, and reconciliation through Chriſt, who brings in glory to God in the higheſt: God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoſoever believeth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life, John iii. 16. It is indeed a ſo without a ſuch; a love without a parallel: here mercy ſhines.

2. There is mercy in the death of Chriſt: ſee how the four and twenty elders ſing of this mercy; Thou waſt ſlain, and haſt redeemed us to God, by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation: and haſt made us to our God kings and prieſts: and the angels join iſſue with them, to the number of ten thouſand times ten thouſand, and thouſands of thouſands, ſaying, with a loud voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain, to receive power, and riches, and wiſdom, and ſtrength, and honour, and glory, and bleſſing, Rev. v. 9,—12.

3. There is mercy that he ſhews, in raiſing of Chriſt from death, and in raiſing and quickening us together with him. We find the apoſtle ſinging of this mercy; But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he hath loved us, even when we were dead in ſins, hath quickened us together with Chriſt, and hath raiſed us up together, and made us ſit together in heavenly places in Chriſt Jeſus, Eph. ii. 4, 5. If Chriſt muſt die, he muſt conquer death, that his people may be more than conquerors in him over death; both ſpiritual death, whereby we were under the power of ſin; and legal death, whereby we were under the guilt of ſin, and ſentence of the law. In oppoſition to both theſe, the life of regeneration, and the life of juſtification is connected with this merciful quickening together with Chriſt; as you ſee, Col. ii. 13. You, being dead in your ſins and the uncircumciſion of your fleſh, hath he quickened together with him; having forgiven you all treſpaſſes. O how does the pſalmiſt ſing of this mercy! Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul,— who forgiveth all thy ſins, and healeth all thy diſeaſes, Pſal. ciii. 2, 3.

4. There is mercy that he ſhews, in cleanſing the ſoul from the filth of ſin, as well as the guilt thereof, till it be waſhed and made quite clean at laſt. See how the ſaints do ſweetly ſing of this mercy, Rev. i. 7. where I think they ſing both of pardoning and purifying mercy; To him that loved us, and waſhed us from our ſins in his own blood, to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever, Amen.

5. There is mercy that he ſhews, in adopting ſuch heirs of hell by nature, to be the children of God by grace: and you may ſee how believers ſing of this mercy; Behold, what manner of love the Father hath beſtowed upon us, that we ſhould be called the ſons of God! 1 John iii. 1. He makes them his children, and gives them the Spirit of adoption; Becauſe ye are ſons, he hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, ABBA, Father. He gives them the mark and ſeal of his children, even the Spirit as a Spirit of prayer, and as a Spirit of faith, and a Spirit of love, working the love of God in our hearts, who are by nature enemies: and, O what mercy is here!

6. There is mercy that he ſhews, in conferring the high dignity of prieſthood and royalty upon them; ſee how they ſing of this mercy; To him that loved us,—and hath made us kings and prieſts unto God, and his Father [or, to God, even his Father:] to him be glory, Rev. i. 5, 6. Kings unto God, how? Even to fight for him againſt ſin, Satan, and the world, and conquer all our enemies in his name. Prieſts unto God, how? Even to offer ſpiritual ſacrifices, acceptable to God by Jeſus Chriſt; to offer our prayers and praiſes, ſouls and bodies to him, on our altar, Jeſus Chriſt. Thus they are made kings and prieſts; and therefore called a royal prieſthood; a prieſthood of kings, or a kingdom of prieſts.

7. There is mercy that he ſhews his people, in abiding and ſtanding by them in all difficulties, ſo as nothing ſhall ever be able to ſeparate them from the favour of their God. See how ſweetly the apoſtle Paul ſings of this mercy; Who ſhall ſeparate us from the love of Chriſt? Shall tribulation, or diſtreſſes, or perſecution, or famine, or nakedneſs, or peril, or ſword?—Nay, I am perſuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things preſent, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, ſhall be able to ſeparate us from the love of God which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, Rom. viii. 35,—39. But though neither death, nor life, nor angels do it, yet may not ſin ſeparate me from the mercy and love of God? Indeed it may ſeparate, ſo as to make a fearful deſertion, but never ſo as to make a final ſeparation; for, His mercy endures for ever: and he hath ſaid, I will never leave thee, nor forſake thee. He will viſit their iniquity with the rod,—but his loving-kindneſs will he not take away. My mercy will I keep with him for evermore, and my covenant ſhall ſtand faſt with him, Pſal. lxxxix. 28, 32, 33.

8. There is mercy that he ſhews, in giving many merciful experiences of his goodneſs and mercy following them all the days of their life; ſuch as the pſalmiſt ſings of, Pſal. xxiii. 6. It is true, the leading mercy of all, is God himſelf, Chriſt himſelf, the Spirit himſelf; one God in three Perſons, is their God; made over to them in that word, I will be your God. Here is the fountain-mercy of all mercies, of which they may ſing, ſaying, This God is our God for ever and ever, and will be our guide, even unto death. And indeed to ſing of mercy, is to ſing of a merciful God: but as we know the nature of the fountain by the ſweetneſs of the ſtreams, ſo we may take a view of ſome more of theſe ſtreams, under the notion of merciful experiences; and I name theſe following, by which a ſong of mercy may be excited.

(1.) There are merciful intimations and communications, that they ſometimes get, to make them ſing of mercy. Sometimes he intimates his love, ſaying, I have loved thee with an everlaſting love: Sometimes he intimates pardon, ſaying, I, even I am he, that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions, and will remember thy ſins no more: Sometimes he intimates acceptance, ſaying, O man, greatly beloved; and the intimation ſets them a wondering and praiſing: Sometimes he communicates his mind and his ſecrets to them, The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will ſhew unto them his covenant: Sometimes the ſecrets of his providence; he will tell them what he hath a-mind to do with themſelves, and what he hath a-mind to do with ſuch a friend, and ſuch a child, and ſuch a land or church; Shall I hide from Abraham that which I do? Sometimes he communicates himſelf to them, ſaying, I am thy God, I am thy ſhield; Fear not, for I am with thee: Sometimes ſuch intimations and communications are given, as make all their bones to ſay, Who is like unto thee?

(2.) There merciful viſits, after deſertion, and after backſliding, that they ſometimes get, to make them ſing of mercy, when they have been heaping up mountains of ſin and provocation betwixt him and them; yet, after all, he hath come and given them occaſion to ſay, The voice of my Beloved, behold he cometh ſkipping upon the mountains, and leaping upon the hills, Cant. ii. 8. The voice of my Beloved! O an exceeding ſweet and powerful voice! It had a ſound of heaven; I thought the mountains would have kept him away, but I heard the ſound of his feet upon the mountains, that made my heart warm toward him again; I had departed from him by an evil heart of unbelief, and I thought he would never return; but, O he reſtored my ſoul, and helped me anew to wreſtle with him: We found him in Bethel, and there he ſpake with us.

(3.) There are merciful accompliſhments of promiſes, that they ſometimes get, to make them ſing of mercy. The Lord ſometimes lets in a promiſe with life and power, and gives them a word on which he cauſes them to hope. It may be he will give them a promiſe for themſelves, and it may be a promiſe for their children; ſuch as that, I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeed: and ſometimes a promiſe for the church; ſuch as that, Upon all the glory there ſhall be a defence: and ſometimes he gives a wonderful accompliſhment of promiſes, like that of Hezekiah; What ſhall I ſay? he hath both ſpoken, and himſelf hath done it: He hath come to my ſoul, and made me ſee that he is as good as his word; and that faithfulneſs is the girdle of his loins.

(4.) There is a merciful grant of all their deſires, that they ſometimes get, to make them ſing of mercy. As the deſire of their ſoul is towards him, and the remembrance of his name; ſo, he ſatisfies the longing ſoul, and fills the hungry with good things; and gives them ſometimes a Chriſt in their arms, who is all their ſalvation, and all their desire: Delight thyself in the Lord, and he will give thee the desire of thy heart. Some have got their desires satisfied abundantly, now and then; they have got all that they could desire with respect to temporal mercies; all that they could desire with respect to spiritual mercies; yea, all that they could desire within time, till they get an armful of him before the throne.

(5.) There is merciful instruction and illumination, that they sometimes get, to make them sing of mercy; The path of the just is as the shining light, shining more and more unto the perfect day. And therefore he gives them to learn some lesson more and more; some gospel-lesson, and gospel-mystery, that they were in the dark about: and one great lesson that he teaches them is, even the difference betwixt the law and the gospel: he teaches them, that the law is holy, just, and good; and how the gospel crowns the law in all these respects: he teaches, that the law is holy in its commands, commanding perfect holiness, perfect obedience; and how the gospel shews where this perfect obedience is to be had, even in Christ, in whom they have not only strength to answer it as a rule of duty in part, but perfect righteousness to answer it as a covenant of works completely: he teaches them, that the law is just in its threatening, the threatening of eternal death; and how the gospel shews where this threatening hath vented itself, even in demanding and getting complete satisfaction from Christ the Surety; and therefore may the soul say, Well is me, for the shower of wrath is over my head, and hath lighted upon the head of my Cautioner! He teaches them, that the law is good in its promises, namely, its promise of eternal life to perfect personal obedience: but withal he he teaches them by the gospel, how they hold their title to life, only in Christ, to whose perfect obedience now all the promises are made, and in whom all the promises are Yea and Amen. O what a mercy is it to learn these lessons in a saving way; To you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God: he hath hid these things from the wise and prudent, and revealed them to babes; even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight.

(6.) There are merciful sensible enjoyments, which they sometimes get, to make them sing of mercy: sometimes they get sensible sights of his glory, and that in a way of believing; Said I not unto thee, If thou wouldst believe, thou shouldst see the glory of God? O says the man, I found faith to be the hardest thing in the world, and yet he made me find it to be the easiest thing in the world, when he carried me on the wings of the Spirit of faith; and by faith I saw his glory, and the glory of God in the face of Jesus. When I speak of sensible sight, do not mistake me; for I know that faith and sight, or faith and sense, differ in several respects, which I am not now to open; and yet faith brings in a kind of sense, it being the evidence of things not seen, and the substance of things hoped for; and therefore, by a sensible sight, I mean, the spiritual sense of seeing by faith, and seeing clearly: for sometimes the man gets a sight of Christ, as clearly as if he saw him with his bodily eyes: O, says the man, I have seen his fulness and sufficiency; I see his fitness and suitableness for me; I see his worthiness and excellency in himself. O none but Christ, none but Christ; as once a martyr, standing at a post, and having matches kindled upon him, and the flames about his finger-ends, he claped his hands together, and cried, None but Christ, none but Christ.

Some men they get sensible tastes of his goodness; I sat down under his shadow with great delight, and his fruit was sweet to my taste. O how sweetly did I feed upon the apple-tree, and plucked off the apples that grew upon this tree, the apple of imputed righteousness, the apple of imparted grace, the apple of peace, the apple of pardon, the apple of assurance, the apple of joy, the apple of contentment, the apple of love, the apple of liberty! O the sweet fruit, the sweet apples that grow upon this tree of life! I sat down under his shadow, with great delight, etc.

Sometimes they get a sensible hearing of his voice: like that in the Song, It is the voice of my Beloved that knocketh, Song v. 2. He knocked by his voice, saying, Open to me, my sister, my spouse. O sweet was his voice, when he said to me, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee! How sweet was his voice, when he said, Be of good chear, thy sins are forgiven thee! when he said a word like that of the angel, Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found favour with God! Did not my heart burn within me, when he talked with me by the way? In such a word, and at such a sacrament, and such an ordinance, and such a duty? Never man spake like this Man: It was the voice of a God that I heard; for it was with such a glance of glory, as set my heart all in a flame of fire.

Sometimes they get a sensible smell of his ointments: O! his name had a smell of heaven; for, because of the savour of his good ointment, his name was as ointment poured forth. O! his garments had a smell of heaven; all his garments smell of aloes, myrrh, and Cassia, out of the ivory palaces. The garment of his righteousness had a smell; it is a sacrifice of a sweet smelling savour; and the perfume thereof puts away the stinking smell of sin: the garment of his graces had a smell, when the Spirit breathed upon them, and the north and south-wind awakened, the spices sent forth a pleasant smell; when the Spirit warmed my cold heart in duties, and fire from heaven kindled the sacrifice, then it mounted up to heaven, like a pillar of smoke, perfumed with myrrh and frankincense, and all the powders of the merchant.

Sometimes they get a sensible feeling of his power; they have felt a sweet power coming along with the word, the sacrament, the prayer, the duty, that hath set the lawful captive at liberty, and loosed their bands; Truly I am thy servant, thou hast loosed my bands, Psal. cxvi. 16. O says the man, At such a time I am quit of the band of fear, I am quit of the band of unbelief, I am quit of the band of doubts, I am quit of the band of corruption; a power hath come, and knocked off my fetters: I felt his hand passing through the hole of the door of my heart, and my bowels were moved for him; he said to me, as it were to unbelieving Thomas, Reach hither thy hand, and put into the hole of my side, and let my wounds silence all your faithless fears, discouragements, and jealousies; and I was obliged to cry out, My Lord, and my God. I thought he took me, as it were, by the hand, as he did Peter upon the water, ready to sink, saying, O why didst thou doubt?

doubt? He ſhed abroad his love upon my heart ſo ſweetly, that I could doubt no more. I could have been content that the valley of viſion had been my burial-place, and that I had never gone back to the world again; for his love raviſhed my heart, and ſtruck the bottom out of all my doubts and fears: I got all my backſlidings healed; I got all my prayers anſwered; I got my burdens eaſed; I got grace to pour out my ſoul into his boſom; I got grace to bring all my corruptions to him, to be daſhed to pieces; I got grace to creep into his heart, and hide myſelf in his wounds; I got grace to caſt all my burdens over upon him, and my heart was lightened; and my ſoul was more eaſed and pleaſed, than if I had been a crowned emperor of all the kingdoms of the world.—Theſe are ſome of the merciful experiences that ſometimes they will get, to make them ſing of mercy. I might have mentioned many more to this purpoſe, both of ordinary and extraordinary mercies; but I go on,

2*dly*, To the ſecond queſtion here propoſed, What it is IN mercy that affords ground of ſinging?

1. The freeneſs and undeſervedneſs of the mercy, makes them ſing of mercy: when the man deſerves hell, and the juſt ſentence of the law to be paſt againſt him, mercy comes and takes hold of him. What is the cauſe of mercy? There is nothing in man to merit it but miſery; which is indeed the occaſion that God takes, to manifeſt his mercy through Chriſt: but yet miſery cannot be the cauſe of mercy; for neither merit nor miſery can be conſidered here to have any cauſal influence, it is juſt abſolute ſovereignty; It is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that ſheweth mercy. Sovereign mercy is a thing that can neither be obtained by any good, nor hindered by any evil about us; he gives no account of his dealings: I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy. He loves, and we ſhall be loved: let all our high imaginations and proud reaſonings ſtrike ſail to the ſovereignty of free grace. O ſhall I not ſing of mercy, that when I deſerved a hell, I got a heaven! I deſerved eternal death, and I got a ſweet view of eternal life! This accents the praiſes. O what am I,—that thou haſt brought me hitherto?

2. The unexpectedneſs of the mercy, makes them ſing of mercy: O! when I was expecting a frown, I got a ſmile; when I was expecting nothing but wrath, I got a glance of love; inſtead of a ſtroak of vengeance, I got a view of glory. Hezekiah got a meſſage of death, and was looking for it, when he got the news of life, and it made him ſing of mercy, Iſa. xxxviii. 15. The mercy of God is ſurprizing mercy; ſome have gone diſconſolate and caſt down to an ordinance, and ere ever they were aware, their ſouls have got ſomething, which hath cauſed them to cry, O! is this the manner of man, O Lord? Some have gone to a cloſet, or a field, or a barn, or perhaps to a dike-ſide, with little or no expectation; but behold they have been ſurprized with an armful of heaven; perhaps at ſuch a ſermon, they have been ſurprized with a word of love on the back of deep humiliation, or deſertion; a word, like a live-coal, hath been caſt in, and ſet their breaſt on fire, and their heart in a flame.

3. The ſeaſonableneſs of the mercy, makes them ſing of mercy: for, he comes with grace to help in time of need; I was brought low, and he helped me: I was brought to the brink of ruin, and the border of deſpair, when mercy ſtept in for my relief and comfort: when I was at the loweſt extremity, he ſtept in, and made it the ſweeteſt time that ever I ſaw; He brought me out of the horrible pit, and ſet my feet upon a rock, and put a new ſong in my mouth, even praiſes unto our God. He pitied us in our low eſtate, for his mercy endureth for ever.

4. The greatneſs and riches of the mercy, makes them ſing, ſaying, O how great is thy goodneſs, which thou haſt laid up for them that fear thee, which thou haſt wrought for them that truſt in thee, before the ſons of men! Pſal. xxxi. 19. We read of the riches of his mercy; the exceeding riches of his grace: his people ſometimes meet with exceeding rich favour; ſuch as not only exceeds their worth infinitely, but even exceeds their ſenſe, exceeds their thoughts, exceeds their words, exceeds their deſires, exceeds their prayers, exceeds their praiſes, exceeds all that they can aſk or think; and this makes them ſing. We read of his abundant mercy: it is abundant in reſpect of its fountain; for his mercy is his nature, and muſt be infinite: it is abundant in reſpect of its ſtreams, as it is let out abundantly towards the object thereof: it is abundantly great in reſpect of its various kinds, temporal mercy, ſpiritual mercy, eternal mercy; temporal mercy makes them ſing, and ſay, I am leſs than the leaſt of all thy mercies: ſpiritual mercy makes them ſing, and ſay, He hath bleſſed us with all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly places in Chriſt Jeſus: eternal mercy makes them ſing and rejoice in the hope of the glory of God. O how abundant are they in their kinds, outward and inward mercies! Outward mercies are abundant: O the mercy that attended my birth, my education, the place of my ſituation in the world, ſo as to be brought under the drop of the goſpel; my preſervation from innumerable dangers; my protection, my proviſion; he hath fed me all my life long. Inward mercies are abundant; the mercy that appeared in my being awakened, convinced, humbled, converted, confirmed, comforted, called, juſtified, adopted, ſanctified. O what ground of ſinging of mercy! It is great and abundant in reſpect of the qualities of it: O what matter of ſinging might be gathered out of the views of mercy, as it is preventing mercy, ſparing mercy, conſcending mercy, covering mercy, tender mercy, waiting mercy, conſtraining mercy, reſtraining mercy, reſtoring mercy, following mercy! Even when I fled away from mercy, mercy and goodneſs followed me. But the bare mentioning of all would be impracticable; O the greatneſs of the mercy of which they may ſing! O the greatneſs of the Author of it, a great God! If we be ſaved, what does he get? if we be damned, what does he loſe? yet he ſhews mercy. O the greatneſs of the object of it! it is extended towards the chief of ſinners. O the greatneſs of the effects of it! Hereby great ſins are pardoned, great bleſſings are conferred, great wrath is averted, and great ſalvation is obtained: O! how can they but ſing of mercy! O the greatneſs of the attendants and companions of it! It makes them ſing, not only when they notice the mercy, but the contents concomitants of it, and what comes alongs with it: how ſweetly will the ſoul ſing, when it can ſay, I not only got ſuch

and

a mercy, but I saw God in it, and Christ in it, and the Spirit in it, and heaven in it, and glory in it! O! how sweet, when they consider this favour hath a necessary connection with heaven! it is a fore-taste of what I shall enjoy for ever: it is connected with God's everlasting love. And hence,

5. Not only the greatness, but the sweetness of the mercy makes them sing. And there are two things, among many others, that make it sweet to them, namely, the excellency of the mercy itself, and then their relation to it. On the one hand the excellency of the mercy; How excellent is thy loving kindness, O Lord! Thy favour is better than life: His mouth is most sweet, says the church: The words of his mouth are sweeter than honey, or the honey-comb. On the other hand, their relation to the mercy, contributes to the sweetness of it; the more of faith's application, the more sweet. O says faith, there is a promise, and it is mine; there is a pardon, and it is mine; there is a robe of righteousness, and it is mine; there is a crown of glory, and it is mine; there is a God, and he is mine: all is mine, because Christ is mine. O then he sings of mercy. But,

6. To name no more, The sureness and firmness of the mercy makes them sing; they are called the sure mercies of David, Isa. lv. 3. The Septuagint renders it as the apostle does, Acts xiii. 34. τὰ ὅσια Δαεὶδ, the holy, just, and faithful * things of David. The mercies of God in Christ, our mystical David, are his holy, just, and faithful things; his holiness, justice, and faithfulness are concerned to make good and secure his mercy to them that believe. Hence it is said of believing penitents, 1 John i. 9. that God is faithful and just to forgive him his sins. Faithfulness hath a respect to God's promise, and justice a respect to the price and ransom paid by Christ: and God hath bound himself; he is bound by his own faithfulness, on the one hand, he will be faithful to his word of promise; and he is bound by his own justice on the other hand, which is fully satisfied in Christ: he is thus obliged to give out mercy, and secure it for the believer; this makes it indeed the sure mercies of David; and so they are eternally secured, and therefore everlasting mercies. In a word, the thing that makes them sing of mercy is, When then they see the mercy to bear in it the tokens of God's love; when they find such a mercy is not only the answer of prayer, but the fruit of God's electing grace; when they see God's everlasting love to be the fountain from whence it flows, Christ's everlasting righteousness the channel in which it runs, and the powerful operation of the Spirit making the effectual conveyance and application of all.—Now, these are some of the mercies, and the things in these mercies, both more ordinary and extraordinary, that are ground of singing: I will sing of mercy. But to the other part of the song.

* τὰ πιστὰ.

II. The second thing was, to speak of the judgments that the Lord's people meet with; and what it is in judgment that may be matter of a song of praise unto God. To sing of mercy is what I understand, may you say; but how to sing of judgment, I want to know. Here then I would follow the same method as in the former head, namely, 1. To speak of some of these judgments they may meet with. 2. What it is in judgment that may be matter of a song of praise to God.

1*st*, Now, as to the first of these, viz. The judgments of which they are to sing; in order to clear this, you would know, that the word judgment hath various sanctifications in scripture; I shall name some of these.

1. Judgment sometimes signifies (when spoken with relation to man) understanding and equity: sometimes it signifies understanding, and a faculty of discerning, in opposition to ignorance; I pray that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge, and in all JUDGMENT, Phil. i. 9. Sometimes it signifies equity, in opposition to injustice; I know Abraham, that he will command his children and his household after him, that they keep the ways of the Lord, and do justice and JUDGMENT, Gen. xviii. 19. Now, though the doing judgment thus, and that with an understanding heart, be one of the ways by which we are to sing the praises of God and glorify him, of which more afterwards; yet other things are here intended. Therefore,

2. Judgment (when spoken of with relation to God) signifies several other things; as,

(1.) It sometimes signifies God's just and righteous government of the world, particularly by Christ Jesus; The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all JUDGMENT to the Son, John v. 22. Righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne; and that both in the iron rod, by which he takes vengeance on his enemies; and in the golden sceptre, by which he rules his own people. And indeed, whatever be intended in the text, this government of Christ is matter of a song of praise; The Lord reigns, let the earth rejoice; the Lord reigns, let the earth be glad. But,

(2.) Judgment sometimes signifies the rectitude of Christ's administration, in his reforming the world, and bringing things into order, which sin and Satan had put into confusion; so may that word be understood, John ix. 34. For JUDGMENT am I come into this world: and again, Now is the JUDGMENT of this world; now shall the prince of this world be cast out. Of this judgment also will the believer sing, when the Spirit is come to convince, as of sin and righteousness, so also of judgment; because the prince of this world is judged. But,

(3.) Judgment sometimes signifies the precepts of the law, as ye know they are frequently called, God's testimonies and judgments, especially, Psal. cxix. And when a man learns these in a gospel-way, they are matter of a song of praise also, Psal. cxix. 7. I will praise thee with uprightness of heart, when I have learned thy righteous JUDGMENTS. Yea, they delight therein, and sing of these judgments, Psal. cxix. 54. Thy statutes have been my song in the house of my pilgrimage.

(4.) Judgment sometimes signifies the doctrine of the gospel; I will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles, Mat. xii. 18. It is cited out of Isa. xlii. 1. He shall shew judgment to the Gentiles; that is, He will publish the gospel; the way and method of salvation, which he came, as a Prophet, to teach and proclaim; as a Priest, to work out; and as a King, to apply: and if we should take judgment in this sense, surely all believers sing of judgment, whenever faith is in exercise; for the gospel is the song of the saints; it is the joyful sound, while with joy they draw water out of this well of ſalvation. Pſal. lxxxix. 15. Iſa. xii. 3.

(5.) It ſometimes ſignifies the puniſhment inflicted upon Chriſt, when he ſubſtitute himſelf in our room; He was taken from priſon and from JUDGMENT; or, as it may be rendered, and as you will ſee in the margin of ſome of your Bibles, He was taken away BY DISTRESS and judgment;—while it pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him, Iſa. liii. 8, 10. O but this infinitely ſevere act of juſtice and judgment againſt Chriſt was an infinite act of mercy towards us! And, as we had periſhed eternally, if we had not been thus judged and condemned in a Surety; ſo this judgment execute upon him is noble matter of a ſong. To ſing of judgment, in this ſenſe, is one of the ſweeteſt hymns to the praiſe of God.

(6.) Judgment ſometimes ſignifies the ſolemnity of the laſt day; Behold, the Lord comes with ten thouſands of his ſaints, to execute JUDGMENT upon all, Jude, ver. 14, 15. And though it will be a day of terrible vengeance to the wicked Chriſtleſs world, yet the ſaints may ſing of judgment in this ſenſe, and lift up their heads with joy; for, the day of their redemption draws near: when Chriſt, who is their life ſhall appear, they ſhall appear with him in glory. Awake and ſing, ye that dwell in the duſt.

(7.) Judgment ſometimes ſignifies the puniſhment of the wicked in a wrathful manner; and the heavy plagues which he pours out upon any perſon or people, whether it be ſword, famine, peſtilence, or any other ſtroak; Exod. vi. 6. I will redeem you from Egypt (ſays God of Iſrael) with a ſtretched-out hand, and with great JUDGMENTS; that is, with great plagues and puniſhments upon the Egyptians. The Lord is known by the JUDGMENTS which he executeth. And ſometimes the Lord gives his church and people occaſion to ſing of judgment in this ſenſe, as Iſrael did at the Red-ſea, after God had poured out all his plagues upon Pharaoh and upon his proud hoſt; on which occaſion, you have the ſong of Moſes, Exod. xv. In this ſenſe it is ſaid, The righteous ſhall rejoice when he ſees the vengeance; not that he will love to feed his eyes upon the blood and ruin of his fellow-creatures, but rejoice in that God is glorified in the deſtruction of his enemies, and the ſalvation of his church and people.

(8.) Judgment ſometimes ſignifies the chaſtiſement of the godly: for, as there is a wrathful judgment, which God exerciſes towards his eneenemies; ſo there is a fatherly judgment, which he exerciſes towards his friends. In this ſenſe we may underſtand that word in the inſtitution of the ſacrament, even as it concerns the godly themſelves, He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation [or, JUDGMENT,] to himſelf, as the word may be rendered, 1 Cor. xi. 29. And indeed, as a believer may communicate unworthily, ſo his unworthy communicating may bring on him heavy judgments or chaſtiſements from the Lord; For this cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you, and many ſleep, ver. 30. Judgment, I ſay, ſignifies ſometimes fatherly judgments or chaſtiſements: and thus it is to be underſtood, 1 Pet. iv 17. The time is come that JUDGMENT muſt begin at the houſe of God; and in this ſenſe eſpecially I conceive judgment to be meant in the text, I will ſing of mercy and of JUDGMENT: So that by judgment here we are to underſtand all the hardſhips and ſorrows of a believer's lot, whether punitive or probative, that is, whether for the puniſhment of his ſins, or the probation of his graces: all penal diſpenſations for his correction, or whatever diſpenſations make for his trial: all adverſity, ſufferings, and diſtreſſes, of whatſoever kind.

Now, if you aſk more particularly what theſe judgments are? I think they may be all reduced to theſe four ordinary words, 1. The judgment of affliction. 2. The judgment of temptation. 3. The judgment of deſertion. 4. The judgment of ſin itſelf, which may be ſo called, when a man is left to fall into it for the puniſhment of other ſins. I am not yet come to ſhew how theſe, or any of theſe, may afford matter of a ſong; I am as yet telling you what are the judgments they may meet withal. And,

1. The judgment of affliction. Many are the afflictions of the righteous, even their outward afflictions: ſometimes they are afflicted in their bodies, with ſickneſs; ſometimes in their eſtate, with poverty; ſometimes in their name, with reproach; ſometimes in their relations, either by the graceleſneſs of their relations, or by their death; if they were gracious, then they are afflicted with grief that they have loſt them; if they were graceleſs, then they are afflicted with fear leſt they be gone to hell; if they know not whether they died in Chriſt or not, they are afflicted with perplexity, becauſe they know not what is become of them: ſometimes they are afflicted in their families, with this and the other croſs, and diſorder, and confuſion; ſometimes in their neighbours and brethren, whether wicked or godly, from whom they may have trials of many ſorts; ſometimes in their cauſe they maintain, and for conſcience ſake, they may be perſecuted and harraſſed; If any man will live godly in this world, he muſt ſuffer perſecution: through much tribulation we muſt enter into the kingdom of God. There is a neceſſity for it; for the believer here is like the tribe of Manaſſeh, half on this ſide Jordan, in the land of the Amorites; and half on the other ſide, in the holy land: I mean, he hath both corruption and grace, and hence a neceſſity of affliction and ſuffering; for if he hath any good in him, the devil will ſurely gnaſh at him, and endeavour, if he can, to devour him; and if he hath evil in him, he muſt look that God will afflict him. But,

2. There is the judgment of temptation, that the children of God ſometimes meet with, even the fiery darts of the devil: for the Lord ſees fit ſometimes to let Satan looſe on his people; who will not be wanting to improve any liberty granted to him, with his uttermoſt power and policy, as we ſee in the caſe of Job. It is ſtrange to read how Chriſt was tempted of the devil, Mat. iv. 3,—10. And after that, let none think ſtrange, that the followers of Chriſt may be tempted to deny their ſonſhip; tempted to doubt of God's care; tempted to deſtroy themſelves; yea, tempted to worſhip the devil: for, In all theſe things he was tempted like as we are, yet without ſin; and in that he himſelf, though he ſinned not, yet ſuffered, being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted. The children of grace may be tempted to atheiſm, and to doubt of the being of a God; tempted to blaſphemy, and horrible things, that they dare not tell for a world. It is ſaid by the ſpouſe, Song ii. 4. He brought me to the banqueting-houſe, and his banner over me was love. Why? what is the meaning of a banner in a banqueting-houſe? A banner is rather for a battle: but indeed, Sirs, here the banquet and the banner go together; for the battle many times follows the banquet. It may be, Satan and corruption are ſleeping, as it were now; but I aſſure you they are not dead: ſo long as ye have ſin, ye ſhall have temptations to ſin; ſo long as there is a finger of the believer out of heaven, the devil will be ſtriking at it. If temptations have not aſſaulted you already ſince the ſacrament, as I fear they have, yet be ſure the Philiſtines will be upon you.

is

3. There is the judgment of deſertion, which is yet ſorer than any of the former; Thou didſt hide thy face, and I was troubled. Sometimes the believer comes under the ſad loſs of the light of God's countenance, and the ſenſe of his love; and may loſe his gracious comfortable preſence very ſuddenly, even when he is juſt opening the door of his heart, as it were, to let him in; I opened to my Beloved, but my Beloved had withdrawn himſelf, and was gone, Cant. v. 6. Sometimes he loſes that comfortable preſence very unworthily, even in a fit of drouſineſs and ſpiritual ſecurity, as in that ſame fifth of the Song, ver. 3. Sometimes he loſes it very long; I ſought him, but I found him not; I called on him, but he gave me no anſwer. I went from duty to duty, from ordinance to ordinance, and yet not ſo much as a word or a look from him. In this caſe, it cannot but be a very melancholy time with the believer, when he goes mourning without the ſun, ſaying, O that I knew where I might find him! O that it were with me as in months paſt! Eſpecially if he knows that he hath not loſt that preſence by ſovereignty on the Lord's part, but ſinfully on his part, and that he hath ſinned him away. How ill went it with Aſaph, when he was forced to ſay, I remembred God, and was troubled, Pſal. lxxvii. 3. Why? he remembred his own unkindneſs and ingratitude, that provoked the Lord to be gone. O! it is not eaſy to comfort the ſoul in this caſe. This ſoul-deſertion is ordinarily attended with the want of life and ſpirit for the performance of duty; Mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, ſo that I am not able to look up, Pſal. xl. 12. His ſpiritual ſtrength was ſo worn away, that he was neither able to pray nor praiſe; or do any duty with livelineſs or activity. In this caſe, the ſoul cannot pray with life or power; it cannot hear with joy or profit, it cannot meditate with any delight or ſpirituality; it cannot act with any freedom or liberty; it cannot ſuffer for God with any zeal, patience, boldneſs, or reſolution. O what a judgment is deſertion! In this caſe, the ſoul is filled ſometimes with fearful apprehenſions of the wrath of God, and everlaſting vengeance; though believers be ſecured againſt this, by the oath of God, the blood of Chriſt, and the ſeal of the Spirit; yet, under unbelief, temptation, and deſertion, they may have fearful apprehenſions of it, and that for their correction for their ſins; for, though he pardon their iniquity, he will take vengeance on their inventions. Here the believer may be afraid of terrible judgments; My fleſh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgments, Pſal. cxix. 120. He may ſometimes be afraid, leſt God lay open the filthineſs and wickedneſs of his heart to the world, and make him a reproach and a ſcandal to the godly and the wicked; this made the pſalmiſt pray, O make me not the reproach of the fooliſh: let none that fear thy name be aſhamed for my ſake. Sometimes he may be afraid leſt God ſtrike him ſuddenly with a viſible and ſignal judgment, and take him off the ſtage in a terrible manner; hence ſays David, Take me not away in thy wrath. Sometimes he may be afraid leſt he be the Jonas that hath raiſed, or may raiſe the ſtorm of God's wrath againſt the family, the congregation, the church, the land where he lives: the apprehenſions of this nature may be grievous and perplexing, and create a multitude of thoughts within him; yea, in this deſerted caſe, he may be filled with the terrors of God and the arrows of the Almighty drinketh up his ſpirit, Job vi. 4. They may be brought to that paſs, that the ſorrows of hell compaſs them about, ſo as they chooſe ſtrangling and death rather than life; and yet all this may be in a way of fatherly judgment, for the puniſhment of their ſins; as David's bones were broken for his murder and adultery: though ſometimes he hath done it in ſovereignty; yet the terrors of the Lord may bring them the length of diſtraction; While I ſuffer thy terrors, I am diſtracted, Pſal. lxxxviii. 15. O what a ſtorm is this! Deſertion may come to a great height, and bring along with it dreadful ſtorms of fear, terror, and diſtraction. It may be, your mountain is ſtanding ſtrong, believer; but look to yourſelf, and beware of God-provoking ſins, for he may hide his face, and then be ſure ye ſhall be troubled. Many, under ſenſible enjoyments, are like a man in a meadow, the ſun ſhining upon him, and, or ever he is aware, the miſt comes about him, and he knows not where he is. There may come a miſt about your ſoul, that you will hardly know where you are, or where you have been, or whether your former experiences have been any thing, but a dream. However, this is one of the judgments that the people of God may meet with.

4. There is the judgment of ſin, which is worſt of all, and hath the nature of a judgment; when God lets the man fall into one ſin for the puniſhment of another, as he may do even with his own, when his fatherly anger burns hotly againſt them; this is the ſaddeſt judgment and ſevereſt chaſtiſement that, I think, a child of God can meet with: and it would ſeem that David's adultery was thus, in part, chaſtiſed, by letting him fall into murder; and Peter's pride and ſelf-confidence, by letting him fall into a threefold denial of his Lord and Maſter; and thus he may do till the time of reſtoring their ſouls, which he hath determined, ſhall come. O how ill, how dreadfully ill does it go with the children of God, when they are brought to that pitiful complaint, O Lord, why haſt thou made us to err from thy ways, and hardened our hearts from thy fear? Iſa. lxiii. 17. And when led captive by ſin, Satan, and an evil heart; by the luſt of the eye, the luſt of the fleſh, and the pride of life.——Thus I have told you ſome of theſe judgments that the people of God may meet with.

2*dly*, Now the ſecond queſtion upon this head, was, What it is in or about judgment, that may afford matter of ſinging, or of a ſong of praiſe? And now, ſome may be thinking, O Sir, theſe judgments you have been ſpeaking of, are juſt the the things that mar all my ſinging, and it will be ſtrange, if there be any matter of ſinging, notwithſtanding of theſe; for if theſe be the judgments, what can be the ſong or the ground of ſinging, when they afford ſuch ground of ſighing and lamentation? I ſhall endeavour to ſhew you, upon what grounds the ſovereign Lord may even make theſe things matter of a ſong of praiſe. And,

1. Say you, What ground to ſing of judgment may a child of God have, when affliction is the judgment? Indeed, No affliction of itſelf is joyous, but grievous; but the Lord can bring meat out of the eater, and ſweet out of the ſtrong; and a ſweet ſong out of a ſad ſtroak and affliction: Hence David ſings of affliction, and ſays, It was good for me that I was afflicted, that I might learn thy ſtatutes, Pſal. cxix. 71. Now, there is ground to ſing of judgment, when affliction is not in wrath, but in love; when it comes not from a wrathful, but a fatherly judge; when it is not ſatisfactory, but caſtigatory; when it is not to ſatisfy divine juſtice, but to correct vicious habits; when it is not expiatory, but exprobatory; when it is not to expiate ſin, but to prove grace: That the trial of your faith being much more precious than of gold that periſheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praiſe, and honour, and glory, at the appearing of Jeſus Chriſt, 1 Pet. i. 7. That Chriſt drank out all the wrath out of the cup of affliction, and left nothing behind but love for his people to drink, O what matter of ſong is here! For, Being juſtified by his blood, we are ſaved from wrath through him, Rom. v. 9.—There is ground to ſing of judgment, when affliction is attended with inſtruction, even ſaving inſtruction: to this purpoſe the pſalmiſt ſings, Bleſſed is the man whom thou chaſteneſt, and teacheſt out of thy law.—When, by affliction, a man comes to learn the ſinfulneſs of ſin, and the evil of it; the emptineſs of the creature, and the vanity of it; and the fulneſs of Chriſt, and his all-ſufficiency. O when the God of heaven does famiſh all our gods on earth, and ſtarve us as to creature-comforts, to make us hunger after the fulneſs and ſweetneſs of Chriſt. What matter of ſinging is this!—There is ground to ſing of judgment, when affliction makes us conform to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who, as he ſuffered for us, ſo he left us an example that we ſhould follow his ſteps: ſurely, to be herein conform to the Son of God, who endured the contradiction of ſinners againſt himſelf, is ground of ſinging.—Again, there is ground to ſing of judgment, when affliction tends to the deſtruction of ſin; For by this ſhall the iniquity of Jacob be purged, and this is all the fruit to take away his ſin.—When it tends to gain the heart more to God, and wean the heart from the world, and all the things of the world, and luſts of the world; and is a fire to remove the droſs, and a file to remove the ruſt.—Again, there is ground to ſing of judgment, when afflictions are badges of honour; when they are ſigns of love; For whom the Lord loves he chaſtens: when they are marks of ſonſhip; for, He ſcourges every ſon whom he receives: and, If you be without chaſtiſement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye baſtards, and not ſons, Heb. xii. 8. Yea, what a badge of honour is it, when a man is helped to a patient ſubmiſſion to his heavenly Father? What an honour did God put upon Job, in that ſignal ſentence, Ye have heard of the patience of Job? Alexander the conqueror is not ſo renowned as Job the ſufferer.—Again, there is ground to ſing of judgment, in that affliction tends to make you happy and holy; We are afflicted for our profit, that we may be partakers of his holineſs: For, though the affliction be grievous for the time, yet afterwards it yields the peaceable fruits of righteouſneſs to them that are exerciſed thereby, Heb. xii. 10, 11. When the deluge of affliction makes us fly as a dove to the window of the ark, and when by faith we make uſe of the water of affliction to make us ſwim the faſter to Chriſt; then is it ground and matter of a ſong.—In a word, there is ground here to ſing of judgments, in that they make preparation for glory; For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. And ſo the worſt that God does with his children by affliction, is but to whip them home to heaven.——Thus you ſee what ground there is to ſing of judgment, when affliction is the judgment.

2. What ground to ſing of judgment may a child of God have, when temptation is the judgment? Indeed, under temptation he is ready to ſay, All theſe things are againſt me, and yet they may all be working together for his good: and therefore, if a child of God be tempted, in the manner that I ſpoke of before, there is here ground to ſing of judgment, in that temptation forces him to his knees: the more furiouſly Satan tempts, the more ſeriouſly the believer cries and prays; A meſſenger of Satan was ſent to buffet me, but for this I beſought the Lord thrice, 2 Cor. xii. 7, 8.—There is here ground to ſing of judgment, in that temptation abates the man's pride, ver. 7. Leſt I ſhould be exalted above meaſure, this meſſenger of Satan was ſent: the temptation that humbles the ſoul, and makes it ly low in the duſt, is matter of praiſe.—There is here ground to ſing of judgment, in that temptation is ſometimes the opportunity of the communication of grace; I beſought the Lord, and he ſaid to me, My grace is ſufficient for thee, and my ſtrength is made perfect in thy weakneſs; hereupon the man falls a ſinging, Moſt glodly therefore will I glory in my infirmities, that the power of Chriſt may reſt upon me; for when I am weak, then am I ſtrong, ver. 8, 9, 10.—There is ground to ſing of judgment here, in that many times temptation to ſin, keeps from committing a ſin: the more Satan tempts to blaſphemy, the more the believer trembles at it, and is afraid of himſelf, while he does not ſee the tempter.—There is ground to ſing of judgment, in that the temptation hath mercy in it; mercy to others, while we are the more fitted to comfort them when they are under temptation, 2 Cor. i. 4.; mercy to ourſelves, in that we become the objects of the Mediator's ſympathy; For we have not an High-prieſt that cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all things tempted like as we are, yet without ſin; therefore will ſuccour them that are tempted.—There is here ground to ſing of judgment, in that as it is no ſin to be tempted; ſo the temptation can do no harm, where there is no yielding: I ſaid, that it is no ſin to be tempted, and I ſay it again; though to yield to the leaſt temptation is a ſin, yet it is no ſin to be tempted to the greateſt ſin; for Chriſt, who could not ſin, was tempted to ſin: there is no ſin in it, where there is no yielding to it: in that caſe, it is the ſin of the tempter, but not the ſin of the tempted.—But, ſay you, O the temptation temptation conquers me, and therefore how can I ſing of judgment in this reſpect? Why, the prevailing of a temptation is a ſad thing indeed; but yet there may be ground to ſing of judgment, if the prevailing of the temptation tend to the increaſe of grace and godly ſorrow, as Peter's fall coſt him many a ſalt tear; and if the prevailing of the temptation tend to the increaſe of watchfulneſs, and make him more afraid to commit ſin, and more afraid to neglect duty, and more careful to improve Chriſt; in this caſe there is ground to ſing of judgment.—Why, ſay you, if the prevailing of a temptation will iſſue in a ſong of praiſe, may not that make us careleſs whether we yield or not? Anſwer. The prevailing of a temptation is one thing, and the yielding to a temptation is another thing; the prevailing of it may iſſue in joy, as I have told you, but the yielding to it may iſſue in ſorrow; and if that ſorrow be turned into joy, it will be a wonder of grace: O! Shall we thus ſin, that grace may abound? God forbid. The wind of temptation is croſs to the wind of the Spirit; and if we flee before the wind of temptation, we flee away from God and heaven: and therefore, if we ſing of judgment ſweetly and ſafely, it will be by reaſon of the wiſdom of God making uſe of croſs winds to blow us to heaven, and not of our fleeing before theſe.——Thus you ſee what ground there is to ſing of judgment, when and even though temptation is the judgment.

3. What ground to ſing of judgment may a child of God have, when deſertion is the judgment? Deſertion and divine withdrawing is a very heavy caſe, whether it be a withdrawing in reſpect of grace, the withholding the influences of the Spirit, the quickening, grace-exciting influences thereof; or in reſpect of comfort, the withholding the light of his countenance, and leaving the ſoul in the dark: when light is away, there is nothing but darkneſs in the air; when the Lord is away, nothing but darkneſs, diſorder, and confuſion in the ſoul. Now, How can I ſing one of the ſongs of Zion in ſuch a dark land? Nay rather, Mine eye, mine eye weeps, becauſe the Comforter that ſhould relieve my ſoul is far removed: Inſtead of ſinging, I muſt hang my harp upon the willows. Is there any ground to ſing of judgment, when deſertion is the judgment, unleſs it be a heavy ſong, while I cannot but mourn as a dove, and chatter as a crane? Why, even in deſertion, the child of God (and indeed none but a child of heaven is capable of deſertion) he may ſing of judgment; in regard, that as the ſeed of grace may be where there is not the flower of joy; ſo, though weeping may endure for a night, yet joy comes in the morning; and they that ſow in tears, ſhall reap in joy: and the reaping time is haſtening on, for deſertion is but for a ſhort time, Iſa. liv. 8. There the Lord gives this to be the ground of ſinging, even in ſuch a caſe; For a ſmall moment have I forſaken thee, but with everlaſting mercy will I gather thee; in a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment, but with everlaſting kindneſs will I have mercy on thee.—There is ground to ſing of judgment, when deſertion tends to awaken the ſoul out of its drouſy diſtemper: I ſleep, ſays the ſpouſe, Song v. 2. and preſently Chriſt withdraws; My Beloved had withdrawn himſelf and was gone. Why, then ſhe fell a ſeeking him whom her ſoul loved. It is true, it is one of the ſad effects of deſertion many times, that the ſoul grows careleſs, and cannot ſeek with any life: but yet, if a godly ſoul become ſenſible of the Lord's departing (for ſome time, the Lord may be away, and they do not know or conſider, as it is ſaid of Samſon, He wiſt not that the Lord was departed from him; but I ſay, when a godly ſoul becomes ſenſible of it) and ſees him going off, or hears him ſaying, Farewel: O then, like friends at parting, he follows him, and cannot part with him.—There is ground to ſing of judgment here, when deſertion tends to alienate the heart from the world; when the ſoul refuſes to take comfort from any thing in time, becauſe the abſence of Chriſt darkens all, or makes all things bitter to you, becauſe his ſweet preſence is away, it is matter of praiſe.—There is ground here to ſing of judgment, in that deſertion makes you prize the light of his countenance the more, ſaying, O to ſee thy power and glory, as I have ſeen it in the ſanctuary! When the night of deſertion makes you welcome the riſing of the Sun of righteouſneſs, it is a happy parting; that contributes to make a joyful meeting.—There is here ground to ſing of judgment, in that deſertion makes you hate ſin that cauſed the ſame, as a ſtone in the pipe hinders the current of the water: that deſertion is matter of praiſe, that makes ſin odious to you, as that which robs you of your beſt jewels, and that makes you lament his abſence, and the cauſe of it. It is indeed matter of ſighing, to want his preſence; but it is matter of ſinging, to lament his abſence. It is ground of ſorrow, to be without him at any time; but it is ground of praiſe, that you cannot live contentedly without him: I mean not a ſinful diſcontent, that frets at his abſence; but a holy diſcontent, that longs for his preſence, and laments his abſence; this I call matter of praiſe.—There is ground to ſing of judgment, in that Chriſt drank out all the wrath of God out of the cup of deſertion, when he ſuffered that heavy deſertion himſelf, that made him cry, ELI, ELI, LAMASABACHTHANI; My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me?—Further, there is ground to ſing of judgment here, in that this deſertion makes the expectation of heaven ſweet here, and the poſſeſſion of it pleaſant hereafter: when the believer longs for heaven the more now, and loves it the better, then, is it not matter of praiſe? O there is no hiding, no deſertion, no cloud there, but a conſtant viſion of glory; We ſhall be like him, for we ſhall ſee him as he is.—In a word, there is ground to ſing of judgment, in that deſertion makes room for faith and hope, till viſion and fruition come. It is matter of ſorrow indeed, when there is occaſion to ſay, Verily thou art a God that hideſt thyſelf, O God of Iſrael, the Saviour: but it is matter of praiſe, when the ſoul is brought to ſay, I will wait on the Lord, that hideth his face from the houſe of Jacob, and I will look for him, Iſa. viii. 17. It may be, ye get a breathing now and then in the air of ſenſible manifeſtations, but ye muſt up to faith and hope again; and through the cloud ye muſt look for him, and bleſs him when he helps you to do ſo; for, though it were a killing deſertion, or a flaying-like diſpenſation, yet there is reaſon to ſing, when he helps you to ſay, Though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him.——Thus you ſee what ground there is to ſing of judgment, even when deſertion is the judgment.

4. What ground to ſing of judgment may a child of God have, when ſin is a part of the judgment; when either the ſins of others are the affliction, or his own ſins are the affliction? When the ſins of others are the affliction, can there be any ground to ſing of judgment? When I ſee the generation loaden with ſins and abominations, grievouſly departing from the Lord, ſurely it is ground of ſighing and lamentation; and it is duty to ſigh and cry for all the abominations that are done in the midſt of Jeruſalem, Ezek. ix. 4. It is true: and yet the ſong of praiſe muſt not go down among the children of God; for there is ground to ſing in this caſe, when ye can ſay, I beheld tranſgreſſors and was grieved. For, as it is child-like to be grieved for the injuries done to your Father; ſo it is Chriſt-like, for he was grieved for the hardneſs of their hearts: Yet it is matter of ſinging, as it is a mark of love to God; for one may weep for his own ſins from fear of hell, but he weeps for the ſins of others from love to God.—It is matter of ſinging, when the more ſin you ſee in others, it makes you hate ſin the more, and ſwim againſt the ſtream: when the faſter they run to hell, it makes you run the faſter to heaven, and ſets you a praying; that when they are haſting to the priſon, ye may haſten to a palace.—It is matter of ſinging, when the ſins of others are the glaſs wherein ye ſee your own hearts, and ſee the roots of all that wickedneſs to be within you; and therefore are made the more thankful, that God reſtrains you by his power from doing the ſame; and conſtrains you by his grace to do otherwiſe. When ye are helped to ſay thankfully, what the Phariſee ſaid boaſtingly, The Lord be thanked that I am not as other men; and that I have not ſo learned Chriſt.—It is matter of ſinging alſo, when their ſins make you more holy; and when their unſavourineſs makes your graces to ſend forth a fragrant ſmell: and when thereby the Lord gives you an occaſion to convince and convert them; and to be the inſtruments of doing good to their ſouls.——Well, ſay ye, but the great queſtion is, When my own ſins are the affliction, can there be any ground to ſing of judgment? Indeed ſinning can be no ground of ſinging; for ſin is in itſelf a damnable thing, worſe than hell: and, in God's name, I will ſay, Whatever tends to diſcourage holineſs, and encourage ſin, let it be ANATHEMA; and curſed be the preaching that tends to the encouragement of ſin; yea, curſed be the thought, in the preacher or hearer, that makes the doctrine of grace an encouragement thereto. Many ſuch thoughts may enter into us all; but may vengeance from heaven come down upon them, and deſtroy them in us, that we may not blaſpheme a holy ſinleſs Jeſus, to make him a miniſter of ſin. However, ſin being the worſt of all affliction and judgment, it would be an everlaſting damp to the ſong of mercy and judgment, if a ſovereign God could not, in his infinite wiſdom, bring a ſong of praiſe out of the evil of ſin. Why then, there is ground to ſing, notwithſtanding of ſin, when God makes your ſin a burden to you, and you to look upon yourſelves as wretched becauſe of it, ſaying, O wretched man that I am! Who ſhall deliver me from the body of this ſin and death? When the burden of ſin makes you weary of this life; ſaying with Rebecca, I am weary of my life becauſe of the daughters of Heth.—There is ground to ſing, notwithſtanding of ſin, when God makes the prevalency of ſin the mean of drawing you to a Saviour, and to the blood of Chriſt that cleanſes from all ſin; when daily ſin makes daily application to the fountain open for ſin and uncleanneſs; when the bitterneſs of ſin makes Chriſt ſweet and precious to you, and the ſting of ſin draws out your eye to look to the brazen ſerpent; and ſo the man ſees God get more glory, and Chriſt more honour, and his righteouſneſs more renown, then he ſings and glories in his infirmities, that the power of Chriſt may reſt upon him.—There is ground to ſing, notwithſtanding of ſin, when the ſenſe of ſin makes a man to judge himſelf, and condemn himſelf, that he may not be judged and condemned of the Lord; when it makes him examine himſelf more ſtrictly, ſaying, Search me, O God, and try if there be any wicked way in me; and obſerve himſelf more cloſely, ſo as to watch over his heart and way, ſo as to find out ſin, and expel it, through grace, and live more circumſpectly for the future.—There is ground to ſing, notwithſtanding of ſin, when ſin makes a man to abhor himſelf, and to repent in duſt and in aſhes; when it makes him, with David, to water his couch with his tears; and with Peter, to go out and weep bitterly, and lays him low in the duſt before the Lord: 'Therefore, as one ſays, Better 'is the ſin that makes us humble, than the 'duty that makes us proud.' The hypocrite's riſing is the mean of his fall; but the believer's fall, is the mean of his riſing. While the ſenſe of his ſin makes him holy, and ſenſe of his pride makes him humble, his hypocriſy ſincere, his hardneſs makes him ſoft, his carnality makes him ſpiritual; happy that victory of ſin over a man, that iſſues in a bloody war againſt it: yet no thanks to ſin, but to a ſovereign wiſe God, that turns the malady into a medicine——If any ſhould hereupon take encouragement to ſin, let them conſider, if they do ſo, whether their ſpot can be the ſpot of God's children; for, to ſin, that grace may abound, is a preſumptuous ſin of the higheſt degree; and true grace dare not draw ſuch a bitter concluſion from ſuch ſweet promiſes; or, if a child of God ſhould do ſo, and make bold with ſin, let him conſider, if this be all his kindneſs to his friend? Though God do not damn you, he may ſend you to a hell in this life, and fill you with horrors, terrors, and agonies of ſoul, ſuch as I ſpake of before: let this therefore be a rail to keep you back from the burning mountain. To ſing of judgment in reſpect of ſin, is not to ſing of our folly in committing it, but to ſing of God's wiſdom in deſtroying it: you have no cauſe to ſing of ſin, which of itſelf brings death, ruin, and damnation; but ſtill cauſe to ſing of judgment concerning ſin, or of the Lord's executing judgment upon it.—But what if hell be the judgment at laſt, would you have me to ſing in that caſe? I fear I go to hell when all is done; I fear I never get to heaven; and how ſhould I ſing? I anſwer, Have you not cauſe to ſing, that ye are out of hell, and that it is not as yet your lot? But I will tell you, if you were beginning to ſing, it would be the beginning of heaven; Bleſſed are they that dwell in thy houſe; they will be ſtill praiſing thee. Will you ſay, as an honeſt exerciſed Chriſtian once ſaid, when tempted to fear hell, and thereupon to give over the duties of religion, 'Why, ſays he, if I ſhall never praiſe 'him in heaven, I ſhall endeavour to praiſe

BERKELEY BAPTIST DIVINITY SCHOOL
SANDFORD FLEMING LIBRARY

'him

'him all that I can on earth.' This would be a ſweet token that you ſhall ſing in heaven for ever, among the redeemed.——And thus you ſee, whether we view judgment with reſpect to affliction, temptation, deſertion, or ſin, in what reſpects it is that we are to ſing of judgment; it is even to ſing of the mercy that God exerciſes in theſe judgments: and ſo I will ſing of mercy and of judgment. It comes all to this, as if the pſalmiſt ſhould ſay, I will ſing of MERCIFUL JUDGMENTS; for judgment is mercy, as it is the matter of the ſong; or, to take them ſeparately, I will ſing of mercy IN mercies; and, I will ſing of mercy IN judgment: and ſo I will ſing of my blinks and of my ſhowers; I will ſing both of my cloudy and my clear day; both of my ups and downs; both of ſmiles and frowns; I will ſing both of frowning and favourable-like diſpenſations; I will ſing of mercy and judgment; unto thee, O Lord, will I ſing.——So much for the ſecond head.

III. The third general head propoſed was, What this ſinging imports; and how we are to ſing of mercy and judgment to the praiſe of God. I ſhall ſpeak a little to the quality and import of this ſong.

1ſt, The import of this ſinging: I will ſing to the Lord; that is, I will praiſe the Lord; and it does not ly in the ſimple ſound of a voice, but imports the glorifying of God with our hearts and lips, in our lives, and in our death or ſuffering.

1. To ſing to the Lord, is to glorify him with our hearts; to give him the love and adoration of our hearts. In this ſinging, there is the inward act of the ſoul; Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul: and all that is within me, bleſs his holy name, Pſal. ciii. 1. It imports a deep impreſſion of God upon the ſoul, and a lively ſenſe of his mercy in Chriſt, and of our own unworthineſs of it: and here the ſoul, and all that is within it, is acting and moving: the judgment moves with admiration and wonder at God for his glorious grace; the memory moves with a thankful recording of his favours, Forget not all his benefits; the affections move with joy and delight in God, and love to him for the riches of his grace in Chriſt. O ſhall I not love the greateſt and beſt of Beings, for the greateſt and beſt of benefits! The heart is here employed: neither prayer nor praiſes, without the heart, are of any worth: many ſing with their voice, when their hearts are a hundred miles off, gading here and there: but a fixed heart is a ſinging heart; My heart is fixed, O Lord; my heart is fixed, I will ſing and give praiſe. We are called to ſing with grace in our hearts, Col. iii. 16.: we are to ſing with faith in our heart; He that is ſtrong in the faith glorifies God: we are to ſing with love in our hearts, with fear in our hearts, and with joy in our hearts.

2. To ſing to the Lord, is with our lips to glorify him: we are to give him the calves of our lips. When the heart is full of love, the tongue will be full of praiſe. Our tongues ſhould be as well-tuned organs, to ſound forth the high praiſes of God, pleading his cauſe, defending his truths, avouching his name, and confeſſing him before the world; Thy loving kindneſs is better than life, therefore my lips ſhall praiſe thee, Pſal. lxiii. 3. When our hearts are inditing a good matter, our tongues will be as the pen of a ready writer, to ſpeak of the things that concern the king; Pſal. xlv. 1. when our hearts are glad, then our glory [i. e. our tongues,] will rejoice, Pſal. xvi. 9. and xxx. 12. O! the little heavenly diſcourſe argues a very ſad degeneracy!

3. To ſing to the Lord, is, with our life to glorify him: when the love of our hearts, the calves of our lips, and the ſervice of our lives, are preſented unto God together, they make a harmonious ſong: the praiſe of the life is the life of praiſe; Whoſo offereth praiſe, glorifieth me, Pſal. l. 23. When we devote all the actions of our life to his diſpoſing will, then we ſing a ſong of praiſe unto God. When we live by faith on the Son of God; for no leſs is worth the name of life, but what is derived from him, and devoted to him, then we may be ſaid to glorify him in our lives. It is a practical way of ſinging the praiſe of God, that is here intended by the pſalmiſt, as appears from the reſt of the pſalm.

4. To ſing to the Lord, is, with our death and ſufferings to glorify him, as well as with our life and actions: thus we are called to glorify the Lord in the fires, Iſa. xxiv. 15. Does God call you to ſuffer affliction in perſon, name, eſtate, family, or concerns; to ſuffer want of huſband, wife, brother, ſiſter, children, or other outward comforts? Why then, you ſing of mercy and judgment, by ſuffering patiently and ſubmiſſively; and God is as much glorified by your paſſive obedience, as by your active. Whenever you are afflicted any way, believer, know that then God hath ſome employment for your graces, and expects praiſe thereby; yea, if he ſhould call you to ſuffer death and martyrdom for his name, you are to ſing his praiſe, by dying in and for the faith, as well as living by faith. O man, woman! could you die for him, that died for you? That is a great matter. "O it "is a ſmall matter to die once for Chriſt, ſaid "a martyr; if it might poſſibly be, I could "wiſh that I might die a thouſand deaths for "him!"—Thus you ſee the import of ſinging to the Lord.

2dly, As to the qualities of this ſong; or how we are to ſing of mercy and judgment. And,

1. We are to ſing of mercy and judgment chearfully. Singing is a chearful work; we are to ſing with melody in our hearts to the Lord, and to make a joyful noiſe unto God. It is an antedating of the joy of heaven; though you be in a hell of troubles and trials, yet you have reaſon to praiſe him that you are not in a hell of fire and brimſtone: though you had one hell on your back, and another in your boſom, you have reaſon to praiſe him that you are not in the midſt of hell among devils.

2. We are to ſing of mercy and judgment highly and loftily, ſaying with the angels, Glory to God in the higheſt. We are to praiſe him with the higheſt eſtimation, with the higheſt adoration, with the higheſt admiration, with the higheſt delight, the higheſt raviſhment, the higheſt wonder; for, as he is highly exalted above all things and beings, and above all bleſſings and praiſes; ſo his mercies are the higheſt mercies, and his judgments the greateſt deep; and therefore, as we ought to ſing loud and high, ſo we ought to ſing low. Therefore, humbly and lowly. Pride and praiſe are inconſiſtent; and therefore we ſhould join trembling with our praiſe and ſinging; having awful impreſſions of God upon our ſouls, and knowing the infinite diſtance betwixt him and us. When the twenty-four elders ſing, they come down from their thrones, and caſt down their crowns and their palms, Rev. iv. 10. as if they would ſay, We are not worthy to ſit upon a throne, or to wear a crown in his preſence: they make their crowns and their thrones a footſtool unto him. When we ſing of mercy and judgment, we are to mind, his judgments are a great deep, and we ought to be deeply humbled before him, ſaying, O the depth of the riches both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God! how unſearchable are his judgments, and his ways paſt finding out! Rom. xi. 33.

3. We are to ſing of mercy and judgment humbly

4. We are to ſing of mercy and judgment conſtantly and unweariedly. Every new mercy and judgment ſhould be matter of a new ſong: and O, his mercies are new every morning, new every moment; and therefore we ſhould ſtill be ſinging and ſaying, I will bleſs the Lord at all times, his praiſe ſhall be continually in my mouth, Pſal. xxxiv. 1. Let ſuch as love thy ſalvation, ſay continually, The Lord be magnified, Pſal. xi. 16. It is true, the ſaints will never ſing without intermiſſion, till they reach above theſe clouds: it is true alſo, when they ſee mercy, they are ready to ſing; but when they cannot ſee the ſun of mercy, through the cloud of judgment, they are ready to ſigh, and hang their harps upon the willows: yet nevertheleſs, as the obligation to ſing does always take place; ſo they have always matter of praiſe, and ground to ſing of mercy and judgment.

5. We are to ſing of mercy and judgment, both conjunctly and ſeverally: when you meet with a mercy, ſing of mercy; when you meet with a judgment, ſing of judgment; when you meet with mercy and judgment both, then ſing of mercy and judgment both; and improve both for matter of a ſong of praiſe, ſo as God may be glorified, both in his mercy and judgment.

6. We are to ſing of mercy and judgment devoutly and obedientially, as knowing it to be a commanded duty. It would take many an hour to tell over all the ſcriptures, whereby we are called to praiſe the Lord: it is a good, pleaſant, and comely duty; Praiſe ye the Lord: for it is good to ſing praiſes unto our God; for it is pleaſant, and praiſe is comely, Pſal. cxlvii. 1. There you ſee three epithets given to this duty, to move us thereto.

(1.) It is a ſoul-inriching duty; it is a good way to make a ſad caſe grow better: the ſpouſe, under deſertion, fell a ſinging and ſaying, My Beloved is white and ruddy, the chief among ten thouſands: and never was ſhe in a better caſe than when in this praiſing tune. It is good to cry down our complaints with praiſes: it is good, in that it is all the tribute that the King of heaven can have from us; and to deny him this, is the height of treaſon, for it is rent due to him; Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name. It is good by way of eminency; for it is a greater mark of love than other duties: ſelf-love may influence a man to prayer; but love to God makes him praiſe. If you can draw out a long libel of complaints before God, and yet have never a word of praiſe for the mercies you enjoy, it is to be feared that ſelf-love hath the penning of your prayers. It is a token of enmity with your neighbour, when you receive many favours from him, and never ſo much as give him thanks; ſo it is a token of enmity againſt God, when notwithſtanding of his mercies, yet you do not ſing his praiſe. It is every way good.

(2.) It is a pleaſant duty: no muſic does God delight ſo much in, as ſinging his praiſes. It is the pleaſant work of heaven, where new ſcenes of glory will open, and open, and open to all eternity, and new ſongs of praiſe will ſtill be ſung for ever and ever. It may be you think, when once you come to heaven, you will praiſe your fill; but now, when ſo many dead weights are upon you, you cannot, and you ſhould not ſing and praiſe: well, no thanks to you to praiſe him when you are once in heaven; but, if you glorify him now in the fires, and praiſe him now, in ſpite of devils and oppoſition in your way, you do more honour to him than to praiſe him in heaven, where there is no trouble, no temptation, no ſin or ſorrow to interrupt your ſong. To ſing like Paul and Silas in the ſtocks, is more than to ſing in heaven; though not more pleaſant, yet in ſome reſpect it is more honourable, noble, and glorious. And ſo,

(3.) It is a comely duty; the garment of praiſe is a very graceful ornament. An ungrateful and unthankful man is an ugly ill-favoured man; nothing more uncomely in the eyes of God and man. We are to praiſe him then devoutly, under a ſenſe of duty.

7. In the laſt place, we are to ſing reſolutely, or with holy purpoſe and reſolution; ſaying, with the pſalmiſt here, Unto thee, O Lord, will I ſing. And, becauſe this is a part of the text, I ſhall ſhew what is imported in the pſalmiſt's reſolution, and the manner of expreſſing it; I will ſing of mercy and judgment; unto thee, O Lord, will I ſing.

(1.) I think it imports a grounded reſolution, that he had got a diſcovery of the glory of God's mercy and juſtice in the face of Jeſus Chriſt; and a diſcovery of the glory of God in all his merciful and afflictive diſpenſations. He had a ſenſe and impreſſion of the goodneſs of God, in all the favours that he met with; and he had a ſenſe and impreſſion of the wiſdom of God, in ordering all afflictive providences to his ſoul's advantage. I will ſing of mercy and judgment.

(2.) It imports a grateful reſolution, that the ſpirit of gratitude filled his ſoul: ſo much does his reſolution to ſing import; for it ſays, that his ſpirit was ſweetened with a ſenſe he had of the kindneſs of God; his meditation of him was ſweet, and that makes him reſolve upon ſuch a ſweet exerciſe: he ſaw what ſtrong and manifold obligations he was under to praiſe and magnify the name of the Lord.

(3.) I think, the manner of expreſſion imports a cordial reſolution; heart and will are engaged in it: there is twice I will in the text; I WILL ſing of mercy and judgment; unto thee, O Lord, I WILL ſing. He had a good will to the work: where the underſtanding is enlightened in the knowledge of God, in his mercy and judgment, there the will is ſubdued and made willing; willing to praiſe, willing to glorify God by the obedience of faith and love through grace.

(4.) The

(4.) The manner of expreſſion imports a fervent reſolution; ſo much I think lies in that word, O LORD, I will do it; to thee, O LORD, I will ſing. To be fervent in prayer, is a notable exerciſe; but to be fervent in praiſe, is yet more notable: fervency in ſeeking is good; but fervency in ſinging is yet better; To thee, O Lord, will I ſing. Perhaps this O imports alſo a wonder; O, I will ſing; for thy mercies and judgments are ſo wonderfully great! O, I will ſing with wonder and admiration!

(5.) The manner of the expreſſion imports a humble reſolution: I cannot ſing of merit; but I will ſing of mercy, and through mercy I will ſing of mercy. To ſing of mercy muſt be a humble ſong; for mercy towards a miſerable ſinner is a melting word; and to ſing of judgment muſt be a humble ſong; for judgment in every ſenſe is an awful word; and the pſalmiſt breathes out his reſolution in a moſt humble manner, O Lord, I will ſing of mercy and judgment.

(6.) The manner of expreſſion imports a ſolemn reſolution made in the preſence of the great JEHOVAH; To thee, O LORD, will I ſing. It is not only reſolved in his own mind, that he will ſing to the Lord, but by way of ſolemn addreſs to the God of heaven, the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; To thee, O Lord, will I ſing: to thee will I give the glory of thy mercy and judgment: behold, I reſolve upon it before thee, O Lord.

(7.) The manner of the expreſſion imports a ſkilful reſolution. David was a ſweet and ſkilful harper, a dexterous muſician, even in a ſpiritual ſenſe; he had learned the holy art of praiſe, and how to ſing with wiſdom and underſtanding: he knew what ſhould be the ſubject of the ſong, and therefore ſays, I will ſing of Mercy and Judgment; and he knew what ſhould be the object of the ſong, or to whom it ſhould be ſung, and therefore ſays, To THEE, O Lord, I will ſing: he knew who ſhould be the Singer; and therefore ſays, I will do it: he knew what ſhould be the manner; and therefore ſays, I will SING of mercy and judgment; to thee, O Lord, will I SING. It is before the Lord he reſolves to ſing, as he did before the ark, which was a type of Chriſt; and ſo it is a ſong to the praiſe of God in Chriſt.

(8.) The manner of the expreſſion imports a firm, fixed, and conſtant reſolution; ſo the redoubling of it ſeems to import; I will ſing, I will ſing. He had a mind this exerciſe of ſinging ſhould not go down, but be his continual trade; I will ſing, I will ſing; I will ſing on earth, and I will ſing in heaven; I will ſing in time, and I will ſing through eternity. And indeed, all on whom the Spirit of praiſe and gratitude is poured out, they reſolve never to give over ſinging: and however their ſong be marred and interrupted here, yet when they are in the ſinging frame, they would wiſh never to give over ſinging. And becauſe they know it will not laſt always in time, nor their harp be ſtill in tune; therefore they reſolve, as it were, to make it their great errand to heaven, to ſing there for ever; I will ſing, I will ſing. David had heard once, yea twice, that mercy as well as power belongs to the Lord; and therefore, not only once; but twice in a breath, he reſolves to ſing unto the Lord. The word hath a great deal of elegancy and emphaſis in it; I will ſing of mercy, I will ſing of judgment: O, I will ſing; O Lord, I will ſing; and I will ſing into thee.

In a word, it imports, that a God in Chriſt was the ALL of the ſong; even the Alpha and Omega of it, the beginning and end of it: it was of him, as the Alpha; for the diſcovery of the mercy of God in Chriſt brought him to it; I will ſing of mercy and judgment: and it was to him, as the Omega; for the ſong is dedicated to the Lord; To thee, O Lord, will I ſing.—Theſe things, I think, are imported in the manner of the expreſſion, and they may help to regulate our reſolutions in ſinging.

IV. The fourth head propoſed was, Why it is ſo ordered of the Lord, that his people ſhould have ground to ſing of mercy and judgment both? why is there both mercy and judgment in their lot, to be the matter of their ſong, while in this world?

1. The firſt reaſon is, To put a difference betwixt heaven and earth; for in heaven there will be no judgment, no affliction, no deſertion, no ſin, no ſong of judgment preſent, but of judgment paſt: The ſong of heaven will be of mercy preſent, and judgment paſt, among the triumphant company; but the ſong of the militant church, is of mercy and judgment, both preſent. Now, we ſee through a glaſs darkly, and therefore ſing confuſedly; but then ſhall we ſee face to face, and therefore ſhall ſing diſtinctly: now we know in part, and ſing in part; but then the perfect knowledge will make a perfect ſong: now we are very unlike to Chriſt, becauſe we ſee but little of him, and ſo the ſong is but heavy, dull, and flat; but then ſhall we be like him, for we ſhall ſee him as he is, and ſo the ſong will be chearful and raviſhing: now when a mercy raiſes the ſong, a judgment bears it down, ſome cloud or other interrupts the ſinging; but then there ſhall be no preſent judgment, no cloud, no night, no complaint to mar the ſong, for there the mercy is not mixt with any judgment, nor the joy mixt with any ſorrow.

2. The ſecond reaſon is, That they may put honour upon the divine wiſdom, that does ſo wonderfully reconcile theſe oppoſites, ſuch as mercy and judgment are. O the infinite wiſdom of God, that can make antipods meet in a ſong of praiſe, and contraries in a hymn of glory to him. O the wiſdom that makes mercy and judgment meet together, and kiſs one another! O the wiſdom that brings the greateſt good out of the greateſt evil, and the beſt bleſſings out of the worſt of evils; as out of the firſt Adam's ſin and fall, brings the ſecond Adam's glory and honour, and the greateſt happineſs of his ſeed! O the wiſdom that brings life out of death, light out of darkneſs, liberty out of bondage, love out of enmity, happineſs out of miſery, holineſs out of ſin, joy out of ſorrow, mercy out of judgment! O, can we look down to this great depth, without crying with the apoſtle, Ὦ βάθος πλούτου καὶ σοφίας καὶ γνώσεως θεοῦ! etc. O the depth of the riches, both of the wiſdom and knowledge of God! how unſearchable are his judgments, and his ways paſt finding out? Rom. xi. 33.

3. The third reaſon is, That they may be trained up gradually for ſinging hallelujahs in heaven. They are not yet fit and qualified for ſinging of mercy without judgment; and though judgment is turned into mercy to the people of God, and so is matter of a song; yet the present sense and feeling that they have of judgment, makes the manner of their singing suitable to their imperfect condition, wherein they are not capable to sing of mercy without a mixture of judgment. They are but learning to sing; and by judgment they are disciplined to sing gradually better and better: when mercy does not prevail to make them sing aright, he sends a judgment to make them sing better. They are learning the language of heaven before they go there; but at their first learning they are but scholars, and need the correction of judgment. If they abuse mercy, and do not sing aright of it, there comes a heavy judgment to make them take heed how they sing, and then they learn to sing the seventy-first verse of the hundred and nineteenth psalm; saying,

It hath been very good for me,
That I afflicted was,
That I might well instructed be,
And learn thy holy laws:

And then they learn to sing the 75th verse;

That very right thy judgments are,
I know and do confess;
And that thou hast afflicted me,
In truth and faithfulness.

4. The fourth reason is, That the burden of the song may be proportioned to their back. They cannot bear to have all mercy, and no judgment; for then they would swell in pride, and be exalted above measure: they cannot bear to have all judgment, and no mercy; for then would they sink into despair, and be pressed above measure. On the one hand, to sing of nothing but mercy, would be a burden too great and heavy; they find, when their hearts at sometimes are lifted up to a high note, they cannot get praised; they are ready to invite angels, saints, sun, moon, and stars, to help them to praise, for it is too great work for them alone; they cannot get their notes raised high enough: but when the praising frame is over, if nothing but a sense of mercy remain, then having a body of sin that abuses all mercies, some proud thought, and self-exalting imagination, rises in their breasts, and would rise above measure, if it were not keeped down with judgment.—On the other hand, to sing of nothing but judgment, would be a damp instead of a song, a melancholy sighing instead of singing: and therefore, they are well mixed together in infinite wisdom.

5. The fifth reason is, That their song may be the more melodious. As in natural, or artificial music, there is no melody where there is but one note; there must be different sounds to make the music melodious. I think the apostle speaks after this manner, 1 Cor. xiv. 7. Even things without life giving sound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction in the sound, how shall it be known what is piped or harped? So it is here in the spiritual music, whether you look to the consummate song of the redeemed above, or the initial song of the redeemed below, the song of mercy present, and judgment past, makes the sweetest melody in heaven; and the song of mercy and judgment, both present, makes the sweetest melody that can be attained on earth. Mercy and judgment, like bass and treble, make holy melody in the spiritual song: here are the different notes of music; mercy makes a high and lofty note, and judgment makes a humble and low note, and both make the song melodious. When a man not only sees mercy, but mercy and judgment, mercy before judgment, and mercy after judgment, and mercy in judgment, and mercy with judgment, and mercy out of judgment, and mercy backing judgment, and mercy blessing judgment, and mercy ordering and disposing judgment, mercy qualifying judgment, and mercy moderating judgment, and mercy sweetening judgment, and mercy rejoicing over judgment, and mercy running through judgment, and mercy at the root of judgment, and mercy at the top of judgment, mercy on this side of judgment, and mercy on that side of judgment, mercy round about judgment, and mercy turning judgment into mercy; O then, how does he sing with melody in his heart to the Lord!——It is to make the song melodious.

6. The sixth reason is, That they may prize both their mercies and their judgments; both their crosses and their comforts, both their rods and reliefs, as both affording matter of a song; and that they may neither on the one hand sport at his mercy, nor on the other hand spurn at his judgments; and that they may neither abuse enlargements, nor despise chastisements, but that they may give both their proper place and room in their hearts and esteem; that they may sing of both, and love the Lord their God in both, and so may love a frowning as well as a smiling God, an absent as well as a present God, a hiding as well as a shining God, a correcting as well as a comforting God; and that both out of their clear and cloudy days they may pen a song to the praise of his name.—In a word, the Lord orders it so, that their song should be both of mercy and judgment, and puts both in their lot; that, in the view of mercy, they may not despair; and, in the view of judgment, they may not presume: that they may sing hopefully, because of mercy; and humbly, because of judgment: and that their song may be full, and take in all his dispensations, like the song of Moses and the Lamb; Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints, Rev. xv. 3.——So much for this head.

V. The fifth head was the application, in the following inferences. Hence see,

1. That there is an over-ruling and wise providence, making all things, whether comforts or crosses, sweet things or sad things, contribute and co-operate for the good and advantage of the hidden remnant; We know that all things work together for good, to them that love God, and are the called according to his purpose, Rom. viii. 28. Mercy and judgment, and all adverse and prosperous things, work together to be the matter of a song: surely there is a wheel within a wheel; there is a secret hand that draws up and tunes all the strings of the harp of providence, to make a sweet song of praise unto God; there is an infinitely wise hand, like that of a cunning player upon this harp, that makes all the most seemingly jarring notes to contribute to melody, even as he made the malice of the Jews, the treason of Judas, and the rage of devils, to work for the ſalvation of an elect world.

rage

2. See the ſweetneſs of true religion, and that wiſdom's ways are pleaſantneſs; a religious life is a ſinging life, whether providence ſmile or frown. If a believer ſigh and mourn at any time, and be not ſinging at the ſame time, it is when religion is at a low ebb with him. You may think religion is a melancholy life, man, becauſe many are the afflictions of the righteous, and judgment may begin at the houſe of God; but you do not conſider, that true religion makes a man to ſing of judgment, as well as of mercy. Out of all the ups and downs, the viciſſitudes and changes, ſmiles and frowns, of the believer's lot, the Lord brings a ſong of praiſe. Truly, God is good to Iſrael, whether Iſrael think it or not; for even judgment will be matter of a ſong. It is the language of unbelief, when they ſay of judgment, as Jacob did of his afflictions, All theſe things are againſt me; but when once the gallant grace of faith takes the field again, it will ſay, All theſe are for me, and I will ſing of all.

3. See hence the difference betwixt carnal and ſpiritual mirth, carnal and ſpiritual ſinging; betwixt the joy of the world and the joy of the ſaints. The world may rejoice, if they have, and while they have ſome outward mercy; but to ſing of judgment, when theſe mercies are withdrawn, is what they know nothing of; nay, take away the world, and then they will ſay with Micah, They have taken away my gods, and what have I more? But ſpiritual joy can ſing in the midſt of ſorrow, and ſay, Though the fig-tree ſhall not bloſſom, neither ſhall fruit be in the vines, the labour of the olive ſhall fail, and the fields ſhall yield no meat, the flock ſhall be cut off from the fold, and there ſhall be no herd in the ſtalls: yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my ſalvation, Hab. iii. 17, 18. O Sirs, down, down, down with all carnal mirth and worldly joy, in compariſon of this: down with ſinging, and piping, and dancing; theſe things are but folly and madneſs.

4. Hence ſee, that the godly need not take any ſinful ſhift to ſhun ſuffering, or any ſinful courſe to ſhun the croſs; for, come the croſs when it will, they may even ſing with the croſs on their back, as Paul and Silas in the ſtocks, Acts xvi, 24, 25. Is the godly man tempted to make any ſinful compliance with the courſes of the time? What need he be annoyed, as if his life of outward comforts in a world would be at an end, as if bonds and impriſonments, the loſs of worldly goods and enjoyments were abiding him, if he makes not this and the other compliance? What need any annoyment? For his ſuffering time may be his ſinging time; I will ſing of mercy and of judgment. Beſides, all his light afflictions here, which laſt but for a moment, work for him a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

5. Hence ſee, what a ſweet place heaven muſt be, and what ſinging muſt be there: If a ſong of mercy mixt with judgment here is ſweet, and ſometimes even raviſhing, O what a ſweet ſong is that of the redeemed about the throne, where there is no more judgment, no more ſorrow, or ſin! And little wonder that the believer long for heaven, ſeeing his ſweeteſt ſongs are mixt with ſighs, and his mercies with judgments; his ſweeteſt ſongs here have ſtill this heavy ſigh in them, Ah, and wo is me, that wherever I go in this world, I am always drawing a body of death along with me. O what a happy time is the day of death to a believer, when he ſhall take an everlaſting farewel of all his luſts and idols! O believer, what would you think to be ſaying, Farewel darkneſs, and welcome everlaſting light; farewel enmity, and welcome everlaſting love; farewel ſorrow, and welcome everlaſting joy; farewel all my ſins, and heart-plagues, and ſtrong corruptions, and welcome eternal happineſs, and uninterrupted felicity? O would you not ſay, Farewel, farewel, with a thouſand good-wills to all theſe evil things, and triumphantly ſay, Glory to God that we ſhall never meet again? Hence ſee then, I ſay, what a ſweet place heaven muſt be: if even judgments, ſufferings, and temptations to ſin here be made matter of joy and ſinging ſometimes to the believer, what ſhall glory be? If the worſt things on earth may contribute to a ſong, what will the beſt things in heaven do? If the croſs be ſometimes ſo ſweet, what will the crown be? If the waters of Marah be made ſo ſweet, what will the wine of paradiſe be? If God's rod hath honey at the end of it, what will his golden ſceptre have? O! how happy are they who have got the ſtart of us, and are exalted above theſe viſible heavens already, and paſt all their fears and doubts, and are ſinging praiſes without wearying!

6. Hence ſee, what a black and white garment the believer wears. The garment of praiſe is a garment of diverſe colours; dyed white and black, with mercy and judgment; I am black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, as the tents of Kedar, and yet as the curtains of Solomon, Cant. i. 5. Not only black in themſelves, and comely in Chriſt; black as ſinners, and comely as ſaints; black with ſin, and comely with grace: but ſometimes black with perſecution, and comely with conſolation; black with affliction, diſtreſs, and judgment, but comely with the mixture of mercy in their cup of adverſity, while they get the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praiſe for the ſpirit of heavineſs. Hence, with what heavineſs have you gone to prayer! ſometime under the ſenſe of inward trouble from your luſts, or ſome outward trouble from the world; ſome particular affair about your huſband, your wife, your children, your family, that hath been diſtreſſing to you: You have in heavineſs gone away to God in prayer, and come away with your ſoul leaping as a hart within you. O believer, you need not ſhudder or be grieved at the cup of affliction, which your Father gives you to drink; for, though it be bitter at the top, yet the ſugar is at the bottom of the cup: What I do, thou knoweſt not now, but thou ſhalt know hereafter.

7. Hence we may ſee, the happineſs of the ſaints, and of all believers in Chriſt: They may in every thing give thanks; for this is the will of God in Chriſt concerning them; be it proſperity or adverſity, mercy or judgment, in life or in death; he may ſing, that nothing in a world can make him miſerable, no loſſes, croſſes, bonds, perſecutions, famine, or peſtilence. If he may ſing of judgment, ſurely the judgments are not vindictive judgments, but fatherly chaſtiſements; for God deals not with him according to the tenor of the law, as a covenant of works; nay, he is not under the law, nor liable to the penal ſanction of it: they are judgments of a fatherly fatherly judge, not of a wrathful judge, otherwise he could not sing of judgment. How little cause hath the believer to be discontent at outward trials? What! are you discontent at that, out of which God is bringing a song of praise in time, and a weight of glory through eternity?

8. Hence see the misery of the wicked. Whatever matter of singing the children of God have, yet ye have matter of sighing, howling, and lamentation; for ye are under the curse of God, under the curse of his law, and so continue in a dreadful, damnable state: while ye are out of Christ, all the mercies that ye meet with are curses to you, and all the judgments you meet with are drops of divine indignation, and pieces of hell. Your temporal mercies are curses; The prosperity of fools destroys them; and so your table is your snare: spiritual mercies are curses to you; from all the flowers of heavenly blessings ye suck poison; the word is the savour of death to you; the gospel is a stumbling-block to you, over which ye fall into perdition: and as the same wind that blows one ship to an haven, blows another on the rock; so the same breath of the minister, that blows some to heaven, blows you to hell: the sacrament is a curse to you, for ye eat and drink your own damnation; the Bible is a curse to you, for the word of the Lord is against you, and ye are against it. What shall I say to you, graceless, Christless, desperate sinner? O will you tremble and quake, lest Christ himself, the blessing of all blessings, and mercy of all mercies, be a curse to you, and a stone of stumbling, over which you will break your neck! for he is set up for the falling, as well as the rising of many in Israel. O that this thunder would awaken souls that are sleeping securely in a course of sin! As all mercies are curses to a reprobate world, so judgments are judgments indeed to you that live all your days without Christ; for judgment without mercy is the portion of your cup: every affliction is a judgment of wrathful and vindictive nature unto you. You will say, O for patience under such a trouble and sickness! Poor graceless soul, speaking of patience under trouble; you are thus contending with God, and struggling like a fly under a mountain, and striving to be quiet under that which God hath sent to disturb you. God does not afflict men that are out of Christ to exercise their patience, but to disturb their false peace and security. O that God would awaken you! If God call for famine on the land, and make you feel the effects of this terrible drought *, it is a judgment indeed, and a pledge of hell unto you; if God lay you on a sick-bed, and afflict you in your name, estate, person, friends, all is a piece of hell to you; judgments to you are drops of vengeance. Again,

9. See how reprovable they are, from this doctrine, who never sing of mercy and judgment. Some never sing at all the praises of God: there is a gentle or rather deistical fashion among some in our day, in public ordinances, they do not open their mouth to sing with the congregation. Oh! will they ever sing in heaven, that scorn to sing on earth? Many indeed sing with their mouth, that know not what it is to sing with their heart, nor sing with their life to glorify God. Many never sing of mercy, notwithstanding of their receiving many mercies; they pray for what they want, but never praise for what they have: and there is much of this ingratitude among believers themselves. Many again, instead of singing of mercy, they slight their own mercies, and fight against God with his own favours; they abuse their peace to security, their drink to drunkenness, their meat to gluttony, and their mercies to presumption. Do ye thus requite the Lord, O foolish people and unwise? Many, if they sing of mercy, they know not what it is to sing of judgment; When God's judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world should learn righteousness. What are ye learning out of this great drought, whereby God is threatening to send a famine on the land, and break the staff of bread? To sing of judgment, is to hear the rod, and who hath appointed it; to sing of judgment, is to see the hand of God in the affliction, to kiss the hand that smites; to glorify God in the fires; to bless him that remembers mercy in the midst of wrath: and to answer the call of God by such and such a dispensation. Many, instead of singing of mercy and judgment, they slight both mercy and judgment; mercy does not melt them, and judgment does not move them. O take with the reproof.

10. See how comfortable this doctrine may be to all believers and lovers of our Lord Jesus Christ: ye have ground to sing, not only of mercy, but of judgment: I know no case you can be in, believer, but there is room for singing; the saint may sing of mercy in the midst of judgment. O how can I sing, when I missed my errand at this occasion? says one; let them give the praise that have got the profit; but for me, I am left under heavy judgment, under affliction, temptation, desertion; yea, and the prevalency and power of sin and corruption; and therefore there is no room for my singing, but rather for sighing, mourning, and lamenting before the Lord, and to be humbled to the dust. Why, man, indeed it is not humility, but pride, that makes you refuse to praise: you undervalue the day of small things, and any little measure of grace and mercy you enjoy, because, forsooth, you have not all you would be at; and, it may be, God is saying, I will send trouble after trouble upon you, till you be so humbled as to be thankful for the least mercy, till you be thankful that you are out of hell, and thankful that you was not born in America, where people are worshipping the devil. O how many millions of mercies have you to bless God for! And will you take offence at, or differ with your God, and deny him his due, because you get not all your will? You have ground of singing, believer, notwithstanding all that you have said.—O! but how can I sing, when I find sin, by which God is dishonoured, raging in my heart; and corruptions, like so many devils, roaring and domineering? If corruption were slain, I think I would sing, but no otherwise. Why, poor soul, I tell you that you must even in that case sing of mercy and judgment, and sing because he hath said, Slay them not, lest my people forget, Psal.

* The summer in which this sermon was preached [viz. 1723.] was a very remarkable season for drought, there being scarce one drop of rain during the summer months; on which account, many were afraid that the staff of bread would have been cut off from them; though providence so interposed, that, by the frequent and heavy dews, there was, in the issue, abundance of corn for man, but little provender for the cattle.

lix. 11. If your corruptions were ſlain, as you would have them, you would, perhaps, forget your own weakneſs; forget your deliverer; forget your dependence on him; forget prayer; forget pity towards theſe that are afflicted and toſſed as you are: it may be, you would forget the fountain open; forget to make daily uſe of Chriſt; forget to ſympathize and bear with others, when they fall or are overtaken in a fault; forget to walk humbly; forget the ſweet experiences of his pardoning and purging grace; and forget to call yourſelf a dog when you go before him, ſaying, Truth, Lord, I am a dog, I am a devil, I am a lump of hell: And therefore, though you may think it ſtrange to hear of bleſſing the Lord that corruptions are not ſlain outright, yet, ſince infinite wiſdom ſees that nothing leſs will cure your forgetfulneſs while here, even bleſs him, who hath ſaid, Slay them not, leſt my people forget. Bleſs him, that he hath not only ſaid, of affliction, temptation, deſertion, Let not my people want them, leſt they forget; but even of ſins, corruption, and ſpiritual enemies, Slay them not, leſt my people forget: better they be not ſlain, than that you forget to give Chriſt the glory of his ſaving offices, by employing him daily to heal all your diſeaſes, and fight all your battles.

11. Hence ſee the mark of a true believer, and try yourſelves by this doctrine. Do you ſing of mercy and judgment? I might tell you for marks, that if you have learned this ſong of mercy and judgment, as the ſong hath been introduced with ſorrowing, I mean with legal conviction and humiliation; ſo you will find it interrupted with ſighing, becauſe all the powers of hell and corruption will oppoſe this ſweet exerciſe; you will find your harp muſt perpetually be tuned by the hand of the Spirit, and that you are incapable to ſing, till he pen the ſong; for it is with the believer as with the marygold, it opens and ſhuts as the ſun riſes and ſets; and yet even when the ſun is ſet, as it were, that you cannot open and praiſe, you will find praiſe waiting for the Lord in Zion, Pſal. lxv. 1.; or, as it may be rendered, Praiſe is SILENT for thee in Zion: Why? the Spirit of praiſe is ſometimes ſilent, but yet it is a waiting ſilence; you will be waiting for the Spirit of praiſe to be poured out, and in the mean time acknowledging your debt of praiſe; and ſo, while it is not ſenſibly running out, it is gathering a dam, as it were, till the Spirit be poured out from on high, and then it will flow amain.—But, inſtead of all other marks that might be mentioned, I offer this; If you be one that hath learned to ſing of mercy and judgment, then you have got a diſcovery of the glory of God's mercy and judgment, as reconciled together, and mutually embracing one another in Chriſt Jeſus. There are two letters of God's name, Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7. the one is mercy and grace; The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious; the other is juſtice and judgment; The Lord that will by no means clear the guilty: and theſe are the two ſtrings of the harp, on which the believer ſings. Now, have you been taught of God, to reconcile theſe two letters of God's name, and ſo to play upon theſe two ſtrings, by admiring the infinite wiſdom, that hath made them meet together, and kiſs one another in Chriſt? Pſal. lxxxv. 10. Have you ſeen ſalvation ſpringing out of both theſe, and glory ariſing to both theſe attributes of God, from Chriſt's obedience to the death, whom God hath ſet forth to be the propitiation? Have you ſeen mercy running in the channel of a complete ſatisfaction to juſtice, and ſo God by no means clearing the guilty, without a ſacrifice and atonement? Many pretend to ſing of mercy, and ſay, I hope in God's mercy; but they know not what it is to ſing of mercy, to the higheſt praiſe of mercy, in finding out a ranſom, whereby mercy is magnified, not to the diſparagement, but to the higheſt praiſe of infinite juſtice; becauſe judgment was execute upon the Surety to the uttermoſt, that the curſe of the law, and the vengeance of heaven againſt ſin, could demand. If ever you ſang to purpoſe of mercy and judgment, you have ſeen and admired the glory that ſhines in this mutual embracing betwixt mercy and judgment.

12. The laſt inference I offer, is this. Hence we may ſee the duty of all the people of God, namely, to ſing of mercy and judgment: As it is the duty of all hearing me, to ſeek and pray while they are out of heaven, ſo to ſing and praiſe while they are out of hell. But whatever others do, believer, you in particular are to ſing of mercy and judgment: he hath done much for others, but he hath done more for you; he hath given you himſelf to be your God, his Son to be your ſhield, his Spirit to be your guide, his covenant to be your charter, and his heaven to be your inheritance: he hath given you his word and oath, that though he will viſit your iniquity with the rod, and your tranſgreſſion with ſtripes, and execute judgment on your luſts, and take vengeance on your inventions, yet his loving-kindneſs will he not take away, nor alter the word that hath gone out of his mouth. Once hath he ſworn by his holineſs, That he will not lie unto David; and therefore you may ſing of mercy and judgment: and even at your loweſt, when you are crying out, Behold, I am vile! O I am black, I am black, I am black; yet even then he is looking upon you in Chriſt, and ſaying Behold, thou art fair, my love; behold, thou art fair, not only by imputed righteouſneſs, but even by implanted grace, which makes you look upon ſin as the greateſt evil, and groan under it as the greateſt burden: even at your loweſt, there is ſomething about the bottom of your hearts, that ſays, O! I could be content to live in a coal-pit with Chriſt, rather than in a palace without him; A day in his courts is better than a thouſand; I had rather be a doorkeeper in the houſe of my God, than to dwell in tents of wickedneſs. O to ſee his name glorified in the world, and his kingdom coming in me, and in thouſands about me! O ſing, ſing, ſing of mercy and judgment! you have both to ſing of.

QUEST. How ſhall I ſing one of the ſongs of Zion in a ſtrange land? I offer ſome general directions, and then I cloſe.

1. See that your ſong be ſung upon a new harp; I mean, with a new heart and a new ſpirit. Ye that are graceleſs will never ſing, till you get a new heart; O go to God, and cry for it: ye that are gracious will never ſing aright, unleſs the new harp get a new ſet, and the ſtrings be drawn up, and the heart tuned by the hand of the Spirit; and therefore ſeek the new influence for every ſong, and the Spirit to dictate the ſong, and to raiſe the notes. As the dial in the day-light will not ſhew the hour without the ſun, ſo your harp of graces will not afford melody without the Spirit; therefore ſeek the Spirit to help you, when you cannot utter his praiſe: and when ye find your hearts in a praiſing frame, O continue at the exerciſe, ſaying, as David, My heart is fixt, my heart is fixt, I will ſing and give praiſe.

2. If you would ſing aright of mercy and judgment, then you may ſing in your beſt robes; I mean, putting on Chriſt Jeſus, and his righteouſneſs, for your garment; this is the garment of praiſe; and this garment ſmells of aloes, myrrh, and caſſia, and is the only thing that can perfume the praiſes of the ſaints. If you have Eſau's garments, what though you have Jacob's voice; ſo as you want a tongue, and a heart, and a voice, to praiſe him as you ought; yet, with your elder Brother's garment, you may get the bleſſing. Come to God, under a ſenſe of your own unworthineſs, and want of righteouſneſs, and yet ſaying, Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain. O pray and praiſe both under the covert of blood.

3. Put a mark upon mercy. If you would ſing of mercy, though it were never ſo little, it is more than you deſerve. I have heard of a Jewiſh doctor, that was called Rabbi THIS TOO, becauſe he uſed to ſay, whatever befel him, This is good too, and this too, and this too: you may well ſay, how little ſoever you have, This is more than I am worthy of, and this too, and this too. He that ſees that nothing is his but ſin, cannot but wonder that any thing is his but hell: put a mark upon mercy, ſaying, O my ſoul, forget not all his benefits, Pſal. ciii. 2,—5. Mind the viſit he gave you at ſuch and ſuch a place, in ſuch and ſuch an ordinance; mind his words of grace, and emanations of love: put up ſome of the manna in the golden pot.

4. Put a mark upon judgments. If you would ſing of judgment, as well as mercy, and lay your account with judgment, let not national judgments paſs without a remark, that God may get the glory of his holy and juſt adminiſtrations: many judgments are come upon us, and many ſad tokens of judgment a-coming, becauſe of our national apoſtaſy from the work of reformation, our covenant-breaking, our perjury, and, O the other rampant abominations of our day. Learn the language of judgment, Hear the rod. See Iſa. xxiv. 14. It is matter of ſinging, that Chriſt hath a greater concern for his church than you can have; for, the government is upon his ſhoulders: God will take care of his own church; and Chriſt hath more care of it than you can have; and, upon all the glory there ſhall be a defence; but no thanks to a corrupt party, that would ſet doctrine, diſcipline, worſhip, and government, and all, before the wind. God uſually brings about church-reformation with a judgment, and then will the remnant ſing of judgment, when God ſcums the pot, and caſts the ſcum into the fire; as you have it, Ezek. xxiv. 12. She hath wearied herſelf with lies. O but Scotland hath wearied herſelf with lies of carnal-policy, with the lies of court-flattery; and there is a great ſcum that covers and clouds all our reformation-light, a great ſcum of ſelf-juſtifying pride, that will rather ſacrifice truth, than take with a fault, and rather let truth ſuffer, than her credit; and yet her credit is cracked, ever ſince her covenant with God was broken, and burnt, and never a-hand put forth to take it out of the fire, and renew it, ſince that time; but yet the covenant ſhall be on the field, when the ſcum ſhall be in the fire. But, what ſhall we ſay? there ſeems to be nothing but ſcum among us, nothing but filth and baggage: muſt all go to the fire together? Yea, though it be ſo, yet a remnant ſhall ſing in the fires, when the ſcum will be conſumed therein, as you ſee, Iſa. xxiv, 13, 14, 15. If this ſhall be done in the iſles of the ſea, ſurely the iſles of Britain and Ireland are not excluded.—Let not perſonal judgments and ſtroaks paſs without a remark, but let God get the glory of his frowning, as well as of his ſmiling diſpenſations; and lay your account with judgments, that you may ſing of judgment when it comes. Be not ſurprized, though affliction, temptation, and deſertion come upon you, on the back of a communion: God uſes to feaſt his people, to fit them for a trial: days of ſweet enlargement are uſually like ſun-blinks before a ſhower; as Peter and John were witneſſes of Chriſt's transfiguration on the mount, that they might next be witneſſes of his agony in the garden. Lay your account with trials from heaven, earth, and hell, that having laid your account with them before-hand, you may never forget to ſing; yea, lay your account that the Philiſtines will be upon you, Samſon; all your luſts and corruptions will be upon you: therefore, Watch and pray, that you enter not into temptation; and that your iniquity get not ſuch hold upon you, that you ſhall not be able to ſing. And therefore,

5. If you would ſing aright of mercy and judgment, let your ſong be a practical ſong. Here I muſt tell you, that ſome take the words, for David's mercy and judgment that he was reſolved to exerciſe in his government, namely, to be merciful and juſt; the mercy of God ſhall teach me to be merciful, and his juſtice and judgment ſhall teach me to be juſt: I will praiſe thee, by exerciſing mercy and juſtice in my ſtation, as a king and a magiſtrate. His reſolution here is, that the mercy and juſtice of God ſhould be extolled in his thoughts, expreſſed in his words, and exemplified in his actions, according to that command, Hoſ. xii. 6. Keep mercy and judgment, and wait on thy God continually. If you would ſing of mercy and judgment, then keep mercy and judgment: have you ſhared of the mercy of God, and will you not be merciful, as your heavenly Father is? Do you know the judgment of God, and will you not be juſt and righteous, and equal in all your dealings with men, and converſation in the world? David's ſong here is a practical ſong; and you may ſee, at your leiſure, the ſeveral notes of this practical ſong in the following part of the pſalm: and do you the ſame according to your ſtation. One note of his ſong is, ver. 2. I will behave myſelf wiſely in a perfect way, etc. i. e. that, through grace, he will act conſcientiouſly and conſiderately; and in the mean time praying that the Lord would come and dwell with him in his houſe, O when wilt thou come to me? Another note of his ſong is, ver. 3. where he reſolves to practiſe no evil himſelf, but ſhuts his eyes from ſeeing evil. Another note of his ſong, ver. 4, 5. he will not keep bad ſervants, nor employ theſe about him that were vicious; that he would have nothing to do with malicious people, theſe that were ſlanderers of their neighbours, nor theſe that were proud and haughty, nor theſe that were deceitful, and made no conſcience of lying and deceit. Another note of his ſong, ver. 6. That he would keep company with them that feared God; that he would keep good company, and honeſt ſervants: You do not practically ſing to the praiſe of God, if you do otherwiſe. Another note of his ſong is, ver. 8. That he will extend his zeal to the reforming of city and country: we are to ſtudy the reformation of manners, and the ſuppreſſion of vice, in our ſeveral ſtations; being filled with a zeal for the glory of God, the intereſt of Chriſt and his truths. The goſpel-church is the city of the Lord; we are to ſeek the honour of God in the purity of his church.

theſe

6. And laſtly, In order to your ſinging aright this practical ſong, lay the burden of the ſong upon the back of the chief muſician. Who is the chief Singer? Even Jeſus Chriſt, in whoſe obedience to the death was raiſed a ſong of praiſe and glory to God in the higheſt; and by the breathing of whoſe Spirit alone you can ſing and ſerve the Lord acceptably. He hath ſaid, Without me ye can do nothing; and ſurely without him you cannot ſing; therefore depend upon him, who only can make the tongue of the dumb to ſing. If there were more dependence on him, the tongue as well as the life of profeſſors would be more employed in ſinging his praiſes, and talking of his name, and ſpeaking of his glory. What a ſad matter is it, that a dumb devil hath poſſeſſed the generality of profeſſors as to ſpiritual converſe? O the idle worldly talk upon Sabbath-days; yea, on communion-days! Some will go away even from this communion, talking more of the corn and weather, or any thing elſe, than upon the word they have heard, or any ſoul-edifying diſcourſe ſuitable to the occaſion. What ſaid Chriſt of the poſſeſſed man in the goſpel? Thou dumb and deaf ſpirit, I charge thee to come out of him. O look to him, that he would charge the dumb devil to come out of you, that your tongues may ſing his praiſes, and ſpeak of his glory. How hardening is it to a wicked world, to ſee profeſſors as carnal and worldly as themſelves! O then employ the chief Singer to help you to ſing, and plead his promiſe for this end, They ſhall ſing in the ways of the Lord, for great is the glory of the Lord, Pſal. cxxxviii. 5. yea, he hath promiſed to give ſongs in the night of adverſity; that is, a ſong of mercy in the midſt of judgment and affliction; I will give her the valley of Achor for a door of hope, and ſhe ſhall ſing there, Hoſ. ii. 15. O believer, whatever be your diſcouragement and complaint, while ſurrounded with judgments and trials, let not the world ſee you dampt and diſcouraged, leſt they ſay, You ſerve a bad maſter, that does not allow you to ſing. Whatever dead weights you have upon your ſpirit, which God and you know, ye may tell him of it, and tell ſome godly perſon that will ſympathize with you in it; but let not the world hear of your complaints and diſcouragements, let them know you ſerve a good maſter; and remember how he encourages you to this, ſaying, How great is the loving-kindneſs thou haſt laid up for them that truſt in thee before the ſons of men! or, as it may be explained, who carry boldly and couragiouſly, under whatever difficulties and dangers, before the ſons of men, and ſo glorify God before the world: and therefore, though you may weep in ſecret places before the Lord, and get to little more than a ſigh or a ſob, yet endeavour to ſing before the world at leaſt, that they may bring up a good report of religion, and that the world may know you believe what you profeſs; that yet a little while, and you ſhall return to Zion with ſongs, and everlaſting joy upon your heads, and ſighing and ſorrowing ſhall for ever fly away; and that though your body will be laid in the duſt within a little time, yet a little while, and the happy joyful morning of a glorious reſurrection is haſtening on, when the voice will be heard, Awake and ſing, ye that dwell in the duſt, Iſa. xxvi. 19. O ſing, ſing, amidſt all your ſorrows and ſighing; ſing of mercy and judgment, in hope of ſinging there, where ſorrow and ſighing ſhall fly away. O go away ſinging, in ſpite of the devil and corruption; and take Chriſt the chief Singer along with you, to tune your harp, whenſoever the devil puts it out of tune: Go up from the wilderneſs, leaning upon him, who hath engaged to work in you both to will and to do.

And now, when we are parting, alas! is it not a ſore matter, that there are many here, that will never learn to ſing on earth, nor ever be admitted to the very firſt note of the ſpiritual ſong, which is, to believe on the Son of God; for, without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God, or praiſe him; and, as they never get to this, ſo it never coſt them an hour's care, or made them loſe an hour's ſleep, that they could not believe in Chriſt. O wretched man! are you careleſs and indifferent, whether you ſing in heaven among angels, or roar in hell among devils, to all eternity? Yea, there are ſome here, that do not believe there is ſuch a perſon as Chriſt in heaven; they have had a fancy about him, by their hearing of him in the goſpel, but never had the faith of the Son of God, by the Spirit's revealing him in the heart: and yet you are living careleſs and ſecure, in the purſuit of your ſins and idols: you are going ſtraight to hell, with a cart-load of ſermons on your back, and making poor miniſters ſpend their breath and labour in vain, and preach you to the devil, when they would gladly preach you to Chriſt. O! ſhall we part, and not a ſoul of you be touched and turned to the Lord, or brought to learn any other ſong, but to ſing yourſelves aſleep in the arms of the devil and your luſts? Some are ſleeping in the arms of a black devil, in the purſuit of groſs and abominable luſts, of drunkenneſs, whoredom, Sabbath-breaking, etc. Others are ſleeping in the arms of a white devil, going about to eſtabliſh a righteouſneſs of their own, reſting on their legal duties and prayers; having a form of godlineſs, but denying the power thereof; expecting God will have mercy on them, becauſe they obſerve ſeveral duties of the law, which others neglect; and ſo ſinging a falſe ſong of mercy, or hope of mercy, while they never knew the judgment of God, nor ſaw the wonders of God's executing all the judgments threatened in the law upon the glorious Surety Chriſt Jeſus, nor ever came under that covert to eſcape the judgment of God: but, while you are ſtrangers to Chriſt, all your worſhip is but hypocriſy, your zeal but madneſs, your faith but fancy, and your work abominable to God. O! will none of you be prevailed with to cry with your heart to the Lord, saying, Lord, pluck me out of the arms of the devil, and as a brand out of the burning? As you would not despise the riches of his mercy, and incur the fury of his judgment, go to a corner, and cry to him, that he would teach you how to sing of mercy and judgment. It may be the Lord will pity you for his name's sake. O may the Lord himself shew his glory to you, and make you see mercy and judgment meeting and embracing each other, and with joint harmony carrying on your salvation-work, in spite of all the opposing legions of hell; and bring you to put in practice the psalmist's sweet resolution here, I will sing of mercy and judgment; unto thee, O Lord, will I sing!

to

SERMON VII.*

The HARMONY of the DIVINE ATTRIBUTES displayed, in the Redemption and Salvation of Sinners by JESUS CHRIST.

PSALM lxxxv. 10.

Mercy and Truth are met together, Righteousness and Peace have kissed each other.

MY friends, at a solemn marriage-supper, there is usually a friendly company that meets together; and when at such an occasion, all things are managed with sobriety and decency, it is very heartsome and pleasant to the parties concerned, to see the members of the meeting with mutual kindness to one another, harmoniously gracing the solemnity: even so at the marriage-supper of the Lamb; I mean, the sacrament of the Lord's supper, which we have been celebrating, there is a heartsome company, not of men and women, for that would make but a poor earthly meeting; nor yet of saints and angels, for that would make but at best a mean creature-meeting; but it is a glorious heartsome company of divine attributes and perfections, in the sweetest concord, meeting together, and embracing one another. This wonderful conjunction of divine excellencies is the friendly company that meets together, to put honour upon this nuptial solemnity: and to see them thus harmoniously embracing one another in the salvation of sinners, is the sweetest sight, that the bride, the Lamb's wife, shall ever see at the marriage supper, whether it be at the lower or upper table.

There is a great meeting in this house, but an infinitely greater in this text; a meeting of divine excellencies, to grace the assembly of the marriage-supper of the Lamb: Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other. When God made heaven and earth out of nothing, he made them by a word, without any other ceremony; but when he made man, there was some particular solemnity, a grand council, as it were, of the glorious Trinity called; Come, let us make man after our image. But now, man having unmade himself, if God hath a mind for the praise of his own glorious grace to make him up again, by a new creation in Christ Jesus, there must be a more glorious solemnity yet; not only a council of the adorable Trinity, but a grand meeting of all the attributes of God, to consult their own glory that was marred, and reconcile their own interests, and seemingly contradictory claims; for the sin of man had brought real confusion among all the creatures of God on earth; yea, and a seeming war among all the attributes of God in heaven, concerning the execution of the sentence of the law upon mankind, the transgressor thereof. Some of these attributes, such as Mercy, saying, If the sentence of death be execute upon them, how shall I be glorified? Others, such as Truth, saying, If the sentence be not executed, how shall I be glorified? Is it to be expected that such opposites can meet together? Or if they meet, that they will agree together cordially? Yea, though it be beyond the expectation of men and angels, yet, behold, it is here celebrated with a song, Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

This psalm consists of a prayer of faith, and an answer of peace. First, the church's prayer, from the beginning to the 8th verse, where they are praying for the removal of many tokens of God's displeasure they were under, notwithstanding of their return out of the Babylonish captivity. 2dly, The answer of peace that is made to their prayer, from ver. 8. and downward. We have here the psalmist listening and waiting for the answer; I will hear what God the Lord will speak. The answer itself in general is peace; He will speak peace to his people, and to his saints. If he give not outward peace, yet he will suggest inward peace; speaking that to their hearts by his Spirit, which he had spoken to their ears by his word, whatever other sort of peace and prosperity they enjoyed; when at length the children of the captivity, after a great deal of toil, had gained a settlement in their own land, yet peace with God and prosperity under the Messia's kingdom, was the great thing here promised, and prophesied of; and that is a peace that lays the soul under the strongest obligation to stand aback from all sin, which is the greatest folly, and to beware of backsliding thereto; but let them not return again to folly: For true peace with God brings in war with sin. But this is further explained in the main leading part thereof, namely, salvation and glory, ver. 9. Surely his salvation is near to them

* This sermon was preached on the Sabbath-evening, immediately after the administration of the sacrament of the Lord's supper at Dunfermline, September 29, 1723. and hath already born four impressions.

them that fear him, that glory may dwell in our land. Now, whatever other ſalvation be here imported, Chriſt is the great ſalvation intended: when he is near in view, then the believer cries out with old Simeon, Now mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation: and whatever other glory and honour be here imported, Chriſt is the chief glory intended; when he goes away from a land, then ICHABOD, the glory is departed; but where he abides, glory dwells; for he is called, A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of his people Iſrael. But now, if we would know what ſort of glory it is that appears when Chriſt is revealed; why, it is even the glorious harmony of all the divine attributes illuſtriouſly ſhining in him, who is both our ſalvation and our glory: Mercy and truth are met together, righteouſneſs and peace have kiſſed each other. Now, though theſe words may be applied to the happy meeting of graces in men, upon the revelation of Chriſt in the ſoul, which I may afterwards notice in the ſequel, and in which ſenſe ſome interpreters underſtand it, yet I take it mainly to import, the happy meeting of perfections in God, to be glorified in the ſinner's ſalvation by Jeſus Chriſt; which is a gloſs that no interpreter, I have had occaſion to conſult, does neglect or omit; and if any of them ſhould miſs it, I think they would miſs the very ground-work and foundation of all other happy meetings: Mercy and truth have met together, righteouſneſs and peace have kiſſed each other.

In the words you may notice, 1. The members of the meeting. 2. The manner of the meeting. 3. The harmony of the meeting. 4. The ſtrangeneſs of it.

1. Notice, I ſay, firſt, The members of the meeting; Mercy, Truth, Righteouſneſs, Peace. I hope I need not caution ſome in this aſſembly, that they beware of imagining theſe various perfections of God, under the names of Mercy, Truth, Righteouſneſs, and Peace, as if they were really diſtinct and different things in God; or, as if they were really different parties, making a formal conſultation, in order to their agreement; for God is one, and cannot be divided; he is one infinite, eternal, and unchangeable Being: there are not diſtinct and different things in his nature and eſſence, however his perfections be thus repreſented to our weak, finite capacities, which cannot underſtand the perfections of God, but in ſeveral parts, as it were. By Mercy then here we are to underſtand God himſelf, as he is a merciful and gracious God. By Truth we are to underſtand the ſame God, as he is a true and faithful God. By Righteouſneſs we may underſtand his juſtice, or God himſelf, as he is a juſt and righteous God; and by Peace, the ſame God, as he is the God of peace, and a God reconciling the world to himſelf. So that the whole comes to this, It is the great and eternal God himſelf, conſulting with himſelf, in a manner becoming his infinite and adorable perfections, how to glorify himſelf in all his glorious attributes, in the way of ſaving ſinners, in and by Jeſus Chriſt.

2. The manner of the meeting: theſe excellencies and perfections of God meet together, as it were, in pairs; Mercy and Truth, Righteouſneſs and Peace, going hand in hand in to the council-chamber, to concert the matters that concerned their higheſt glory and honour.

3. The harmony of the meeting; having met together, they kiſs and embrace each other. Mercy and Peace, as it were, expreſs their complacency in Truth and Righteouſneſs; and Truth and Righteouſneſs expreſs their complacency in Mercy and Peace, and delight in one another's honour: for not one attribute of the divine Majeſty can, or will be glorified to the diſhonour of any other attribute, but mutually embrace each other in their everlaſting arms, for ſupporting the honour of each other's excellency, with complicated ineffable endearments.

4. The ſtrangeneſs and remarkableneſs of this meeting: for, the agreement of theſe parties met together is the more remarkable, in regard of their jarring and oppoſite claims: for, that Mercy and Peace ſhould meet together, and agree in favour to ſave us; and that Truth and Righteouſneſs ſhould meet together, and agree in juſtice to deſtroy us, were not ſo ſtrange and remarkable. And if they had kept ſuch a ſeparate meeting, and remained at variance without meeting together, man had been for ever ſeparate from God, and ſome darling attributes had never been glorified in man's ſalvation; our ſin and rebellion having in a manner ſet the attributes of God at ſuch variance, as nothing elſe than infinite wiſdom could provide a ſufficient anſwer to all their contradictory claims and intereſts, which behoved to be done, ere the propoſal concerning the ſalvation of any ſinner could be gone into. Why, ſays Mercy, It is my intereſt that the ſinner live and not periſh, that I may be magnified, ſince I have ſaid, That I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy: well, but, ſays Truth, It is my intereſt as a God of truth, that the ſinner die, ſince I have ſaid, That the ſoul that ſinneth ſhall die: yea, and ſays Righteouſneſs, I muſt join with Truth, and claim the ſinner's damnation, for the advancement of my intereſt and honour; for I have ſaid, and will not gainſay it, That I will by no means clear the guilty: O! but ſays Peace, I muſt join in with Mercy, and claim the ſinner's ſalvation, for advancing my intereſt, for I create the fruit of the lips, peace; peace to him that is afar off, and to him that is near. So there appears to be a war in heaven among infinitely adorable attributes and perfections, where Mercy and Peace are ſaying, We muſt have glory in ſhewing undeſerved pity on the ſinner, and yet Truth and Righteouſneſs are ſaying, We muſt have glory in executing the deſerved vengeance. And now, O men and angels! will you tell, can theſe antipodes meet together? Can theſe jarring-like attributes of the divine Majeſty embrace each other, in the ſalvation of the ſinner, ſo as to get all their demands anſwered, and their different intereſts advanced? What ſay you, children of men? Can you deviſe how theſe differences can be compoſed for your own ſafety? No, no; human wiſdom ſays, It is not in me. What ſay ye angels? you that excel in ſtrength and wiſdom; can you contrive the reconciliation of theſe irreconcileable demands? No, no; angelical wiſdom ſays, It is not in me: well, ſince creature-wiſdom fails, we may addreſs the infinite Wiſdom of the Deity, and enquire at a higher hand? Behold, now we have taken upon us to ſpeak unto the Lord, who are but duſt and aſhes. What ſayeſt thou? O infinitely wiſe JEHOVAH! can theſe oppoſite claims be reconciled to the ſatisfaction of all parties, and the ſalvation of the ſinner? yea, it is done, it is done; it is done in a crucified Chriſt, whom we have been remembering at this ſolemnity; and therefore we may ſing this marvelous ſong upon the back of it, ſaying, Glory, glory, glory to God, that mercy and truth are met together, and righteouſneſs and peace have embraced each other.

OBSERV. That in the ſalvation of ſinners by Jeſus Chriſt, the glorious attributes and perfections of God do harmoniouſly conſpire and embrace one another; or thus, That in Chriſt crucified, for the redemption of ſinners, all the glorious attributes of the divine Majeſty do harmoniouſly conſpire, and embrace one another.

When God is well-pleaſed, no perfection of God is diſpleaſed; but God is well-pleaſed in Chriſt, and therefore every perfection of his nature is well-pleaſed; none of them diſpleaſed or diſſatisfied, but all pleaſed and ſatisfied to the full: ſee Hoſ. ii. 19, 20. This is declared by an audible voice from heaven, ſaying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed, Mat. iii. 17. And why, even for the reaſon you have, Iſa. xlii. 21. The Lord is well-pleaſed for his righteouſneſs ſake, he will magnify the law, and make it honourable. We ſee he hath brought in a righteouſneſs anſwering the demands of all that ſtood in the way of our ſalvation. Did divine Truth and Righteouſneſs ſay, That the threatening of the law muſt be execute, ſo ſure as God is true, as well as its precept obtemperate and obeyed? Well, can a Righteouſneſs ſatisfying both theſe demands, do the buſineſs? Yea, ſays Juſtice itſelf, in concert with Mercy, if there be one righteous man in the Sodom of this earth, that can ſatisfy my broken and violated law, in its demand of complete ſatisfaction, then I will ſpare all the elect world, for the ſake of that one righteous man; and by his knowledge ſhall my righteous ſervant juſtify many. Well, ſays Mercy, Here is one whoſe name is WONDERFUL, and whom they call IMMANUEL, God-man, who hath brought in an everlaſting righteouſneſs, both active and paſſive, ſuiting the precept and penalty of the law: why then, might one attribute ſay to another, We are all pleaſed, and with one conſent let it be proclaimed on earth, That the Lord is well-pleaſed, for his righteouſneſs ſake; for he hath magnified the law, and made it honourable. And now the great affair of man's ſalvation is ſo well concerted and contrived, that God may have mercy upon them, and be at peace with poor ſinners without any wrong to his Truth and Righteouſneſs. The attributes of God have met and agreed, and ſealed their agreements with a kiſs of infinite kindneſs, harmony, and ſatisfaction: Mercy and truth are met together, righteouſneſs and peace have kiſſed each other.

Now, that I may ſpeak to this purpoſe a little more fully, the method I propoſe is,

I. To touch a little at this queſtion, Who are the members of this meeting? or, what are theſe attributes of God, which do thus harmoniouſly conſpire together, propoſing their various claims?

II. I would enquire when and where it is that they meet together, and embrace one another.

III. How, and after what manner it is that they meet together, and kiſs one another.

IV. Why, or for what reaſon it is that they have met together, thus harmoniouſly.

V. Make ſome application of the ſubject.

I. I would ſpeak a little of the members of this meeting, or the attributes of God that thus harmoniouſly conſpire together. We need not aſk at whoſe inſtance this meeting is called; it is at the inſtance, and by the order of JEHOVAH, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, one God; his ſovereign will and pleaſure reſolving, in a manner like himſelf, to concert with himſelf; neither need we aſk, what is the occaſion of the meeting? Why, man had ſinned, and all mankind, by their ſin, was involved under the curſe of the law, and wrath of God; and yet God had reſolved and decreed, for the glory of his grace and mercy, to ſave a world of ſinners, elect according to the foreknowledge of God. And while Grace, Mercy, and Peace are upon this loving plot of ſaving ſinners, it was fit that Juſtice, Truth, and Righteouſneſs ſhould be called into the ſame council, to appear for their intereſt; ſince the propoſal of ſuch a ſalvation of ſinners ſeems to encroach upon their honour, which required the vengeance due to be executed upon the ſinner. Well, the meeting being called, compear theſe glorious perfections, Mercy, Truth, Righteouſneſs, and Peace; Mercy and Peace, full of pity; Truth and Juſtice, full of fury; which made a ſeeming controverſy in heaven. We may ſuppoſe Adam arraigned in the name of all mankind, and ſtanding as a trembling pannel; yea, his very tongue chained up in ſilence, by reaſon of ſin and guilt, ſentenced to eternal death, and ready to have the ſentence execute upon him, and all his poſterity.

We may ſuppoſe next, the ſeveral members of the meeting opening the aſſembly, by putting in their ſeveral claims: and we may notice them in the order of the text.

1. MERCY, being full of pity towards the miſerable, comes walking along in the cool of the evening, and meekly craving leave to ſpeak, notwithſtanding that Truth and Juſtice be preſent at the meeting. It is true, ſays Mercy, that man hath ſinned, and juſt that man ſhould die; but art not thou, O Lord, full of pity and compaſſion, The Lord, the Lord God, pardoning iniquity, tranſgreſſion, and ſin? What though man hath ſinned, and is all over beſmeared with mire and blood, yet look upon him in love, and deſtroy not the work of thy own hand: he was made a child after thy own image, though now his garment be rent and all bloody; yet ſee, is not this thy ſon's coat? Joſeph is gone, and wilt thou loſe Benjamin alſo? Angels are gone, and ſhall men be loſt alſo? Miriads of angels are fallen, and that irrecoverably, and ſhall man periſh alſo? O ſpare him! is he not a little one? and his ſoul ſhall live. I ſee, might Mercy ſay, that Truth and Righteouſneſs, or Juſtice, which have the poor ſinner in their chains, are here preſent, ready to ſpeak in this aſſembly, for their intereſt and honour, againſt the criminal: but let it be marked in the minutes of this court, that Mercy craves to be magnified, and muſt have honour at this meeting. Well, Mercy having ſpoken her mind, saying, I have heard what Mercy craves in favours of this criminal; but, O thou faithful and true God! the word is gone out of thy mouth, and there is no revoking it: thou hast said to Adam, In the day thou eatest thou shalt surely die; and now he hath eaten, he hath sinned, and shall he not die? What! is there yea and nay with God, who hath faithfulness for the girdle of his loins? Must not God's word of threatening take effect? Yea, heaven and earth shall pass away, but a jot of his word shall not fall to the ground. And therefore, whatever be the demand of Mercy, let it be marked in the records of this meeting, that Truth craves to be magnified; and that its honour be not infringed in the least, by any claim or plea that Mercy hath brought in. Well, Truth having spoken, gives way to her sister Justice; and thereupon,

2. TRUTH comes in, naked and with open mouth, in favours of God's Faithfulneſs, and in oppoſition to man's perfidy and treachery, ſay-

5. RIGHTEOUSNESS, or JUSTICE, comes in and impleads against the rebel sinner; Righteousness, I say, bringing her scales in her hand, in which she had tried him, and found him lighter than vanity itself; he is weighed in the balances, and found wanting; yea, not only wanting and destitute of all that perfection and obedience that the law required, but full of all that rebellion which the law discharged, having sinned and come short of the glory of God; and so is righteously subjected to the sanction of the law, and sentence of eternal death: and therefore, says Righteousness, O thou infinitely righteous and just Judge, Mercy can have no hearing in this court to the prejudice of thy honour and glory, as a just and righteous God, as Truth hath pronounced the sentence of wrath and vengeance against sin; so, if thou be a just God, the infinite vengeance due to such an infinite evil must be execute to the full. This pannel is my prisoner, and loosed he shall not be till I get full satisfaction, and my sword shall be drunk with blood: for, vengeance is mine, and I will repay it, saith the Lord: and I will by no means clear the guilty. And therefore, let it be registrate in this court, that Righteousness craves to be magnified, and Justice to be glorified in a full satisfaction; and this is claimed and demanded in the name of the righteous and just Judge of the universe: and shall not the Judge of all the earth do right? Here is the language of Justice. What then? O! shall the demand of Mercy be utterly run down by these powerful opposing pleas of Truth and Righteousness? Is there no friend in this court to take Mercy's part? Yea, there is: and therefore,

4. PEACE immediately steps in with an olive branch in her hand, saying, Fury is not in me; and may I speak a word in behalf of forlorn mankind! may I offer a meek answer to the claim of Truth and Righteousness, which they have advanced in opposition to the demand of Mercy? For, A soft answer turneth away wrath. Well, Peace being allowed a hearing, proposes a healing overture, saying, O thou God of peace! may not an atonement be made, a reconciliation thought of betwixt thy majesty and thy creature? May not one be found out to stand in the gap, and bear off this wrath, to become surety for this great debtor, to acquit and liberate this poor miserable prisoner and criminal? May not one be found out, that will make up the breach, by vindicating the honour of Truth, and satisfying the demands of Justice, and so making way for the claim of Mercy? And then all differences may be peaceably composed, so as we may harmoniously agree, and kiss one another. O! may not then a Peace-maker be found out, in whom we may find all our demands satisfied at once, without prejudging one another? Why, if such an one can be found, surely his name shall be called, Wonderful Counsellor, the Prince of Peace.

Well, the overture and proposal of Peace being recorded among the rest of the archives of the glorious Court; and it being such a peaceable overture, no member of the meeting could disprove it: but the great question then is, how it could be effectuate; for if one man sin against another, a man might determine it; but if a man sin against Jehovah, who shall intreat for him? for when an infinite Majesty is offended, who among finite creatures is able to satisfy it? or, What can countervail the King's loss? Wherewith then shall he come before the Lord, or bow himself before the most high God? will thousands of rams do it, or ten thousand rivers of oil, or the fruit of the body for the sin of the soul? No, no: Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not; for it is impossible that the blood of bulls or of goats should take away sin, Heb. x. 5. What then, will angels become surety for the sin of man? No, no: though they had a will, they have not power; they have but oil enough in their vessels for their own lamps. What then shall be done? Why, might Peace say, let us not stand in a demur, we have infinite Wisdom here present with us at this meeting, let us hear her judgment concerning this peaceable proposal, if it be possible that such a person can be found, in whom we may harmoniously centre at last.

Then WISDOM sits down upon the privy council-bench, and being full of eyes doth gravely determine this doubtful case with a happy issue. It is expedient, says Wisdom, That one die for the people, that the whole nation of mankind perish not; but he must be such a righteous One, that can justify many; yea, he that will undertake this, must be finite, that he may die; and infinite, that he may conquer death, and satisfy infinite justice: but lo! there is none such to be found among all the creatures that ever God made; neither can such an one be found, unless the Son of God himself, the second Person of the glorious Trinity, shall be pleased, by an unspeakable mystery, to become flesh, Made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that are under the law, that they may receive the adoption of sons, Gal. iv. 4. That so when he who hath no sin, shall become sin for man; man, who hath no righteousness, may become the righteousness of God through him, 2 Cor. v. 21. And thus Mercy may be magnified, Truth justified, Righteousness cleared, Justice satisfied, Peace concluded; and all contented.

WISDOM having determined how this proposal of Peace might be effectuate, all parties hearkened, as it were, with pleasure, and willingly subscribed to the happy overture, and then heaven and earth conspired together, in solemn thanksgiving, saying, Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace and good-will towards men.——Thus the jarring attributes of God are now reconciled, and behold the members of the meeting, that seemed to be at the greatest variance, are embracing one another in their arms: Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

II. The

II. The ſecond thing was, When and where did theſe bleſſed parties meet together? When we ſpeak of a remarkable meeting, it is uſual to enquire into the time and place of the meeting. Now, the place where, and the time when as to this wonderful meeting, are two queſtions, which I put together, for they may both be anſwered at once, becauſe of their near relation.

1ſt, Then in general, the meeting-place, or the place of the meeting, is CHRIST; and the time of the meeting, was when Chriſt put himſelf in our room, or ſubſtitute himſelf in the place of the ſinner, to anſwer the demands of all the members of the meeting, that had any objection againſt our ſalvation, or any thing to lay to our charge: Where then, and when did they meet together and kiſs each other? Why, it was even in Chriſt, when he took our law-room to pay our debt, and purchaſe our liberty in ſuch a manner, as Mercy and Peace might have their intereſts advanced, without injury to Truth and Righteouſneſs; that Mercy might vent, to the credit of Truth; and Peace might be proclaimed to the honour of Righteouſneſs; and the ſinner ſaved, to the ſatisfaction of Juſtice. They meet together and embrace each other in him, as the Surety, The Surety of the better teſtament, Heb. vii. 22.

We were debtors to the mandatory and minatory part of the law, arraigned at the inſtance of divine Juſtice to pay the debt. Chriſt ſubſtitutes himſelf in our room, comes under the law to pay the whole debt: it is true, the debt was perſonal, and Juſtice had a demand upon the perſon that ſinned, by virtue of the covenant of works; but that covenant never excluded a ſurety, though it provided none. The law promiſed life upon our perſonal obedience, but in caſe we fail, it revealed no ſurety to make out an obedience in our room. There behoved, indeed, to be a ſecret reſerve in the covenant of works, whereby the perfect obedience of another was not excluded: for, if the covenant of works had abſolutely excluded a ſurety in our room, then the covenant of grace had been excluded, and our ſalvation had been impoſſible after our fall; but though the covenant of works did not exclude a ſurety, yet that covenant did neither provide, nor reveal a ſurety. This is done in the covenant of grace, which is Chriſt as Surety fulfilling for us the covenant of works, in all the articles of it.

Now, is Truth and Faithfulneſs at any loſs here? No: the truth of the promiſe and threatning both, of the law of works is fulfilled. On the one hand, the promiſe of eternal life, made to perfect obedience, which, though we forfeited in our own perſon, yet we recover in the perſon of Chriſt; the promiſe of life upon the ground and condition of perfect obedience, being fulfilled to us in him, who hath yielded that perfect obedience in our room. On the other hand, divine Truth and Faithfulneſs, in the threatening of the law, which was death, is glorified in that it is fulfilled upon the Surety; while we, who came under the ſentence of death in the firſt Adam, undergo that death in the ſecond.

Again, is Righteouſneſs and Juſtice at any loſs by this Surety in our room? No, no: whether we look upon it as vindictive or retributive Juſtice: vindictive Juſtice is diſplayed in its utmoſt ſeverity againſt Chriſt; Awake, O ſword, againſt my Shepherd, and the man that is my Fellow. And ſo the ſword is drunk in his blood to infinite ſatisfaction. Retributive Juſtice is glorioufly diſplayed alſo in the ſinner's being rewarded, juſtified, ſaved, upon this ground. It is true, might Juſtice ſay, I could have demanded ſatisfaction upon the ſinner himſelf, in his own perſon, but as I can ſuſtain no injury to my honour, by ſuch a Surety as this, whom they call IMMANUEL, God-man; ſo I find my honour and intereſt, inſtead of being impaired, is advanced by this exchange of perſons: for, though I ſhould damn the ſinner to all eternity, I will never get ſuch full and complete ſatisfaction upon any finite creature, as I will get by one ſtroak of my avenging ſword upon that Perſon of infinite dignity; and ſo it pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him.——Why then, they meet together and embrace one another in him, as the Surety; and if Truth and Righteouſneſs be both pleaſed to the full, the parties cannot but all agree, and embrace each other.—Again, they meet together and embrace one another in him, as a Sacrifice; A ſacrifice and offering of a ſweet-ſmelling ſavour unto God, Eph. v. 2. Why, He offered up himſelf by the eternal Spirit. O great! Even by his eternal Godhead; a valuable ſacrifice indeed!—They meet together in him as a propitiation; Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God, Rom. iii. 25. Behold him righteous in ſhewing Mercy! Here is the atonement, the propitiation: that very word which the Septuagint calls the mercy-ſeat, in the Old Teſtament; and it is the word that the poor publican made uſe of, when he was ſeeking Mercy, God be merciful to me a ſinner; ὁ Θεὸς ἱλάσθητί μοι, Be thou PROPITIOUS to me, Luke xviii 13. He had mind of this ἱλαστήριον; this Mercy-ſeat and Propitiation. It is not ſimple mercy that he ſought, but Mercy through a propitiation; he looked to the blood of atonement, to the ſacrificed Lamb of God, ſaying, Give me Mercy for this; by that ſolemn propitiation: Be thou propitious to me. Here it is that Mercy and Juſtice meet together.—They meet together in him as a ranſom; Deliver his ſoul from going down to the pit; I have found a ranſom, Job xxxiii. 24.—In a word, they have met together, and kiſſed one another in a crucified Chriſt; whoſe death was the payment of our debt, the puniſhment of our ſin, the price of our redemption, and a purchaſe of our life, liberty, and eternal ſalvation.—— Here is the meeting-place then of theſe glorious perfections of God: here is the perſon in whom they centre, that they may be all glorified to the higheſt. Mercy, Truth, Righteouſneſs, and Peace, all are pleaſed. Mercy is gratified, and conſtitutes him to be the Mercy-ſeat: Truth is ſatisfied, and centres in him as the way, the truth, and the life: Righteouſneſs is contented, and declares him to be the Lord our righteouſneſs: Peace is perfected, and proclaims him to be the Prince of peace: yea, not only are all the members of the meeting pleaſed and ſatisfied for themſelves, in the advancement of their own particular intereſts, but they are infinitely well-pleaſed in each other; and that the intereſts of their ſeemingly oppoſite parties are advanced, as well as their own particular claims. Mercy is pleaſed, that Truth hath hath got all its demands; and Truth is pleaſed, that Mercy hath got all her deſire; and Righteouſneſs is pleaſed, that Peace is proclaimed; and Peace is pleaſed, that Righteouſneſs is honoured. Mercy and Peace rejoice that they are magnified, to the infinite glory of Truth and Righteouſneſs; and Truth and Righteouſneſs rejoice, that they are glorified, to the infinite pleaſure of Mercy and Peace: and hence they not only meet together, but kiſs one another. Here you ſee where they meet together.——So much for an anſwer thereto more generally.

2*dly*, More particularly, as to the meeting-time, you may take theſe following particulars, for further clearing of it. Although this bleſſed meeting once taking place, is ſtill continued, and cannot be ſaid properly to adjourn from time to time, and from place to place; for this aſſembly never diſſolves; yet, in a ſuitableneſs to our weak capacity, and finite underſtanding, which cannot rightly conceive of a meeting that never had a time to meet, becauſe they met in eternity, and never ſhall have a time to part, becauſe they meet to eternity: we cannot conceive of it, I ſay, but by taking it, as it were, into ſo many parts, or conſidering it in ſo many periods; and there are theſe eight remarkable periods, wherein Mercy and Peace meet with Truth and Righteouſneſs, and kiſs each other.

1. The firſt remarkable period is this, They met together at the council-table of the covenant of redemption from all eternity; before ever the foundation of the world was laid, and ere ever the morning ſtars ſang together, Mercy and Truth met together, Righteouſneſs and Peace kiſſed each other; for the council of peace did then meet, Zech. vi. 13. And all was concerted by infinite Wiſdom, how Mercy ſhould be magnified, Truth cleared, Righteouſneſs vindicated, and Peace concluded; and all in Chriſt, who, according to the tenor of that covenant (whereof the covenant of grace is but a tranſcript) was to give his ſoul an offering for ſin; and then was to ſee his ſeed, and the pleaſure of the Lord to proſper in his hand. Then it was that this pleaſant meeting was firſt conſtitute, as you may ſee, Prov. viii. 30, 31. He being ſet up from everlaſting, ere ever the earth was, God in all his glorious perfections was delighted in him: and, in him, His delights were with the ſons of men. This was the grand meeting, at which the time and place of all the ſubſequent meetings were concerted, and all the other particulars, we are to mention, are but the reſult of this, and, as it were, emanations therefrom; for it is a meeting that never diſſolves, though in ſeveral periods it appears like a new meeting unto us. Therefore,

2. Another remarkable period, is their meeting together in the garden of Eden, after man had made himſelf naked and obnoxious to the flaming ſword of divine Juſtice. Mercy comes walking in the garden in the cool of the day, and the guilty pannel being examined in open court, behold Mercy and Truth meet together in the happy ſentence that was pronounced, The ſeed of the woman ſhall bruiſe the head of the ſerpent, Gen. iii. 15. Behold Righteouſneſs and Peace kiſſing one another in the righteous vengeance, that was to be execute upon the devil and his works, in order to effectuate a happy peace betwixt God and man. This meeting was gradually cleared up under the Old Teſtament; and in the legal ſacrifices, pointing out the great propitiatory Sacrifice.

3. Another remarkable period, is their meeting together at Bethlehem Ephratah, upon Chriſt's incarnation, Micah v. 2, 4, 5.

4. Another remarkable period, is their meeting together at the banks of Jordan, when Chriſt was baptized, Mat. iii. 13, 16, 17.

5. Another remarkable period, is their meeting together in the garden of Gethſemane, when Chriſt being in an agony did ſweat great drops of blood under the preſſure of avenging Juſtice; every drop of blood was an ocean of Mercy: and while he was preſt in the wine-preſs of God's wrath, Mercy was expreſſed. No mercy to Chriſt; for, God ſpared not his own Son, even when he cried, Mercy, mercy; God's mercy, ſaying, Father, if it be thy will, remove this cup from me. No, no; no mercy was ſhown to him, otherwiſe no mercy had been ſhown to us; Juſtice muſt have its due from him, that mercy might vent towards us; and ſo, here Mercy and Truth meet together.

6. Another remarkable period, is their meeting on mount Calvary, where Chriſt was crucified. It was upon the croſs of Chriſt that Mercy and Truth met together, that Righteouſneſs and Peace kiſſed each other; for there it was that he paid all the elect's debt, to the leaſt farthing that Truth and Righteouſneſs could demand; until he cried with a loud voice, and ſaid, It is finiſhed. Having done all that the law could injoin, he ſuffered all that the law could threaten, ſo as it cannot crave a farthing more: It is finiſhed: All that was ſtipulated for with the Father, in that federal tranſaction; all that was promiſed, in that eternal compact, is finiſhed; every article agreed to in the council of peace was finiſhed. The bargain that he had ſigned with his hand, he now ſealed with his blood; and in this appearance upon the croſs, or in his obedience to the death, did all the attributes of God meet, as in a centre. And on this account was mount Calvary more glorious than mount Sinai; for, in mount Sinai, God appeared in his terrible majeſty, making the mountain to tremble, and the earth to ſhake; but here in mount Calvary, he appeared not only in his terrible majeſty, but in his tender mercy, in his terrible fury againſt ſin; and in his tender favour towards the ſinner: and now, the controverſy betwixt Juſtice and Mercy ſeems at a criſis; here was the critical juncture, wherein their different demands behoved to be decided; and it was done with ſuch a ſolemnity as made the whole univerſe, as it were, to tremble and quake: for then did God ſhake, not the earth only, but alſo heaven; for when Chriſt was under the mighty load of this terrible wrath, in the ſinner's room, there was a great earthquake, and the heavens grew black, the ſun was eclipſed; and, that at a time, contrary to the common rules of nature, which made a heathen philoſopher, at a diſtance, cry out, "That either the frame of nature was on the "point of diſſolution, or the God of nature "was ſuffering." And indeed he was ſuffering unto blood, and unto death. Behold the living and eternal God here, in our nature wounded to death, and bleeding out his life, to be a ſacrifice for ſin, that juſtice might be ſatisfied, and mercy might be magnified, and all the attributes of God glorified to the higheſt. O wonder! that GOLGOTHA the place of a ſkull, ſhould be ſuch a famous meeting-place for the divine perfections. It was a place of the greateſt ſhame and ignominy; but, in him who endured the croſs, and deſpiſed the ſhame, it was made a place of moſt reſplendent glory; for, in the croſs of Chriſt, Mercy and Truth, Righteouſneſs and Peace met, and embraced each other. God's attributes did harmoniouſly join together, ſo as the one does not blacken, but illuſtrate the glory of the other, while they ſhined glorioufly in the face of Chriſt crucified, as a beautiful and bright conſtellation; for he was ſet forth to be a propitiation, to declare the Righteouſneſs and Juſtice of God, together with his other glorious names.

7. Another remarkable period, is their meeting together at the bar of God's great Juſtice-court in heaven, within the vail, whither the Forerunner hath for us entered, even Jeſus, Heb. vi. 20. When Chriſt was upon the croſs, The vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom; and a way was made for entering into the holy of holies: and as the prieſts under the law were not only to offer the ſacrifice without the camp, but after that were to enter the holieſt of all, not without blood, but with the blood of the ſacrifice, to ſprinkle the mercy-ſeat, Lev. xvi. 14, 15. Even ſo, Chriſt having offered himſelf a ſacrifice, and ſuffered without the gate, Heb. xiii. 12. He is entered into the holy place by his own blood, Heb. ix. 12. there to appear as our High-prieſt, in the power and virtue of his blood, to make a full atonement, and ſprinkle the mercy-ſeat. Hence believers are ſaid to be come to Jeſus the Mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of ſprinkling; and where is this? Even in heaven, as you ſee in the context, Heb. xii. 23, 24. Now, in this work, Chriſt carried the price of his blood into the very preſence of God for us, Heb. ix. 24. and paid it down before him: and in this act, Juſtice hath its ſatisfaction brought home; and by this act, Mercy and Juſtice actually are met; for hereby Chriſt ſpirinkled the very mercy-ſeat with blood, all over, both upon it, and before it, as the forecited, Lev. xvi. repreſents. For the mercy-ſeat of old ſtood ſo, that it could be ſeen but two ways, namely, upon it, and before it, as a table next to the wall; and ſo this points out, that whatever way we look to mercy by faith, we may ſee mercy and blood mixed; mercy and juſtice met together; and all ſorts of mercy conveyed through the blood of Chriſt; top mercies, and ſide mercies, upper mercies, of a ſpiritual nature, and lower mercies, of a temporal nature; for the mercy-ſeat is ſprinkled with blood upon it, and before it, and whatever way you look to it. The ſacrifice was finiſhed on the croſs; and all ſacrifices finiſhed therein: but the blood of the ſacrifice behoved alſo to be carried within the vail in order to the full atonement, that what was written in blood upon the croſs, might be ſealed in the preſence of God at the heavenly bar: and we act not our faith far enough for redemption, unleſs we follow Chriſt from the croſs to the bar of God's juſtice-court in heaven, to ſee all ſealed and ſecured there within the vail, where this blood is expoſed as it were, and pled at the bar; where Mercy and Juſtice meet together, and embrace each other.

8. Another remarkable period, is their meeting together at the bar of conſcience, God's lower court, on the day of actual reconciliation betwixt God and the ſinner; for then, The blood of Chriſt, who, through the eternal Spirit, did offer himſelf without ſpot to God, doth purge the conſcience, Heb. ix. 14. And the blood of ſprinkling, wherewith the conſcience is purged from dead works to ſerve the living God, doth put forth its purgative power and virtue by a certain internal ſpeech; and what doth it ſpeak to the conſcience? It ſpeaks better things than the blood of Abel; that ſpeaks vengeance, but this ſpeaks mercy and peace, in conjunction with truth, righteouſneſs, and juſtice: for where-ever juſtice-ſatiſfying blood cries for mercy and peace, there Mercy and Truth, Righteouſneſs and Peace meet, and embrace each other. This blood is the cement whereby they are joined together; before this blood be applied, the conſcience of the convinced ſinner is all in a flame, like mount Sinai; thunder, and lightening, and ſmoak, and darkneſs, and fear of hell and vengeance, compaſſing the ſoul about, while it is arraigned at the inſtance of the fiery law, to pay the double debt to the mandatory and minatory part of the law; that is, perfect obedience upon the pain of eternal death and damnation. The ſinner finds himſelf loſt and undone for ever by this law; but then, whenever the blood of ſprinkling comes in, and appears at the bar of conſcience, it ſpeaks better things: it is a better ſpeaker than the law; and what ſays it? Why, the language of it is, With your leave, O law, you have nothing to crave; for Chriſt the Son of God was arraigned at the inſtance of divine Juſtice, to pay all this debt, becauſe he was this ſinner's Surety and Subſtitute; and he actually paid it, by obeying the command, and undergoing the penalty of the law; and for this I produce the antient records of God; In the volume of his book, it is written of Chriſt, that when ſacrifice and offering would not, he ſaid, Lo, I come, I delight to do thy will: and that the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all: That he was made a curſe for us; yea, that he was made ſin for us, even he who knew no ſin, that we might become the righteouſneſs of God in him. And therefore, O law, though thou haſt Truth and Righteouſneſs on thy ſide, yet Truth and Righteouſneſs have met with Mercy and Peace, and they have concerted matters, and agreed harmoniouſly, and kiſſed one another, in token of their full agreement in Chriſt; ſo that in Chriſt all charges are anſwered. And thus in the believer's conſcience parties meet together.

III. The third thing propoſed was, how and after what manner is it, that they meet together, and kiſs each other? We are to conceive of it after the manner of God; for it is more than a meeting of ſaints; it is more than a meeting of angels; it is a divine meeting of all the glorious attributes of God; and we may notice theſe following qualities of it.

1. It is a wonderful and myſterious meeting: it is above our comprehenſion and conception. O! how wonderful a meeting is this! The very name of the Perſon, that is made the triſting-place, the meeting-place, is called WONDERFUL, Iſa. ix. 6. Becauſe the meeting is about us, his name is called, IMMANUEL, God with us. O how myſterious is this meeting! Great is the myſtery of godlineſs, God manifeſted in the fleſh, 1 Tim. iii. 16. That is all the attributes of God meeting together, and harmoniously embracing one another in the eternal Son of God, who hath assumed our nature into his own personality: this is the most wonderful mysterious meeting that ever was in heaven or earth.

butes

2. It is a joyful meeting: they meet with infinite pleasure and satisfaction in one another; Behold my Servant, whom I uphold; mine Elect, in whom my soul delighteth, Isa. xlii. 1. As the perfections of God are glorified in Christ, so they rejoice and are delighted in him; For JEHOVAH is well-pleased for his righteousness sake; and therefore the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand; and he shall see the travel of his soul and be satisfied. Surely, if God hath his pleasure, and Christ his satisfaction, no attribute of the divine Majesty, no member of the meeting is displeased, or out of humour; no, no; This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleased. My Justice is pleased, my Mercy is pleased, and all my other attributes are pleased. O it is a heartsome, pleasant, and joyful meeting! May all that hear me be well-pleased to see it: no joyful meeting, but what hath a respect to this.

3. It is a holy meeting: some meetings among men that are called heartsome meetings, yet are very unholy and sinful meetings; but here is an infinitely holy meeting; holiness to the Lord, is the motto of it. A meeting of holy saints, and holy angels, is not such a holy meeting as this meeting of the holy attributes of God, to advance the great design of infinite holiness. All the holy meetings that ever were, or ever will be, are the result of this, and the effect of some portion of holiness sent from it; for all holiness issues from it. Here Mercy and Truth meet together, in a holy manner; Righteousness and Peace salute each other, in a holy way, and greet one another with a holy kiss.

4. It is a happy meeting; all happiness and blessings flow from this meeting: Christ the meeting-place is the centre of all spiritual blessings, Eph. i. 3. Many unhappy meetings have been in the world since sin entered into it; and sinful unholy meetings are always miserable and unhappy meetings: but this holy meeting, must be a happy meeting; and this holy kiss, must be a happy kiss. If Mercy and Truth had not met together, we had never met with God; if Righteousness and Peace had never kissed each other, we had never got a kiss of the fair face of the Son of God, nor ever been taken into the divine embraces.

5. It is a free meeting; Mercy and Truth met together freely, without being constrained; Righteousness and Peace kissed each other freely, without being forced: no motive from without could ever take place to move God to call this meeting from eternity; it was according to his own purpose and grace, which is given us in Christ Jesus, before the world began, 2 Tim. i. 9. Free sovereign grace is the original of the meeting. It is also such a free assembly, where every member might freely speak, and not one to interrupt another, as is usual in meetings among men, where some cry one thing, and some another, in a confused manner; like that assembly, Acts xix. 32. where it is said, The assembly was confused, and the greater part knew not wherefore they were met together; and some cried one thing, and some another: no, this meeting is free, in opposition both to all constraint and compulsion from without, and to all confusion and commotion from within: where sovereign free Grace is the master-conveener, there can be no compulsion; and where the God of order is the manager, there could be no confusion; and where the God of peace was all in all, there could be no dissention. Therefore,

6. It is a harmonious meeting: whatever different claims and pretensions the members of the meeting may seem to have, yet they harmoniously concur in advancing one another's honour and glory; and hence, as they mutually meet together, so they affectionately embrace one another. There was no discord at this assembly, no proper variance or striving for state; but gloriously conspiring with joint hearts and hands, to glorify each other in the salvation of a company of sinners, by Jesus Christ. The divine essence is undivided; and as there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Spirit; and these three are one; so the attributes of God, however manifold to our apprehension, yet there is no division among them, they are all one; and their conspiring together in Christ for our redemption, is called Πολυποίκιλ☞ Σοφία τ☞ Θε☞, THE MANIFOLD WISDOM OF GOD. The manifold perfections of God meet together in one, with one consent and with one heart. Behold Mercy and Justice in one another's arms; and so closs is the embracement, that they are just one. Though it be a full meeting, and all parties present, yet there is no war, no jar, no dissention, no division, but all harmony and concord, all love and affection: it is the most peaceable meeting that ever was. And yet,

7. It is a bloody meeting; and never was, and never will there be such a bloody meeting in heaven or earth: the mercy-seat must be sprinkled with blood; Mercy cannot be vented without blood; Truth cannot be cleared, without blood; Righteousness cannot be vindicated, without blood; and Peace cannot be purchased, without blood; without shedding of blood there is no remission; no mercy to be vented, no peace to be proclaimed; Christ hath made peace by the blood of his cross, Col. i. 20. A bloody husband hast thou been unto me, said Zipporah; but, O how much more may Christ say, a bloody meeting hath this been unto me! Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozra? Isa. lxiii. 1. Why, what is the matter that his garment is dyed with blood? Why? when Mercy and Truth met together, they pressed to be so near one another in him, that they pressed the blood out of his veins; and so it was a bloody meeting: and when Righteousness and Peace kissed each other, it behoved to be in Christ, and so the sword of justice behoved to pierce him through and through; that so these sacred lips might meet and kiss each other in his heart; and so it was a bloody kiss: they kissed each other with such good-will, that Christ was, as it were, bruised betwixt their lips, that the blood might cement and glue them together. One would think, such a bloody kiss would be no pleasant kiss; nay, but it pleased the Father to bruise him: they met together on a sea of blood.——Thus it was a bloody meeting. Again,

8. It

8. It is an efficacious meeting: many meet and aſſemble together, and yet do nothing for their meeting; it is to no effect: but here Mercy and Truth meet together efficaciouſly, co-operatively; all is done at the meeting, that God propoſed to be done, and all is done that concerns the glory of God and ſalvation of men; their meeting together, is their working together, and that to perfection; For God the Lord is a rock, and his work is perfect. Their meeting together, is their building together; Pſal. lxxxix. 2, 3. I have ſaid, Mercy ſhall be built up for ever: thy faithfulneſs ſhalt thou eſtabliſh in the very heavens. There is Mercy and Truth both a building, and the foundation of the building is laid in Chriſt: I have made a covenant with my choſen; I have ſworn unto David my ſervant.

9. It is an unexpected meeting; it is beyond the expectation of men and angels. If friends and intimates ſhould meet, and ſalute one another, it would not be ſurprizing; but to ſee oppoſites, antipodes, and antagoniſts meet together, and embrace each other, this were ſurprizing and unexpected: ſo to ſee light and darkneſs, love and enmity, life and death meeting, how unexpected were that? Thus it is here, Mercy and Truth, Righteouſneſs and Peace, theſe attributes of God, with reſpect to us, were oppoſites and antipodes. The language of Truth and Righteouſneſs, is death and damnation to the ſinner; the language of Mercy and Peace, is life and ſalvation to the ſinner; and when a ſinner finds himſelf purſued to death, at the inſtance of divine Juſtice, and the truth and veracity of God engaged againſt him, according to the threatening of the law, O how unexpected a rencounter is it! when he finds Mercy and Peace meeting with Juſtice and Truth, and ſtopping the purſuit, according to the promiſe of the goſpel, to the credit of the oppoſite parties, ſaying, Deliver his ſoul from going down to the pit; I have found a ranſom, and ſo all differences are adjuſted; all oppoſites reconciled, to the infinite ſurprize, and beyond the expectation of all created beings. No wonder then, upon this meeting diſcovered, the poor ſoul cries, Is this the manner of man, O Lord? O, who is like unto thee! Nay, there is none like unto the God of Jeſurun, that rides on the heaven for their help, and in his excellency on the ſkies.

10. It is an everlaſting, indiſſolvable meeting: other meetings will adjourn their meetings from time to time, and from place to place; yea, other meetings muſt part, and when they part, they may never meet again; and we that are here met, muſt part, and never all meet again in time; even as ſome others that met together with us the laſt year, are away to eternity. But O! this meeting betwixt Mercy and Truth, Righteouſneſs and Peace, it is a meeting where there is no parting; the meeting is from everlaſting to everlaſting; their meeting together, and kiſſing each other, is an eternal and unchangeable meeting, and an eternal and unchangeable kiſs: it is every way like God, without beginning, without ending, and without ſucceſſion. Whatever beginning, iſſue, or increaſe it hath with reſpect to its manifeſtation to us, yet in itſelf, it is ſtill the ſame in Chriſt Jeſus, who is the ſame yeſterday, to-day, and for ever; without any variableneſs or ſhadow of turning, Heb. xiii. 8. The meeting never breaks up; it is a continued meeting, never to be diſſolved; and there they kiſs one another to all eternity; for his mercy endureth for ever, and his righteouſneſs to all generations: and becauſe of truth, meekneſs, and righteouſneſs, in his majeſty he ſhall ride proſperouſly: and of the increaſe of his government and peace there ſhall be no end. I have ſaid, Mercy ſhall be built up for ever; and I have ſaid, Truth ſhall be eſtabliſhed in the heavens. Why, what is the meaning of all theſe expreſſions? The language is, as if one glorious attribute of God, ſhould ſay to another, O! the ſin of man ſet us all, as it were, at variance, and the whole creation knows not how to reconcile God with himſelf, if he ſhall ſave one ſinner; but behold we, having met together in Chriſt the Righteouſneſs, the Ranſom, the Atonement, the Propitiation; having embraced one another in behalf of thoſe poor miſerable ſinners, our arms ſhall never ſeparate, that are claſped together. Mercy and Truth have met together, ſaying, You and I ſhall never part; Righteouſneſs and Peace have kiſſed each other, ſaying, You and I ſhall never ſunder, nor ſuſpend the embracement; neither death nor life, nor hell, nor devils, nor ſin itſelf, ſhall ever ſeparate us. It is a bargain among us, a divine match; they have met together by an everlaſting covenant, ſealed the bargain with an everlaſting kiſs, and faſtened a knot in an everlaſting Righteouſneſs, which is the band of the union, even Chriſt; for the covenant does ſtand faſt with him, Pſal. lxxxix. 28. Where you will alſo ſee how this everlaſting meeting is eſtabliſhed in Chriſt, ver. 14. Juſtice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne; or, the ESTABLISHMENT of thy throne, as it may be rendered; And mercy and truth ſhall go before thy face. And ver. 21. With him my hand ſhall be eſtabliſhed; and my faithfulneſs, and my mercy ſhall be with him. And ver. 28. My mercy will I keep for him for ever.——Thus it is an everlaſting meeting.

IV. The fourth thing propoſed, was, Why, or for what reaſons they have met together, and kiſſed each other? Why have the perfections of the glorious God conſpired ſo harmoniouſly, and met together in ſuch a ſweet ſolemnity? Surely ſuch a meeting as this muſt have noble deſigns in view; and I will tell you theſe four reaſons of the meeting, or four things that were to be concerted at this great aſſembly.

1. They met together, to concert meaſures for advancing the glory of God to the higheſt. This parliament of heaven met together upon ways and means, for bringing in the greateſt revenue of praiſe and glory to the crown of heaven, to Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt; and all the glorious attributes of this great and eternal God. Theſe glorious attributes conſpired harmoniouſly to ſet forth and glorify themſelves moſt illuſtriouſly: they met together, and kiſſed one another, that they might glorify each other. The glory of God was the firſt and laſt end of the meeting. What is the chief end of man, but to glorify God, and enjoy him for ever? and, O! what is the chief end of God! It is even to glorify himſelf in all his perfections, and to enjoy himſelf for ever. And how does God glorify himſelf moſt brightly? It is even in Chriſt, the meeting-place of theſe perfections, with a view to our redemption, redemption, to the praiſe of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the Beloved, Eph. i. 6. And how does he enjoy himſelf moſt ſweetly? It is even in Chriſt, Behold mine Elect, in whom my ſoul delighteth; I was daily his delight, ſays Chriſt while my delight was with the ſons of men, Prov. viii. 30. They met together to put a crown of glory and honour upon each other. Adam's ſin and rebellion, and your ſin, man, woman, and my ſin (O that God diſhonouring evil ſin!) it had pulled off that crown of glory, as it were, from the head of the great King, eternal and immortal, and thrown it into the mire, and ſtained it with filth and pollution: but behold theſe attributes of God meet together to take up the crown, to rub off the duſt and dung that ſin had caſt upon it, and to add ſome more ſparkling jewels to it than ever, and ſet it upon the head of their Sovereign, to the higheſt praiſes of his Mercy, Juſtice, Truth, Righteouſneſs, Grace, Love, Holineſs, Wiſdom, and all his other excellencies; that men and angels might ſing and ſay, Glory to God in the higheſt, peace on earth, and good will towards men; that all the ſaints might ſing a conſort in praiſe of the meeting betwixt Mercy and Truth, Juſtice and Peace, ſaying, as it is Pſal. lxxxix. 14.

Juſtice and judgment of thy throne,
Shall be the dwelling-place:
Mercy, accompany'd with Truth,
Shall go before thy face.

And that every ſaint might ſing the fifty-ſeventh pſalm, and ninth and tenth verſes.

I'll praiſe thee 'mong the people, LORD,
'Mong nations ſing will I;
For great to heav'n thy mercy is,
Thy truth doth reach the ſky.

They met together, to put a crown of glory upon the head of Chriſt, Heb. ii. 9. in whom they met. This aſſembly did conveen for the coronation of the Son of God: for, he having humbled himſelf, and become obedient unto death, even the death of the croſs; God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name above every name, that at the name of JESUS every knee ſhould bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue ſhould confeſs that Jeſus Chriſt is LORD, to the glory of God the Father, Philip. ii. 8,—13. Chriſt hath glorified the Father, and therefore the Father glorified him, And now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in him; and if God be glorified in him, God ſhall alſo glorify him in himſelf, John xiii. 31, 32. Him that honoureth me, I will honour, ſays God, 1 Sam. ii. 30. And in whom does this take place to perfection? It is in Chriſt; God is honoured moſt highly by him; and therefore he is honoured moſt highly: AMEN, ſo let it be, and ſo ſhall it be.—And therefore it is concerted in that meeting, that all the ſaints ſhall glorify him; hence that royal edict comes forth, He is thy LORD, worſhip thou him, Pſal. xlv. 11. And ſo we find them doing, Rev. v. 9. Thou art worthy to take the book, and open the ſeals; for thou waſt ſlain, and haſt redeemed us to God by thy blood.—It is concerted in that meeting, that all the angels ſhould glorify him; hence that edict comes forth, Let all the angels of God worſhip him, Heb. i. 6. And ſo we find them doing, Rev. v. 11, 12. I heard the voice of many angels, and the number of them was ten thouſand times ten thouſand, and thouſands of thouſands, ſaying, with a loud voice, Worthy is the LAMB that was ſlain, to receive power, and riches, and wiſdom, and ſtrength, and honour, and glory, and bleſſings.—It is concerted in this meeting, that all the creatures in heaven and earth, ſea and land, ſhall glorify him, as we ſee ver. 13.—But leſt the ſinful creatures upon earth, like you and me, ſhould not glorify him, or ſee his glory, it is concerted in that glorious meeting, that the Holy Ghoſt, the eternal Spirit, one God, equal in power and glory with the Father and the Son, ſhall be ſent down to the earth to glorify him, He ſhall glorify me, for he ſhall receive of mine, and ſhew it unto you, John xvi. 14.——O! hath the Spirit of God been ſhewing any thing of Chriſt among you this day! any thing of his grace, fulneſs, and righteouſneſs, ſo as to glorify him, and make him glorious above all things to you: why then, we may reckon that you have found ſomething of the ſaving fruits of this glorious meeting; for the grand deſign of it was to glorify God in Chriſt, by the Spirit. They met to concert all things relating to the glory of the Father, in the Son, by the Holy Ghoſt. They met to conſult their own glory in Chriſt, that Mercy and Truth might be glorified in him.

2. They met together to concert their proper work, in carrying on this great end, of the glory of God, and his perfections. They do not meet together to ſit idle, and do nothing; no, they meet together to concert each of them their proper buſineſs, as Chriſt ſaid to his friends, Wherefore was it that ye ſought me? Wiſt ye not that I muſt be about my Father's buſineſs? So may I ſay here, the attributes of God met together, that they may go about God's buſineſs: what buſineſs? what work belongs to each of them ſeverally? Why, Mercy and Truth meet together, that they may be ſent upon an embaſſy together; God ſhall ſend forth his mercy and his truth, Pſal. lvii. 3.; his Mercy, to give in the promiſe of the goſpel; and his Truth, to make out the ſame. Thus Mercy and Truth met together, that they may be ſent forth upon ſome gracious expedition, particularly both to be leaders and followers; to the remnant whom God appointed unto life. On the one hand, to be leaders; hence the pſalmiſt cries, O ſend forth thy light and thy truth; let them lead me, and bring me to thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacle: then will I go to the altar of God, to God my exceeding joy. Behold the wonderful buſineſs of Mercy and Truth, and the work they are ſet out upon, even mercifully to lead blind ſouls to God in Chriſt.—On the other hand, it is to be not only leaders, but followers; Surely goodneſs and mercy ſhall follow me all the days of my life, Pſal. xxiii. 6. If the child of God, under any temptation, refuſe to be led by Mercy and Truth, and give up with them as his leaders, yet for all that, he ſhall not hinder them to be his followers: he may run out of God's way, but Mercy will follow and bring him back; and when Mercy follows, it is always in company with Truth. And, O! what think you of this wonder! Mercy and Truth meet together, that they might go forth together, like two pages, to follow you, believer, through all the ſteps of your wilderneſs journey; Goodneſs and mercy ſhall follow me all the days of my life. Here is a piece of work, that Mercy and Truth have met together for, even to be ſent forth, as as leaders and followers of poor elect ſinners, till they be out of all hazard, in IMMANUEL'S land, where glory dwells: ſee Pſal. lxi. 7. But then, as Mercy and Truth have met together, to purſue their proper work; ſo, Righteouſneſs and Peace have kiſſed each other, for purſuing of theirs. Well, ſay you, what is the work of Righteouſneſs and Peace? You have a word in the laſt verſe of this pſalm, where our text lies, Righteouſneſs ſhall go before him, and ſet us in the way of his ſteps. Divine Righteouſneſs diſplaying itſelf in Chriſt Jeſus, the Sun of righteouſneſs, goes before him to prepare his way, and bring us to God, and to our duty: and, to be ſure, when ever Righteouſneſs goes before, Peace will follow after; for the fruit of righteouſneſs is peace, whether it be imputed or implanted. Here then the work of Righteouſneſs and Peace kiſſing each other, is to bring in theſe bleſſed effects in their order: we conſider them as divine perfections in the text, and in theſe effects, Righteouſneſs leads the van, and Peace comes up with the rear.

3. Theſe attributes conſpire harmoniouſly, they meet together and kiſs each other, for this reaſon, that by their meeting together, they may concert the diſſolving of ſome unhappy meetings. Theſe oppoſite-like attributes of God meet together, that ſome intimates may be ſeparate, and ſad and ſinful agreements may be broken up: there is a ſad meeting, and agreement we read of, Iſa. xxviii. 15. We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement. Why, is not this the caſe of all men by nature? Yea: but how is this ſad and miſerable meeting diſſolved? See verſe 16. Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation, a ſtone, a tried ſtone, a precious corner-ſtone, a ſure foundation.—Judgment alſo will I lay to the line, and righteouſneſs to the plummet. Well, when Judgment and Righteouſneſs mercifully meet in Chriſt, the ſure Foundation, what will be the effect? It follows, ver. 17, 18. The hail ſhall ſweep away the refuges of lies, and your covenant with death ſhall be diſanulled, and your agreement with hell ſhall not ſtand. Whatever ſad aſpect this ſcripture may have to the deſpiſers of Chriſt, yet it hath a merciful aſpect to all the choſen of God, and all that deſire to live to the Lord Jeſus; yea, there is here a foundation of faith laid, for all that hear the joyful ſound, that whatever ſinful and miſerable meetings and agreements there are betwixt hell and them, betwixt death and them, yet it cannot ſtand before this glorious meeting, that was deſigned to break up and diſſolve the oppoſite meetings, that ſtand in a contrariety thereto. There are many black unions, which this bleſſed union doth diſſolve; and there is no diſſolving of them, but by this bleſſed meeting. There is the black union betwixt the ſinner and the law, which is the foundation of the black union, betwixt the ſinner and his ſin: for, when the union betwixt him and the law is diſſolved, then the union betwixt him and his ſin is diſſolved, according to Rom. vi. 14. Sin ſhall not have dominion unto you, for ye are not under the law, but under grace. Now, what is the covenant of grace? Why, Mercy and Truth meeting together, Righteouſneſs and Peace, kiſſing each other in Chriſt Jeſus, is the ſubſtance, the marrow, the kernel of the covenant of grace; and it is this bleſſed meeting, that diſſolves the union betwixt the ſinner and the law, and ſo betwixt the ſinner and his ſin. O view the glorious deſign of this meeting! They met together that you might be ſeparated from your ſad aſſociates.—By nature you and the devil had met together, and you was a ſlave to him; and it is the virtue of this meeting in Chriſt, that diſſolves that; The ſeed of the woman ſhall bruiſe the head of the ſerpent.—The world and you had met together, and you took pleaſure in your wicked companions, or elſe was wholly drowned in worldly affairs; O! it is the faith of this meeting that diſſolves that: This is the victory that overcomes the world, even our faith.—The curſe of God and you had met together, and you lie under that curſe, till in the faith of this meeting, you ſhall ſee, that Chriſt hath become a curſe for us.——This meeting is deſigned for the breaking up of all theſe, and the like unhappy meetings. They met together in a glorious band, to looſe all the knots that the devil had tied.

4. Theſe glorious attributes of God do conſpire harmoniouſly, they meet together and kiſs each other, that they might concert and carry on ſome happy meetings, and make up ſome bleſſed matches. Theſe oppoſite-like attributes harmoniouſly meet, that oppoſites, and irreconcileable things might meet together harmoniouſly, and kiſs each other, whether real or ſeeming oppoſites.

1*ſt*, There are real oppoſites that meet together harmoniouſly, by virtue of this glorious meeting; particularly theſe ſix.

(1.) Theſe oppoſite-like attributes meet together harmoniouſly, that oppoſite natures might meet together, even that God and man might meet together, and embrace each other. And there are theſe two meetings betwixt God and man, that were concerted at this meeting; the one is the meeting betwixt God and man, in the hypoſtatical union of the two natures of Chriſt, our IMMANUEL, God-man, in one perſon: this is the great myſtery of godlineſs, God manifeſted in the fleſh; and this is the foundation of all other ſaving and merciful meetings betwixt God and man.—The other is the meeting between God and man in the ſpiritual union betwixt Chriſt and his members, in one myſtical perſon, by the bond of the Spirit; for he that is joined to the Lord is one ſpirit: and this union is the foundation of all ſpiritual communion with God. We were not only at an infinite natural diſtance from God, as we are creatures, but at an infinite moral diſtance from him, as we are criminals and ſinners: but the attributes of God met together and kiſſed each other in Chriſt, that God and man might meet together, in a cloſe ſpiritual union, and embrace each other in a ſweet ſpiritual communion. Whatever ſpiritual communion you have with God, believer, this day, it flows from this glorious meeting of the divine attributes in Chriſt: and this union and communion is indeed a meeting of oppoſite natures; God became man, and took on our nature, and he makes us partakers of his nature, 2 Pet. i. 4.

(2.) Theſe oppoſite-like attributes met together and kiſſed each other, that oppoſite wills might meet, and embrace each other. God's will and ours are oppoſite; this is indeed a branch of the former; but our wills are the great forts of corrupt nature, that ſtand out againſt God and his will; we are enmity againſt gainſt God, and not ſubject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. Now, how comes the will to be reconciled to God's will? It is only by Chriſt, in whom the perfections of God meet together: Thy people ſhall be willing [Heb. WILLINGNEESSES] in the day of thy power, Pſal. cx. 4.

(3.) Theſe oppoſite-like attributes meet and kiſs each other, that oppoſite perſons, viz. Jews and Gentiles, man and man, that were enemies and haters of one another, might meet together; that Jews and Gentiles might meet together, and men at variance with men might meet together: hence it is ſaid of him, in whom the attributes of God do meet, He is our peace, who hath made both one, [i. e. Jews and Gentiles] and hath broken down the middle wall of partition: having aboliſhed in his fleſh the enmity, even the law of commandments, contained in ordinances, for to make in himſelf, of twain, one new man, ſo making peace: and that he might reconcile both unto God in one body, by the croſs, having ſlain the enmity thereby, Eph. ii. 14,—16. If any thing ſlay the enmity to God or man, this is it.

(4.) Theſe oppoſite-like attributes of God meet and kiſs each other, that oppoſite climates might meet together; I mean, that heaven and earth might meet together; the church militant, and the church triumphant. Heaven and earth were at variance by our ſin; but now in Chriſt, ſaints in heaven, and ſaints on earth meet together. Hence we are ſaid to be come to the general aſſembly, and church of the firſt-born, that are written in heaven,—to the ſpirits of juſt men made perfect, Heb. xii. 23. All believers are ſaid to be thus come to mount Zion,—the heavenly Jeruſalem, ver. 22. Yea, in Chriſt, angels in heaven, and men on earth do meet together: hence alſo believers are ſaid to be come to the innumerable company of angels: and the angel of the Lord encamps about them that fear him, Pſal. xxxiv. 7. Yea, all things in heaven and earth do meet together, and kiſs each other in Chriſt, the meeting-place; Having made peace, by the blood of his croſs, by him to reconcile all things to himſelf; whether things in heaven, or things in earth, Col. i. 20. Eph. i. 10. See how, upon the back of this meeting in the text, heaven and earth are ſaid to meet together in the following verſe, Truth ſhall ſpring out of the earth; and Righteouſneſs ſhall look down from heaven; which I inſiſt not upon here.

(5.) Theſe oppoſite-like attributes of God meet and kiſs each other, that oppoſite covenants might meet and embrace each other; even the covenant of works, and the covenant of grace, in Chriſt the meeting-place of the divine perfections. Theſe two covenants do, as it were, join hands and agree. Did the covenant of works command perfect obedience? and being broken, did it demand complete ſatisfaction? Behold Chriſt's obedience to the death anſwers both; God's covenant of grace diſpenſed to us, is juſt Chriſt fulfilling, for us, the covenant of works; and ſo in him they meet, and kiſs each other; For he is the end of the law for righteouſneſs, to every one that believeth. Again,

(6.) Theſe oppoſite-like attributes of God meet and kiſs each other, that oppoſite thoughts might meet together, and embrace each other; even God's thoughts and our thoughts; how oppoſite theſe are you may ſee, Iſa. lv. 8. For my thoughts are not your thoughts; nor your ways my ways; for as the heavens are higher than the earth, ſo are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. Some have preſumptuous thoughts, while they look only to God's mercy, and ſo they think certainly God will have mercy on them, though yet they are ſtrangers to Chriſt: theſe are oppoſite to God's thoughts; he hath no thoughts of ſhewing mercy that way. Others have deſpairing thoughts, while they look merely or moſtly to God's juſtice, and ſo their thought is, "O! will God have "mercy on the like of me! and, he cannot in "juſtice ſave the like of me!" Theſe thoughts are alſo oppoſite to God's thoughts; my thoughts are not your thoughts met together: why, let a man view the mercy and juſtice of God met together, and harmoniouſly kiſſing each other in Chriſt, ſo as to ſee God in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf. If your thoughts be ſpiritualized, to diſcern mercy venting through the ſacrifice, that ſatisfies divine juſtice, then God's thoughts and your thoughts meet together and kiſs each other.——Thus the divine attributes meet together harmoniouſly, that real oppoſites may meet together harmoniouſly. This glorious meeting lays a foundation for theſe happy meetings.

2dly, There are ſeeming oppoſites, that meet together harmoniouſly, by virtue of this glorious meeting; as,

(1.) Theſe oppoſite-like perfections of God meet together, and kiſs each other harmoniouſly, that oppoſite-like providences might meet together, and kiſs each other. There are frowning providences, and ſmiling providences; croſſes and comforts in the believer's lot: here is a providence that favours the promiſe, and there is a providence that ſeems to contradict the promiſe: at one time the believer is exalted, and his mountain ſtandeth ſtrong; at another time he is troubled, depreſſed, and caſt down. Well, how ſhall theſe unite and cement together? Why, they meet and embrace each other in Chriſt, the meeting-place; for all things work together for good to them that love him, and are the called according to his purpoſe. Hence we will find, not only light and darkneſs in the believer's lot, but ſometimes light and darkneſs meeting together, Zech. xiv. 7. there you read of a day, that is neither day nor night; yet a day known to the Lord; neither clear nor dark, but at evening time it ſhall be light. There evening darkneſs uſhering in the morning light. Hence they have occaſion to ſing of mercy and of judgment; becauſe of their meeting together, and kiſſing each other, and working together for good. Behold the croſs and the crown meeting together.

(2.) Theſe oppoſite-like perfections of God meet together, and kiſs each other, that oppoſite-like deſires may meet, and embrace each other, while Mercy deſires our life, and Juſtice ſeems to demand our death; theſe are reconciled only in Chriſt, in whom Mercy and Truth, Righteouſneſs and Peace, meet and embrace each other. But look to our deſire of God's glory, and our own ſalvation, men and angels could never have contrived how theſe two deſires could be reconciled, if Mercy and Truth had not met together, and kiſſed each other; for the glory of God's truth and righteouſneſs, in the threatning of his law, ſeems to reſt ſatisfied with nothing leſs than our deſtruction; and therefore to deſire God's glory, would have been to deſire our own damnation; and conſequently in deſiring our own ſalvation, we muſt have deſired God's diſhonour: but now this bleſſed contrivance of infinite Wiſdom, lets us ſee how theſe two are not only reconciled, but made inſeparable; Having ſet forth Chriſt to be the propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs in the remiſſion of ſins.

contrivance

(3.) Theſe ſeemingly oppoſite attributes, meet and kiſs each other, that ſeemingly oppoſite graces might meet and embrace each other: for example, reverence and confidence; how ſhall fear and reverence meet together with faith and confidence? Why, Truth and Righteouſneſs are at the meeting; and therefore fear and reverence becomes us; but Mercy and Peace are alſo on the bench, therefore faith and holy confidence may boldly ſtep in: We have boldneſs to enter into the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus.

(4.) Theſe oppoſite-like attributes meet and embrace each other, that oppoſite-like duties may meet together: prayer and praiſe ſeem oppoſite duties in ſome caſes; prayer ſuppoſes our wants to be great, otherwiſe, why ſhould we pray? Praiſe ſuppoſes our enjoyments to be great, otherwiſe, why ſhould we praiſe? Well, Truth and Righteouſneſs, theſe awful attributes, preſent at the meeting, ſay, We have nothing in ourſelves, therefore we ought to pray; but Mercy and Peace ſay, we have all, we have enough in Chriſt, and therefore we ought to praiſe. Humiliation and gloriation ſeem oppoſite duties; but the ſeemingly oppoſite attributes of God meeting together, bring alſo theſe duties to meet and embrace each other. Is Truth and Righteouſneſs in the company with Mercy and Peace? then humiliation is our duty: but is Mercy and Peace in company with Truth and Righteouſneſs? Then gloriation is our duty. Let him that glories, glory in the Lord.

(5.) Theſe ſeemingly oppoſite attributes of God meet and embrace each other, that ſeemingly oppoſite experiences may meet and embrace each other, and be reconciled, though ſeemingly irreconcileable. There are ſad experiences, and ſweet experiences: O! here is the ſad experience of a guilty conſcience, a powerful corruption, and a conquering temptation: can ever that be reconciled with the experience of holy peace, pardon, and victory? Yea, here is a foundation laid for the reconciliation of theſe oppoſites.—If Juſtice and Mercy have met together, then a guilty conſcience, and a mercy-ſeat may meet together; a prevalent corruption and pardoning, purifying blood may meet together; as they did in the pſalmiſt's caſe; Iniquities prevail againſt me: but as for our tranſgreſſions thou ſhalt purge them away, Pſal. lxv. 3.—The ſad experience of fatherly anger, or of the feeling of divine wrath, may meet with the ſweet experience of felt love and favour; for Mercy and Juſtice are met together, Iſa. liv. 7, 8.—The ſad experience of perplexing thoughts may meet with the ſweet experience of ſpiritual conſolation, and be ſwallowed up therein; ſince Truth and Juſtice have met with Mercy and Peace: Hence it was that theſe two met together in David; In the multitude of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my ſoul, Pſal. xcix. 19. O! is ſuch a ſad experience conſiſtent with an intereſt in Chriſt? Why, both terrible and amiable attributes of God meet together in Chriſt; and therefore it is not ſtrange, that the ſaddeſt and ſweeteſt experiences meet together, ſo as not to be inconſiſtent with the ſtate of a believer that is in Chriſt. To ſee awful Juſtice, and lovely Mercy meeting together, in a ſweet-ſmelling ſacrifice, is a greater wonder, than to ſee your ſaddeſt and ſweeteſt experiences meeting in Chriſt, to make up a HALLELUJAH, Praiſe ye the Lord: and the former meeting is the reaſon of this.

(6.) Theſe irreconcileable-like attributes of God meet and embrace each other, that irreconcileable-like ſcriptures might meet together and embrace each other: How ſhall Exod. xxxiv. 7. He will by no means clear the guilty, (or, juſtify the ſinner,) be reconciled with Rom. iv. 5. where he is ſaid to juſtify the ungodly? O! how can theſe two oppoſites meet together? Why, Mercy and Truth have met together in Chriſt, to make up a match betwixt them: a ranſom is found, a propitiation is ſet forth; why then, theſe oppoſite-like ſcriptures may meet together, and kiſs each other: He will by no means clear the guilty, without a ranſom, a propitiation. Well, is the ranſom found, and propitiation ſet forth? then he will juſtify the ungodly on that ground: Deliver his ſoul from going down to the pit, I have found out a ranſom. Now, he can juſtify the ſinner, and be juſt in ſo doing, while he draws him in to Chriſt by faith, Rom. iii. 25, 26.—Thus you ſee the reaſons of the meeting. In a word, they meet together upon a deſign to bring the greateſt good out of the greateſt evil; and the higheſt glory out of the deepeſt miſery, to the praiſe of all God's glorious perfections.

V. The fifth thing propoſed, was the application, in a few inferences. Is it ſo, that in the ſalvation of ſinners by Jeſus Chriſt, the glorious attributes and perfections of God do thus harmoniouſly conſpire, and embrace each other? Then hence we may ſee,

1. What a dreadful evil SIN is, which ſets all the attributes of God, as it were, in oppoſition to one another, and puts all the world into confuſion, and every thing out of order; it ſets heaven and earth, and all things in them at variance, one againſt another: to think light of ſin, is to think light of this glorious meeting of divine attributes, that met together to break this rebellion, and take order with this horrid inſurrection againſt heaven. O! what a great matter is the ſalvation of a ſinner! ere that can take place, this grand meeting muſt be called; all the injured attributes of God muſt have an honourable reparation. Juſtice muſt be ſatisfied; Truth vindicated; Righteouſneſs cleared; and in order to all this, a Surety muſt be provided, even a God in our nature: the guilt muſt be imputed to him, and the iniquity of us all muſt be laid upon him; and then a bloody tragedy muſt be acted upon his ſoul and body, till he ſink to death under the weight of infinite wrath. But,

2. Hence ſee, what a wonderful Perſon our LORD JESUS CHRIST is, in whom ſo many wonders meet together. It is in him, that Mercy and Truth, Righteouſneſs and Peace, do meet together; here all the illuſtrious perfections of the divine nature do gloriouſly conſpire; here is the bright conſtellation of all the divine attributes ſhining forth in him; and every ſtar performs its revolution in that orb. Behold in him the bright glory and excellency of God's grace and love; a whole Trinity in concert, to perform each Perſon his own part, and each attribute its own work; and Chriſt, the image of the inviſible God, ſet forth to be a GLORIOUS THEATRE, on which men and angels might see the splendour of the transaction: He is the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person: here is the great mystery of godliness, God manifested in the flesh, and all his attributes meeting together and kissing each other in our IMMANUEL, God-man. There are two things meet in Christ, which should make him wonderful to us: the one is, all our sins meet together on him, that they may be condemned, according to that word, Isa. liii. 6. The Lord hath laid on him the iniquities of us all; (or, made them to MEET on him.) The other is, all the attributes of God meet in him, that they may be glorified. And indeed there is no saving or satisfying knowledge of any property of God, but what is to be had in Christ: to see God to be a merciful, just, true, righteous, good, and holy God is neither a saving, nor a satisfying sight; unless we see these attributes meeting in Christ for our salvation; and to see this, is to see the glory of God, in the face of Christ; here see the glory of divine Mercy! What is pardoning mercy? "It is God's free, gracious "acceptance of a sinner, upon satisfaction "made to his justice, in the blood of Jesus." Nor is any discovery of mercy, but as relating to the satisfaction of justice, consistent with the glory of God: mercy cannot be seen savingly, but as meeting with justice in Christ. Here also we see the glory of divine truth in the exact accomplishment of all his threatenings and promises: that original threatening and commination, whence all other threatenings flow, Gen. ii. 17. In the day thou eatest, thou shalt surely die, backed with a curse, For cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them, is in him accomplished fully, and the truth of God therein cleared to our salvation, while he tasted death for us, and he was made a curse for us: so that in every threatening his truth is made glorious. And as to the promises, they are all Yea and Amen in Christ Jesus, to the glory of God by us, 2 Cor. i. 20. And so of all the other attributes of God, they are made glorious, and exalted in Christ to our salvation. Hence, when Christ desired his Father to glorify his name, John xii. 28. to make his name, that is, his nature, properties, and perfections all glorious in the work of redemption, that he had in hand; he was instantly answered from heaven, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again: I will give my attributes their utmost glory in thee.

GLORIOUS

3. Hence see the difference betwixt the law and the gospel: one great difference betwixt them lies in this, that in the law, the sinner that hath violated the same, may see Truth standing engaged against him, but no Mercy in company with Truth; and Righteousness in arms against him, but no Peace in company with Righteousness; Justice without mercy, and war without peace to the sinner, is the motto of the law; for therein Truth and Righteousness meet together, but Mercy and Peace are not at the meeting; and so the language of the law, to you that are out of Christ, and under the law, is, No mercy, no peace, but the wrath of God, the vengeance of God, the curse of God, upon you; and that so sure, as God is a God of truth and righteousness. There is the law. But in the gospel, Mercy and Peace come into the meeting, and make up a match betwixt all the opposite-like parties, to the highest glory of God, and the greatest happiness of the sinner; and they seal the match with a kiss of infinite complacency; so that the sum of the gospel is this, Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

4. Hence we may see what is the fountain-head, and foundation of all true communion and fellowship with God and man. This glorious meeting is the foundation of all other happy meetings: fellowship with God, and an happy meeting with him, is a stream that flows from this fountain. We could never have met with God, or got a kindly kiss, or embrace, in the arms of his favour and love, if this divine meeting and embracement had not made way for it. Fellowship with man, or the communion of saints, is a rivolet that flows from this spring. When saints meet together for prayer or praises, under the influence of the Spirit, and under a gale of heaven, when their hearts are fired with love to God, and to one another in him; what is this? It is just a live coal cast in among them, from the altar, Christ Jesus, where all the attributes of God meet together, and kiss each other; and hence true fellowship with God, and with the saints, are both declared to be in and through Christ Jesus; That which we have heard and seen, declare we unto you, that ye may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ, 1 John i. 3. The harmony of the attributes of God in Christ, is the fountain of all the harmony among the saints. The little harmony, that takes place among them in our day, and the rarity of holy fellowship-meetings, flows from the little faith of this heavenly divine meeting: for all the saints, that are under the lively views thereof, cannot but desire to meet together, and embrace each other harmoniously, in the arms of mutual love.

5. Hence see the malignity of the sin of unbelief, the great employment whereof is, to spoil the harmony of the divine perfections, and to do its utmost to dissolve that glorious meeting, and separate what God hath joined, saying, in effect, they have not met together, nor kissed each other. This we may discern in the unbelief, whether of secure or awakened sinners: See it in the unbelief of the secure sinner, who sets Truth and Righteousness out of the meeting, saying, God is a merciful God, and I shall have peace, though I walk in the imagination of my own heart, adding drunkenness to thirst. Thus they hope in God's mercy, and speak peace to themselves, while they never view the truth and righteousness of God, and how the credit thereof shall be salved, or the honour repaired: and hence, as faith is said to set to the seal that God is true, or, that he is a God of truth; so unbelief is said to make God a liar: to fancy that God will have mercy on their souls, without regarding the truth of his threatenings, is to make God a liar, and say, Mercy and Truth have not met together: to think that God will be at peace with them, while his Righteousness and Justice are not satisfied, is to make God a liar, and say, Righteousness and Peace have not met together. Thus the unbelief of the secure sinner puts Truth and Righteousness out of the meeting.—Again, on the other hand, the unbelief of the awakened sinner, puts Mercy and Peace out of the meeting, ing, saying, O! he is a God of truth, and how shall he have mercy on the like of me! He is a God of awful justice and righteousness, and how will he be at peace with me? What is the language of this, but that Mercy and Peace have not met with Truth and Righteousness? Here is a making God a liar also, and separating what God hath in the gospel declared to be joined. Behold, then, the malignity of unbelief; it breaks the glorious meeting, and will not let them kiss one another. The presuming sinner will not let God have the glory of his truth and righteousness. The despairing sinner will not let God have the glory of his mercy and grace; both are in a concert with the devil to break the harmony of the meeting. But, O! may virtue come from that glorious meeting in Christ, to the poor sinful meeting in this house, for dashing our unbelief to pieces, that we may see Mercy and Truth met together, Righteousness and Peace kissing each other.

6. Hence see sure and noble ground, for the boldness and confidence of faith in Christ; In whom we have boldness, and access with confidence by the faith of him, Eph. iii. 12. Here is an answer to all the objections of unbelief and diffidence; the chief whereof lies here: O! says unbelief, may I, sinful guilty I, lay hold on the promise of mercy and peace in the gospel, when I see the great ordinance of the divine threatening hard charged with the truth and righteousness of God, and ready to be discharged against me, with thunder and lightening, saying, No mercy, no peace; He that made thee will not have mercy upon thee: And there is no peace, says my God, to the wicked? Mercy and peace in the promise then, says unbelief, cannot take place, with respect to me; for truth and righteousness, in the threatening, stand in the way, like a flaming sword, to keep the way of the tree of life: Nay, but says faith, Here the promise and the threatening have met together, and kissed each other in Christ; mercy in the promise, and justice in the threatening, have met and agreed in him; In whom all the promises are Yea and Amen: and in whom all the threatenings are fully executed, by drawing out his heart-blood. Thus then, we have boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us through the vail of his flesh: Therefore let us draw near with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, Heb. x. 19, 20, 22. O! what ground for the boldness and assured confidence of faith, with particular application, notwithstanding of the threatening? The threatening hath nothing to say to me, saith faith, for Christ hath spoken with it already, and spoken it out of breath; he hath left it speechless and breathless, not a breathing of wrath in it towards me. The believer may have a million of doubts, while his unbelief keeps the chair; but let gallant faith come in, and take the room, it will dispel them all: let once unbelief break the harmony of this meeting of divine attributes in Christ, and then nothing but doubts of God's favour and mercy must ensue; but let faith view the harmony, and see them meeting and kissing each other; and then according to the measure of faith, such will be the measure of holy boldness, confidence, and persuasion of the favour, mercy, and good-will of God in Christ, with particular application to the person himself. Take away unbelief from faith, and then not a single doubt will remain behind: unbelief creates all the doubts that are in the believer; his faith hath no part in them. The general doubtsome faith of the Papists, is not faith, but unbelief; and therefore no wonder that our forefathers abjured it in our National Covenant. Behold the sure ground and firm bottom that faith stands upon, even the mutual meeting, and embracement among the divine perfections in Christ. If you break and separate the meeting by unbelief, then your confidence is broken, and your peace with God marred; but if you keep them together in your view, by faith in Christ, then you have boldness, confidence, and affiance on this ground; yea, then God in Christ, and you meet together, and kiss each other.

7. Hence see what is the best mark of a believer in Christ. For your trial and examination, try it just by this, What view have you got of this glory of God, in the face of Jesus Christ, and of the attributes of God meeting and embracing each other in him? Have you seen the glory, and felt the virtue of this happy meeting?

(1.) Have you seen the glory of it? When once in a day, you had seen the attributes of God in arms against you, because of your sinful rebellion again God; and when you had seen the truth of God, pronouncing the sentence of the law, and his righteousness and justice ready to inflict the sentence, and execute the same with curses and vengeance, making you despair of mercy, and give up with all hope and expectation of peace with God, by the law of works; have you thereupon got a view of the harmonious meeting of these attributes of God, in Christ Jesus, as the Surety, the Sacrifice, the Ransom, the Propitiation, in whom the truth and veracity of God is accomplished, and the righteousness and justice of God is satisfied, and so mercy and peace vented gloriously, without detriment to any other excellency or perfection of God? Hath nothing satisfied your conscience, but the view of this meeting betwixt Mercy and Justice, in the death of Christ, and kissing each other in his mediation? Hath God and you met together this way, and made your heart joyfully to kiss and embrace this wonderful device, as worthy of God, and suitable to you? Have you seen this glory at this rate? Then in God's name, I pronounce you a believer in Christ: For God, who commanded light to shine out of darkness, hath shined into your heart, to give you the light of the knowledge of his glory, in the face of Christ; and Christ and you have met together, and kissed each other; whether it was in the day of first believing, when you fled to him for refuge, or in the day of after manifestation, when, upon the back of dismal hiding on God's part, or grievous backsliding on yours, the Lord drew aside the vail, and gave you a glance of his glory; whether it was by some word of grace, sweetly and powerfully coming in, and opening your understanding to see this harmonious meeting, or by some sweet droppings of the blood of sprinkling upon your conscience, by which blood, the meeting is cemented together. Have you seen this glory, whether in a secret corner, or public ordinance; whether at the market-cross of the gospel, where this glorious meeting is proclaimed, or at a communion-table, where it is sealed? It is all a matter, it was heaven begun.

(2.) Have

(2.) Have you felt the virtue, as well as ſeen the glory of this harmonious meeting of the divine attributes in Chriſt? 2 Cor. iii. 18. Beholding as in a glaſs the glory of the Lord, we are changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord. Surely if you have ſeen this glory, you have felt ſomething of this virtue by changing you from glory to glory. It is true, many that have got a diſcovery of this glory of the Lord, can never think that they have felt the ſanctifying virtue thereof, and this keeps them down in the pit of diſcouragement: it is true, they that are not ſanctified, and made holy, they diſcover, that they never beheld this glory of the Lord: for this meeting of attributes, makes a meeting of graces, in the perſon that ſees it ſavingly. But you muſt remember, That this virtue will never be perfectly felt, till this glory be perfectly beheld in heaven, where we ſhall be like him, becauſe we ſhall ſee him as he is. And therefore, ſince you cannot judge and try yourſelf by a perfect ſanctification, try it by the beginnings of it; this transforming virtue, this ſanctifying virtue is preſent with you, though you cannot diſcern it. But that you may, through grace, diſcern ſomething of it, let me aſk you what makes you wreſtle in ſecret ſometimes againſt ſin, if it be not ſome ſanctifying virtue? What makes the prevalence of ſin to humble you to the duſt? What makes you lament your own unholineſs and impurity? What makes you long and groan for complete victory over, and freedom from ſin? What makes you glad of any victory over your corruption, when this glory ſhines? What makes your heart to riſe againſt ſin? and when ſin prevails, what makes you find yourſelf uneaſy, and out of your element, always till the Lord return, and until you get a new dip in the Jordan of the blood of the Lamb? You have no mercy on your luſts, and are at no peace with them, but ſtill crying, Vengeance upon them! Why, it is juſt the ſanctifying virtue, that flows from this view of the glory of God in Chriſt, in whom Mercy and Peace meet with Truth and Righteouſneſs. If you fall and ſtumble at any time, believer, is it not like the ſtumbling of a horſe, that makes you run the faſter? ſo as you get more good of one fall, than a natural man will get of a hundred duties, while it makes you always the more humble, and watchful, and circumſpect, and dependent. Why, by all this, it appears (whatever be the defect of your ſanctification) that having beheld the glory of God, you are changed into the ſame image from glory to glory; you have ſeen the glory, and felt the virtue of this harmonious meeting of divine attributes in Chriſt. But then again,

8. Hence, we may ſee ground of terror to all Chriſtleſs, unbelieving ſouls, that never have ſeen the glory, nor felt the virtue of this harmonious meeting, and live careleſs about either of theſe. What ſhall I ſay? If our goſpel be hid, it is hid to them that are loſt, in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not, leſt the light of the glorious goſpel of Chriſt, ſhould ſhine in to them, 2 Cor. iv. 3, 4. It may be, you are preſuming upon the mercy of God, while yet your eyes are blinded, that you do not ſee the truth of his threatenings ſtanding againſt you: and therefore, O blaſphemer! do you think, that he will be a God of mercy, and not a God of truth? Nay, his mercy will never be vented, unleſs the glory of his truth be ſalved. Perhaps you are ſpeaking peace to yourſelf, ſaying, I ſhall have peace, while yet your eyes are blinded, that you do not ſee how God's being at peace with a ſinner is conſiſtent with his righteouſneſs, in taking vengeance upon ſin. O then, blaſphemer and preſumer! do you think, that God will be a God of peace, and not a God of righteouſneſs? Know it, then, in the Lord's name, O ſinful unbelieving wretch, that as there is no mercy for you, to the diſcredit of God's truth; ſo no peace, to the diſhonour of his righteouſneſs. You expect mercy and peace ſeparate from truth and righteouſneſs; and therefore mercy and truth ſhall be ſeparate from you; and truth and righteouſneſs will meet with you in fury, and with a vengeance. Your falſe hope of mercy and peace, makes you merciful to your luſts, and at peace with your idols: but the truth and righteouſneſs of God, which you exclude from the meeting, will hide mercy and peace for ever from your eyes: Juſtice inſtead of mercy, war inſtead of peace, will enſue; for truth and righteouſneſs will execute judgment upon you, for the abuſe of mercy and peace; while through unbelief, you do not ſee, or approve their meeting together and kiſſing each other in Chriſt. While you are in this caſe, you cannot meet with God, though you may meet with his people at ordinances, or at a communion-table; yet God and you never met together: nay, you have other company; the devil and you meet together; and your luſts and you embrace each other; the world and you meet together, and its vanities and you do kiſs each other; the law and you have met together, and its curſe and you do embrace each other: but becauſe you do not ſee the terrible curſes and threatenings, that you are under, remember, that in a ſhort while, death and you will meet together, and its cold arms and you muſt embrace each other; and if this goſpel be ſtill hid to you, then after that, hell and you will meet together, and the flames of divine wrath and you will embrace each other to eternity; and the motto written upon the door of your hell, will be, The vengeance of Truth and Righteouſneſs, for the abuſe of Mercy and Peace. Let this word of terror ſink into your conſcience, O graceleſs, Chriſtleſs, unbelieving ſoul, that never ſaw the glory, nor felt the virtue of this bleſſed meeting; and Gallio-like, care for none of theſe things. But on the other hand,

9. Hence, from this doctrine, ſee ground of comfort to all believers in Chriſt, who have ſeen the glory, and felt the virtue of this harmonious meeting of divine attributes in Chriſt. This doctrine is as comfortable to you, as it is terrible to others. Can you ſay before God, that thoſe two marks are your experience? Then I can ſay, that all the comforts, that iſſue from that glorious meeting in Chriſt, belong to you; and God allows you ſtrong conſolation, who have fled for refuge, to the hope ſet before you: for that city of refuge, to which you have fled, is the centre of the meeting, and the triſting-place, where they kiſs one another harmoniouſly. Why, ſay you, What concern have I in their meeting, and embracing each other?

O be-

O believer, they met together for your sake, and kissed one another out of kindness to you: for there were no real jarring among them; but all the apparent jarring was about you; and how they should be glorified in your salvation: and when infinite wisdom found the ransom, and so the way, how they should all be glorified, in your eternal happiness, then they hugged each other in their arms, as it were, in a rapture of joy, for your sake; His delights were with the sons of men, Prov. viii. 31. It was not one attribute only, that had its delight, satisfaction, and glory; it is delights, in the plural number; for all the attributes of God had their delights: and whereabout was it? Why, the council of peace was concerning you; For his delights were with the SONS of MEN. And you having seen the glory of this device, and felt something of the virtue thereof, God and you have met together, and Christ and you have kissed each other: he hath embraced you, and you have embraced him; and that embracement is a pledge and earnest, that he and you will meet together in heaven, and embrace each other to eternity. This meeting and embracement is founded upon the harmonious meeting and embracement of the divine attributes in Christ: and therefore, it shall be sure, abiding, and everlasting; and all these attributes are engaged for your comfort and support: and this glory of the Lord, you shall for ever behold; for Christ, in whom all these glorious perfections meet together, hath prayed for it; Father, I will, that these, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory which thou hast given me, John xvii. 24. Here then, believer, is ground of comfort to you, in every case. Comfort against desertion: is it long since Christ and you met together, and kissed each other? Behold, here is the reason; He will never altogether leave you, nor forsake you; but certainly meet with you, now and then, when he sees it fit; and give you the other kiss of his infinitely blessed lips, and embrace of his arms; till you come to the intimate, immediate embracements of his love in glory: why? because, Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other. So sure as Mercy and Truth are met together, as surely will the Lord meet with you.—Here is comfort against the law, when it comes in as a covenant upon your conscience; saying, Pay what thou owest, or otherwise thou art cursed, and must go to hell: and the law, speaking in the name of Truth and Righteousness, seems terrible. But you may soon answer by faith, and say. "O law, the "demand is just indeed, and agreeable to "Truth and Righteousness; but you mistake "the person; for Truth and Righteousness "have already met with Mercy and Peace, in "the person of Christ, my husband, who en- "dured all my hell, and became a curse for "me; and therefore, I have no ground to fear "the hell thou threatens, nor the curse thou "denounces, nor any liableness thereto."—Here is comfort against Satan, and his temptations; for this blessed meeting in Christ did concert his ruin, and the bruising of his head; The seed of the woman shall bruise the head of the serpent, Gen. iii. 15. Satan shall be bruised under your feet shortly.—Here is comfort against church-divisions and commotions; when neither ministers nor private Christians do meet together, or embrace one another with love and amity. Is this sad and afflicting to you? Here is a meeting, that may give you comfort in that case: for no member of that meeting will ever differ among themselves, or cast out with you.—Here is comfort against your jarring with friends: what do I know, but there is some here, that cannot get lived in peace with such a friend or relation; nor their Christian liberty enjoyed, because of their frowns; and perhaps, they are as aliens to you, not in speaking terms with you; you cannot meet together with them cordially, nor embrace one another amicably: but let this be your comfort, in that case; Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have kissed each other; and you have got a kiss by the bye, and that is better than all the friends in the world.—Here is comfort against public calamities, that seem to be approaching, or personal trials, that may be coming upon you.—Here is a cordial, though affliction and you meet together; though in a little, death and you meet together; yet this meeting of divine attributes in Christ, your glorious Head, speaks comfort, and safety to you in every case: though you should die distracted, this meeting cannot be dissolved; and you having seen the glory, and felt the virtue thereof, shall be sure to enjoy the benefit of it to eternity; Yea, surely goodness and mercy shall follow you, all the days of your life, and you shall dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

10. The last inference is, hence see the duty of all that hear and know that joyful sound: never was there a sweeter sound in heaven, or in earth: and what is the duty of all you that hear it? Surely the news of such a glorious, and harmonious meeting of the divine perfections, about the salvation of sinners, in and by Christ Jesus, should be joyfully received. Here is the good tidings of great joy, unto all people, Luke ii. 10. When Elizabeth the mother of John, and Mary the mother of Jesus our Lord, met together and saluted each other, the babe leapt in Elizabeth's womb for joy. Behold, here is yet a more wonderful meeting, and salutation among the jarring-like attributes and perfections of God; and surely if the babe of grace be in your heart, it will leap for joy, when you perceive such a blessed meeting and salutation. O! may it not bring our heart to our mouth, and make it flutter within us, when we hear of such a salutation as this, Mercy and truth are met together, righteousness and peace have embraced each other.—And again, What is your duty, believer, who not only hears, but knows this joyful sound? your duty is, not only to rejoice, in this matchless harmonious conjunction of divine attributes in Christ; but to examplify the same, by an harmonious conjunction of graces and holy virtues in you. Let Mercy and Truth meeting together, as divine attributes, in Christ, be examplified by Mercy and Truth meeting together, as divine virtues in you: let Righteousness and Peace kissing each other in him, be examplified by Righteousness and Peace kissing each other in you. Let the meeting of Mercy and Truth engage you to be merciful and true: Merciful; because your heavenly Father is merciful: and true; because he desires truth in the inward parts. Let the embraces of Righteousness and Peace engage you, to be righteous and peaceable; that is, to be students of Purity and Peace; for the wisdom that is from above, above, is first pure, and then peaceable, James iii. 17. It is declared in the verse following our text, that it is the design of these perfections of God, looking down harmoniously from heaven, to make suitable graces spring up from the earth: truth shall spring out of the earth, and righteousness shall look down from heaven. When the Sun of righteousness, in whom all the excellencies of God do shine, looks down; then as the natural sun sheding its influences, makes fruit to spring up from the earth: so the Sun of righteousness looking down, and sheding abroad his influences, makes Truth, and all the rest of the fruits of the Spirit, to spring out of the earth, out of the heart, the soil where they are sown, in regeneration. O! does Mercy look down from heaven to you, in friendship with Truth? shall not this Mercy make you merciful to the bodies and souls of others, by doing them all the temporal and spiritual good that you can? And shall God manifest his Truth, in conjunction with Mercy towards you? and will you not be a friend to Truth, even to all the precious truths of his gospel? Shall not Truth, in opposition to hypocrisy, be your study, and Truth in opposition to error, be your concern? and this Truth, in conjunction with Mercy; for, when Truth is in any hazard, should not Mercy to your own soul, and the souls of others, make you zealous for it? and mercy to your children, and the generation that is to come after you, on whom we shew no mercy, if truth be not transmitted purely to them, as it was by our fore-fathers to us, at the expence of their blood; however now, the waters of the sanctuary are puddled?——Again, does Righteousness and Peace look down from heaven, kindly embracing each other in your behalf, believer? And shall not you be a student of Righteousness, in opposition to all unrighteous and unholy ways; and of Peace, in opposition to contention and discord: As much as possible, follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord. Does God glorify his righteousness towards you? and will you study no righteousness in your conversation towards God and man? Does God speak peace to you, and will you be at war with him; and love to live in war with any of his? Shall that be the disposition of any, with whom God is at peace? O tell it not in Gath! Surely there is none here, that have tasted of this sweet peace of God; but they would desire to live at peace with all men; and particularly with all the saints. They would desire to see all the honest ministers of Scotland, meeting together more kindly than they do, and embracing each other. Some, indeed, are at this time reproached, as enemies to peace in the church *; but the matter is, Peace must not be studied separately from Righteousness, nor Mercy separately from Truth; but all as meeting, and embracing one another: for Mercy and Peace, without Truth and Righteousness, is a cruel conspiracy against God and man.

Now, certain things have past concerning the Truths of God, and the Righteousness of Christ in our day, which some think will stand infamous till the judgment of the great day; and this Truth and Righteousness, being the great ministerial trust, some chused rather to be reproached by the world, as enemies to Peace, than be challenged by God and their own conscience, as betrayers of the trust. However, O believer, study you through grace, to get a match made up between Mercy and Truth, Righteousness and Peace in you, seeing there can be no merciful Peace to the prejudice of righteous Truth: and study to get all these attributes of God, examplified in your heart and life; and the seal and impress thereof upon your soul; you being united to Christ, in whom all these glorious excellencies of God do meet together with harmonious embracements. Out of Christ's fulness, do you receive, and grace for grace: as the child receives member for member from the Father, and the paper letter for letter from the press: so beholding his glory, be you changed into the same image, by receiving mercy for mercy, truth for truth, righteousness for righteousness, and peace for peace; out of his fulness, do you receive grace for grace, holiness for holiness, and an holy virtue suitable to every holy perfection, that is in him; and all these harmoniously meeting together and kissing each other in you. Let no heavenly grace, or holy duty be excluded out of the meetings: let faith and repentance meet together; let love and new obedience kiss each other; let knowledge and practice meet together, and prayer and praises embrace each other; yea, let opposite-like graces meet harmoniously in you; let humility and boldness meet together; let godly sorrow and holy joy embrace each other. Here is the gospel-holiness we call you to, in a suitableness to these harmonious attributes of God in Christ. If the world call you Antinomians know it is the will of God, that by well-doing, you put to silence the ignorance of foolish men, 1 Pet. ii. 15. Let the mouth that reproaches the gospel, be stopt by the power of it in your walk. The world will surely reckon you the greatest stars, that give the greatest light: Therefore let your light so shine before men, that others seeing your good works, may glorify God; even the works of Mercy and Truth, Righteousness and Peace, hand in hand together; and thus, for the sake of the glory of God, the honour of Christ, and the credit of the gospel, let the world know, that you have seen the glory, and felt the virtue of these perfections of God, harmoniously meeting and embracing each other in Christ. Here is your duty and work, believer, in the wilderness; and now in all your shortcomings therein, still look again to God's holy temple, to Christ the meeting-place of these divine perfections. This is the mercy-seat, of which God says, Exod. xxv. 22. There will I meet with thee, and commune with thee from between the cherubims: and every new meeting with God there, will bring in new strength, for all your work and warfare in time, till God and you meet together, and embrace one another, in glory thro' eternity.

And now, believer, I know you would desire, that others should share of the same happiness with you; and therefore, pray, that a

* See the reason of this assigned, Serm. IV. page 70. at the foot.——The hearty friends to the doctrine of grace, in those days, were very unjustly accused with Antinomianism; and the strenuous supporters of the doctrine of free justification, through the imputed righteousness of Christ, without the works of the law, were injuriously calumniated as enemies to holiness, and as disturbers of the peace of the church.——This matter is further cleared up, in a note, about the middle of Serm. VIII.

ſhort concluding word may be bleſſed with power, to thouſands that hear me. O ye that are byſtanders and hearers only, in whatever corner of this houſe round about me, whether you be in my view or not, you are in God's view; and I have a word from him to you all: and as I have told you, what a terrible thing it is, to live and die in unbelief, with reſpect to this glorious device; ſo now I would tell you your duty, in this matter; and how you may ſhare of the bleſſings and benefits in time, and for ever; that flow from this glorious meeting and embracement; and it is by kiſſing the Son of God, in whom all the attributes of God do kiſs, and embrace each other; Kiſs the Son, leſt he be angry, and ye periſh from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little: bleſſed are all they that truſt in him, Pſal. ii. 12. Bleſſed are all they that kiſs and embrace him. Would you then ſhare of the grace and glory, that iſſue from this wonderful meeting, and ineffable embracement among the divine perfections, in Chriſt the Son of God? O then! come and kiſs the Son: O down, down with carnal thoughts! carnal kiſſing, carouſing, and cajolling; here, here is an object worthy of the moſt endeared embraces of the immortal ſoul. O come! and kiſs the Son, by believing in him, and applying the benefits of this glorious tranſaction, to yourſelf: and be who you will, if you kiſs and embrace the Son, you ſhall find theſe glorious attributes of God, kiſſing and embracing you, and hugging you in their arms, as a darling of heaven, and a favourite in the houſe of God. Are the attributes of God, embracing one another in Chriſt? O flee in to their embraces, by fleeing in to Chriſt: Say not, Chriſt is in heaven, how ſhall I embrace him? For the word is nigh, even in your mouth, and in your heart, Rom. x. 8. q. d. So near is he in this word, that you may kiſs him with your mouth, as it were, and embrace him in your heart: and to take in this word of grace, and Chriſt in it, is to embrace him. What do you ſay againſt Chriſt, man, woman? Are you afraid, that Truth and Righteouſneſs conſpire againſt you, and hinder Mercy and Peace from ever meeting with you, and embracing you? O no: Fear not; only believe, That Mercy and Truth are met together, and that Righteouſneſs and Peace have kiſſed each other in Chriſt. Truth will not ſtand in the way of Mercy; for they have kiſſed each other. He is indeed an infinitely juſt God, to take vengeance upon ſin: but juſtice will not hinder mercy from coming to you: only believe, that juſtice and mercy are reconciled in Chriſt, ſo as mercy can vent towards you, to the credit of juſtice. But, O! may ſuch a black-mouth'd ſinner as I, as black as hell and the devil, expect a kiſs of ſuch an infinitely fair Jeſus? Is that to be expected, that ſuch oppoſites ſhould meet in one another's arms? Yea, man, woman, allow me, a black ſinner like yourſelf, to be the happy meſſenger, to tell you in God's name, that be ye as black as you will, ſuch a meeting and embracing betwixt Chriſt and you, is more to be expected, than ever men or angels could have expected, that infinite juſtice and mercy ſhould have met together, and kiſſed each other in a God-man: and this unexpected meeting is the very ground, upon which your expectation of a meeting with, and embracement of God in Chriſt, is to be founded. O then, come and kiſs the Son: Why? but I cannot, ſay you; I think, I would gladly do it; but I cannot get near him, to kiſs and embrace him. Indeed this kindneſs muſt begin on his ſide; and therefore, O pray, that he would come, and meet you with a kiſs of infinite love. Say with the church, Song i. 2. Let him kiſs me with the kiſſes of his mouth; for his love is better than wine. If that be the language of your ſoul; O! I cannot embrace him; but my heart ſays, O let him come, and embrace me: and draw me out of the embracements of all my former lovers and luſts, that I may never kiſs any idol in the world again; but may live, and die in the arms, and embraces of the Son of God: Is that the language of your ſoul before the living God? Why, then the embracement betwixt Chriſt and you is begun, that ſhall never have an end; for it is a pledge, that he and you ſhall meet together in heaven, and embrace each other to eternity.

Now, though I hope, that this glorious meeting of divine perfections in Chriſt, hath put forth ſome virtue, to draw in ſome poor ſoul, to the match: yet I fear, that the moſt part are but ſtill as idle hearers and ſpectators, as if they were not concerned. But, O man, woman, young or old, unconcerned ſoul, be what you will, O yet, will you come, and ſee this great ſight? O come, and ſee the greateſt ſight, that ever was, or will be in heaven or earth, A buſh burning, and not conſumed: all the burning and ſhining attributes of God, meeting with infinite harmony, in the buſh of our nature; and yet, the buſh able to bear the glory, Zech. vi. 13. O come, and wonder! Here is the wonder of men and angels! For, this is a wonderful meeting to them. And the name of the meeting-place is juſtly called, WONDERFUL! O come, and partake; for the meeting is concerning your ſalvation, in Chriſt: His delights were with the ſons of men. O come, and ſing to the praiſe and glory of this wonderful harmonious embracement of divine perfections in Chriſt; eſpecially, you that partake; ſo as to ſee the glory, and feel the virtue thereof. O will you ſing with your hearts, and lips, and lives, ſaying, Glory to God, that his attributes have met together, and kiſſed each other in Chriſt; and that ever the like of me, got a kiſs by the bye? Glory to God, that there is no breaking of this meeting, nor parting of theſe embraces, by ſin, Satan, earth, or hell; but that they meet and embrace each other to eternity. And though you cannot mind to ſing all that hath been ſaid; yet I hope, the weakeſt memory may mind, to ſing the beſt note of all the ſermon, every day, ſaying, Glory, glory, glory to God, that Mercy and Truth are met together, Righteouſneſs and Peace have kiſſed each other.

SERMON

SERMON VIII.*

LAW-DEATH, GOSPEL-LIFE; or, the Death of Legal Righteouſneſs, the Life of Goſpel Holineſs.

GALAT. ii. 19.

I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.

A GODLY life is what we are all obliged to live, eſpecially if we have been at the Lord's table; but it is a myſtery that very few underſtand in their experience, if they will judge their experiences, by comparing them with this of Paul in our text, I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.

Our apoſtle, in this epiſtle, is vindicating himſelf from the baſe aſperſions caſt upon him by the falſe apoſtles; with reſpect to his calling, as if he had been no apoſtle; and with reſpect to his doctrine, as if it had been falſe and erroneous. From the beginning of this chapter, to ver. 11. he tells us what he did at Jeruſalem; how ſtrenuouſly he oppoſed the falſe brethren, that he might maintain the truth of the goſpel, which they ſought to overturn. From the 11th ver. to the 17th, the apoſtle tells us what he did at Antioch; how zealouſly he oppoſed and reproved even Peter himſelf, for his diſſimulation, in compelling the Gentiles to Judaize; giving thereby ſuch offence, that the Jews were confirmed in their Judaiſm, ver. 12th. Other Jews diſſembled with him, and Barnabas alſo was carried away with their diſſimulation; and hereby occaſion was given both to Jews and Gentiles, to deſert Chriſt, to deny grace, to return to the law, and ſeek juſtification by the works thereof. So that we may ſee, here, that great and good men may diſſemble, and do much hurt by their diſſimulation, both among miniſters and people. We have here a wonderful example of it in the greateſt of men, and ſuch as were pillars of the church; but it would ſeem that Peter and Barnabas, and other Jews here, did not ſee their fault and ſin, but thought they did right enough; but Paul ſaw it, ver. 14. When I ſaw that they walked not uprightly according to the truth of the goſpel, etc. This might ſeem a very bold and impudent attempt, for Paul, the youngeſt of all the apoſtles, (I mean, of whom Chriſt was laſt ſeen, as of one born out of due time.) for him to take upon him to accuſe and condemn Peter as well as Barnabas, and the Jews for their practical error, not walking according to the truth of the goſpel. But we ſee, that as people may have the goſpel, but not the truth of the goſpel; ſo theſe that have the truth of the goſpel, may be guilty of not walking according to the truth of it, even as Peter, Barnabas, and others here, whoſe diſſimulation did not conſiſt with the truth of the goſpel, which they preached, but tended to eſtabliſh the law, and ſo to overturn the goſpel. But God hath ſometimes very few witneſſes to ſtand up for the truth of the goſpel: here Paul was alone, Peter was againſt him; and Barnabas, his own intimate aſſociate, was drawn away with the diſſimulation; Jews and Gentiles were infected, and therefore Paul alone muſt fight againſt them all, for the cauſe of Chriſt, and the doctrine of the goſpel, which was endangered. I ſaid unto Peter before them all, etc. Not by teaching of any erroneous doctrine did Peter err, for that is a principle we maintain, that the apoſtles never erred in teaching, or in their doctrine delivered to the church; but his error was in practice, compelling the Gentiles to Judaize; whereby he gave them occaſion to think, that the obſervation of the law was neceſſary to juſtification: whereas he adds, We that are Jews by nature, ver. 15, 16. We apoſtles, might he ſay, though Jews by nature, yet we ſeek not juſtification by the works of the law; and therefore we ought not to drive the Gentiles to the obſervation of the law, that they may ſeek righteouſneſs and juſtification thereby. Why? becauſe, 1. We know that a man cannot be juſtified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Chriſt. 2. Becauſe therefore having renounced the law, in point of juſtification, we have embraced Chriſt by faith; that through him we may be juſtified. 3. Becauſe by the deeds of the law no fleſh can be juſtified.

Now, from ver. 17. and downward, the apoſtle returns to the Galatians; having told how he reproved Peter, and what he ſaid to him concerning juſtification without the works of the law, he now comes to ſhew this doctrine to be no wiſe oppoſite to the doctrine of ſanctification, but of abſolute neceſſity to true holineſs, ver. 17, 18. q. d. If we Jews, who lived formerly under the law, and now ſeek righteouſneſs in Chriſt alone, are thus accounted as ſinners, when we followed the law, it would ſeem that Chriſt did diſapprove the law, and approve ſin: God forbid, ſays the apoſtle; this he denies and rejects with abhorrence. To object thus, might he ſay, againſt the doctrine of free juſtification, were egregious blaſphemy againſt the Son of God, as if he were the miniſter of ſin, who came to deſtroy ſin, and to deſtroy the works of the devil; and by this goſpel which I preach, might he ſay, Chriſt

* This was the ſubſtance of two diſcourſes, the firſt whereof was delivered upon a thankſgiving-day, after the adminiſtration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, at Carnock; the ſecond was an enlargement upon the ſame ſubject, after an occaſion of the ſame nature, at Orwel. The preciſe time when theſe diſcourſes were delivered, cannot be poſitively aſcertained; however, from ſome paſſages in the diſcourſes themſelves, it is probable they were preached ſome time in the year 1724. and the firſt edition being printed that year, ſeems to determine it.

is

is held out as the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world; not to take away righteousness, truly so called, unless it be that false vizard of legal self-righteousness, with which we formerly covered and masked ourselves: nay, he came to bring in everlasting righteousness, a true and perfect righteousness for justification; he came to make an end of sin, by the sacrifice of himself, and thereby to purchase the Spirit, as a Spirit of holiness and sanctification, to destroy the power of sin and corruption; and therefore it is a base calumny to say, that this gospel-doctrine does open the door to sin and licentiousness: this he proves by two arguments; 1. Because the faith of Christ does not destroy itself, ver. 18. I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God. Sin is like an old house, which I have razed, and destroyed by my doctrine of free justification by faith, and not by the works of the law; for by this doctrine I preached freedom from sin through Christ; and therefore, if I should build up these old wastes of sin again, it is not Christ, but I that would be the sinner, or minister of sin; nay, I would be a madman, to build with one hand what I destroyed with the other. 2. Because liberty to sin is contrary to the very scope of the gospel, and to the design of this doctrine of justification by faith without the works of the law; For, I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God, ver. 19.

This is a very strange and wonderful text, that flesh and blood can hardly hear, without suspecting, that it favours too much of a new scheme of doctrine: and if it were not the divinely inspired words of the apostle, it would hardly escape being taxed as an Antinomian paradox. I remember, Luther upon the text says, "The false apostles taught, unless you "live to the law, you cannot live to God;" and therefore Paul here must be the most heretical of all heretics; his heresy is unheard-of heresy, reason and human wisdom cannot receive it, that if we will live to God, we must be dead wholly to the law: yet so it is here, he declares it of himself, and in the name of all believers in Christ, yea, as the very doctrine of faith, I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.

In which words you may notice two remarkably different things, death and life; mortification and vivification. 1. A wonderful DEATH; I through the law am DEAD to the law. 2. A remarkable LIFE, proceeding out of that death; That I might LIVE unto God.

1st, You have a wonderful DEATH, or Paul's strange mortification; I through the law am DEAD to the law: and of this mortification we have here three things, 1. The general nature of it, it is called a death; I am dead. 2. The object of it, the law. 3. The means of it, the law; I through the law am dead to the law, all very odd things to carnal reason.

1. The general nature of it, it is called a DEATH; I am DEAD. There are several sorts of death commonly spoken of, viz. temporal, spiritual, and eternal; but this is none of them. Temporal death is a separation betwixt soul and body; but this death takes place where there is no such separation: Paul was thus alive, when he said here, I am dead. Spiritual death is a separation betwixt God and the soul; but this death is a mean of joining God and the soul together. Eternal death, is an eternal separation betwixt God and the soul; but the death here spoken of, makes way for eternal communion with God. This is a strange death, a strange mortification; especially if you consider,

2. The object of it, the LAW; I am dead to the law; not only the ceremonial law, but even the moral law itself, as under the form of a covenant of works, and as a condition of life. I renounce, might he say, the righteousness of the law, seeking no salvation in the works thereof; nay, in this respect it is dead to me, and I to it; it cannot save me, and I cannot expect salvation by it; nay, I am dead to the law. To be dead to sin, is a mortification that people may think they can easily understand; but the mystery of it, in being dead to sin, by this mean of being dead to the law, is what cannot be so well understood; for one would think, that to die to the law, were to live in sin: nay, says the apostle, it is quite otherwise; that I may die to sin, I am dead to the law.

3. You have the means of this death, which is as strange, namely, the law; I through the law am dead to the law. As to this mean of death to the law, to wit, THE LAW, I find some divines understand it a different law from the other; as if the apostle should say, "I by the "law of Christ, am freed from the law of "Moses; or, I by the law of faith am freed "from the law of works." But I incline to join with the current of sound divines, who understand both of the same law, q. d. I am dead to the law, THROUGH the law: the law hath taught me that I am a sinner, that cannot be justified by the law, which curses and condemns sinners: By the law is the knowledge of sin; and having thus by the law known myself to be a sinful guilty wretch, I am dead to all expectation of righteousness by the law. The law then, having thus killed me, and all my hope of life by it, hath been a blest mean of drawing me out of myself, and all my legal righteousness, to seek life and justification in Christ, and his righteousness received by faith. Thus you have a wonderful death here spoken of.

2dly, You have a remarkable LIFE proceeding out of that death; you may call it Paul's vivification, which was not peculiar to him, but is common to all believers: That I might live unto God. Where again you may notice three things.

1. The general nature of this vivification, it is called by the name of life: while a man is alive to the law, he continues dead; but whenever he is dead to the law, then he is alive; the breath of life is breathed into his nostrils, and he becomes a living soul: for the Spirit of God, the spirit of life enters into him.

2. The object of this life, or vivification, it is God; a living unto God, that is, a new life, a holy life, a divine life; a living to God, to God's honour, to God's glory. Before this, the man lived to himself as his end, as well as from himself as his principle; but now he lives from God as his principle, and to God as his end, which only is a holy life, and wherein true sanctification lies.

3. You have the influence that this death hath upon this life, or this mortification hath upon this vivification; or, the influence that justification by faith alone, and not by the deeds of the the law, hath upon ſanctification of heart and life, or living to God, in the particle that: I am dead to the law, THAT I might live unto God. Now, might the apoſtle ſay, How falſly do you charge my doctrine, as opening a window to licentiouſneſs, while I in the name of all believers declare, that this doctrine of juſtification by faith alone, or our being dead to the law in point of juſtification, does open the door to true holineſs; for none can live unto God, till they be dead to the law. I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.

But I ſhall endeavour further to explain the words upon the following obſervation.

DOCT. That to be dead to the law, in the point of juſtification, is neceſſary in order to our living unto God in point of ſanctification. I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God.

Now, upon this doctrine, I ſhall endeavour, through grace, to explain the ſeveral branches of the text; and the general method ſhall be,

I. To clear and confirm the doctrine.
II. To ſpeak of the believer's DEATH, or mortification, here intended; I through the law am dead to the law.
III. To ſpeak of the believer's LIFE, or vivification; his living unto God,
IV. Of the neceſſity of this death in order to this life; or the influence that our being dead to the law hath upon our living unto God.
V. Make ſome application of the ſubject in ſundry uſes.

I. To clear and confirm the doctrine; At the mouth of two or three witneſſes, every word ſhall be eſtabliſhed. But, to ſhew that we are not ſtraitened to find out witneſſes to atteſt the truth of this doctrine, I ſhall produce more than two or three.

The firſt witneſs that I cite, is that, Rom. vii. 4, 5, 6. where you ſee, that to be dead to the law, and married to Chriſt, is neceſſary in order to living unto God, bringing forth fruit to him, and ſerving him in newneſs of ſpirit.

The ſecond witneſs I cite, is very like to this, Iſa. liv. 1, 5. compared. Sing, O barren, that did not bear.—For more are the children of the deſolate, [Gentiles,] than the children of the married wife: Why? ver. 5. Thy Maker is thy husband. Being dead to the law, and divorced from it, and married to Chriſt, the barren woman becomes a fruitful bride. And, leſt you ſhould think I put a wrong gloſs upon this text, and miſtake the meaning of it, you may compare it with,

A third witneſs that I cite, whereby this very gloſs that I give it is confirmed, Gal. iv. 27. For it is written, Rejoice thou barren that bearеſt not; break forth and cry, thou that travaileſt not: for the deſolate hath many more children than ſhe which hath an husband. Now, we would conſider what is the ſubject here ſpoken of: the apoſtle is ſetting forth believers freedom from the law by the goſpel, or their juſtification by faith without the works of the law; and he confirms it by an allegory, ſhewing, that our liberty from the law was prefigured in the family of Abraham, that we are not children of the bond-woman, or bond-men to the law, but children of the promiſe, as Iſaac: And the apoſtle explains the prophet, and ſhews his allegory to be founded, not only on the former hiſtorical, but alſo on this prophetical ſcripture. The goſpel-church, including all believers among Jews and Gentiles, is called the bride, the Lamb's wife: and as this bride in general, being divorced from the law, and married to Chriſt, is a fruitful bride, bearing many children, many ſons and daughters to Chriſt, and more under the new diſpenſation of the covenant of grace, than under the old legal adminiſtration thereof before Chriſt's coming; ſo every particular believer, being dead to the law, and married to Chriſt, is, by this means, fruitful in bringing forth the fruits of holineſs and righteouſneſs, to the glory of God; as the apoſtle in proſecuting this diſcourſe, further ſhews, ver. 30. Caſt out the bond-woman and her ſon. Strange! that the law ſhould be called a bond-woman; and then, Caſt out the bond-woman; this was ſtrange language: nay, but in the caſe of juſtification, "Moſes and his "tables muſt give place to Chriſt," as Luther ſays: yea, he adds in this ſenſe, "I will ſay to "thee, O law, be gone; and if it will not be "gone, thruſt it out by force; Caſt out the bond-"woman." Further, the apoſtle adds, chap. v. 1. Stand faſt, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Chriſt hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage. Read alſo, ver. 4, 5, 6. where you ſee, that the believer, being free from the law, and having the ſpirit of life, and the ſpirit of faith, bringeth forth fruit to God; of which fruits of the Spirit of Chriſt, in oppoſition to the fruits of the fleſh, you read, ver. 16, 17. and downward.

The fourth witneſs that I cite, is, Col. ii. 13, 14. You being dead in your ſins,—hath he quickened. Now, by what means does this quickening, or being made alive to God, come about? It is by the blotting out of the hand-writing—nailing it to his croſs; intimating, that there is no living unto God, without being dead to the law, and having the law dead to us, by viewing it crucified with Chriſt, and nailed to his croſs.

The fifth witneſs is, Col. iii. 3, 4, 5. For ye are dead, [that is, dead to the law, as he had cleared before, and ſo dead to ſin, ſelf, and the world,] and your life is hid with Chriſt in God; and when Chriſt, who is our life, ſhall appear, then ſhall ye alſo appear with him in glory. Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth. The believer is ſaid to be dead with Chriſt, ver. 20. of the preceeding chapter, and ſo dead to the law, which was nailed to the croſs of Chriſt. And ver. 1. of this chapter, the believer is ſaid to be riſen with Chriſt, and ſo he ſits together with Chriſt in heavenly places: but though his beſt part is above, even his glorious Head, whom he will follow; yet he hath members on earth, which he is called to mortify; which mortification of ſin is, you ſee, the native fruit of his being dead with Chriſt, and riſen with him.

The ſixth witneſs that I cite, is, Rom. iii. 28, 31. We conclude that a man is juſtified by faith, without the deeds of the law, and ſo he is dead to the law. Now, does this doctrine deſtroy our living to God? Nay, Do we make void the law, through faith? God forbid; yea, we eſtabliſh the law: we eſtabliſh it as a covenant of works, while we believe in Chriſt for righteouſneſs, to be imputed for our juſtification; and we eſtabliſh it as a rule of life, and holineſs, while we believe in Chriſt for ſtrength, to be imparted for our ſanctification; and ſo being dead to the law in point of juſtification, we live unto God in ſanctification.

The ſeventh witneſs that I cite, is, Rom. vi. 14.

Sin ſhall not have dominion over you; for you are not under the law, but under grace. Where you ſee, that a man's being under grace, and not under the law, is the very means by which he comes to be delivered, and freed from the dominion of ſin, and ſo lives unto God. Here is the privilege, deliverance from the dominion of ſin; and the means of it is, by the grace of God in Chriſt Jeſus, by which we are delivered from the law: for, as the motions of ſin, Rom. vii. 5. are ſaid to be by the law, ſo the law being dead to us, and we by grace, being married to another huſband, we bring forth fruit unto God; The grace of God, that bringeth ſalvation, teaching us to deny ungodlineſs, Tit. ii. 11. While the law hath power over a man, he cannot but be bringing forth fruit unto death, Rom. vii. 5. There was never yet an effectual courſe taken for the mortifying of ſin, but by the goſpel, and the grace of Chriſt; which yet ſome ignorantly think leads to licentiouſneſs, as they thought in Paul's days, Rom. vi. 15. Nay, while we are under the law, we are the ſervants of ſin; But now being made free from ſin, and become ſervants to God, ye have your fruit unto holineſs, and the end everlaſting life, ver. 22.

The eighth witneſs that I cite, is, Rom. viii. 2, 3. For the law of the Spirit of life in Chriſt Jeſus, hath made me free from the law of ſin and death. Why? how comes that about? ver. 3. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the fleſh, God ſending his own Son in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, and for ſin condemned ſin in the fleſh. Where ye ſee the quality of every believer; he is one that lives to God, and walks not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit: and now, what is the foundation of this? even freedom from the law, which through our weakneſs could not juſtify us; but our help was laid upon One that is mighty, who having come under the law, did, by a ſacrifice for ſin, condemn ſin in the fleſh, that the righteouſneſs of the law might be fulfilled in us, both in point of juſtification and ſanctification.

The ninth witneſs is, 2 Cor. v. 14, 15. For the love of Chriſt conſtrains us,—that he died for all, that they which live, ſhould not henceforth live to themſelves, but to him that died for them. There is true ſanctification, and living unto God; but how came it about? The means thereof is the death of Chriſt, which we have been celebrating in the ſacrament of the ſupper; this is both the means and the motive thereof. What ſtronger motive than this, to live to him that died for us; and by his death, redeemed us from the law? For we are dead to the law by the body of Chriſt, Rom. vii. 4.; that is, by the death of Chriſt, the ſacrifice of his human nature: and hence comes true ſpiritual life, or living to him.

The tenth witneſs that I cite, is, 1 Cor. xv. 56, 57. The ſting of death is ſin, the ſtrength of ſin is the law: where the law is called the ſtrength of ſin, not only becauſe by the law is the knowledge of ſin, and ſin would not have power to condemn us, but by virtue of the law which diſcharges ſin; but alſo becauſe ſin gets ſtrength from the law: Sin taking occaſion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiſcence; for without the law ſin was dead, Rom. vii. 8. Sin and corruption is ſo irritated by the law, that thereby the ſinner becomes to be more ſinful: which is not the fault of the law, for it prohibites, reproves, and condemns ſin; but the fault of corrupt nature, which is ſo intent in perpetrating evil, that the more any thing is forbidden, the more impetuouſly it follows after it; like a mad horſe, the more he is checked with the bridle, the more mad and furious is he. Now, The ſtrength of ſin is the law; but thanks be to God, which gives us the victory, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord: Victory over the law, which is the ſtrength of ſin; and ſo, being freed from the law, or dead to it, in this way I am freed from ſin, and put in caſe to live unto God.——Theſe are ten witneſſes, inſtead of twenty that might be adduced for the confirmation of this doctrine, That to be dead to the law in point of juſtification, is neceſſary in order to our living unto God in point of ſanctification. Receive this truth then in the love of it.

II. The ſecond thing propoſed was, to ſpeak of this ſtrange DEATH of the believer; I through the law am dead to the law. Now here four things are to be touched at, 1. What the law is, that the believer is dead to. 2. What it is in the law, that he is dead to. 3. What it is to be dead to the law. 4. The means of this, that through the law he is dead to the law.

1ſt, What the law is, that the believer is dead to. I know, I have need to be cautious what I ſay in this captious age, eſpecially upon ſuch a ſubject as this; but it is in the fear of God, to whom I am accountable, and without regard to any man, that I deſire to deliver the truths of the goſpel.——What is the law, to which Paul ſaid he was dead? I ſhall not trouble you with the ſeveral acceptations of the law, nor the diſtinctions of it into judicial, ceremonial, and moral. But here though the apoſtle ſpeaks ſometimes of the ceremonial, and ſometimes of the moral law in this epiſtle; yet in this text, I ſuppoſe, with the current of ſound divines, that he underſtands eſpecially the moral law, or the law of the ten commandments, conſidered under the form of a covenant of works. The law is to be taken two ways. 1. Materially, for its mere preceptive and directive part. Or, 2. The law may be taken formally, as it is a covenant, whether of works or grace. Now, the law, materially taken, is ſtill the ſame, whatever form it be caſt into, and it is the tranſcript of the divine image, after which man was created at firſt; ſo that, long before the law was written in tables of ſtone, it was written in the tables of man's heart; and man was obliged to give obedience to this law, as a creature to his Creator, though there never had been any covenant made with him; and this obligation to obedience is eternal, everlaſting, and unchangeable.—But this law was afterwards caſt into two different forms, namely, that of the covenant of works, and afterwards that of the covenant of grace. Now here, I ſay, it is meant of the law, or covenant of works; in which law there were three things, a precept, a promiſe, and a penalty. 1. The precept, which is perfect and perſonal obedience, by our own ſtrength, and in the old covenant-form; Do. 2. The promiſe, which is life eternal; Do and Live. 3. The penalty, which is death temporal, ſpiritual, and eternal; if you Do not, you ſhall Die, Gen. ii. 17. The covenant of works commands good, and forbids evil, with a promiſe of life in caſe of obedience, and a threatening of death in caſe of diſobedience: and ſo this law of works hath a twofold power; a power to juſtify, and a power to condemn; to juſtify, if we obey; and to condemn, if we diſobey. The command of the law, abſtractly and materially conſidered, is, as I ſaid, eternally binding upon all rational creatures, ſo long as they continue to be creatures, and God the Creator: but the command of the law, formally conſidered, or under the form of a covenant of works particularly, binds no longer than the form continues. Now, the commanding power of the law, as a covenant of works, is a power calling us to obey, (or injoining us to do) by our own ſtrength; to obey, as a condition of life; and to obey, under pain of damnation.

to

2*dly*, As to the ſecond thing here, what it is in the law, the believer is dead to. Here it muſt be obſerved, That it is only the believer that is dead to the law, all others are alive to it; and the believer's being dead to the law, imports, that he is wholly ſet free from it; or, as the words of our Confeſſion bear, "They are not "under the law as a covenant of works, to "be thereby either juſtified or condemned." Thus they are dead to the law. The law is compared, in our text, to a hard and cruel maſter, and we compared to ſlaves, and bondmen, who, as long as they are alive, are under dominion, and at the command of their maſters; but when they are dead, they are free from that bondage, and their maſters have no more to do with them. Here then, to be dead to the law, is to be free from the dominion and power of the law. Now, I think the power of the law may be conſidered, either as accidental, or eſſential. It hath an accidental power or ſtrength; for example, by reaſon of our ſinful, corrupt, and depraved ſtate, even an irritating power, whereby, as an occaſion, it provokes, and ſtirs up the corruption of the heart in the unregenerate, Rom. vii. 8. From this the believer is free, ſo far as he is dead to the law.—But next, There is a power that the law hath, that may be called eſſential to it, as a covenant of works; and that is, a juſtifying and condemning power, as I ſaid before; a power to juſtify the obedient, and a power to condemn the diſobedient: now believers are dead to the law, ſo as they are not under it, to be juſtified or condemned thereby; they are wholly, and altogether free from the law, as it is a covenant of life and death, upon doing, or not doing.

But, for the further clearing of this, I told you upon that queſtion, What law is here meant? That in the law, as a covenant of works, there are three things. 1. The precept of obedience. 2. The promiſe of life. 3. The threatening or penalty of death; all which the believer is dead to.

1. The precept of obedience, as a condition of life, is one part of the covenant of works; Do and live; or, If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments: this the believer is delivered from, and ſo dead to the precepts of the law, as a covenant, or condition of life. Take heed to what I ſay here; I ſay not, that the believer is delivered from the precept of the law ſimply, but as a condition of life: for the command of perfect obedience, is not the covenant of works; nay, man was obliged to perfect obedience, and is eternally bound to obey the law, though there had never been a covenant: but the form of the precept, or command in the covenant of works, is perfect obedience, as a condition of life. Now, it is the commanding power of the law, as a covenant of works, that the believer is free from; and it hath no commanding power, but in this ſtrain, namely, to command perfect obedience as the condition of life; and, under pain of the curſe, Obey, and thou ſhalt live; otherwiſe thou ſhalt die. Now, the ground of the believer's freedom from the precept of the law, as a covenant of works, or condition of life, is juſt Chriſt's perfect obedience to the law, in his room, in his ſtead, which is the true and proper condition of our eternal life and happineſs: By the obedience of one, ſhall many be made righteous:—that as ſin hath reigned unto death, even ſo grace might reign through righteouſneſs, unto eternal life, by Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Rom. v. 19, 20. There is an eternal truth in this, that life is not to be obtained, unleſs all be done that the law requires, Do this and live; and that is ſtill true, If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. They muſt be kept by us, or our Surety: now the Surety's obedience being imputed to the believer, as the condition of eternal life, the believer is not obliged to obedience to the law as a condition of life: the precept of the law properly is, Do; but the precept of the law, as a covenant of works, is under this conditional form, Do, and Live. Now, if any ſay then, the believer is delivered from obligation to do, or to obey the law, I deny that; for this Do is eternally binding; but the precept of the law, as a covenant of works, is not ſimply Do, but Do, and Live: and this conditional form, which is properly the precept and command of the covenant of works, he is indeed delivered from; for Chriſt, as Surety, came under the law, as a covenant of works, or as it ſtood in this conditional Do, and Live: for he yielded perfect obedience to it, to procure life by it; and ſo the believer is wholly delivered from obedience to it; that is, to obtain life by it, or to procure everlaſting life by his obedience. The precept, thus formed as the condition of life, by virtue of the annexation of the promiſe of life to the obedience of it, is the precept of the covenant of works; and from this precept he is freed, and ſo is dead to the law in reſpect of the precept of it, in and through Jeſus Chriſt his Surety.

2. The promiſe of life is another thing in the covenant of works; and this runs in the ſame line with the former, being ſo connected with it. The promiſe of life in the law, or covenant of works, was juſt the promiſe of eternal life, upon condition of perfect obedience: now, the believer's freedom from the law, in this reſpect, flows from his freedom from it in the former reſpect: for, if he be freed from the Do, or obedience, as required in that old covenant-form, then he is not to expect eternal life, as it is promiſed in that covenant; nay, the law is diveſted of its promiſe of life to the believer: that is to ſay, his obedience to the law hath not the promiſe of eternal life, as the legal ground and title upon which he is to obtain it: he holds his title to eternal life in Jeſus Chriſt, his Surety, in whom he hath a perfect obedience, to which eternal life is promiſed; and which is now the alone ſure ground upon which it is to be procured. The believer's own obedience to the law, or his goſpel-obedience, and conformity to the law, wrought in him, and done by him, through the the help of the Spirit of grace; even this obedience of his, I say, hath not the legal promise of eternal life, as if it were the legal condition of his obtaining eternal life: no, his gospel-obedience hath indeed a gospel-promise, connecting it with eternal life, as it is an evidence of his union to Christ, in whom all the promises are Yea and Amen; and as it is a walking in the way to heaven, without which none shall ever come to the end; For without holiness it is impossible to see God. But the legal promise of eternal life made to obedience, and which makes our personal obedience to be the cause and matter of our justification, and as the proper condition of salvation and eternal life, this is the promise of the law, or covenant of works; and this promise it is now wholly divested of, as to the believer in Jesus Christ, who hath taken his law-room, and yielded that perfect obedience, to which the promise of eternal life is now made: and the reason why I say, the promise of eternal life is now made to Christ's perfect obedience in our room and stead, is, Because the law, or covenant of works, made no promise of life properly, but to man's own personal obedience; it made no mention of a surety: but now, in sovereign mercy, this law-rigour is abated, and the Surety is accepted, to whose obedience life is promised.

3. The threatening of death, in case of disobedience, is another thing in the covenant of works; death, and wrath, and the curse, is the penalty of the law: death is the reward of sin and disobedience to the law; In the day thou sinnest thou shalt die; and this the believer is also freed from by the death of Christ, who died for our sins: the law saith, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law, to do them; but the gospel saith, Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us, Gal. iii. 10, 13. As the law then to the believer is divested of its promise of life, so as it cannot justify him for his obedience; so it is divested of its threatening of death, and cannot condemn him for his disobedience to it as a covenant, that covenant-form of it being done away in Christ Jesus, with respect to the believer. I think some will, perhaps object, saying, That the believer is delivered from the curse of the law, we understand; but still we cannot fathom how he is dead to the command of the law: that he is dead to the condemning power of the law, is plain; but, how is he dead to the preceptive, mandatory, commanding power of the law? To which it might be replied, He is dead to, and delivered from the preceptive part of the law, not materially, but formally; for the command of it materially, is, Do, or yield obedience; this he can never be delivered from, so long as he is a creature, and God his Creator: but the command of it formally, or under the form of the covenant of works, is; Do, and Live; Do, by your own strength; Do, as the condition of your eternal life; and Do under the pain of eternal death and damation: this, I say, which is the commanding part of the law, formally considered, as it is a covenant of works, he is wholly and altogether delivered from. To preach the mandatory part of the law, as a covenant of works, is to preach the moral law, not merely as a rule of life, but as the condition of life eternal; in which sense the believer is not at all bound to acknowledge it: and to say, that the believer is delivered from the law, that is, only from the curse of the law, would make some very strange glosses upon many scriptures: for example, Gal. iii. 10. As many as are of the works of the law, are under the curse; the meaning of it then would be, As many as are under the curse, are under the curse. It must therefore be meant of the precept of the law; As many as are under the precept, are under the penalty thereof. The believer then is dead to, and delivered from the law in its commanding and condemning power, and that in, and through Christ. And I am not afraid, nor ashamed to say it, in the words of the famous doctor Owen, "That the whole "power and sanction of the first covenant was "conferred upon Christ, and in him fulfilled "and ended." And I think I say no more than what the apostle, a greater than he, saith, Rom. x. 4. Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.—Thus you see what it is in the law, the believer is dead to, more generally.

3dly, The third thing here proposed was, What it is to be dead to the law, more particularly as it comes under the notion of death. And here, 1. I shall shew the import of this death. 2. Some of the qualities of it.

(1.) To shew the import of this death. The notion of death may here help us to the import: for,

1. As in death there is no relation takes place; it dissolves the relation betwixt master and servant, husband and wife, Job iii. 19. The servant is freed from his master: so here, the man being dead to the law, the relation betwixt him and it is dissolved, Rom. vii. 1,—4. He is now married to Christ, and divorced from the law: while the man is alive to the law, the relation stands; For I testify to every one that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law, Gal. v. 3.

2. In death there is no care or thoughtfulness; Eccl. ix. 10. There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest; intimating to us, that in death there is no care, nor thoughtfulness, nor concern about doing any thing: so the man that is dead to the law, he hath no more care, nor concern about the works of the law in point of JUSTIFICATION, than a dead corps about the work in which it was occupied while living: while the man is alive to the law, all his care and concern is about the works of the law; Do, and Live.

3. In death there is no hope; The land of the living is the land of hope, Eccl. ix. 4. Even so the man that is dead to the law, he hath no hope nor expectation from the law, or from his obedience thereto. The man that is alive to the law, he hath hope, that God will pardon him, and pity him; why? because he does so and so; he is a good neighbour, he wrongs no-body, he is just in his dealings, and careful in his duties, and touching the righteousness of the law, he is blameless: he hath a good heart towards God, and he hath a good life too; and therefore he hopes to be justified and saved of God, for Christ's sake: for he hath learned, it may be, to make so much use of Christ, as to think he cannot be saved without him; but still his hope and expectation is founded upon the law. But now, the man dead to the law, he hath no hope from the law; nay, he despairs of salvation by the deeds of the law: as he sees he cannot do any thing, without grace and strength from above, so even when he does any thing by the help of grace, he sees it so lame and imperfect, that God cannot justify or save him, to the honour and credit of his justice, unless he hath a perfect righteousness. He hath no hope by the law.

hath

4. In death there is no toil, no turbulant passion nor affection: natural death puts an end to natural affections, which take place in man's life-time; such as the weary pursuit of what we love, and the wearisome flight from what we hate, or fear: there is no such thing in the grave; There the weary are at rest, Job iii. 19. They that are alive to the law, and find the life of their hands, they weary themselves in the greatness of their way, as it is expressed, Isa. lvii. 10. Many a weary night and day they may have in pursuing after their lovers, in establishing their darling self-righteousness. The law gives them a wearisome task, to make brick without affording straw; and leads them with heavy burdens of curses, in case the task be not performed. But when a man is dead to the law, then the weary are at rest: Christ is the rest; Come to me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Then the man gets rest to his conscience, in the blood and righteousness of Christ, the end of the law: rest to his passions and affections; he rests from his fears, legal fears of hell, and wrath threatened in the law: the believer indeed may be filled with them, but so far as he is dead to the law, so far is he at rest from these legal slavish fears. He rests from his love and delight; the law affords its votaries much pleasure, sometimes in the performance of their duty in a legal way: but now the believer takes no delight in that way of justification; he is out of conceit with himself, and his duties, because they are vile; yea, though they were not so vile as they are, but perfect, yet he is out of conceit with that way of life, and beholding the glory of the new covenant and way of salvation, joins issue with Job, chap. ix. 15, 21. Whom, though I were righteous, yet would I not answer, but I would make supplication to my judge; though I were perfect, yet would I not know my soul, I would despise my life. In a word, he rests from his legal griefs and sorrows, because he rests from his legal labours. As it is said of the dead in Christ, in another sense, Rev. xiv. 13. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, they rest from their labours, and their works follow them; so I may say in this case, Blessed are the dead which die to the law, they rest from their labours, their toilsome, troublesome, wearisome, legal works, and yet their works do follow them: they are now created in Christ Jesus unto good works. But,

5. In death there is no sense: a dead man does not see, nor hear, nor taste, nor smell, nor exert any natural sense; so they that are dead to it, they do not now see the lightenings of Sinai all in a flame, as formerly they did; they do not hear the thunders thereof; they do not smell the sulphure of the burning mountain; they do not feel the terror of vindictive vengeance, the tempest that surrounded the mount; they do not taste the gall, the bitterness of the wrath threatened in the law; the bitterness of death is over with them, so far as they see that Christ drank the gall for them; yea, so far they are dead to the law, they are dead to all Sinai wrath: for, They are not come to the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness and darkness, and tempest, and the sound of the trumpet, and the voice of words,—but they are come to mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, Heb. xii. 18,—24. But what? Have the godly no sense of law-wrath? Yea, so far as they are legal, and under the law (for they are never wholly freed from a legal temper while here) the dead ghost of the law may rise up and fright them; but so far as they are dead to the law, it is not law-wrath, but fatherly-wrath that affects them. Indeed, through unbelief, they may fear hell; but they cannot do so by faith, seeing there is no foundation for either that faith or fear, in the Bible, that a believer shall be cast into hell, since there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus.

6. In death there is no motion; vital motion ceases when death takes place: thus, so far as a man is dead to the law, so far the motions of sin are killed; for, the motions of sin are by the law, Rom. vii. 5. By the law occasionally and accidentally men running the more into sin, by how much the more they are forbidden to commit sin. Hence Musculus compares the law, in this respect, to a chaste matron in a brothel-house, which by her good advice does prove an occasion to some impudent whores to be more bold, and impudent in their impiety; Sin taking occasion by the law, or commandment, saith the apostle, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. But now, so far as a man is dead to the law, so far are the motions of sin killed, and his soul quickened to live unto God. Of which more afterwards.

(2.) To shew some of the qualities of this death to the law.

1. It is an universal death: I do not mean that it is common to all the children of men, though it be a common death to the children of God, and to every one of them; yet it is a rare death among the children of men: The whole world lies in wickedness, and are dead in sins and trespasses; few are dead in this sense: but what I mean by its being universal, is, that the man that is dead to the law in point of justification; he is dead to every part of the law in its old covenant-form, to the precept of it, to the penalty of it, so as he is not to be justified by the one, nor condemned by the other. He is dead to every legal form of the law; his gospel obedience thereto, is no part of his righteousness for justification before God; if he should endeavour to make his gospel-obedience to the law, as a rule of life, in the hand of a Mediator, any part of his righteousness for justification, he so far turns the covenant of grace, and the duties required therein, into a covenant of works, and he seeks to live unto that, to which he is, and should be dead. It is true, the form of the law in the gospel-covenant does not require obedience for justification; but yet this corrupt nature is prone to turn to the old byass, and abuse the proper form of it, by turning of the rule of obedience into a rule of acceptance. If a man make faith itself an act, or any act or fruit of it, the matter of his justification, he turns it to a covenant of works: the believer is dead to faith itself in this respect; yea, faith renounces itſelf, and all things elſe, but the righteouſneſs of Chriſt for juſtification. In this ſenſe, he is dead to repentance, love, and other graces; he is dead to every obedience to the law, as a covenant of works; to his natural legal obedience before his converſion; and to his ſpiritual goſpel obedience after converſion: which, though it be a righteouſneſs that God works, and is the Author of; yet, becauſe it is the believer that is the ſubject, and made the actor thereof, it is called his own righteouſneſs, or conformity to the law: all which he renounced in the matter of juſtification, deſiring to be found in Chriſt, not having his own righteouſneſs, that is after the law, but the righteouſneſs which is of God by faith, Phil. iii. 9. So that I ſay, it is an univerſal death.

2. It is a lingering death. It is not eaſy to get the law killed: ſomething of a legal diſpoſition remains even in the believer while he is in this world: many a ſtroak does ſelf, and ſelf-righteouſneſs get, but ſtill it revives again. If he were wholly dead to the law, he would be wholly dead to ſin; but ſo far as the law lives, ſo far ſin lives. They that think they know the goſpel well enough, bewray their ignorance; no man can be too evangelical; it will take all his life-time to get a legal temper deſtroyed. Though the believer be delivered wholly from the law, in its commanding and condemning power and authority, or in its rightful power that it hath over all that are under it; yet he is not delivered wholly from its uſurped power, which takes place many times upon him, while here, through remaining unbelief.

3. It is a painful death; it is like the cutting off the right-hand, and plucking out the right-eye: The man hath no inclination to part with the law. It is as natural for him to expect God's favour upon his doing ſo and ſo, and to expect life and ſalvation by his own obedience, or doing as well as he can, as it is natural for him to draw his breath; If we do our beſt, God will accept of us, that is the natural language of every one, who is wedded to the Do and Live of the firſt covenant. And, O what a pain is it to be brought off from that way! To die to the law, is moſt unnatural, ſtrange doctrine; and legal pangs, and pains of conviction, and humiliation muſt be borne, before a right thought about dying to the law can be brought forth.

4. It is a pleaſant death; it is painful at firſt, but pleaſant at laſt: O how pleaſant is it, to ſee ſelf abaſed, and grace exalted; ſelf-righteouſneſs cried down, and Chriſt's righteouſneſs cried up in the ſoul! Wiſdom's ways are pleaſantneſs; and this way particularly, wherein no fleſh does glory in his preſence; but he that glorieth, glorieth in the Lord: he rejoiceth in Chriſt Jeſus, and hath no confidence in the fleſh: he doth joy in God, through Jeſus Chriſt, by whom he receives the atonement; and grace reigning through righteouſneſs, to eternal life by Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Rom. v. 11, 21. This death is a pleaſant parting, when the man is brought to a parting with all his own rags for a glorious robe, Iſa. lxiv. 6. lxi. 10. and xlv. 24.

5. It is an honourable death: to be dead to the law, is a death that brings honour to God, to Chriſt, to the law, and to the believer. It brings honour to God's holineſs, which is now ſatisfied by Chriſt's doing; and honour to God's juſtice, which is now ſatisfied by Chriſt's dying.—It brings honour to Chriſt; for now the man values the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, as being indeed the righteouſneſs of God, and a full, ſufficient, perfect righteouſneſs.—It brings honour to the law, when, inſtead of our imperfect obedience, we bring it to an obedience better than men or angels in their beſt eſtate could give it, even the Lawgiver's obedience; which indeed doth magnify the law, and make it honourable.—It brings honour alſo to the believer himſelf: he is honoured and beautified with a law-biding righteouſneſs, truly meritorious, and every way glorious: This is the honour of all the ſaints.

6. It is a profitable death: it is a happy death, and a holy death; profitable both for happineſs and holineſs; profitable both for juſtification and ſanctification. Our legal righteouſneſs is unprofitable; I will declare thy righteouſneſs, and thy works; for they ſhall not profit thee, Iſa. lvii. 12. It is unprofitable for juſtification; for, by the deeds of the law ſhall no fleſh living be juſtified: it is unprofitable for ſanctification; for his filthy rags do rather pollute him than purify him.—But the righteouſneſs of Chriſt is profitable every way: they are happy that have it; for, they are juſtified from all things, from which they could not be juſtified by the law of Moſes: they are holy that have it; as will appear in the ſequel of our diſcourſe. Being dead to the law, is the way to live unto God.

4*thly*, The fourth thing here propoſed, is the means of this death; I THROUGH the LAW am dead to the law: the mean of death to the law, is the law. But then a queſtion may be moved, How can this be, ſeeing the law is the cauſe of no good thing in us, and is the miniſtration of death, and condemnation? 2 Cor. iii. 7, 8, 9. In anſwer to which, we may obſerve, That though the law is not the cauſe of this death to the law, and ſo death to ſin; yet it is an occaſion thereof, for it accuſes, terrifies, and condemns us, and therefore occaſions and urgeth us to flee to Chriſt, who is the true cauſe that we die to the law, and to ſin: as the needle goes before, and draws the thread which ſews the cloth; ſo the needle of the law goes before, and makes way for the grace of the goſpel, that it may follow after, and take place in the heart. To be dead to the law, and married to Chriſt, is all one in ſcripture ſenſe. Now, to be DEAD to the law, by the LAW, is by means of the law, to be led to Chriſt for juſtification, by faith in him, without the deeds of the law; The law was our ſchoolmaſter to lead us to Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by faith, Gal. iii. 24.; where the law may be taken either for the ceremonial or moral law. If we take it for the ceremonial law, then it is true that the ceremonial law pointed out Chriſt to us truly: but then the ceremonial law was goſpel, in the ſubſtance of it, though vailed over with types and ſhadows, which were to continue till the body was come: but if we take it for the moral law, then it brings us to Chriſt only occaſionally; for to bring us to Chriſt, is no proper work of the law, only it is the occaſion thereof, inſomuch as it forces us from itſelf, and makes us to ſee that by it there is no hope of life; ſo it curſes all ſinners, and gives hope of life to none: it is the goſpel only that ſhews us the ſalvation to be had in Chriſt. Now, the law, by the ſeverity of it, is an occaſion to us of ſeeking life, where it is to be found: like a child, knowing the tenderneſs of his father's love, and finding the ſchool-maſter to be very ſevere and ſharp, he runs from the ſeverity of the maſter, to hide himſelf under his father's wings; yet not by his maſter's teaching, but his ſeverity is the occaſion of it: even ſo it is through the law, and its ſeverity, that the believer is dead to the law: it is then by a law-work, in ſome meaſure, a work of legal conviction and humiliation, that a man comes to be dead to the law.

a child

Here I will name to you a few pieces of law-work, which are the occaſion of the man's being dead to the law, when the Spirit of God makes uſe of the law for that end.

1. Through the law a man gets the conviction of the holineſs of God, and of the holineſs, ſpirituality, and extent of the law itſelf; the Spirit of God enlightens the mind, to ſee the conformity of the command unto the will of God, and to the holy nature of God; this is called the coming of the commandment, Rom. vii. 9. For I was alive without the law once: I thought I was holy enough, I found the life of my hand, while I was touching the righteouſneſs of the law, blameleſs; but when the commandment came, ſin revived, and I died. When I ſaw the holineſs and ſpirituality of God's law, ſin revived, and I died; I ſaw that I was a ſinner indeed, and I died to the law, and to all conceit of my own works, and obedience to the law. This conviction makes a man have a doctrinal approbation of the law as holy, juſt, and good; holy, in its precepts; juſt, in its threatenings; and good, in its promiſes: I conſent to the law, that it is good. By this conviction, a man ſees not only the holineſs and ſpirituality, but the extent of the law; Thy commandment is exceeding broad; it is extended to all my thoughts, words, and actions; to all my affections, deſigns, deſires, and inclinations. Now, when a man ſees this, it kills his confidence, and makes him ſee he hath no righteouſneſs conformable to the law.

2. Through the law, the man gets the conviction of ſin; By the law is the knowledge of ſin, Rom. iii. 20. Conviction of ſin is the conſciouſneſs of our tranſgreſſing of this holy law. This conviction makes a man ſee ſin in its nature, that it is the tranſgreſſion of the law, 1 John iii. 4. and ſo a contrariety to the holy nature and will of God. This conviction makes a man ſee the kinds of ſin: it may be, the Spirit of God begins with ſome actual, grievous ſin; actual ſin is the ſwerving of our actions, either in thought, word, or deed, from the law of God, either by omiſſion or commiſſion. From thence the conviction goes to original ſin, letting the man ſee, that not only is his nature deſtitute of all righteouſneſs, and conformity to the law, but that it is wholly corrupt, that he is juſt a hell of ſin and enmity againſt God; and from thence the Spirit of God by the law, convinces the man of the originating ſin, even of Adam's ſin, and ſays to him, as it is, Iſa. xliii. 27. Thy firſt father hath ſinned, and thou in him. —This conviction makes a man ſee alſo the aggravations of ſin, how much light, and how many mercies he hath ſinned againſt: and alſo the power and dominion of ſin, what a ſlave he is thereto, and that the law is ſo far from freeing him therefrom, that it but exaſperates corruption, and ſo is the ſtrength of ſin. Now, when the man comes thus to ſee ſin in its nature, kinds, aggravations, and dominion, what can more tend to kill his conceit of righteouſneſs by the law?

3. Through the law the man gets the conviction of guilt as well as ſin, that he is bound over to puniſhment according to the law; for guilt is properly an obligation to puniſhment. As by the precept of the law, the man comes to get the knowledge of the intrinſical evil of ſin in its nature; ſo by the penalty of the law, he comes to get the knowledge of the conſequential evil of ſin, as binding him over to hell, death, and damnation; that the curſe of God, the wrath of God, the vengeance of God is the retinue and train of attendants that accompany ſin: and ſo the man is put in fear of hell and damnation. It may be, when he goes to bed, he ſhall never riſe again; when he goes out, he thinks he ſhall never come in again; he is afraid his meat choke him, or the houſe fall above his head, or the earth open and ſwallow him up: ſenſe of wrath haunts him like a ghoſt; the man is put in priſon, and concluded under ſin, Gal. iii. 22. Sin is the priſon, the ſinner is the priſoner, God is the Judge, and the curſe of the law is the bond by which the priſoner is tied neck and heel; and from this priſon there is no eſcape, without the mercy of God in Chriſt; who can command this priſoner to come forth? The law cannot do it; it is weak through the fleſh; man cannot do it, he is by nature without ſtrength: only he, whom God hath given to be a covenant to the people, can ſay to the priſoner, Go forth, Iſa. xlix. 6, 9. Now, when the man is thus convinced of guilt and wrath by the law, this hath a tendency to make him dead to the law, and to kill his confidence in any legal righteouſneſs of his own. O! is there any poor priſoner here, that finds himſelf ſhut up in priſon, under the power of ſin, and under the guilt of ſin, and wrath of God? O! let this give you ſome comfort for the preſent, till God looſe your bands, that this is the way God is taking to make you dead to the law, that you may live to God.

4. Through the law, a man gets the conviction of God's equity and righteouſneſs, though he ſhould puniſh, and execute law-vengeance; and ſo is made to juſtify God, though he ſhould ſend him to hell. I do not ſay, that the ſinner is made content to be damned; no: that, in ſome reſpect, were to be content to be an enemy to God, and to ſin againſt him for ever; for, the ſtate of the damned includes everlaſting enmity and ſin, and ſo it can never be the thing he is made content with; but the man is brought to a conviction of God's equity and righteouſneſs, though he ſhould ſend him to hell, as an everlaſting puniſhment. "To juſtify God, ſays an eminent divine, is to acknowledge on the one hand, that he does no wrong to the ſinner in the execution of the curſe; and, on the other hand, that he does no wrong to himſelf, or to his own juſtice, when he executes the judgment threatened againſt ſin, but that he does that which is right." O, ſays the ſinner, in this caſe, God does me no wrong, though he ſhould deſtroy me; and he does not wrong his own juſtice, but is a juſt God in ſo doing: yea, I cannot ſee how the credit of his juſtice ſhould be ſalved, and how he ſhould be glorified in his juſtice, if he did not execute judgment upon me, either in myſelf, or in a ſurety for me, becauſe becauſe I have offended ſuch an infinitely glorious Being; Againſt thee, thee only have I ſinned, —that thou mighteſt be juſtified when thou ſpeakeſt; and clear when thou judgeſt, Pſal. li. 4. Is God unrighteous, that takes vengeance? God forbid, Rom. iii. 5, 6. The offence done againſt the greateſt of Beings, deſerves the greateſt of puniſhments, even the eternal deſtruction of the creature. It is true, God delights not in the death of a ſinner; As I live, I have no pleaſure in the death of a ſinner, Ezek. xviii. 32.; that is, as it is a deſtruction of the creature, though he delights in it, as it is the execution of juſtice; even ſo, the ſinner convinced by the law, though he cannot take pleaſure in this, to think of being deſtroyed, yet there is ſome ſecret kind of juſtifying that which God takes pleaſure in, namely, the execution of juſtice. O how fit is it, that God's juſtice be glorified! And, how juſt is God, in executing infinite judgment upon ſuch an infinite evil as ſin is! And indeed the ſinner would not ſee ſalvation to be free, if he did not ſee damnation to be juſt; but the ſight of this, in the glaſs of the law, and in the light of the Spirit, tends, in a manner, to reconcile the man with the device of ſalvation through Chriſt, whoſe bloody ſacrifice gives juſtice full ſatisfaction. He is now content that God's juſtice be glorified by a ſatisfaction more glorious than that which the damned in hell can give; and ſo it tends to make him dead to the law, and to all other legal pennances, and ſham ſatisfactions, which thoſe, who are ignorant of God's equity and righteouſneſs, are ready fooliſhly to invent.

5. Through the law a man gets the conviction of his own inexcuſeableneſs, which is that effect of a legal work of the Spirit, whereby the ſoul is left without excuſe of, or defence for itſelf; Whatſoever things the law ſaith, it ſaith to them that are under it, that every mouth may be ſtopt, and all the world may become guilty before God, Rom. iii. 19. Now, the whole ſoul of the man cries out, Guilty, guilty; his fig-leaves of excuſes are blown away; his former ſhifts, and cavils, in defence of himſelf, do now evaniſh: he hath not a word to ſpeak in favours of himſelf. What ſaid he formerly? Why, it may be, his heart ſaid, if not his mouth, O I hope there will be no fear of me, Adam's ſin was not mine; original ſin is what I could not help, it came with me to the world; as for my actual ſins, I ſee others guilty of greater; as for my omiſſion of duties, and commiſſion of treſpaſſes, I ſee none but have their faults; and God is a merciful God, and I hope he will not be ſo unjuſt as to damn his own creatures.—Theſe, and the like, ſhifts and excuſes formerly took place; but now he becomes ſpeechleſs; his mouth is ſtopt. They ſee they will but deceive themſelves by theſe miſerable ſhifts, and that they are guilty, guilty, and ſinful wretches, blacker than the very devil, and have not a mouth to open for themſelves; and ſo they die to all conceit of themſelves, and their own righteouſneſs.

6. Through the law the man comes thus to get a conviction of his abſolute need of the goſpel, or of the SAVIOUR revealed thereby; being convinced of his ſinful and miſerable ſtate by nature, and humbled under the ſerious conſideration and view of his ſin and miſery, fearing the wrath of God due to him for ſin, beholding the equity of God, though he ſhould caſt him into hell; having his mouth ſtopt, and deſpairing of getting out of this condition, by his own power, or the help of any other creature; he is now convinced of the need of a Saviour: O I periſh, I periſh for ever, unleſs the Law-giver provide a law-biding righteouſneſs for me! Now, the ſoul is ready to cry out, not in Rachel's ſenſe, Give me child-en, or elſe I die; but in her phraſe, O give me Chriſt, or elſe I die; give me a Surety, or elſe I die. Now, he is content to be for ever indebted to the righteouſneſs of another: and thus the law is the occaſion of bringing a man to Chriſt. And ſo you ſee how it is, that through the law, they are dead to the law, that they may live unto God.

III. The third thing is to ſpeak of the believer's LIFE, which is the fruit of this death; it is a living unto God. And now, in ſpeaking hereto, I would, 1. Enquire what kind of life it is? 2. What are the ſcriptural deſignations of it? 3. What is imported in its being called a living in general? 4 What is imported in its being called a living unto GOD in particular?

1ſt, What kind of life is it that the believer hath in conſequence of his being dead to the law? And,

1. It is not a natural life, either in a phyſical or moral ſenſe. Natural life, in a phyſical ſenſe, is that which we received from Adam by generation; and it is the function of natural faculties, in living, moving, uſing of ſenſe and reaſon; that is a life that is common to all men, who yet may be dead: neither is it a natural life in a moral ſenſe, ſuch as heathens may have; the heathens may have common notions of God, and of good and evil, ſo as to render them inexcuſable in their unnatural immoralities, Rom. i. 19, 20. They have a book of nature, both internal, in the remainders of the law in their heart, ſo as they do by nature the things contained in the law, Rom. ii. 14, 15. and external, in God's works of creation and general providence; The heavens declare the glory of the Lord, and the firmament ſheweth his handy-work, Pſal. xix. 1. Now, this natural life cannot be the living to God here ſpoken of, becauſe this natural life flows only from a natural ſtate, which is a ſtate of death: by nature we are dead, legally dead under condemnation; ſpiritually dead in ſins, wholly corrupt, and the tree being bad, the fruit muſt be bad alſo; a filthy fountain can bring forth nothing but filthy ſtreams.—This natural life does proceed from natural principles, and theſe are corrupt; ſuch as the deſires of the fleſh and of the mind; the luſts of the fleſh, the luſt of the eye, and the pride of life. At beſt their natural life flows from ſelf-love, or love to its own honour, praiſes, profits, or pleaſures: all nature's works are ſelfiſh, however heroic they may be. This natural life is directed by a natural rule, ſuch as the light of nature inward, or outward, accompanied with the counſels and examples of naturaliſts; neither does it ever come up to that ſame rule of nature's light, which therefore does condemn them as guilty. This natural life hath only natural deſigns, and ends; the natural man acts from ſelf as his principle, to ſelf as his end, aſcribing the glory of all his actions thereunto: thus Herod gave not God the glory of his fine oration, but took the praiſe to himſelf; but he was immediately ſmitten of an angel, and eaten up of worms.—This natural way of living, it is in a natural manner, after the courſe of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, Eph. ii. 2. which is nothing but a walking in the luſts of the fleſh, fulfilling the deſires of the fleſh and of the mind: yea, in this natural life, nothing of Chriſt, or of his goſpel, is either in the ſtate, practice, rule, end, or manner of it; nay, they are without Chriſt, being aliens from the commonwealth of Iſrael, and ſtrangers to the covenants of promiſe; having no hope, and without God, [or ATHEISTS] in the world, Eph. ii. 12.

natural

2. It is not a legal life, either of Jewiſh conformity to the ceremonial law, or of perfect conformity to the moral law: It is not that legal life of Jewiſh conformity to the ceremonial law, or according to the Old Teſtament diſpenſation; for that ceremonial law is abrogated in Chriſt, the ſubſtance of all the old ſhadows; and ſo that Jewiſh life is unprofitable, and vain; yea, it is damnable, and prohibited under the higheſt penalties, Col. iii. 20, 21. And therefore ſays the apoſtle, Gal. v. 2. If ye be circumciſed, [or live according to the ceremonial law, or any other law of works, ſo as to expect juſtification thereby,] Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing. Neither is this living to God that perfect life of conformity to the moral law, according to the old covenant of works, which required perfect, perſonal, and perpetual obedience, as the condition of life; and threatened death upon the leaſt failure: I ſay, it is not this life either; for man hath become guilty, and forfeited life, and incurred death by Adam's firſt tranſgreſſion; By one man ſin entered into the world, and death by ſin; and ſo death paſſed upon all men, for that all have ſinned, Rom. v. 12. Thus we are for ever incapable of that life, which Adam was capable of before the fall. It is alſo impracticable, becauſe man is by nature without ſtrength, Rom. v. 6. We have no ſtrength to give that obedience which the covenant of works requires, becauſe we muſt be redeemed from the curſe thereof, and reſtored to the righteouſneſs thereof, before we can be capable to do what it requires. And though Adam's ſin and tranſgreſſion were not imputed to us, as indeed it undoubtedly is, yet ſeeing every adult perſon at leaſt hath ſinned after the ſimilitude of Adam's tranſgreſſion; for no man liveth and ſinneth not; therefore he can never perform the perfect obedience therein required; and by the deeds of the law no fleſh can be juſtified. Beſides, there is no article of the covenant of works, that provided for a remedy in caſe of a breach; but all that the covenant of works doth, is, to promiſe life to perfect obedience in man's own ſtrength, and threatens death in caſe of failure, and ſo leaves the tranſgreſſor thereof under its curſe.—In a word, the life according to that covenant cannot be the life here meant, becauſe that covenant ſpeaks nothing of Chriſt, or of his goſpel, by whom, and by which, only we can now come to this living unto God; and becauſe this living unto God preſuppoſes a being dead to the law, or dead to that covenant, otherwiſe we can never live unto God.

3. It is not a phariſaical life of external, legal, but imperfect conformity to the law, and thereby endeavouring to eſtabliſh a righteouſneſs of our own, as the Jews, Rom. ix. 31, 32. and Rom. x. 3. Many reckon an outward moral converſation to be this living unto God, whether in performing the natural duties of civility and moral honeſty, or in an external performance of religious duties, ſuch as prayer, praiſe, reading, hearing, and waiting upon divine worſhip. The church of Laodicea was ſelf-conceited; they thought they were rich and increaſed with goods; but, behold the teſtificate that Chriſt gave them, that they were neither cold nor hot, ſuch as God would ſpew out of his mouth; yea, that they were wretched, miſerable, blind, and naked: that is all the teſtimony that he gave them, who looked upon themſelves as rich in legal righteouſneſs, and good works. This phariſaical life may be accompanied with a glorious profeſſion; they may profeſs ſoundneſs in the faith, and diſown all theſe legal and unſound principles, which others may have as their ſtated opinion; they may profeſs that righteouſneſs and juſtification is not by the works of the law, but by the faith of Chriſt, or by the works of Chriſt received by faith alone; they may have a ſound head, but no ſound heart, nor a good conſcience, nor faith unfeigned; for the end of the commandment is love, proceeding from theſe, 1 Tim. i. 5. People may be like the toad, that hath a precious ſtone in his head, but hath his belly full of poiſon; they may have a head full of knowledge, and a heart full of enmity; a filthy mud-wall may be garniſhed with fine arras; a rotten ſepulchre may be whitened: they may have much of the matter, and external form of godlineſs, and yet want the power, and internal form thereof; a name to live, and be dead. Yea, this phariſaical life may be accompanied with many excellent gifts, and common graces, and high attainments (as well as all viſible church-privileges) as we find ſome apoſtates may have, Heb. vi. 4, 5, 6. Their underſtanding may be ſo far enlightened, that they may attain to ſtrange diſcoveries of Chriſt. Balaam was called a man whoſe eyes were opened, and that ſaw the viſions of the Almighty, Num. xxiv. 2, 3, 4, 15. Their wills may be ſo far renewed, as to have a great many good purpoſes, like theſe who reſolved to ſerve the Lord with all their heart, Deut. v. 27, 29. Joſh. xxiv. 18, 21. They may be almoſt perſuaded to be Chriſtians.—Their affections may be greatly raiſed, and enlarged; they may be raiſed to ſome ſorrow for ſin, like Judas, and like Eſau, who ſought the bleſſing with tears; to ſome joy, like the ſtony-ground hearers, who received the word with joy and pleaſure, yet had no root; to ſome delight, like the Jews, of whom it is ſaid, Iſa. lviii. 2. That they ſought him daily, and delighted to know his ways; yea, to ſome fear and reverence, like theſe enemies that are ſaid to ſubmit themſelves, Pſal. lxvi. 3. and even to ſome extraordinary raptures, like theſe who are ſaid to taſte of the heavenly gift, and to be partakers of the Holy Ghoſt. On all which accounts their life and converſation may be changed in part. Thus many, Through the knowledge of God, and of Chriſt, have eſcaped the pollutions of the world, 2 Pet. ii. 20, 21, 22. The common gifts and graces of the Spirit may warm, ſmooth, and waſh their outward converſation; all this will not amount to this living unto God in the text. Well, what kind of life then is this? We reply,

4. It is a ſpiritual life, being the action, motion, and gracious ſaving operation of the Spirit of God in us, cauſing us to walk in his ſtatutes, Ezek. xxxvi. 27. It is the life of a ſpiritual man. It is impoſſible for one to have a godly life, whatever to the world he may ſeem to have, have, till he be a godly perſon, or in a ſpiritual ſtate. A man muſt have a ſtate of union to Chriſt, by the faith of God's operation, ſo that being married with this Huſband, he may bring forth fruit unto God. The branch of the old Adam cannot bear good fruit; it is only the true branch, planted in Chriſt by the ſpirit of faith, that bears good fruit, John xv. 4, 5. A man muſt be in a ſtate of reconciliation with God, juſtified, pardoned, and indemnified, before God accept of any ſervice off his hand; for two cannot walk together, or live together, unleſs they be agreed. God accepts no action from an enemy, but his returning to him by faith in Chriſt, and then begins all perſonal acceptance. Men muſt be in a ſtate of adoption, before it is poſſible that they can be followers of God as dear children; in a ſtate of renovation, renewed by the Holy Ghoſt in the ſpirit of our mind. The godly man, that is in caſe for a godly life, is juſt a new creation; even the workmanſhip of God, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works, which God before ordained that he ſhould walk in them. If the heart be not right with God, a man cannot have a right life, or live unto God.——But I ſhall go on to enquire, 2dly, Into the ſcriptural deſignations of this life. To give all the names that it comes under in ſcripture, were too large a taſk: I ſhall only ſingle out ſome of the moſt notable names it gets in ſcripture. It is ſometimes deſigned from GOD, ſometimes from CHRIST, ſometimes from the SPIRIT, and ſometimes from theſe names that import the other ſpecial qualities and properties of it.

1. Sometimes it is deſigned from GOD; and it is called the life of God, Eph. iv. 18. from which all natural men are alienated: this is a wonderful name that it gets, the life of God; who can tell what this life of God is? God lives in himſelf, and the believer lives in God; His life is hid with Chriſt in God, Col. iii. 3. The beſt we can ſay of it, is, that it begins in grace, and ends in glory; and is wholly of God, and in him.

2. Sometimes it is deſigned from CHRIST; and ſo it is called a living by faith on the Son of God, Gal. ii. 20. immediately following our text; where, when the apoſtle would explain what he underſtands by his living unto God, he ſays, Nevertheleſs I live, yet not I, but Chriſt liveth in me. Chriſt, might he ſay, is the ALPHA and OMEGA of my life, the beginning and the end of it; the author and finiſher of it; Chriſt is the principle of my life, from whom I live; Chriſt is the end of my life, to whom I live; Chriſt is the pattern of my life, according to whoſe example I live; Chriſt is the giver of my life, the maintainer of my life, the reſtorer of my life; after decays, he reſtores my ſoul, and makes me to walk in the paths of righteouſneſs, for his name's ſake: Chriſt is the food of my life; I would die, if he did not feed me with his fleſh and blood, which is living bread and water to me: Chriſt is the medicine of my life; it is by renewed touches of the hem of his garment, and renewed applications to him, that my ſoul is healed; for, there is healing under the wings of this Sun of righteouſneſs: Chriſt is the ALL of my life; For to me to live is Chriſt; he is my light, my ſtrength, my righteouſneſs. It is the glory of the believer to acknowledge Chriſt the ALPHA and the OMEGA, and the ALL of his ſpiritual life.

3. Sometimes it is deſigned from the SPIRIT, and ſo it is called a living in the Spirit; Gal v. 25. If we live in the Spirit, let us alſo walk in the Spirit. It is a living in the light and leading of the Spirit; Thy Spirit is good: lead me to the land of uprightneſs.—It is a living in the graces and fruits of the Spirit, which are deſcribed, Gal. v. 22. and a bringing forth theſe fruits of the Spirit.—It is a living in the ſtrength and power of the Spirit, which is therefore called a law; The law of the Spirit of life, in Chriſt Jeſus, hath made me free from the law of ſin and death. The power of the Spirit hath the force of a law within the man, inſomuch that when he walks in the Spirit, he does not fulfil the luſts of the fleſh: he ſets the power of the Spirit againſt the power of ſin.—It is a living in the comforts of the Spirit, and joys of the Holy Ghoſt; and when he thus lives, the joy of the Lord is his ſtrength.—It is a walking in the liberty of the Spirit; and, Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. When a man hath this life, then he hath liberty to hear, read, pray, believe, mourn; and liberty to ſerve the Lord; Truly I am thy ſervant, thou haſt looſed my bonds.——In a word, it is a living in the love of the Spirit, and in a conſtant dependence on the Spirit.

4. Sometimes it is deſigned from theſe names that import other ſpecial qualities and properties of it. And here I might bring in a multitude of ſcriptures. It is called a holy life; Be ye holy as I am holy.—It is called a humble life; Walk humbly with thy God.—It is deſigned a heavenly life; Our converſation is in heaven. The man is heavenly in his thoughts, and ſpiritually-minded: heavenly in his ſpeech, deſiring to edify theſe that are about him; heavenly in his affections, which are ſet upon things above; his deſire and delight being ſet upon heavenly things: heavenly in his hope; Looking for that bleſſed hope, and glorious appearing of the great God: heavenly in his trade, trading daily to the heavenly country by faith, prayer, and drawing bills of exchange upon Chriſt, as it were, for all that he ſtands in need of.—It is called an upright life; No good thing will he withhold from him that walketh uprightly.—It is denominated a well-ordered life; To him that orders his converſation aright, will I ſhew the ſalvation of God.—It is called a circumſpect life; See that ye walk circumſpectly.—It is called a goſpel life; Let your converſation be as it becometh the goſpel; that is, as it becomes a goſpel-ſtate, goſpel-principles, goſpel-rules, goſpel-patterns, goſpel-motives, and goſpel-ends; and, under the influence of goſpel-grace, Adorning the doctrine of God our Saviour.——But, omitting all theſe, I only inſtance in one ſcripture, wherein this living unto God is deſcribed, in ſuch a manner, as includes all other properties of it; yea, and comprehends all the duties of obedience we are called to; The grace of God that bringeth ſalvation, hath appeared to all men, teaching us, that denying ungodlineſs, and worldly luſts, we ſhould live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent world, Tit. ii. 11, 12.; where you ſee, this living unto God comprehends all theſe duties of piety towards God, ſobriety towards ourſelves, and righteouſneſs towards our neighbour, which we are obliged to by the law, as a rule of life and holineſs; and all under the influence of the grace of God, revealed in the goſpel, teaching us theſe things efficaciouſly: for the law teacheth them only preceptively; but it is the goſpel that teacheth them them effectively; working in us both to will, and to do. O that we knew this life more than we do!

3*dly*, The third thing here, was, What is imported in its being called a life in general? Indeed this living to God, is the only life that deſerves the name of life. In vegetative life, the trees of the field do excel men; for, from little plants, they turn to ſtately oaks.—In ſenſitive life, the beaſts of the field do excel man, for they go beyond him in theſe natural faculties; as the dog in ſmelling, the eagle in ſeeing, the hare in hearing, and other creatures in other ſenſes.—In rational life, many heathen philoſophers may excel the Chriſtian. So that it is not the vegetative life, whereby plants excel us; nor the ſenſitive life, whereby beaſts excel us; nor the rational life, which reprobates have as well as we; but the SPIRITUAL divine life, that deſerves the name; without which, our life is but a death. However, this ſpiritual life, or living to God, may be called life, becauſe it hath all theſe things in it ſpiritually, which natural life hath in it naturally; as,

1. Life hath motion in it; and ſo here, this ſpiritual life imports motion; where-ever the Spirit of life comes, there is a motion among the dry bones. Now, there are ſome duties he moves in, ſuch as prayer; Behold he prayeth, who never prayed to purpoſe before: he moves in the duties of hearing, reading, examination, and mortification.—Now, there are ſome graces that move in him; faith begins to move, ſaying, I believe, Lord, help my unbelief: Hope begins to move, He is begotten to a new and lively hope: Love begins to move, may be in ſighs and groans, for want of love. Now he moves, and the term he moves from, is, ſin, Satan, the world, ſelf, ſelf-righteouſneſs; and the term he moves to, is, God and Chriſt, and heaven, and heavenly things. So far as this divine life takes place, ſo far all the faculties of the ſoul move towards God; the underſtanding, to ſee him; the will, to ſerve him; the affections, to embrace him: and all the members of the body move towards God; the eye is lift up to heaven in prayer and ſupplication; the ear is open to receive inſtruction; the mouth enlarged to ſing his praiſes; the tongue will be no more the trumpeter of idle communication; the hand and heart will be inſtruments of devotion; the knees will be bowed to the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; the feet will delight to carry the man to the houſe of the Lord: all is in motion for God, ſo far as this life takes place. You may here ſee, by the way, whether you have or want this life, which is a living to God. Though I ſee an image lively repreſenting a man, having eyes, ears, mouth, noſe, hands, feet, yet I know it hath no life in it, becauſe it hath no motion; ſo, if we ſee a profeſſor without a ſuitable practice, we may ſay he is an idol, he is no Chriſtian, but the image of a Chriſtian. It is true, a hypocrite may have all theſe external motions, like a painted puppy, that may, by ſome engine, be made to dance, and move up and down, but from no vital principle of life.

2. Life hath breath in it; James ii. 26. The body without BREATH is dead, as it may be rendered; ſo in this life there is breath: if a man's breath be held in a little while, the perſon cannot live; ſo the believer would die, if he had not breath in a ſpiritual ſenſe. What is the air he breathes in? It is juſt the Spirit of God; Awake, O north-wind; come, thou ſouth; blow upon my garden, that the ſpices thereof may flow out. What is the breath that is put within him? It is the Spirit of God: the Holy Ghoſt is that to the believer, that breath is to the body; yea, that the ſoul is to the body, God breathed into Adam the breath of life; and he breathes on the believer, ſaying, Receive ye the Holy Ghoſt: I will put my Spirit within you. What lungs does he breathe with? It is faith; we receive the promiſe of the Spirit of faith. And what things does he breathe after? Indeed the earthly man breathes after earthly things, ſaying, Who will ſhew us any good? But the heavenly man breatheth after heavenly things; Lord, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon me. Many perſons have a ſtinking breath; it hath the ſmell of earth; yea, the ſmell of hell: ſome breathe out blaſphemies and oaths; ſome breathe out cruelty and wrath: but the man that hath this life, and lives unto God, his breath is a ſweet breath; ſo far as he lives unto God, his breath ſmells of heaven, and of God, and of Chriſt. But,

3. Life hath uſually growth; even ſo this life is a growing life; this well of water ſprings up to everlaſting life. Let a painter draw the figure of grapes never ſo artificially, yet they may be ſeen and diſcerned from natural grapes, becauſe they grow not: thus the painted hypocrite may look well, but never grows. A man that hath this divine life, is uſually growing; if not upwardly in holineſs, yet downwardly in humility; if not ſenſibly in outward fruitfulneſs, yet inſenſibly in inward ſighs and ſobs, becauſe of his unfruitfulneſs; and in pantings of ſoul towards perfection: He that hath clean hands, waxeth ſtronger and ſtronger. Indeed a winter-time, or ſeaſon of languiſhing, may put the believer far back, and interrupt the growth; but a ſummer-reviving will make up all again.

4. Life hath appetite and ſenſe; even ſo this life imports ſpiritual appetite and ſpiritual ſenſe: there is appetite after ſpiritual food. Many pamper their bodies and ſtarve their ſouls; but he that thus lives, he hath a hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs; and like new-born babes, deſire the ſincere milk of the word, that he may grow thereby. The doctrine of the goſpel is his life; for, a man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. He hath an appetite after theſe words of grace, and draws water with joy, out of theſe wells of ſalvation. Many are the ſecret longings and pantings of the living ſoul, after the living God, who is his life: and as life ſeeks its own preſervation continually, ſo does the living ſoul in the living God, in whom only his life is hid.——There is ſenſe alſo; here life is ſenſible of whatſoever is an enemy to it, and reſiſts it; the more life, the more ſenſe; and the more ſenſe, the more reſiſtance: even ſo they that live this life unto God, they feel corruption, and they fight againſt it; For the Spirit luſts againſt the fleſh, and the fleſh againſt the Spirit: they groan under the weight of corruption, which they feel, and reckon themſelves wretched on the account thereof; O wretched man that I am! who ſhall deliver me from the body of this death? They that have no feeling of ſin, no fighting againſt it, do not look like theſe that have have this life.—They who have ſpiritual ſenſes, at leaſt who have them exerciſed, they have the ſeeing eye; they ſee the evil of ſin; they ſee the beauty of holineſs; they ſee the glory of God, in the face of Jeſus Chriſt; they ſee God in his ordinances; they ſee an internal glory in the external adminiſtration of ordinances, which others not ſeeing, they think very little of theſe things: alſo they ſee God in his providences; in his judgments, they ſee a juſt God; and in mercies, they ſee a merciful God; and themſelves leſs than the leaſt of all his mercies.—They have the hearing ear; they hear the voice of God in the word, and rod: They ſmell the ſavour of his name, which is as ointment poured forth: They taſte his goodneſs, and feel his power.——And thus you ſee what may be imported in its being called a life in general.

4*thly*, The fourth thing was, What is imported in its being called a living unto God: what is this living unto God? I have ſaid ſeveral things about it already; but this living unto God, more particularly, may import theſe four things following,

1. The believer's living unto God, imports, his living ſuitably to the relations that God ſtands in to him, and he unto God, as being his God in Chriſt Jeſus; and ſo it is a living to him as our Redeemer, both by price and power; as theſe that are not our own, but bought with a price; and therefore glorifying the Lord in our ſouls and bodies which are his.—It is a living to God as our Head: God, in Chriſt, is the believer's Head; and ſo to live to him as our Head, is to leave as members of ſuch a Head, drawing ſpiritual virtue, light, life, and comfort from him as the Head.—It is a living to God as our Husband; Thy Maker is thy husband: and ſo to live to him in this relation, is to live reverently, lovingly, affectionately, with ſubmiſſion and ſubjection to our Huſband, as becomes the ſpouſe of ſuch a glorious Huſband.—It is a living to God as our heavenly Father, depending on him as children on their father; Wilt thou not from this time call me, My Father, thou art the guide of my youth? Jer. iii. 4.—It is a living to God as our Judge, Law-giver, and King; and ſo it is a living as theſe that are accountable to, and as we ſhall anſwer at the tribunal of this impartial Judge: it is a ſitting at the feet, and receiving the law from the mouth of this righteous Law-giver: and it is a yielding the tribute of praiſe, obedience, and ſubjection to this almighty King.—In a word, it is a living to God as the object of our worſhip and adoration; loving him as the Lord our God, with all our heart, ſoul, mind, and ſtrength.——Thus, I ſay, to live to God, is to live ſuitably to all theſe relations he ſtands in to us.

2. The believer's living unto God, imports, his living ſuitably to theſe privileges and favours that he receives from God. Hath he enlightened us in the knowledge of himſelf? Then, to live to him, is to walk as children of light, and not as thoſe that are yet in darkneſs and ignorance.—Hath he called us effectually? Then, to live to him, is to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called.—Hath he given us grace? Then, to live to him, is to live, not as graceleſs, but as gracious perſons; not as thoſe that are in a ſtate of nature, but in a ſtate of grace.—Hath he pardoned our ſins, juſtified our perſons, and brought us into peace with himſelf? Then, to live to him, is to ſtand faſt in the liberty wherewith he hath made us free.—Hath he renewed and ſanctified us? Then, to live to him, is to live as renewed, and ſanctified perſons, whoſe luſts are mortified, and whoſe ſouls are transformed into the image of God.—Hath he poured in the promiſe into our hearts by the Spirit? Then, to live to him ſuitably thereto, is, having theſe promiſes, to cleanſe ourſelves from all filthineſs of the fleſh, and of the ſpirit, perfecting holineſs in the fear of God.—Hath he made us heirs of glory? Then, to live to him, is to live as candidates for heaven; as pilgrims and ſtrangers, abſtaining from fleſhly luſts; travelling to the other world, having our affections and converſation in heaven.

3. The believer's living unto God, imports, his living in communion with him, and comfortable enjoyment of him: In communion with him; in the contemplation of him; ſanctifying the Lord in our hearts: in a conſtant affection to him; having his love ſhed abroad in our hearts, by the Holy Ghoſt: and in a conſtant dependence on him; receiving all from him by faith, and returning all to him in duty and gratitude.—It is a living in the comfortable enjoyment of him, as all our portion and happineſs, all our ſalvation and deſire; renouncing all things in heaven and earth as our portion, but a God in Chriſt alone, ſaying, Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none in all the earth that I deſire beſides thee.

4. The believer's living unto God, imports, his living in conformity to God; and indeed, ſo far as we enjoy God, ſo far will we be conform to him. As it will be in glory, we ſhall be like him, for, we ſhall ſee him as he is; ſo it is in grace here: the more the ſoul ſees and enjoys him, the more is he like unto him; Beholding his glory, we are changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory. And ſo this living unto God, it is a living in conformity to God's nature; being holy as he is holy; perfect as our heavenly Father is perfect. Is he a perfect God? Then, to live to him, is to go on to perfection, Heb. vi. 1.—It is a living in conformity to his way of living: God's way of living is a holy, juſt, good, faithful, merciful way; having a general good-will to all, and a ſpecial good-will to ſome: and ſo ought our ways to be.—It is a living in conformity to God's ends: God's great end, that he ſets before himſelf, is the glory of his name, the honour of his Son, the advancement of Chriſt's kingdom, the ruin of Satan's kingdom, and in all, the praiſe of his rich and free grace: and ſurely we live to God, when we have theſe ends alſo which are God's ends.—It is a living in conformity to his law, as a rule, which is the tranſcript of his communicable nature, for our practice; If ye love me, keep my commandments: we do not love him, if we do not ſo. They then that live to him, they do, from love as well as conſcience, obey him.——Theſe things might be greatly inlarged: however, thus you ſee, in ſhort, what it is to live unto God. We are telling, and you are hearing, what this life is; but, O that we could live this life, as well as ſpeak and hear of it! Look to the Lord, that he may make you know it to your experience. It is called a living to God, 1. Becauſe it hath the Spirit of God for the principle of it. 2. Becauſe it hath the word of God for the rule of it. 3. Becauſe it hath the love of God for the motive of it. And, 4. Becauſe it hath the glory of God for the ultimate end of it.

IV. The

IV. The fourth thing propoſed was, to ſhew the INFLUENCE that this being dead to the law, hath upon living to God; or the NECESSITY of this death, in order to this life. Here I might ſhew, 1. That it is neceſſary. 2. Whence it is neceſſary.

1ſt, That it is neceſſary that we die to the law, in point of juſtification, before we can live to God in point of ſanctification: beſides what was ſaid upon the firſt head, for the confirmation of the doctrine, theſe following conſiderations, or remarks, may diſcover the neceſſity of being dead to the law, in order to our living to God.

1. Remark, That a man that is under the law, can perform no holy act; he may do ſome things that are materially good, but nothing can he do that is formally good, or holy; and his work, inſtead of ſanctifying him, does ſtill more and more pollute him; To the pure all things are pure; but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving, is nothing pure; but even their mind and conſcience is defiled, Tit. i. 15. He then that is alive to the law, and under the covenant of works, his works can never make him holy, but rather more and more unholy.

2. Remark, The man that is under the law, hath no promiſe of holineſs or ſanctification by that law. The law only promiſes life, upon perfect obedience, in our own perſon; and if true ſanctification may be in one that is under the covenant of works, then we muſt change the articles of the covenant, and promiſes of the covenant of grace, and make ſanctification no promiſe of it: we muſt blot out theſe promiſes, I will put a new Spirit within you, and, I will write my law in your hearts; and all other promiſes of the like nature, muſt be razed out of the covenant of grace: if one under the covenant of works may attain to ſanctification by his own works, there is no need of this promiſe.

3. Remark, That the man that is under the law, hath no principle of holineſs. The grand principle of true holineſs, is the Spirit dwelling in the man: now, how does one receive the Spirit of ſanctification? Is it by the works of the law? No; but by the hearing of faith, Gal. iii. 2. It is the doctrine of grace, not of works, that makes us partake of this Spirit. It is the new teſtament, or new covenant, that is the manifeſtation of the Spirit, 2 Cor. iii. 6. Thereby the Spirit is miniſtred, or conveyed to us, but not by the law. It is the goſpel that calls us effectually to ſanctification, 2 Theſſ. ii. 13, 14. We received the promiſe of the Spirit through faith, and not by the works of the law, Gal. iii. 14.

4. Remark, That the man that is under the law, is without Chriſt, in whom ſanctification only is to be found: they that are ſaints, are ſaints in Chriſt Jeſus, as the apoſtle deſigns them; and ſanctified in Chriſt: and our implantation into Chriſt, is only from grace, and not from the works of the law; and ſo is our ſanctification only from grace, and only in Chriſt, who gave himſelf for his church, that he might ſanctify it, Eph. v. 25.

5. Remark, The man that is under the law, is without ſtrength, and cannot perform obedience to the law: the law is weak through the fleſh, and cannot juſtify him, neither can it ſanctify him. In order to ſanctification, a new creation is neceſſary: the clean heart muſt be created; and the man created unto good works: creating power muſt be put forth; and creation is a work of God. We muſt therefore make a God of our works, and deify them, and endow them with a creating power, if we think, by the works of the law, to be ſanctified; or aſcribe ſuch efficacy to them, as to work true ſanctification in us. No man, then, that is under the law, or covenant of works, by giving himſelf to all holy duties and actions, and exerciſing himſelf in them, can come to attain true holineſs, or to be truly ſanctified.

6. Remark, That the man that is under the power of the law, is under the power of ſin. Whence is it, that the believer is freed from the power and dominion of ſin? It is becauſe he is under grace, and not under the law, Rom. vi. 14. Shewing us, that theſe that are under the law, are under the power and dominion of ſin. How ſo? Even upon the account of all the reaſons already aſſigned; and not only ſo, but becauſe the law is the ſtrength of ſin, 1 Cor. xv. 56. Particularly as it irritates corruption, ſtrengthening and ſtirring it up; Sin taking occaſion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiſcence. Sin, by occaſion of the reſiſting command, brake out the more fiercely. Hence the law is only the occaſion, and ſin dwelling in us the cauſe; as the ſhining of the ſun is the occaſion, why a dung-hill ſends forth its filthy ſavour, it is the corruption and putrification therein that is the cauſe; ſo here, the light of the law ſhining, and diſcovering ſin and duty, is the occaſion of ſin's irritation and increaſe, but corruption itſelf is the cauſe. Well, ſo it is, that a man being under the law, is under the power of ſin: how then can he live unto God, while under the law? or, how can ſanctification take place while he is alive to the law, or not dead thereto?—Theſe things may make it evident, I think, that it is neceſſary that a man be dead to the law, and brought from under it, before he can have true ſanctification, or live unto God.

2dly, Whence it is neceſſary, that a man be dead to the law in point of juſtification, in order to his living to God in point of ſanctification: Theſe particulars already mentioned, afford ſo many reaſons of the neceſſity thereof: yet ſome things more may be ſaid, for the further clearing of this point, namely, The influence, that dying to the law, hath upon our living unto God. Here two queſtions occur, 1. What influence living TO the law, hath upon a man's living IN ſin. 2. What influence a man's dying TO the law, hath upon his dying TO ſin, and living UNTO God.

(1.) What influence a man's living TO the law, or being alive to the law, hath upon his living IN ſin. This is a ſtrange doctrine, ſome may think; but it is as true as ſtrange, that the law, and our works of obedience to the law, while we are under it, is the cauſe of deſtruction, inſtead of ſalvation, Rom. ix. 31, 32. There you ſee it deſtroyed the whole Jewiſh nation; Iſrael miſſed righteouſneſs, becauſe they ſought it by the works of the law. Now, a man's being alive to the law, hath influence upon his living in ſin, and ſo upon his deſtruction, in the following ways,

1. Becauſe hereby he becomes hardened in ſin and ſecurity, while he thinks he hath ſome good work to bear him out, Prov. vii. 14. What made the filthy whore there, impudent and hardened hardened in her sins? Why? I have peace-offerings with me; this day I have paid my vows. Thus the Pharisees, for a pretence, made long prayers; and hereupon were hardened in their sinful courses, fearless of wrath: why? I have done so and so.

2. Hereby they are kept from Christ, who only saves from sin. The works of the law step in betwixt them and Christ, and the man takes Christ's bargain off his hand, promising the same that Christ promised, even obedience to the law: I delight to do thy will, says Christ; nay, I will do it myself, says the man that is under the law: he makes himself his own saviour. What! will not God accept of my good and honest endeavours? This is what he sets up on Christ's throne; and if Christ be pulled down from his throne, will it be sufficient that we set up an honest prince in his room? They have some things to say for themselves, which, they hope, will bring them off before God. Thus they reject Christ, the Lamb of God, which takes away the sins of the world; and how can they but live unto sin, whatever they may think of themselves?

3. Hereby their pride and boasting is fostered, Rom. iv. 4. To him that worketh, is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt: and the man expects his due for his work which he glories in; for, boasting is not excluded by the law of works, Rom. iii. 27. and therefore the man is loath to part with his own righteousness, which is by the law: because of his pride, he will not stoop to live upon another, while he can shift for himself. Self-love will not suffer a man to think the worst of himself, so long as he is alive to the law: nay, I hope I have a good heart to God, and I will do something that will please God; and so it is no little thing will bring him to submit to the righteousness of God, Rom. x. 3. Thus the law fosters his pride, and sure the proud man was never a holy man. But,

4. Hereby sin is strengthened and encreased, as I said before: the motions of sin are by the law, Rom. vii. 5. The law entered, that sin might abound, Rom. v. 20. Not only as to the knowledge of it, which is by the law, but as to the actual out-breaking of it from the heart; like a river being bounded and dammed up by the law, it swells and breaks out the more violently. The wicked nature of man, being reproved, swells and rises like a snake brought to the fire.

5. Hereby the man becomes desperate; for the law says, There is no hope without a perfect obedience; and the man having wearied himself in doing nothing answerable to what the law requires, comes at last, perhaps, to see there is no hope, and so he dies in despair; I mean, he dies in sin, saying, There is no hope; and therefore after idols I will go: he flies away from God as Adam did.

6. Hereby he becomes slavish also; the fear, torment, and wrath, which the law brings along with it, when the penalty of it is seen, weakens the man's hands; and these lying like heavy loads upon the soul, it is thereby fettered and bound in prison, hence said to be held in the law; that being dead wherein we were held, says the apostle. The man is held, and shut up in the prison of the law, and so out of case for service while his bands are not loosed; or at best his service is slavish, and not free: the law holds him in prison, he cannot serve God freely. The free Spirit of the gospel is what the world cannot receive, while under the law.—Thus you may see what influence living to the law may have upon men's living in sin, so as they cannot live unto God.

(2.) What influence a man's dying TO the law hath upon his living UNTO God, or upon holiness and sanctification? To this we reply, It hath especially a twofold influence, both a physical and moral influence. And,

[1.] It hath a physical influence upon a man's sanctification, in regard that a man that is dead to the law, is married to Christ, Rom. vii. 4.; and so necessarily the man must be holy, being disjoined from the law, and joined to the Lord Jesus, who hath satisfied the precept of the law by his death: and in him, not only have they thus a full discharge of all the demands and commands of the law; but also, by the implantation and inhabitation of his Spirit, are created to a conformity to the image of God; and they cannot but live unto God. For,

1. In Christ they have life: though, while under the law, they were dead in sin and trespasses; now, in Christ, they have life, and have it more abundantly: they are quickened by virtue of their union to this everlasting Head; because he lives, they live also. A dead person can produce no living action, but Christ is the life of his people: He that hath the Son hath life; and then, and never till then, is he in case for spiritual action and living unto God: He that hath not the Son of God, hath not life. Vain men fancy within themselves, that they have not lost their life, and so they think they can do something that will please God, and profit themselves for justification and sanctification, even before ever they think of coming to Christ; but we may as well expect, that a dead corps will rise of itself, and do the natural actions of life, as to expect that you should rise, and act spiritually, before you be in Christ. The natural conscience indeed may be roused a little, and prevailed with to set about this and that duty; but there is no living unto God, till you get Christ: in him the believer hath life, even in his Head; as a man cannot live without his head; but, being joined to this new head, and disjoined from the law, he cannot but live.

2. In Christ, his new Head and Husband, he hath light as well as life: as you know, the eye is in the head, so the believer's eye is in Christ his light, whereby he sees sin and duty; sees to work, so as he may live to God. The man that is under the law, he is in the dark, and cannot see to work the works of holiness, which is a living unto God. He is blinded with self-conceit; he sees not the vanity of his old covenant obedience; and he sees not the way of the new covenant gospel-obedience, till he get the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Christ, who is the light of the world; a light to lighten the Gentiles: by whose light the believer sees how to walk in a way well-pleasing to God.

3. In Christ, his new Head, he hath strength: the man that is under the law, joined to it as his head, he hath no strength for his work, and the law gives him none; and so he cannot live to God: but the believer can say, In the Lord have I righteousness and strength: whereas others have no ſtrength to produce ſpiritual actions; ſin domineers over them, and they have no ability to ſhake off the yoke of ſin, their ſtrength being but weakneſs. The believer hath ſtrength in his head; all things are poſſible to them that believe: they can do all things through Chriſt ſtrengthening them: they can overleap a wall, and break bows of ſteel in pieces. O believer! be ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt. O it is ſtrange, the grace that is in him, is in thee; as the life that is in the heart, is in the toe, the foot, the utmoſt members! There is a communication of vital ſtrength and influences from the heart and head to all the members: the believer's grace is in Chriſt; and the grace that is in Chriſt is in the believer. Here is a myſtery to the world, but yet this myſtery lies wrapt up in that word, Be ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt Jeſus. If the grace that is in Chriſt, were not in the believer alſo, according to the meaſure of the communication, how could he be ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt? My grace ſhall be ſufficient for thee, and my ſtrength ſhall be perfect in thy weakneſs.

as

4. In Chriſt, his new Head, he hath liberty: under the law the man is under bondage, and ſevere bondage to the command of perfect obedience, upon pain of death and damnation; and ſo under bondage to the curſe of the law, and fear of God's everlaſting wrath; and thereby he can do nothing; he hath neither heart nor hand to ſerve God; he is bound neck and heel: but in Chriſt he hath liberty; If the Son make you free, you are free indeed: free from ſervice; Truly I am thy ſervant, thou haſt looſed my bands. Now, he walks at liberty; yea, runs the way of God's commandments, when he doth enlarge his heart. This is the glorious liberty of the children of God begun in time, whereby they are put in caſe to live unto God.—Now, he is at liberty to ſerve chearfully, being delivered from the hands of all his enemies, to ſerve him without fear, in holineſs and righteouſneſs, before God, all the days of his life.—Now he is at liberty to ſerve ſpiritually; the Spirit of Chriſt being put within him, and cauſing him to walk in God's ſtatutes. Now he is at liberty to ſerve hopefully; knowing that his labour ſhall not be in vain in the Lord: though, while under the law, his labour was but vain labour.—Now, he is at liberty to ſerve acceptably; being accepted in the Beloved, Eph. i. 6.; that is, not only for his ſake; for there is much more in it, he being our Head, and we members of his body; and he, as our Head, having performed perfect obedience to the precept of the law, and given complete ſatisfaction to the penalty of the law; the Head having done it, the whole body is reputed as having done it; and ſo we are accepted in him; his doing is ours, becauſe we are in him, as our Head, accepted in the Beloved; our perſons are accepted in him, and next our performances and duties. O what ſweet liberty is here! what a ſweet foundation for ſpiritual and acceptable ſervice and living unto God! But this leads me next to ſhew,

[2.] That it hath a moral influence upon ſanctification; a man's being dead to the law, diſjoined from it, and joined to Chriſt, hath not only a phyſical, but alſo a moral influence; in regard that hereby he is conſtrained ſweetly to live unto God; The love of Chriſt conſtraineth us, 2 Cor. v. 14, 15. If we have not love at the root of our actions, love to a God in Chriſt, we are but empty vines, that bring forth fruit to ourſelves; it is but ſelf-love, which is not fruit unto God, or living unto him. The natural way of man's thinking is, we ſhould ſerve God, that he may ſave us; but the goſpel way is, he ſaves us, that we may ſerve him. What made Paul ſay, Being dead to the law, I live unto God? Why? in the next verſe he enlarges on it, I live to him, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me. Be perſuaded, man, woman, of this; or elſe, as the Lord lives, you ſhall die in a deluſion; that if you have not love to God, you have not a ſpark of holineſs, though you ſhould pray all your days, and work never ſo hard: I will circumciſe their hearts to love me, is the promiſe; and this love is the heart and life of religious duties. Now, you cannot have love, unleſs you ſee ſomewhat more or leſs of his love to you: we are naturally enemies to God, though we cannot get one of a thouſand that will take with it: they think they have a love to God. God forbid, ſay they, that we ſhould be enemies; nay, but I tell you, in the name of God, whether you will hear it or not, that as you are enemies by nature, and born with a dagger of enmity in your heart and hand againſt God; ſo, till you get ſomewhat of the knowledge of God, as in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf, this enmity will never be killed. Now, I ſay, it is the believer in Chriſt, who, being dead to the law, and joined to the Lord, hath this love; and this love conſtrains him, ſo that he brings forth fruit unto God, and lives unto him, Rom. vii. 3.; being dead to the law, and married to Chriſt, he brings forth fruit unto God. The believer hath ſufficient encouragement to make him live unto God; he ſees Chriſt hath ſatisfied divine juſtice, fulfilled all the righteouſneſs of the law, that he hath done that which is impreſtible, or unperformable by us; and when by faith he beholds this, he is encouraged to ſerve God. Hence, ſays the pſalmiſt, There is mercy with thee, that thou mayeſt be feared. Might he not have ſaid, There is majeſty with thee, that thou mayeſt be feared? The matter is, the majeſty of God would put the ſinner to flee from God, as Adam did, when he heard his voice in the garden; but his mercy makes us fear and love him, ſerve and obey him; Then they ſhall fear the Lord and his goodneſs, ſays the prophet, Hoſ. iii. 5. If a man hath no faith at all of God's goodneſs, no hope of his favour in Chriſt, where is his purity and holineſs? Nay, it is he that hath this hope, that purifies himſelf, as he is pure. I know not what experience you have, Sirs, but ſome of us know, that when our ſouls are moſt comforted and enlarged with the faith of God's favour through Chriſt, and with the hope of his goodneſs, then we have moſt heart to duties; and when through unbelief we have harſh thoughts of God, as an angry judge, then we have no heart to duties and religious exerciſes: and I perſuade myſelf, this is the experience of the ſaints in all ages.

But that this moral influence, which dying to the law, or covenant of works, hath upon living to God, or holineſs and ſanctification, may be further evident: let us conſider, how the law to the believer, having now loſt its legal or old covenant-form, and being put into a goſpel-form, and changed from the law of works into a covenant of grace, or the law in the hand of Chriſt; how, I ſay, every part of it now conſtrains the believer to obedience and ſanctification, in a moſt loving manner. The goſpel-law, or the law of grace, that now he is under, is a chariot paved with love. The law, in the hand of Chriſt, hath now another face, even a ſmiling face, in all the commands, promiſes, threatenings, and in the whole form thereof.

in

(1.) The commands of the law, in the hand of Chriſt, have loſt their old covenant-form, and are full of love. The command of the law of works is, Do, and Live; but in the hand of Chriſt, it is, Live, and Do: the command of the law of works, is, Do, or elſe be damned; but the law in the hand of Chriſt is, I have delivered thee from hell, therefore DO: the command of the law of works is, Do in thy own ſtrength; but the law in the hand of Chriſt is, I am thy ſtrength; My ſtrength ſhall be perfected in thy weakneſs, therefore Do. The command is materially the ſame, but the form is different: the command of the law of works is, Do perfectly, that you may have eternal life; but now, in the hand of Chriſt, the form is, I have given thee eternal life in me, and by my doing; and therefore do as perfectly as you can, through my grace, till you come to a ſtate of perfection. The command, I ſay, is the ſame materially; for I do not join with theſe, who inſinuate, as if here leſs obedience were required than under the law of works: though leſs be accepted in theſe who have a perfect obedience in their Head, yet no leſs is required, though not in the old covenant-form. And as the command is materially the ſame, ſo the authority enjoining obedience is originally the ſame, yet vaſtly diſtinct; in that the command of the law is the command of God out of Chriſt, an abſolute God and judge; but now, under grace, it is the command of a God in Chriſt, a Father in him: and ſure I am, that the authority of a commanding God is not leſſened, or loſt, that the command is now in the hand of Chriſt: Chriſt is God, co-equal and co-eſſential with the Father; and as God's authority to judge is not loſt, or leſſened, in that all judgment is committed to the Son; ſo his authority to command, is not loſt or leſſened, in that the law is in the hand of Chriſt: nay, it is not leſſened, but it is ſweetened, and made amiable, lovely, and deſirable to the believer, conſtraining him to obedience, in that the law is in the hand of his Head, his Lord, and his God. The end that he hath in commanding, and that they ſhould have in obeying, is now diſtinct, and different from what took place under the law of works: the end that he hath in commanding, is not to lay a heavy yoke of duties on their necks, to be born by their own ſtrength; nor, though performed by his ſtrength, to be a righteouſneſs for their juſtification, or a condition of life; but only to ſhew his holy nature, that he will not have a lawleſs people; to ſhew his great grace, that condeſcends to ſeek our ſervice; to grace and beautify his people, their chief happineſs conſiſting in a conformity to his will; that his people may get good, which is neceſſarily joined to duties, and connected thereto by the promiſes; that he may have ſomething to commend his people for; and that he may, without a compliment, have ground to ſay, Well done, good and faithful ſervants: and that by them he may have matter of condemnation againſt the reſt of the world, who walk not in his commandments. In a word, he commands, that his ſovereignty may be kept up, and the ſenſe thereof, in the hearts of his people; and that, by his word of command, he may, as many times he doth, convey ſtrength to do what he calls to; and in caſe of ſhortcoming, to force them out of themſelves, under a ſenſe of weakneſs and ſinfulneſs, in to Jeſus Chriſt, the end of the law, for ſtrength to ſanctify, as well as for righteouſneſs to juſtify. For theſe, and ſuch like ends, does the Lord command.—And then the end that they ſhould have in obeying, is not to ſatisfy conſcience, nor to ſatisfy juſtice, to purchaſe heaven, or the like; but to glorify God, to edify our neighbour, and to teſtify our gratitude to God, and Chriſt, that hath delivered us from the law, as a covenant.

(2.) The promiſes of the law, in the hand of Chriſt, have loſt their old covenant-form, and are full of love. The law of works promiſes eternal life, as a reward of our doing, or obedience; and here the reward is a reward of debt: but the law, in the hand of Chriſt, promiſes a reward of grace to goſpel-obedience, eſpecially as it is an evidence of union to him, in whom all the promiſes are Yea and Amen. Eternal life was promiſed in the covenant of redemption to Chriſt, upon his perfect obedience, who paid that debt, when he came under the law of works for us; and now, eternal life being obtained to the believer in Chriſt, as the reward of Chriſt's obedience to the death, there is no other reward of debt that now takes place. Rewards of grace are now come in faſhion, and this encourages the believer to live unto God, that in the way of goſpel-obedience, there is a gracious promiſe of ſweet communion and fellowſhip with God; He that loves me, and keeps my commandments; I will love him, and manifeſt myſelf to him, and my Father will love him, John xiv. 21. Here there is a fatherly promiſe of God's favour and familiarity with him; yea, there is a promiſe of heaven itſelf, in the way of goſpel-obedience, and ſanctification: a right to heaven is purchaſed by the blood of Chriſt, and the believer is the young heir of glory; but his poſſeſſion of heaven is ſuſpended till he be fit for it; till he do ſome buſineſs for his Father, and be made meet for the inheritance of the ſaints in light. This is ſweet encouragement the believer hath, to live unto God.

(3.) The threatenings of the law, in the hand of Chriſt, have loſt their old covenant-form, quality, and nature, and are now turned to threatenings out of love: there is no ſuch threatening now to the believer, If thou do not, thou ſhalt die. The penalty of the law of works is condemnation and eternal death, which the believer hath no cauſe to fear, being dead to the law; no more than a living wife needs to fear the threatening of her dead huſband: There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt. He that believes in him, ſhall never die. Believers are under no threatening of eternal wrath, becauſe under grace. It is a high expreſſion that bleſſed Rutherford hath to this purpoſe, "The "goſpel, ſays he, forbids nothing under pain of "damnation to a juſtified believer, more than "to Jeſus Chriſt." Though the ſins of believers deſerve hell, and the intrinſic demerit of ſin is ſtill the ſame; [yea, I think the ſins of believers being againſt ſo much love, and ſo many mercies, they deſerve a thouſand hells, where where others deſerve one;] yet, being dead to the law, he hath no vindictive wrath to fear, the blood of Chriſt having quenched the fire of God's wrath. Rom. v. 9. While we were ſinners, Chriſt died for us; and much more now being juſtified by his blood, we are ſaved from wrath through him; and ſure he is not to fear that which God calls him to believe he is ſaved from: his ſlaviſh fear, therefore, is from unbelief, and weakens his hands in duties. But now the law, in the hand of Chriſt, hath threatenings and puniſhments, but they are fatherly and loving; a ſhort view of them you may read, Pſal. lxxxix. 30,—35. If his children forſake my law, and walk not in my judgments: if they break my ſtatutes, and keep not my commandments; then will I viſit their tranſgreſſion with the rod, and their iniquities with ſtripes; nevertheleſs my loving-kindneſs will I not utterly take from him, nor ſuffer my faithfulneſs to fail: my covenant will I not break.—Once have I ſworn by my holineſs, that I will not lie unto David; q. d. Though I will not ſend them to hell, nor deprive them of heaven, no more than I will break my great oath to my eternal Son; yet, like a father, I will chaſtiſe them; I will correct them for their faults; I will ſqueeze them in the mortar of affliction, and preſs out the corrupt juice of old Adam that is in them; yea, I will hide my face; I will deny them that communion and fellowſhip with me that ſometimes they had, and give them terror inſtead of comfort, and bitterneſs inſtead of ſweetneſs. A filial fear of theſe fatherly chaſtiſements will do more to influence the believer to holineſs, and obedience, than all the unbelieving fears of hell and wrath can do: fear, leſt he want that ſweetneſs of God's preſence, which ſometimes he hath had, will make him ſay to his ſins and luſts, as the fig-tree in Jotham's parable, Shall I leave my ſweetneſs, and be king over you? O! ſhall I leave all the ſweetneſs that I have enjoyed with God, and take on with baſe luſts and idols! And hence, when the believer hath gone aſide and backſliden, what is it that brings him back to God? He finds the Lord breaking him many ways, and he reflects, through grace, upon this ſometimes, O! how am I deprived of theſe ſweet interviews that once I enjoyed! Therefore, I will go and return to my firſt Husband, for then it was better with me than now. Yea, his freedom from law-threatenings, and being only under fatherly correction, when he ſees this, it breaks his heart, and melts it more than all the fire of hell could do. The ſlaviſh fear of vindictive wrath diſcourages him, weakens his hands in duties, and makes him run away from God; but the filial fear of God's fatherly wrath, which is kindly, is a motive of love that encourages him to his duty. Which of theſe motives think you will work up the believer to moſt obedience? viz. This legal one, O! my wrathful Judge will ſend me to hell, if I do ſo and ſo; or this goſpel one; O! my God and Father in Chriſt Jeſus will be angry at me, and deny me his love-tokens? I ſuppoſe the former works upon enmity, and raiſes it, but this works upon love, and inflames it. But here a queſtion may be moved, Ought not the believer to live unto God, even without reſpect to the threatening of fatherly chaſtiſement and puniſhment? To this we anſwer, No doubt, the more perfect his obedience be, the better and the more like to the obedience of the ſaints in heaven, where no chaſtiſement is feared; but while he is here, he carries a body of ſin about him, and needs to be ſtirred up by fatherly correction. He ſhould indeed ſerve God purely out of love and reſpect to the command itſelf, and becauſe he commands it: but thus the matter ſtands, that as on the one hand, being perfect in his Head, Chriſt Jeſus, it is not his duty to have reſpect to what the law of works either promiſes, or threatens; ſo on the other hand, being imperfect in himſelf while here, it is his duty to have reſpect to what the law, in the hand of Chriſt, promiſes and threatens; which indeed is a loving reſpect, tending to advance holineſs.

(4.) The whole form of the law as a covenant of works, being thus altered, the law in the hand of Chriſt, is all love, all grace, and ſo influences the man to ſanctification. The man that is under the covenant of grace, he hath a principle of grace within him, ſtriving againſt ſin; he hath the Spirit of grace within him, cauſing him to walk in God's ſtatutes; he hath the promiſe of grace to be ſufficient for him: if ſin prevail, and pollute him, he hath daily acceſs to the fountain open for ſin and for uncleanneſs, to which he runs; if his backſlidings encreaſe, he hath Chriſt engaged by promiſe to heal his backſlidings: which, when he views by faith, it doth not encourage him to ſin, if he be in right exerciſe of his ſenſes, but draws him to his duty, like a cord of love, and brings him back to his kind Lord. In a word, being dead to the law, he is married to Chriſt, who is like a green fir-tree, from whom all his fruit is found.——Thus you ſee what influence a man's being dead to the law, hath upon his living unto God. And ſo much for the fourth head propoſed.

V. The fifth thing in the method, was the application, which we ſhall eſſay in an uſe of information, examination, lamentation, and exhortation.

Is it ſo, that being dead to the law, in point of juſtification, is neceſſary, in order to living unto God in point of ſanctification? Then for information, hence we may ſee,

1. That the doctrine of the goſpel is not a doctrine of licentiouſneſs, or carnal liberty, however it be reproached in the world: and if the preachers thereof, who would bring off people from the law of works, and from their ſelf-righteouſneſs, be reproached, as if they were enemies to holineſs, I will venture to ſay it with confidence, in a place where falſhood ſhould be an abomination, that it is a vile ſlander: for whatever ſinful weakneſs and imperfection may cleave to the preaching or practice of theſe, who deſire to publiſh this goſpel-doctrine, yet the Lord God of gods is witneſs; yea, the Lord God of gods knows, and all Iſrael may know, and all whoſe eyes God enlightens ſhall know, that this doctrine of dying to the law, in point of juſtification, is a doctrine according to godlineſs, and the very means of holineſs itſelf, and of living unto God: if this be Antinomianiſm, I am content to be called an Antinomian *. But, we ſee who are indeed Antinomians,

* The riſe and ground of this injurious accuſation may be ſeen, in ſome meaſure, accounted for, Serm. IV. page 70. Serm. VII. page 129. at the foot.——The Baxterian legal ſcheme of doctrine had, by this time, ſpread itſelf abroad, and diffuſed its dangerous and pernicious

Antinomians, and enemies to the law and holineſs; even all theſe who oppoſe this doctrine, whereby we give the law all the honour imaginable; Do we make void the law through faith? God forbid; yea, we eſtabliſh the law: as a covenant we eſtabliſh it, while we preach Chriſt as our righteouſneſs for juſtification; and as a rule of holineſs we eſtabliſh it, while we preach Chriſt as our ſtrength for ſanctification of heart and life: and they that do not thus honour the law, do but diſgrace and diſhonour it, and are truly Antinomians, i. e. enemies to the law. And if this be called a new ſcheme of doctrine by way of reproach, though I confeſs it is a new covenant ſcheme, in oppoſition to that of the old, yet I will grant to no man that it is new otherwiſe; ſeeing it is not only as old as Paul here, but as old as the firſt publication of the covenant of grace in paradiſe; ſo that we ſee where it is, that the reproach of a new ſcheme ſhould be lodged. I would have reproachers to mind what Paul ſays of this doctrine of his, Gal. i. 8. If we, or an angel from heaven preach another goſpel, let him be accurſed. Here is the doom of ſuch as preach another goſpel, which yet, ſays the apoſtle, is not another; but there are ſome that trouble the Lord's people, and would pervert the goſpel of Chriſt. To be dead to the law, is not to turn a looſe Antinomian; it is to live unto God.

2. Hence ſee the reaſon why the devil oppoſes the doctrine of grace ſo much, and cares not though the law, as a covenant, be never ſo much preached up, becauſe it is the goſpel-doctrine that tends only to true godlineſs, while the law and legal doctrine tends to keep men ſtrangers to the life of God. The devil cares not how much you be in duties, providing you keep off from Chriſt, who is the end of the law for righteouſneſs; for then he knows you would be holy alſo: but he is an unholy devil; and therefore he oppoſes the goſpel, and its doctrine. The devil knows that he hath faſt hold of you, ſo long as you cleave to the law; but that he hath loſt you, if once you have laid hold on Chriſt: for, if once you get Chriſt for juſtification, as having fulfilled the righteouſneſs of the law for you, then you will alſo get him for ſanctification, to fulfil the righteouſneſs of the law in you. The devil knows, that though, in ſeeming holineſs, you ſhould be transformed to an angel of light, like himſelf, yet you ly under the heavy vengeance of God, and curſe of the law, and under the power of ſin too, ſo long as you are under the law. Therefore,

3. Hence ſee the reaſon why the moſt part of the world are living to ſin, living to ſelf, living to the world, living to the devil; Why? becauſe they are not dead to the law. They only that are dead to the law, do live unto God; and ſurely then, they that are alive to the law, and not dead to it, they are living to the devil. No man that is alive to the law, can be a holy man: nay, what is the reaſon of all the ungodlineſs and unrighteouſneſs, all the profanity and wickedneſs of the generation! Why? people are ſtrangers to Chriſt, and are ſtill under the power, the irritating power of the law, which is the ſtrength of ſin. The world is crying up morality, as if the preachers of Chriſt and his righteouſneſs were enemies to the moral law, as a rule of holineſs; and behold, in the righteous judgment of God, there was never a generation left to greater immoralities than the preſent; a juſt puniſhment of mens deſpiſing Chriſt, and his law-biding righteouſneſs, through the faith whereof only true holineſs, and conformity to the law can be attained. O when the believer comes to ſee by faith, that he hath nothing to do with the law as a covenant, this makes him delight in the law of God, as a rule of holineſs; when he ſees he hath not a farthing of debt to pay, either to the precept, or threatening of the law as a covenant, becauſe that debt was paid by Chriſt's obedience to the death, this makes him find himſelf under the moſt grateful obligations to ſerve the Lord, in obedience to his law, as a rule; yea, under greater obligation than ever Adam was in the ſtate of innocency: but the reſt of the world, that are utter ſtrangers to this freedom, they are in bondage to the law, and ſo in bondage to their luſts.

4. Hence we may ſee the neceſſity of a law-work of conviction and humiliation, and how much of it is neceſſary, even as much as will render the perſon dead to the law, that he may live unto God. So much conviction is neceſſary, as will unbottom the man from the covenant of works, and make him diſclaim his own righteouſneſs, and make him cry out, Unclean, unclean; guilty, guilty; that thus his ſelf-confidence may be killed, and he, through the law, may be dead to the law, and may come under the covert of the blood of the Lamb, under the covert of the righteouſneſs of Chriſt for juſtification; that, being dead to the law, he may live unto God. While men are without this law-work, rendering them dead to the law, they are at beſt but eſtabliſhing a righteouſneſs of their own, which will keep them out of heaven, as much as their pernicious influence and direful effects, not only among the clergy in England, but had even crept into many of the pulpits in Scotland: This paved the way for exhibiting the charge of Antinomianiſm againſt all thoſe miniſters who adhered to and aſſiduouſly taught the doctrine of grace; eſpecially thoſe who maintained the abſolute freedom of the covenant of grace; the unlimited grant that God had made of Chriſt, and ſalvation with him to mankind; the neceſſity of becoming dead to the law as a covenant, and of faith to apprehend and appropriate Chriſt, and his righteouſneſs for ſalvation. And though the Marrow of Modern Divinity was deſigned to vindicate the doctrine of grace, in oppoſition to Antinomian and Neonomian extremes; yet they who befriended this book, eſpecially ſuch who appeared in defence thereof, when attacked and condemned by the Aſſembly, were accuſed with being Antinomians, enemies to the law and holineſs, friends to licentiouſneſs, and branded with introducing and venting new ſchemes of divinity. Though it is a notour fact, and well known to many, yet alive, that there were not greater friends, in the whole church, to evangelical doctrine, than thoſe who befriended the Marrow Doctrine: They were juſtly allowed to be firſt-rate Divines. It is true, indeed, they were enemies to all previous legal qualifications, to be performed by us, in order to fit and qualify us for coming to, and cloſing with Chriſt. And with reſpect to our worthy Author, it is obvious to every intelligent perſon, who either heard him preach, or have carefully peruſed his writings, that he had a peculiar talent in ſtating the difference between the law and the goſpel, and put a reſpectable honour upon, and paid a due regard to each of them; and that he conſtantly urged conformity to the law, as a rule of life; and aſſiduouſly inculcate the practice of holineſs.—— Any who incline to ſee the juſtneſs of theſe obſervations, and have a complete view of this affair, may attain it, by peruſing the Marrow itſelf, with attention, and carefully adverting to the judicious Mr. Boſton's notes upon it; and the Brethren's Anſwers to the Aſſembly's Queries; and an Act concerning the Doctrine of Grace, by the Aſſociate Preſbytery: In which Act, the Doctrine of Grace, as revealed in the holy Scriptures, and ſet forth in our Standards, is aſſerted and vindicated from the errors vented againſt it; the Marrow doctrine freed from the charge of Antinomianiſm, laid againſt it by the Aſſembly, and ſhewn to be founded on the Scriptures, conſiſtent with our Standards, and agreeable to the ſentiments of other approved Divines; and the Act of Aſſembly condemning the Marrow, evinced to be injurious to the Doctrine of Grace, contrary to many paſſages of Scripture, and diametrically oppoſite to our Standards.

ſins

ſins will do. And this makes the gate of heaven indeed to be a ſtrait gate, becauſe many ſeek to enter in, in a legal way, and ſhall not be able, Luke xiii. 24.; and this makes the way broad that leads unto hell, ſo broad, that it lets in all that are out of Chriſt, both the openly wicked, and the ſelf-righteous. There is but one way to heaven, and that is Chriſt: but there are many ways to hell; eſpecially theſe two; ſome walk in a more cleanly way of ſelf-righteouſneſs, and others in a more dirty way of open wickedneſs; but both meet together at the end of the way, and that is the centre of damnation. O what need, then, is there of a law-work, to convince the wicked of their ſins, and the ſelf-righteous of their need of a better righteouſneſs, that, being dead to the law, they may live unto God.

5. Hence we may ſee whence it is, that believers live ſo little to God, and are ſo untender, and unholy: it flows from this, that they are not perfectly dead to the law, nor perfectly freed from it: much of a legal ſpirit remains; and the more that takes place, the more unholy they are. Though they have ſhaken off, in converſion, the authority of the covenant of works as a prince, which is a great matter; yet they are many times under the authority thereof as an uſurper, and by reaſon of the old legal nature, which is but partly renewed in time: and hence the voice of the law ſpeaks many times in the believer's conſcience, and he is terrified at the voice of it; for it preſumes to curſe him, and to deſire him to do, or elſe be damned; and ſo it weakens his hands, and makes him think God is a hard maſter: whereas the voice of the goſpel in his conſcience, is the ſtill, calm voice, ſweetly intreating, and alluring the heart to its obedience, and conveying a ſecret ſtrength to obey, and making the ſoul delight in the Lord's way; Draw me, we will run after thee, Song i. 3. But what ſhould the believer do, when the law comes to charge him, and command him to obey upon pain of death, or to curſe him for his diſobedience? Why, he may even ſay in the words of Luther, who, upon the point of juſtification, was as ſound as any ſince his day; "O law, Chriſt is "my righteouſneſs, my treaſure, and my "work; I confeſs, O law, that I am neither "godly nor righteous, but yet this I am ſure "of, that he is godly and righteous for me." His obedience anſwered both the godlineſs required in the firſt table of the law, and the righteouſneſs required in the ſecond table. The believer may ſay to the law, O law, I am dead to thee, and married to another Huſband, even Jeſus Chriſt; and therefore, cannot bring forth any children, any fruit, any acts of obedience to thy threatening commands: but, behold, I run to my ſweet Huſband, who hath ſugared and ſweetened the law, with a goſpel-dreſs and form; which, giving ſtrength to obey, and ſhewing the believer's freedom from the wrath of God, "encourages the believer, "as our Confeſſion of Faith ſpeaks, being free "from the curſe of the moral law, and de-"livered from everlaſting damnation, to yield "obedience to God;" not out of ſlaviſh fear, but a child-like love, and a willing mind.

6. Hence ſee how it is, that holineſs is neceſſary to ſalvation; why, it is the very life of the juſtified man, being dead to the law, to live unto God: he is not holy that he may be juſtified, but juſtified that he may be holy. I do not here meddle with the queſtion, Whether regeneration or juſtification be firſt in order of nature? For I am ſpeaking mainly, not of habitual holineſs, or the firſt habit of grace, but of actual holineſs; whether internal in the exerciſe of grace, or external in the performance of duty. Thus holineſs, I ſay, is neceſſary to ſalvation, as being the native, neceſſary, and inſeparable fruit of juſtification, or dying to the law: it is the juſtified man's way of living, or walking towards heaven. They that turn the grace of God into wantonneſs, they pervert the right end of grace, which teacheth us to deny ungodlineſs, and worldly luſts: and they that give up with the law as a rule of holineſs, becauſe they are, or think they are delivered from the law, as a covenant of works, they pervert the very end of that freedom, which is, that they may live unto God: and no doubt, many among believers themſelves are in danger of this ſin: for I know no ſin, but a believer is liable to it, if he be left to himſelf; and becauſe many of them abuſe grace, therefore God keeps the law-ſpur at their ſide; for it is with many, as with dull lazy horſes, ſo long as the ſpur is in their ſide, they ride quickly; but when that is removed, they become dull and heavy, and are ready to ſtand ſtill: ſo, while the law exacted rigid obedience, and threatened damnation and hell, they were diligent, and durſt not neglect a duty; they were tender in their walk: but now, being delivered from this ſpur, that was daily pricking their ſides, and ſeeing that Chriſt hath ſatisfied the law, which now can neither juſtify, nor condemn them, they imagine they have no more to fear; and ſo they ſin the more, and live ſecurely, inſtead of living ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly. This is a turning the grace of God into wantonneſs, and a perverting of the very end of grace: and if any child of God here be guilty, remember, that your heavenly Father will not let you paſs unpuniſhed; though he pardon your ſins, yet he will take vengeance on your inventions. It is to prevent this wantonneſs in ſome, that the ſpur is kept long in their ſide; and they are kept many days and years, perhaps, under many legal ſhakings, fears, doubts, and tremblings, attaining to very little of any chearful goſpel-obedience; for the law cannot work that. And this leads me to another inference.

7. Hence, from this doctrine, we may ſee, that the law can neither juſtify, nor ſanctify a ſinner: it cannot juſtify him, for he muſt be dead to it in point of juſtification; it cannot ſanctify him, for he never lives unto God, till he be dead to the law. On the one hand, By the deeds of the law, no fleſh living can be juſtified: Why? Becauſe you are dead in ſin by nature, and can do nothing that the law requires, in the way that it requires it; and though you would do any thing, yet your doing is imperfect; but the law requires perfection: yea, though you could obey the law perfectly for the time to come, that will not make amends for former faults; there muſt be ſatisfaction: yea, ſuppoſe it were poſſible that you could do all this, and that from your cradle to your grave you never ſinned; and were as free from original ſin, and had as good a nature as ever Pelagius thought any had, and ſtrength to keep the law, and did actually keep it perfectly fectly from your youth up; yet the law of works is broken in Adam; in him we all ſinned, and that one ſin is enough to damn the whole world, and would do ſo, if Chriſt did not redeem from the guilt thereof.—On the other hand, the law cannot ſanctify any, it works wrath; and when the commandment comes, ſin revives: it is the miniſtration of death every way, as I ſaid before. But here a queſtion may be moved, If the law can neither juſtify nor ſanctify, what uſe is it for? We may anſwer, It is for many noble uſes, both to the regenerate and unregenerate. To the unregenerate, it is of uſe to convince him of ſin; to break up the fallow-ground of the heart; to be a ſchoolmaſter to lead to Chriſt, by convincing him of his abſolute need of a Surety, and of his undone ſtate without Chriſt.—And to the regenerate, it is of uſe to make them highly eſteem Chriſt, whoſe righteouſneſs anſwers the law in its commands and threatenings both; and it ſerves to give him a daily conviction of ſin, that the man may more and more prize the pardon of ſin, and ſeek daily in to the Lord, for pardoning and ſanctifying grace: alſo to let him ſee the intrinſical demerit of ſin, while he ſees hell threatened againſt it in that covenant; and thereupon may fear to offend that God, who is a conſuming fire, but rather that he may worſhip him with reverence and godly fear; not with a ſlaviſh fear, that he ſhall be ſent to hell, which is impoſſible; that is not his duty; he may have the over-awing fear and apprehenſion of hell, but ſhould not have a ſlaviſh fear of it: this fear of it he ſhould not have, but the faith of it he ought to have, and many times needs to have it, to terrify him from ſin, which, of its own nature, leads to deſtruction; as a man that is bound with a great chain to a ſtake on the top of a high tower, though he cannot but know, that by reaſon of the chain, he is ſure enough; yet when he looks over the battlement, and ſees the dreadful precipice, it ſcars him from going near the edge of the battlement. It is certain, that believers, when they know not that they are under grace, may unwarrantably apply to themſelves the ſentence of the law; unwarrantably, I ſay, becauſe there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt; yet God may, for holy ends, ſuffer his conſcience to be troubled with the fear of condemnation, that being humbled, he may make the more uſe of Chriſt for righteouſneſs and ſtrength. In a word, the commands of the law, not formally as a covenant, but materially as a rule of life, ſerve to be an active directory for his walk; and whoever walks according to this rule, peace be on them, and on all the Iſrael of God.——Thus it is of manifold uſe, though it can neither juſtify nor ſanctify, which only the grace of the goſpel can do.

8. Hence ſee what a myſtery to the world religion is, and the difference betwixt God's judgment and man's: man thinks, to be dead to the law, is the way to live in ſin; but God's word tells us, That to be dead to the law, is the way to live unto God. Why? here is a myſtery, a holy riddle; and are we decrying holineſs, when we preach in this apoſtolical ſtrain? God forbid; nay, we declare unto you, in the name of God, that the way to be truly holy, is to quit with your falſe legal holineſs; the way to be truly righteous, is to quit your legal righteouſneſs; yea, I tell you, man, that even in point of ſanctification, Except your righteouſneſs exceed the righteouſneſs of the Scribes and Phariſees, you ſhall not enter into the kingdom of God: and you know, they made long prayers, they faſted twice a week, and gave alms of all that they poſſeſt; and ſome of them were, touching the law, blameleſs, and could ſay, All theſe things have I done from my youth up; and yet I ſay, Unleſs your holineſs exceed their holineſs, you ſhall never enter into the kingdom of God: and, till your unrighteous righteouſneſs, and unholy holineſs, be cried down in your heart, and the perfect righteouſneſs of Chriſt cried up, true holineſs you ſhall never have. Was Chriſt a friend to publicans and harlots? or, did he approve of their ſins, when he ſaid, to theſe Phariſees, Publicans and harlots go into the kingdom of God before you? Mat. xxi. 31. O beware of ſuch blaſphemous thoughts of a holy Jeſus; nay, ſo far from that, that we may hence gather his abhorrence of their ſins; only he would give us to know, that if ſin keep them out of heaven, as much and more will ſelf-righteouſneſs keep out the Phariſee, who muſt be rid of his righteouſneſs, as well as his ſins, before he get there. O but religion is a myſtery! to be dead to the law, in order to live unto God.

9. Hence we may ſee the miſerable ſtate of theſe that are alive, and the happy ſtate of theſe that are dead to the law. Their ſtate is miſerable who are alive to the law; for, though they have a name to live, yet they are dead; legally dead, bound over to the wrath of God, and under the curſe of the law; ſpiritually dead in ſin, having no holineſs, no godlineſs, acceptable to God through Jeſus Chriſt. If they be any way awakened, and ſeeking life by the law, and the works thereof, what a madneſs is this to ſeek the living among the dead? or to ſeek help where it cannot be had? God hath laid all our help upon Chriſt; and it is impoſſible to find juſtification or ſanctification any where elſe.—But on the other hand, their ſtate is happy who are dead to the law; for though they be dead, yet they live; they live a life of juſtification, and a life of ſanctification thereupon; being dead to the law, they live unto God. O what a mercy is it, if God hath awakened your conſciences, convinced you of ſin and ſelf-righteouſneſs, and brought you off from the law! You ſee your extreme guilt, vileneſs, baſeneſs, and wickedneſs; and it may be are groaning under the ſenſe thereof: but God may have a glorious deſign in this, to bring you more and more off from the law, and from any confidence in the fleſh, that you may build upon a better foundation, and be married to a better huſband, even to Jeſus Chriſt, that you may bring forth fruit unto God.

10. Hence ſee the malignity of a legal ſpirit: if we muſt be dead to the law, that we may live unto God; then a legal ſpirit and temper muſt be a wicked and ungodly ſpirit: it is an ignorant ſpirit; if they were not ignorant of God's righteouſneſs, they would never eſtabliſh a righteouſneſs of their own: but they are ignorant of the perfection of his law, the terror of his juſtice, the ſeverity of his tribunal, and of their own natural weakneſs and wickedneſs, otherwiſe they would not dare to make any thing a ground of their acceptance with God, except the blood and righteouſneſs of his Son.

It

It is a proud ſpirit, that will not let grace be exalted, but puts ſelf in the throne of Chriſt, and his righteouſneſs. It is a filthy and abominable ſpirit, and pollutes the man more and more; and God abhors it, as that which contradicts his moſt glorious plot. And it is a damning ſpirit, if it be not removed; For the wicked ſhall be turned into hell: and this man continues wicked ſtill, even under the pretence of holineſs; he is wicked and ungodly ſtill, for he lives to himſelf, but not to God; for it is only theſe that are dead to the law, who live unto God.

Uſe ſecond, Of examination. Try your ſtate then, man, woman: you ſhould try after, as well as before a communion: and there are two things you ſhould try here, 1. Whether you be dead to the law in point of juſtification? 2. Whether you be living to the law, or living to God, in point of ſanctification? Two as neceſſary points as are in all divinity, and ſuch as are of the utmoſt concern in time, and through eternity.

Firſt, Try whether you be dead to the law in point of juſtification. I might here give you marks of theſe that are alive to the law, and then marks of theſe that are dead to the law; but ſeeing theſe will coincide, I join them together. I ſhall not multiply evidences; but you may try by theſe following.

1. The man that is dead to the law, hath got a ſight of himſelf in the glaſs of the law, and of his natural legal temper. Some think they have a good heart to God, and they can do ſo and ſo; but the believer dead to the law, he ſees his heart the worſt piece in or about him; and that he cannot believe, he cannot repent, he cannot mortify ſin; corruption is like the giants of Anak. The man ſees he is vile, with Job: Behold I am vile! Vile in every duty; in praying, communicating; Behold I am vile! He ſees himſelf, and he ſees his own legal temper.—The man that is alive to the law, never ſees his legal temper, nor his ſtrong inclination to ſelf-righteouſneſs: the believer ſees and finds ſomething of this, even after he is made a goſpel-ſaint; but the Legaliſts never ſee it. What, ſay they, would you have us Papiſts? Bleſſed be God, we are better inſtructed; we have no merit, our righteouſneſs is rags: and yet, after all, there is a ſecret truſting in their own righteouſneſs. Hath it ever been one exerciſe to you, how to be rid of your ſins? and another, how to be rid of your righteouſneſs?

2. The man that is dead to the law, is tired and wearied out of it. Perhaps he hath been convinced of ſin; and thereupon falling to the law, to this and the other duty; O I deſerve hell, for my ſin is great: well, he endeavours to make a mends, and to find peace; and ſo he runs to prayer and preaching, thinking he will get peace; he repents, he reſolves; and wo to the man that finds all his peace there without going further.—But, behold, the man whom God ſhews mercy to, he goes on in theſe duties, but finds no peace, no reſt, no ſatisfaction; he is tired out of it: his ſoul ſinks with diſcouragement, and languiſhes and hangs down the head: and God thus unbottoms the man of himſelf.—Whereas, he that is alive to the law, he that takes up his reſt and comfort in his duty; he hath the fear of wrath to come, and then he runs to duty; the duty gives him eaſe; he is relieved; all is well: as a huſband comforts his diſtreſſed wife, ſo obedience to the law comforts him, and the law heals him: it is the law that throws him down, and it is the law that raiſes him up again. But the man that is dead to the law, though the law terrify, yet it is not the law that ſatisfies him again.

3. The man that is dead to the law, he knows what it is to act from Chriſt, as his principle; and to him, as his end: he knows what it is to perform duty from a borrowed ſtrength. The Legaliſt may indeed ſpeak ſoundly, and ſay, He can do nothing of himſelf without Chriſt; and yet he reads, prays, preaches, hears, communicates, and does all, as if he had the power in his own hand. Let a man have never ſuch an orthodox head, if he be not a believer in Chriſt, he is an Arminian and Pelagian all over: he knows not his own weakneſs; he looks not up for immediate influences. And as ſelf is his principle, ſo to ſelf he acts as his end: as he that is joined to Chriſt brings forth children, or fruit unto Chriſt; ſo he that is joined to the law, brings forth children to the law: he does duty, it may be, to huſh the clamours of conſcience, and give it eaſe; to keep himſelf out of hell, for he hath no will to be damned; and for the like ends.—The believer being dead to the law, cannot perform duty, but by borrowed ſtrength; he can do nothing till a gale of the Spirit come; he cannot bring forth children, till the Spirit of God beget them in his ſoul: no, no; every act of grace flows from a creating power: and when he acts, the love of Chriſt eſpecially, and deſire of communion and fellowſhip with God, conſtrains him; and the glory of God in Chriſt is his great end.

4. The believer, that is dead to the law, he hath vilifying thoughts of all he does: the Legaliſt over-values his duties; Wherefore have we faſted, and thou haſt not ſeen? Wherefore have we prayed, and thou haſt not heard? They challenge God as if he were unjuſt, for not giving them what they merit: God, I thank thee, ſaid the Phariſee, I am not as other men: it was like a proud boaſting of what he had done. But let the believer ſpend days and nights in prayer, and that with much liberty and inlargement, yet the iſſue of the work is, O my righteouſneſs is filthy rags, a menſtruous cloth! Wo to me, if I be not found in Chriſt, for my beſt duties deſerve damnation; I find my praying, my worſhipping, my communicating full of atheiſm, unbelief, formality, and hypocriſy.—The Legaliſt over-rates his duties: he thinks more of what he hath done, than of what Chriſt hath done; and more of his praying on earth than of Chriſt's pleading in heaven: he thinks more of his tears than of Chriſt's blood; he is proud of his humility, and never duly humbled.

5. The believer that is dead to the law, ſo far as he is dead thereto, his complaints and his comforts move in a goſpel-channel. The Legaliſt will complain more for want of holineſs, than for want of Chriſt: ſeeing he hath taken up with a ſelf-righteouſneſs, it is his all, it is his happineſs, it is his huſband, it is his God; and when it is wanting, he cannot but be troubled. But the language of the man dead to the law is, O for Chriſt! O for a day of power! O to be wrapt up in the covenant of grace, grace, to get an omnipotent power, determining me to comply with the gospel-offer! His comforts move in a gospel-channel.—But the Legalist finds comfort in law-works, even in all his extremities in time: In the prospect of trouble, what comforts him? Even this, that he hath done many good duties; he wraps up himself in a garment of his own weaving. Upon challenges of conscience, what comforts him, and gives him peace? He even covers himself with the same robe. In the prospect of judgment, what comforts him, and gives him peace? Why, he hopes God will be merciful to him, because he hath had a good profession, and said many good prayers, and done many good duties. But, O sorry peacemaker. The only thing that gives a believer peace and ease, in these cases, is the law-biding righteousness of Christ, under which he desires to shroud himself: he flees to the blood of Christ, saying, O I am undone, unless my soul be wrapt up in the mantle of Christ's perfect righteousness; I desire to be found in him: upon this righteousness of Jesus do I venture my soul; I have no shift but this.—The Legalist, I said, comforts himself in all his extremities with the law, till the extremity come, and then he finds himself cheated, miserably deceived: and hence, O what a mercy is it, that the Lord drains a man of his legal comfort, that he may unhinge him off the law, and off his self-confidence! Oft-times, when God is bringing home his elect, he makes all the common work they had before to disappear. It may be they had a profession, were morally serious, they had zeal, prayed with life, heard with affection; but behold now, all the streams of common influences are dried up; the poor soul finds he cannot pray, he cannot shed a tear, though he should be cast into hell; yea, he cannot think a right thought, though it should bring him to heaven; nay, he finds his heart hardened like a devil, and his mind bemisted with the darkness of hell. Why? this is all in love to induce him to relinquish himself, abandon the law, as a covenant, and flee in unto and embrace the dear Son of God.

6. The believer that is dead to the law, is content to have his righteousness tried, and compared with the perfect law. As Christ is the Lord his righteousness, and this he knows is sufficient to answer all the demands and commands of the law, and he is not ashamed of this righteousness, but glories in it; so, as to the works of holiness, whatever shortcoming he is sensible of, yet he is content to be tried with the clearest light. Let omniscience descend, and make a critical search; Search me, O God, and see if there be any wicked way in me; and lead me in the way everlasting. I do not love to die with a lie in my right-hand; let all the inward corners of my heart be laid open before me: I am satisfied to know if I have a lawful husband, or not; if Christ be my husband, or not: he is content to be tried.—But the Legalist, the man that is alive to the law, a searching sermon is uneasy to him; a gospel-sermon he cannot abide; a narrow trial he cannot endure; he thinks that the minister is too impartial to cast us all to hell; he hath stolen goods, and therefore dreads the light. Yea,

7. The man that is dead to the law he hath got a soul-humbling sight, and saving view of the glory of Christ's righteousness, that made him quit with all his legal rags as lots and dung; even as the stars evanish out of sight when the sun arises. O hath Christ's glory ever shined into your heart, man, woman, and made you see thousands of worlds to be nothing to him; thousands of righteousnesses of men and angels, to be nothing to his? Have you seen an utter impossibility of obtaining God's favour by any righteousness of yours? and such a sure ground of obtaining God's favour here, that your soul hath been made to renounce all other ways of acceptance; and to see, admire, and rejoice in the glory of this way; and to approve it, as a device worthy of God, and suitable to you? And have you found rest here? It is good.—The legalist is a stranger to such saving views of the glory of Christ, and his righteousness; having never got the Spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Christ.

8. The man that is dead to the law, is in love with the doctrine of the gospel; How beautiful upon the mountains, to them, are the feet of these that preach the glad tidings of peace! Whereas he that is alive to the law, he always suspects the doctrine of the gospel, as if it were leading him away from the law, and away from holiness. Here is a mark that may well find out a pharisaic generation; they suspect the doctrine of Christ, and his righteousness, as if it were a doctrine tending to licentiousness, and opposition to the law; a sign they never felt the power of the gospel upon their hearts, otherwise they would feel the revelation of the righteousness of Christ, from faith to faith, to be the power of God to their salvation; they would find, that never are they so much disposed to holy duties, as when they are under the influences of the spirit of faith, discovering the glory of Christ, and his righteousness, to them. But an ignorant generation, that knows not the power and virtue of the gospel, still suspects it as contrary to the law: this was the false charge against Christ of old, and against Stephen, Acts vi. 18. and against Paul, from which therefore he many times vindicates himself. See Acts xviii. 13.

9. The man that is dead to the law, can, in some measure, put a difference betwixt Christ and a frame: whereas, he that is alive to the law, can never distinguish between Christ in duty, and a frame in duty. I suppose this is a hard question, How shall we know the difference betwixt Christ in duty, and a frame in duty? I will answer, in a word, The man that hath only a frame in duty, and not Christ in it, he is only pleased with his frame, his tears, his enlargements; he makes that his righteousness; he is content with that, and exalted with that; and now thinks all is well: but he that hath Christ in duty, and not a frame only, he is ready to cry, O I would have Christ! tears will not do the turn; my own heart hath deceived me a thousand times; I find my tears do not wash me, my frame does not sanctify me: this flowing of affection may be but a natural thing; it will not do; it is Christ I want; nothing but his blood can wash me: nothing but this blood can pacify his conscience; nothing but some views of Christ can give him solid quiet. A sweet frame may indeed be the chariot, in which Christ may ride towards the soul; but the gospel believer is not so much taken up with the chariot, as with the glorious King that rides in it.

10. The

10. The man that is dead to the law, is dead to ſin: Sin hath not dominion over him; becauſe he is not under the law, but under grace. The views of Chriſt are of a transforming nature; Beholding his glory, we are changed. It is true, here the believer fears moſt of all, becauſe of his ſhortcoming in point of ſanctification, and mortification of ſin, becauſe he finds iniquity prevailing againſt him: and how is it true, that ſin hath not dominion over him, he not being under the law, but under grace? Why, ſin hath no righteous nor lawful dominion over believers; the firſt huſband is dead, and they are married to Chriſt the ſecond huſband; and therefore they are not debtors to the fleſh; though ſtill the fleſh craves them to obey it, yet it hath no juſt power ſo to do. Sin's juſt authority is exauctorated; and Chriſt, by ſatisfying the law, which is the ſtrength of ſin, hath condemned ſin in the fleſh. Sin hath a ſort of right to reign in wicked men, and theſe that are under the law; but none in the believer, who is delivered from the law, which is the ſtrength of ſin. Though it actually exerciſe authority, yet it is but an uſurped authority: as ſin hath no power nor authority to condemn the ſoul that is in Chriſt; ſo it hath no authority to reign; and ſin ſhall never reign unto death over them, Rom. v. 21. And the believer that hath caſt off the authority of ſin, as being no more his lawful king, may complain of its unjuſt oppreſſion, and plead with a righteous God, that the power of ſin may be more and more broken, and ſo it ſhall be.—But the legaliſt, that is alive to the law, in regard that he is both under the commanding and condemning power of the law; he is alſo under the commanding and condemning power of ſin. The law commands him, and he obeys it as his lord; and ſin commands him alſo, and he obeys it too, and makes his legal duties a plaiſter to cure his conſcience of his ſin: like Lewis XI. of France, who would ſwear a bloody oath, and for a pardon kiſs a crucifix; and ſwear again, and then kiſs it over again; and ſo runs the round. However, the believer is delivered from the power of the law, and the power of ſin too; having caſt off the law as a covenant, and finding nothing ſatisfy and ſtill his conſcience, but the blood and righteouſneſs of Chriſt, that ſatisfies divine juſtice; as in this way he finds reſt from the curſe of the law, ſo alſo ſome reſt from the rule and dominion of ſin: the faith of God's love in Chriſt, does purify his heart, and kill his natural enmity, inſomuch that he can atteſt, to his ſweet experience, that the faith of the love of God in Chriſt, is ſo far from leading him to licentiouſneſs of life, or encouraging lazineſs, that he finds it the hotteſt fire in the world, to melt his heart for ſin; and the ſtrongeſt cord in the world, to bind him to duty, while the love of God is ſhed abroad upon him.—Try by theſe things if you be dead to the law.——In a word, if you be dead to the law, then you will be living unto God; I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God. He is led ſweetly to the law as a rule of life.

But here it may be enquired, How ſhall I know if I be living unto God? This leads me to the other part of the examination.

Secondly, Try if you be living unto God. Having enlarged ſo much upon the preceeding head, and having offered ſeveral particulars upon this head already in the doctrinal part, which may be improved by way of trial; therefore I will offer you but theſe two marks of this.

1. If you be living unto God, then the Spirit of God will be the chief principle of your life; The water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing up to everlaſting life, John iv. 14. The man hath not only the water within him, the graces of the Spirit; but the well itſelf, the Spirit himſelf dwelling in him. And as we know a ſpring-well, by ſeeing the water bullering and bubbling up; ſo a man may know he hath the Spirit, by the ſpringing and flowing out of this water now and then. None have a life unto God, but theſe that have the Spirit of Chriſt in them, cauſing them to walk in his ſtatutes; for, where the Spirit of life is, he is a Spirit of faith, and a Spirit of love; a Spirit of faith, leading the man to the obedience of faith; which ſets him to duty from the authority of God, and in a dependence upon Chriſt, both as his ſtrength for aſſiſtance, and as his righteouſneſs for acceptance, in the performance thereof: a Spirit of love, leading the man to the obedience of love; and this obedience makes a man ſerve like a ſon, and not like a ſlave; and makes the ſervice ſweet and pleaſant; This is the love of God, that we keep his commandments, and his commandments are not grievous, 1 John v. 3. This makes the believer's obedience, while he lives unto God, a myſtery to the world, that reckon it a burden to keep the Sabbath, a burden to wait on ordinances, a burden to perform duties: Why? on the other hand, when the believer is mounted up in the chariot of love, indeed it is a burden to him to leave off duty; it is a burden to him to leave ordinances; it is a burden to him to think of going back to the world again: Why? the matter is, he is about the obedience of love, which makes the commands of God not grievous, but delicious. Try your obedience, and living to God, by this principle of it, the Spirit of God as a Spirit of faith and love, leading to the obedience of faith and love.

2. If you be living unto God, then the glory of God will be the chief end of your life. But here a queſtion may be propounded, How ſhall I know, if the glory of God be my chief end in my obedience? Indeed it is a material queſtion. I will juſt offer a thought upon it. If the glory of God be the chief end of your life, then you will have a continual conflict with ſelf, and how to get ſelf-ends mortified. O! I ſee ſelf creeping in upon me, in all my preaching, praying, communicating; how ſhall I get this enemy killed? Here the fleſh luſts againſt the Spirit, and the Spirit againſt the fleſh, and theſe two are contrary the one to the other. The believer finds a war here againſt ſelf, as his greateſt enemy; and it is his joy, and the triumph of his heart, when he gets ſelf daſhed to the ground, and debaſed; when the loftineſs thereof is brought down, and the Lord alone ſhall be exalted in him.——The man that hath God's glory as his chief end, he can ſometimes trample even his own happineſs under his feet, in a manner, when it comes in competition with the glory of God and Chriſt: the glory of God is of more worth than ten thouſand heavens; and therefore the ſelf-denied believer, before the divine glory ſhould ſink, would venture his all, though he had a thouſand lives: Blot me out of thy book, ſays Moſes;

Let

Let me be accurſed, ſays Paul; and all was, that God might be glorified, that Chriſt might be magnified, and have a glorious name in the world. There were ſome things indeed extraordinary in that meaſure that Moſes and Paul attained to; but there may be ſomething like it, I think, though in a ſmaller meaſure, that believers may know in their experience: O! whatever ſhould become of me, let thy name be glorified; let Chriſt have a numerous train to praiſe him to eternity; let me decreaſe, and him increaſe; let him be exalted, though I ſhould be for ever abaſed: and if it might contribute to his mounting of the throne, let me be even the foot-ſtool on which he may aſcend.—The man prefers Chriſt's public intereſt before his own private intereſt; If I forget thee, O Jeruſalem, let my right-hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth: if I prefer not Jeruſalem above my chief joy, Pſal. cxxxvii. 5, 6. In a word, the man that lives to God, as his chief end, he acts in duties, becauſe God is thereby honoured and glorified; and he hates ſin in himſelf and others, becauſe God is thereby diſhonoured.

Finally, If you be living unto God, your life, your obedience, will be influenced by the grace of the new covenant, being dead to the law, or to the old covenant: But of this I have ſpoken at large, on the fourth general head.——Thus much for the trial.

The third uſe may be for lamentation over, together with reproof of, all legaliſts, both doctrinal and practical.

1ſt, As to the doctrinal legaliſts, we might bewail, and refute the legal ſchemes that take place in the world. I name theſe two.

1. The Popiſh ſcheme, denying the imputation of Chriſt's righteouſneſs. The imputed righteouſneſs of Chriſt is blaſphemed by the church of Rome; they call it an affectitious, imaginary air; a putative righteouſneſs; contrary to the very ſtrain of our apoſtle in his epiſtles. They talk of a twofold juſtification: Their firſt juſtification is that, whereby an unjuſtified man becomes juſtified, or a wicked man becomes godly; where they confound juſtification and ſanctification. The ſecond is that, whereby a man, already righteous, becomes more and more righteous, more and more holy. We know no juſtification, but one juſtification by faith, in the day of cloſing with Chriſt; laying hold upon the blood of Chriſt, Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God. To declare, I ſay, his righteouſneſs: that he might be juſt, and the juſtifier of him which believeth in Jeſus, Rom. iii. 25, 26. It is a complete righteouſneſs, we have it all at once; and it is not within us, but without us: it is in Chriſt inherently, but in us imputatively. They tell us, that we are not juſtified by the works of the ceremonial law, but by the works of the moral law: they tell us, that we are not juſtified by perfect obedience, but by imperfect; and, by an acceptilation, it is looked on by God as perfect: and, in a word, they acquaint us, that we are juſtified, not meritoriouſly, and ſimply by works done in our own ſtrength, but by works acted and done by the ſtrength and aſſiſtance of the Spirit of God.——There is the Popiſh ſcheme.

2. The Baxterian ſcheme is alſo oppoſite to this goſpel doctrine: they tell us, that God hath made a new law with mankind; and obedience to that new law, and to its commands, is our righteouſneſs; and this obedience gives us a title to heaven, and gives us a title to Chriſt's blood, and to pardon: and the act of faith is our righteouſneſs, not as it accepts of Chriſt's righteouſneſs, but as it is an obedience to that new law; the very act and work of faith is, according to them, the righteouſneſs itſelf: and this faith takes in all kind of works, namely, repentance, love, obedience, and ten or twelve duties of that ſort; and all theſe together are our righteouſneſs for juſtification. "Really, "as one ſays upon this very head, if the apo- "ſtle Paul were alive, he would excommuni- "cate ſuch miniſters."

2dly, As to practical legaliſts; this generation is full of theſe. I know not a more reigning ſin among profeſſors: a goſpel-ſtrain is almoſt loſt, and a goſpel-method is almoſt forgotten. If we would go back to our reformers, we would ſee a goſpel-ſpirit among them; but now the goſpel-ſcheme is come under reproach, as if it were a new ſcheme; and ſome preach againſt it, write againſt it, reaſon againſt it, as if it were Antinomianiſm, and a going off from the law; as the Papiſts accuſed the Proteſtants of old: why? what is the matter? A helliſh, unholy, legal ſpirit reigns in the world. Now, in proſecuting of this uſe, and that we may ſee how much ground there is to lament over, and bewail a legal temper that takes place; I would here, 1. Shew ſome evidences of a legal ſpirit in the ungodly and unconverted. 2. Some evidences of a legal temper in believers themſelves. 3. Shew the cauſe of this legal temper that is in the world. 4. Shew the evil and danger of it.

[1.] Some evidences of a legal temper, that is natural to the ungodly, who having no new nature, have no goſpel-ſpirit at all. This may be evidenced in theſe four degrees of ſelf, and legal pride.

1. While man is juſt in the dead ſleep of natural ſecurity, having no ſight, nor ſenſe of his ſin, no conviction of, nor contrition for ſin; even then, which is ſtrange, he may imagine many times, that he is perfect, that he never breaks all the commandments of God, but keeps the whole law: the young Phariſee in the goſpel is an eminent inſtance hereof; our Lord gives him an account of the commands of the law, and he had the inſolent boldneſs to ſay to Chriſt, All theſe things have I kept from my youth up: and Paul, before his converſion, was ſtuffed with the ſame legal pride; I was touching the law blameleſs. What means he by that? Why, it is as if he had ſaid, I was ſuch a ſtanch Phariſee, and religious zealot, that, as I never thought I broke any of the ten commandments, ſo I thought I had kept the whole law. Wonderful arrogance and ignorance, to imagine that a man in his fallen ſtate can have a perfection, and keep the whole law! And yet the elect of God, before their converſion, have found that they have been filled with ſuch pride and inſolent thoughts, as you ſee in Paul: yea, and many think little leſs; though they ſay they are ſinners, yet they ſee not ſin, and fancy they are conformable to the law: they have a good heart, they wrong no body, they are juſt in their dealings, none can ſay, black is their eye; and here is their righteouſneſs, being alive to the law.

2. Degree is, when men come to be convinced of ſin and rebellion, and of their loſt ſtate, by reaſon of their having trampled the divine authority under foot, offended his Majeſty, violated his law, provoked his anger; then, as if Chriſt were the moſt needleſs and uſeleſs thing in heaven or earth, they run to their repentance for an atonement, as Papiſts to their penances, and Pagans to their ſacrifices, to atone their offended deities; as if there were no Day's-man, no Mediator betwixt God and man, to make atonement: Chriſt the Propitiation is altogether ſlighted; they hope to make atonement, and pacify God, by repenting ſeriouſly, and lamenting bitterly; and ſo they fall to work, praying, faſting, mourning, confeſſing with an abſolute neglect of Chriſt; and, upon the back of all their legal fears, confeſſions, and bitter lamentations, their awakened conſciences are pleaſed and pacified. The ſtorm that was raiſed there, is turned to a calm; a falſe peace takes place, not founded upon Chriſt, or his atoning blood, but upon their confeſſions, tears, prayers, whereby they think to diſgorge and vomit up all the ſins of their life, and to ſave themſelves from them, and from the wrath that follows them. To this purpoſe was that ſaying of Auguſtine (it looks like a harſh ſaying, but had a good meaning) namely, "That repentance damns moe than ſins do." When people are under any fearful apprehenſion of the wrath to come upon them for their ſins, they flee to their repentance, inſtead of fleeing to Chriſt, and that effectually deſtroys and ruins them.

3. Degree is, when a man not only repents, but amends: he not only takes up reſolutions of amendment of life, but actually ſtudies obedience, reforms his way; he is at pains to get his life changed, but not to get his ſtate changed: he is not taken up to get a new heart, but would have the old heart made a little better; he thinks a little mends will do the buſineſs; and what is all this, but, as one ſays, like the gilding of a rotten poſt; the poſt is rotten within, but it is finely gilded over without? It is but like the whitening of a ſepulchre, that, however white it may be without, yet it is full of dead mens bones within: it is like the painting of a chimney without, that is all black and ſooty within: it is like the adorning of a dead corps with ſweet flowers. The man is dead in ſins and treſpaſſes, notwithſtanding all this.

4. Degree is beyond all this, goſpel-light hath ſhined objectively upon them, and they are more illuminated than to be pleaſed with this; why? they hear of Chriſt, and that there is no ſalvation, no juſtification without him; and therefore, they act faith upon him in a legal way; they believe in him, not by a ſaving faith, but a temporary faith. As believers do perform goſpel-obedience to the law, ſo unbelievers may have a legal faith of the goſpel, a legal faith upon Chriſt; believing in their own ſtrength; believing before ever he ſees his inability to believe; before ever he ſee his unwillingneſs to believe, before he be humbled under a ſenſe of his abſolute need of Chriſt; and before he ſees what right and warrant he hath from the word. However, he fancys he hath cloſed with Chriſt, laid hold on his covenant; and this is the moſt ſubtle part of ſelf-righteouſneſs; yet, after all, he is the old man, ſtill wedded to the law: and hence he hath no ſanctification, no new nature, no new principle of ſpiritual life, no living unto God.

[2.] Some evidences of a legal temper that remains in believers themſelves.

1. When their comfort is always up and down with their frame; if their frame be up, their comfort is up; if their frame be down, their comfort is down; if their frame be gone, their comfort is gone, their joy is withered: herein the legal ſpirit diſcovers itſelf. Whereas a goſpel-temper of ſoul would lead the man to rejoice, even when the changeable frame is gone, that the unchangeable covenant ſtill remains; and to ſay, Though the fig-tree ſhould not bloſſom,—yet will I rejoice in the Lord. Though grace be at a low ebb with me, yet the ocean of grace is in Chriſt; and herein I rejoice: though I be in darkneſs, yet will I rejoice that there is light in him; though I find nothing but deadneſs in me, yet will I rejoice that there is life in him; though I be empty, yet will I rejoice that there is fulneſs in him, and this is to be communicate in his time and way.

2. It is a legal temper in the believer, when his aſſurance is loſt by his challenges. It may be, the man attained ſome ſweet meaſure of aſſurance, but behold ſin prevails, conſcience challenges him, and hereupon he razes all; this is an evidence of a legal temper, contrary to that goſpel ſpirit which we may ſee acting in David, Pſal. lxv. 3. Iniquity prevails againſt me; it is againſt my heart, againſt my will, againſt my prayers, againſt my ſecret groans and wreſtlings, againſt my reſolutions, againſt my inclination they prevail: ſhall I raze the foundation of my faith upon this account? No: I flee to the blood of the Lamb of God, for cleanſing and purging both from the guilt and power of ſin; and therefore I will maintain my aſſurance and confidence in thee; As for our tranſgreſſions, thou wilt purge them away.

3. It is a legal temper, when faith is marred, either by ſins or graces; I mean, either by the prevalence of ſin, or the pride of grace. On the one hand, when the exerciſe of faith is marred by the prevalence of ſin; when their known ſenſe and feeling of out-breakings, either make a man ſtand a-back from Chriſt, or make him run away from him, by ſinking diſcouragement or ſecret deſpair: this evidences much legality. Are you convinced of ſin? Well then, you have the more need to come to Chriſt, and believe in him, and the leſs need to ſtay away from him. Peter had a prayer once, that looked like a ſet form of the devil's compoſing, Lord, depart from me; for I am a ſinful man. If it had run in a goſpel-form, he would rather ſaid, Lord, come to me; for I am a ſinful man. Yet many believers have learned Peter's form of prayer; Lord, I am ſuch a ſinful man, I dare not come to thee, nor believe that thou wilt come to me: Why? the more ſinful thou art, the more need thou haſt to come to him, and to employ him to come to you, and ſave you. —On the other hand, when the exerciſe of faith is marred by the pride of grace, this is a part of a legal temper: when believers truſt more to their graces than to Chriſt, the fountain of all grace; when they look more to the ſtrength of gracious habits, and truſt more to them, than to the grace that is in Chriſt, in which they they are called to be ſtrong; Be ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt: As by poring on their ſins, they are many times led off from depending on Chriſt, from conſtant incomes of actual influences. And hence, when a believer is lively, he is ready to think, he will never be dead again; when he is ſpiritual, that he will never be carnal again; when he is up in the mount, that he will never be down in the valley again, ſaying, By thy favour my mountain ſtands ſtrong; he thinks it like mount Zion, that can never be ſhaken, and that he will never doubt again; but behold, Thou didſt hide thy face, and I was troubled: my good frame was changed to a bad one; of a ſudden my mount Zion was turned to a mount Sinai; all fears, all frowns, all darkneſs. Never hath a believer more need to act faith, and cloſe dependence on the Lord, than when his graces and frames are moſt lively, leſt ſelf-confidence creep in, and he confides more in created grace, than in the fountain; out of whoſe fulneſs he is to have grace for grace. Let your frame be never ſo good, your faith never ſo ſtrong, your grace never ſo lively, at any time, yet look up ſtill for new influences; for without momentary ſupplies and breathings from heaven, your gracious habits cannot act, and will not hold out a moment.

4. It is a legal temper, when peace is always marred by ſhort-comings; ſhort-comings in the exerciſe of grace, ſhort-comings in the mortification of ſin, ſhort-comings in holineſs; when they pore upon theſe ſhort-comings; upon the weakneſs of grace on the one hand, and the ſtrength of corruption on the other; upon ſuch a ſin and luſt that prevails, upon ſuch a plague and diſtemper that affects them; inſomuch that they cannot let in a word of comfort, they cannot hearken to the joyful ſound of the goſpel; like Iſrael, who hearkened not to Moſes, becauſe of the anguiſh of their ſpirit: they look inward to themſelves, and finding nothing there but failings, and infirmities, and plagues, inſtead of holineſs, their peace is wholly demoliſhed; becauſe they do not, at the ſame time, look upward to Chriſt, to his blood and righteouſneſs, and to his fulneſs: here is a legal temper.——So alſo, to the ſame purpoſe, when a man's peace and comfort reſts only and always upon his ſanctification, as if there were no other ground of joy, but a righteouſneſs inherent: ſurely, when the joy of ſanctification is greater than the joy of juſtification, it is an evidence of a legal temper; for the joy of juſtification is founded upon a law-biding righteouſneſs, the perfect obedience of the glorious Head, which is always the ſame unchangeable ground of joy to believers; whereas his ſanctification is imperfect here, and cannot afford ſuch peace and joy, as faith in a perfect obedience will give. The true circumciſion rejoice in Chriſt, and in what they have in him, more than in what they have from him. But behold, even the believer is ready to be taken up with his ſanctification, which is inherent, and ſo to be lifted up, when he attains to a good gale, a great meaſure of ſanctification; corruption may abuſe the privilege, and then he is proud and lifted up. It is true, communion with God is of a humbling nature, and natively makes a man humble, and lively, and watchful; but when the good frame is wearing off, and corruption beginning to work again, if this nick of time be not noticed, and the believer on his guard, a proud thought may enter in, were it even upon a Paul wrapt up to the third heavens; Leſt I ſhould be exalted above meaſure, a meſſenger of Satan was ſent; a thorn in the fleſh. O how does a legal temper run through every frame! When a man is dead and dull, then he is in danger of murmuring; and when he is active and lively, then he is in danger of ſwelling.

5. It is a legal temper, when a man's expectation of ſucceſs is built upon the miniſter that preaches: if the miniſter hath a weak gift, O they will not hear that man, at leaſt they expect little good of him: if another hath great gifts, and a taking way, O now they expect heaven will come down; way? this is an evidence of a legal temper; for a goſpel temper will expect nothing, but in a goſpel way; even by the powerful influences of the Spirit promiſed in the goſpel. The goſpel in any man's mouth is but a dead letter, without the Holy Ghoſt.

6. It is a legal temper, when the believer is under exceſſive diſcouragements, on whatever ground: it is an evidence he is too much under the law; for the law can give no encouragement, no ſettlement to the conſcience; it is only Chriſt can give reſt; Come unto me, all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt. What is it that diſcourages a believer, when he is under this legal temper? Sometimes he is diſcouraged when he performs duty, and cannot find that preſence, that ſenſible help he would have: why then he is quite diſpirited. Indeed he hath ground of mourning, when the Lord is away; he ſhould be deeply humbled for the cauſes of it: but when he is ſo diſpirited, that he loſes his confidence, and is beaten quite away from his faith and hope, queſtions his ſtate, and gives way to ſlaviſh fear, that weakens his hands in duties, and draws his heart from duty, it is a token he is ſecretly hankering after the law; for the language of the heart of him is, O if I could pray with as much life, and hear with as much attention, and perform duty with as much vigour as I would be at! O then I would have a good hope; and ſo it is not Chriſt, ſo much as the law, the old huſband, that you deſire to place your hope upon, while you are under that legal frame: the apoſtle ſpeaks of ſome believers that deſire to be under the law, Gal. iv. 21. Sometimes their diſcouragements ariſe from this, that they dare not apply the promiſes; and why ſo? becauſe they think they are not for the like of them; ſuch a promiſe belongs to ſuch and ſuch a good perſon; it is for a holy man, but not for the like of me: what is this but a legal temper, apprehending, that if you had ſuch and ſuch a legal righteouſneſs, then God would be ſome way indebted to give you the promiſe! But, O is not grace to be glorified in this new and goſpel way! And therefore, the more of a goſpel ſpirit you have, the more chearfully will you embrace the promiſe, for this end, that having theſe promiſes, you may cleanſe yourſelf, by ſucking virtue from the breaſts of the promiſe.

7. It is an evidence of a legal temper, when they are always ſtraitned in duty. Sometimes they are diſcouraged, becauſe they are ſo ſtraitened in duty; and they are ſtraitened in duty, becauſe they are ſo legal in it. Their diſcouragement flows from their ſtraitening, and their

ſtraitening

ſtraitening flows from their legal ſpirit; for a goſpel ſpirit is a ſpirit of liberty. 1. When a believer is for ordinary ſtraitened, without life, without liberty, it is an evidence of a legal ſpirit; for, Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty: The law of the ſpirit of life in Chriſt Jeſus makes the man free from the law of ſin and death. Rom. viii. 2. When one is influenced by the covenant of grace, he runs in the way of God's commandments. Though you have once known what it was to run ſweetly in the Lord's way, yet if now you find a habitual indiſpoſition to duties and religious exerciſes to be a heavy yoke, a grievous burden, this indiſpoſition teſtifies againſt you, that though you have once known the goſpel of Chriſt, yet now you are hankering after the law. The Lord may indeed withdraw his preſence from his people, for neceſſary ends, even from the man that hath much of the goſpel-ſpirit; and ſuch a man, amidſt all his trials of that ſort, will triumph in Chriſt, and ſay, though I have little in hand, yet I have much in hope; whatever my own wants be, I have enough in Chriſt; however weak in myſelf, I am ſtrong in him; imperfect in myſelf, but complete in him. But when, for ordinary, the perſon does not find pleaſure in duty, hath little heart to it, and finds it not eaſy and light, but grievous; it is a token, that he is bearing the yoke of the law, or old covenant: For Chriſt's yoke is eaſy and his burden is light; but this law-yoke is heavy. The law, the firſt huſband, requires hard, and heavy things, and does not help the ſinner with ſtrength; but Chriſt, the new huſband, requires the ſame things, but he gives ſtrength to perform; and what he requires of us, he works in us; I can do all things through Chriſt ſtrengthening me; were it to overleap a wall, and fight armies of devils in my way.

8. It is a ſign of a legal temper, when a poor creature finds always diſcouragement, except when about religious duties; and finds no peace, when about any other work; but is ſtill racked, except when upon his knees, or going about ſome religious performance or other: it is a token of being knit and wedded too much to the firſt huſband; for the law drives hard, and craves hard: but Chriſt is very tender and gentle in his commands and demands; and a perſon, under the influences of grace, will find as much ſweetneſs, even when eating and drinking, and when he is about his lawful employment ſometimes, as when about religious exerciſes. Miſtake me not here; think not that Chriſt will indulge his people in the omiſſion of duty, that is not what I intend, God forbid; I know and am perſuaded, that the ſweeteſt hours that the believer hath, is when he enjoys communion with God in the ordinances and duties of his appointment: but yet, they that have much of a goſpel ſpirit can, with peace, and freedom of mind, go about other things as the work of Chriſt; though it be a piece of ſelf-denial to them, not to be always with him, they would notwithſtanding incline to be every minute with him, and are longing for uninterrupted communion and fellowſhip with him: yet the thing I ſay is, that their hearts are not diſheartened, nor their ſpirit diſpirited, when called to other things; and it ſavours much of a legal ſpirit, when the poor exerciſed creature can find no peace about their other lawful duties, unleſs they be ſtill about duties that are properly religious duties, ſuch as prayer, and reading, and hearing, and the like; for, in ſome ſenſe, other duties, ſuch as plowing and ſowing, and the like, may be turned to religious duties, by a ſpiritual minded man, and ſuch as have a goſpel ſpirit, while they carry a heavenly mind to their earthly work.

9. It is a ſign of too much of a legal temper, when a man is not ſatisfied with the meaſure of grace that the Lord allows him, but frets againſt heaven becauſe he hath not ſo much as others. Let none miſtake me here either: no man ought, in any different way, to be content with any meaſure of grace; we are ſtill to be going on to perfection; but when we grudge and repine, and are pained at the heart, and murmur againſt God, becauſe we have not this and that meaſure as others have, it is a ſymptom of hankering after the law. A goſpel ſpirit does not ſtrive with God, but meekly waits upon the Sovereign, who will have mercy upon whom he will have mercy, and diſpenſes freely of his gifts and graces as he pleaſeth.

10. It is a ſign of a legal temper, when a perſon is more taken up with the gifts of Chriſt, than with Chriſt himſelf; more taken up with any little thing they get from him, than with himſelf. When they get any ſenſible grace, any ſenſible good affections, melting of heart, melting of ſpirit; any inclination to what is good; any gifts, or graces, whether more common or ſpecial, they admire theſe, and are not ſo much taken up with Chriſt himſelf. But the perſon that is evangelical in his actings, by what he gets he is led to the giver; if this be ſweet, O he is infinitely ſweeter that ſent it: I embrace the token, and it draws out my heart the more after him, from whom it came.

11. It is a ſign of being too much under the influence of the law, when the believer is poſſeſſed with a fretful ſpirit, and is not content with any thing: for the goſpel ſweetens a man's frame of ſpirit. If the believer go to the law, he is conſtantly pained and wounded; and a diſeaſed perſon is always a repining perſon; and this fretfulneſs is a ſign, that they are not ſound at the bottom; but the goſpel is health to the heart, and medicine to all the fleſh. A goſpel ſpirit is a ſpirit of faith, a ſpirit of love, a ſpirit of power, and of a ſound mind, 2 Tim. i. 7. And hence, take a believer, when he is much under the influence of the grace of the goſpel, ten thouſand little difficulties, that ſometimes fret him and put him out of humour, will not move him then, when he is living near Chriſt, and under the influence of the covenant of grace; but when at other times every thing frets him, it is a ſign that the law hath the aſcendent, for the law works wrath, Rom. iv. 15.

12. It is a ſign of a legal ſpirit, when, upon the back of religious duties, the man hath more freedom to ſin; Sin ſhall not have dominion over you; for you are not under the law, but under grace. The laws irritates corruption, raiſes the devil, but cannot lay him; but the grace of God in Chriſt, teaches to deny ungodlineſs, and worldly luſts. This grace only keeps down the devil, and lays him low, as it were; yea, bruiſes the ſerpent's head, and deſtroys the works of the devil.

When

When a man performs duty in a legal way, to quiet his conſcience; why, then, when conſcience is quieted with the duty, luſt gets a vent, like the whore, of which we read, Prov. vii. 14. I have offered my peace-offerings, this day I have paid my vows; come, let us take our fill of love. But when a man performs duty in a goſpel way, not merely to ſatisfy conſcience, or pacify the judge, but to glorify God, to honour Chriſt, which is the great goſpel end of performing duty; then this glory of God and Chriſt, that he hath in view, prompts him to deſire, by the means of duty, to get the better of God's enemies in the heart; and when he gets the victory, he deſires to purſue his enemies, even to the death.

Now, my dear friends, if there be any believer here, I am ſure ſome of theſe evidences, if not all, may find you out, to have too much of a legal temper about you. O believers, you who have fled for refuge, to lay hold on the hope, ſet before you, will you conſider what danger you are in from Chriſt's rival, the law as a covenant, your firſt huſband, and how much your following after that doth undo you? You, it may be, think, you are in hazard from carnal friends, or from the world; but you cannot underſtand how you can be in hazard from the law: but you may be in the greateſt hazard from that which you are leaſt afraid of. Paul tells the believers here, and elſewhere, to whom he writes, what hazard they were in, even from theſe that pretend to preach the goſpel, who were but miniſters of the old covenant, who preſſed, and knew nothing but to preſs people to yield obedience and ſubjection to their old huſband, the law; pretending to the greateſt holineſs and ſtrictneſs of life; and preſſing nothing but Do, do, do, and live. Nay, but ſays Paul, I, and all believers, have another way of living to God, and his glory, than by living on, or by the law as a covenant; I through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God. O believer, arm yourſelf againſt all proxies that the law makes uſe of; ſtudy the nature, fulneſs, and freedom of the new covenant; and pray much for the ſpirit of wiſdom and revelation in the knowlege of Chriſt, and his goſpel. I go on to

[3.] The third thing here propoſed, which was to ſhew the cauſes of this legal temper. Why is the world ſo ſet upon the law, as a covenant, and ſo little upon Chriſt, as the Lord their righteouſneſs? I ſum up all the reaſons into this one, which I ſhall draw out into ſome particulars; and it is groſs ignorance, proud ignorance; For they being ignorant of God's righteouſneſs, and going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs, have not ſubmitted themſelves unto the righteouſneſs of God, Rom. x. iii. The world is ignorant of God, ignorant of the law, ignorant of the goſpel, ignorant of Chriſt, and his righteouſneſs.

1. Ignorance of God is one cauſe of this legal temper. People are ignorant of the perfections of God; more particularly, they are ignorant of the holineſs of God: if men ſaw what an infinite holy God he is, and what an infinite hatred he bears towards the leaſt ſin, or violation of his law; if they knew that a proud thought were enough to damn a million of angels, and that a wandering thought is enough to damn a million of worlds, would they entertain a fancy of being juſtified and accepted upon the ground of any legal righteouſneſs of their own, whether natural or gracious? Nay, they would not imagine to be thus accepted, if they did not think that God is ſuch an one as themſelves.—They are ignorant alſo of the juſtice of God, and the righteouſneſs of that judge, who will by no means clear the guilty; and if it were not ſo, that they were ignorant of his juſtice, would any guilty ſinner hope to be cleared, and acquitted any other way, than upon the account of a ranſom of infinite value?—They are ignorant of the wiſdom of God, in the glorious plan of redemption, and contrivance of ſalvation by the righteouſneſs of another, even of the God-man Chriſt Jeſus.——Ignorance of theſe, and the like attributes and perfections of God, is the great cauſe of their being joined to the law, and alive to it.

2. Ignorance of the law is another cauſe of this legal temper and diſpoſition: and here,

(1.) They are ignorant of the precept of the law in the extent, ſpirituality, holineſs, and perfection thereof: the young man in the goſpel thought himſelf perfect; why? he did not know the law. Paul thought himſelf blameleſs, while he was alive to the law; men think it a narrow rule, condemning only ſome groſs enormities of life, and commanding only ſome outward materials of obedience; but they ſee not the commandment to be exceeding broad: hence they imagine, they can obſerve it perfectly well.

(2.) They are ignorant of the penalty of the law, the ſanction of it: they do not believe, that there is a curſe intailed upon every diſobedience; Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things that are written in the book of the law to do them. Hence, they are fooliſhly fond of their own legal righteouſneſs, not knowing the ſeverity of the legal ſanction.

(3.) They are ignorant of the end of the law, even of God's end and deſign in giving it. God gave the law to Iſrael with fire and thunder: For what end? even to be a ſchool-maſter to lead them to Chriſt, Gal. iii. 24. For Chriſt is the end of the law for righteouſneſs, to every one that believeth, Rom. x. 4. But behold, ſo ignorant was Iſrael of the end of the law, that, like the legal ſpirit in our own day, they thought it was given for this end, that they might obey it as a condition of life, as it bore the image and repreſentation of a covenant of works; ſo they turned it directly to a covenant of works, ſaying, All that the Lord hath commanded, we will do, Exod. xix. 8. If it had been poſſible, or practicable, for them to have performed what they ignorantly promiſed, there would have been no need of Chriſt, or his righteouſneſs either: We will DO, ſay they; there is obedience: yea, we will do ALL that the LORD JEHOVAH hath commanded us; there is exactly, and perpetually perfect obedience: yea, WE will do all; WE ourſelves; there is perfect perſonal obedience reſolved upon: as if they had in their poſſeſſion, all the power and holineſs that Adam had in innocence. What ſays Joſhua to them, upon ſuch a proud, ignorant, and arrogant reſolution as this? Indeed, he tells them, it was ſimply impoſſible for them; Ye cannot ſerve the Lord, for he is a holy God, Joſh. xxiv. 19. He is a holy God, and you are a ſinful people; it is impoſſible for you to do what you ſay. The law was given them, to let them ſee their utter insufficiency and inability; to let them see their sins, and desert because of sin; that, under the fear of divine wrath, they might be obliged to have recourse to the Saviour. But they being ignorant of this great end of the law, set up an obedience of their own.

ter

3. Ignorance of the gospel, is another cause of this legal temper; and here ignorance discovers itself in manifold instances.

(1.) They are ignorant of the promise of the gospel; such as that, Isa. xlv. 24. Surely, shall one say, in the Lord have I righteousness and strength. Here is a sum of the gospel promise; a promise of Christ, and of faith in him: Surely shall one say; here is a promise of faith, and faith working out from the heart to the mouth; for, With the heart men believe unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. ONE shall say; What! no more but ONE? what a pity is it, that only one should say so? Indeed it intimates, that very few will be brought off from their legal temper: ONE shall say, not every one; well, but what will he say? In the Lord have I righteousness and strength: Righteousness, for justification; strength, for sanctification: righteousness, to make me happy; strength, to make me holy: righteousness, to give me a title to heaven; strength, to give me a meetness for heaven. I have all this, shall one say, by the appropriating act of faith; applying all to himself in particular, with assured confidence, according to the measure of faith: I have righteousness and strength: where hath he it? It is in the LORD I have it: I have it not in myself, nor in my own natural power; I have it not in my own free-will; I have it not in my walk and conversation; I have it not in my zeal or profession; I have it not in my religious duties or performances; I have it not in my heart or life; nay, certainly I have it not there; but, Surely in the LORD have I righteousness and strength; in the LORD only: men are ignorant of this.

(2.) They are ignorant of the method of the gospel, in the application of grace promised, particularly in the command of believing, which belongs to the dispensation of the gospel; wherein the law, in its commands and threatenings both, is used in a subserviency, to advance the ends of the gospel. Though the law doth not teach us to believe in Christ, yet he being revealed, it obliges us to believe in him: though the law reveals not a Saviour, yet the gospel revealing him, the law obliges us to come to him. But now this method of the gospel, and dispensation thereof, is not known in the world; hence come legal undertakings of it; men confounding the command of believing, with the gospel to be believed; the duty of faith, with the object of faith; and so turn the gospel to a new law, a new covenant of works; as if the act of believing were our righteousness for acceptance with God. Neither can they conceive the command of believing to be the great command, though God himself hath said, This is his commandment, that ye believe in the name of his Son: Nay, legalists cannot understand that; they think it is God's great command, that seeing they have sinned by breaking the law, they should repent by turning to it; seeing they have displeased God by their sins, they should please him by their repentance; seeing they have provoked him by their disobedience, they should pacify him with their obedience; seeing they have drawn down the curse by their transgressions, they should remove it by their reformation: They do not know that the great command is, to believe on the Son of God.

(3.) They are ignorant of the great end of the gospel, which is, to humble and abase the creature to the lowest; and to raise and exalt grace to the highest; that No flesh should glory in God's presence, but that he that glorieth, should glory in the Lord: In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory. That is the great end and design of the gospel: but the base legal spirit is ignorant of that design.

(4.) They are ignorant of the gospel covenant: the doctrinal and practical confounding of the two covenants of works and grace, is the great reason of this legal temper. And here people discover ignorance of the condition of the covenant; they are ignorant of the condition of the covenant of grace and works: the condition of the covenant of works, was personal obedience; the MAN himself that does these things, shall live in them: and perfect obedience was required; a perfection of parts, a perfection of degrees, a perfection of duration. The condition of the covenant of grace, is Christ's perfect obedience received by faith. There is much ignorance of this, at the root of all the legality that takes place in the world. They are ignorant of the form of the covenant; how by the covenant of works we get strength within ourselves, and by ourselves we could obey it; how by the covenant of grace our strength is without us, as well as our righteousness; In the Lord have I strength; and, we are to be strong in the Lord, not in ourselves, but in the Lord; and, in the power of his might; to be strong in grace, not that grace that is in ourselves; but the grace that is in CHRIST JESUS.

4. Ignorance of Christ and his righteousness, is a great cause of men's establishing a legal righteousness; For they being ignorant of God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God. Rom. x. 3. God was about to cast off a whole church, to reject them, and unchurch them; Why? What is the reason? because they were such a proud pack, they would rather be damned with their own righteousness, than saved by Christ's righteousness, or obliged and beholden to him for it. They would not submit to it; Why? because they are ignorant of it; they do not see the glory of it, as it is the righteousness of God; they do not see the necessity of it, because their own righteousness was reckoned sufficient; they do not see the fulness of it, as answering all the demands and commands of the law; they do not see the value of it, as sufficient to procure the favour of God, and purchase grace and glory; they do not see the acceptableness of it, as being the only righteousness with which God is well-pleased, and that thereby the law is magnified, and made honourable: they are ignorant of all this, and therefore they go about to establish a righteousness of their own, and will not submit to this. Their ignorance was a proud ignorance; and so it is with all by nature: we are filled with proud ignorance, and ignorant pride; tho' our power be gone, our pride remains.

[4.] The fourth thing here proposed, was, the evil and danger of a legal temper, and legal obedience; Why?

1. This legal way is very unpleasant work, it is a wearisom work; What a wearineſs is it? says the man. He is wearied in the greatneſs of his way, and yet says he not, there is no hope, Isa. lvii. 10. It is true, the law hath sometimes its influences of comfort to its votaries; and stony-ground hearers may receive the word with joy; and no doubt they may pray, and do other duties also with joy; but it is only a mood that soon evanishes, having no root in Christ. Can a dead man have pleasure in vital actions? can a heavy stone incline upwards? O but the legal soul is a miserable creature! The law drags him to duties, conscience presses him to work; saying, Fast, pray; pray, man; work for your life; repent, reform, as you would not be damned: But behold, he cannot, though they be good duties he is called to; and the legal covenant, the legal minister, the legal conscience of him cries, make brick, make brick, make brick; but behold, he hath no straw, no straw, no straw; nothing to make it of. He hath no strength, no grace, no communication; and so he tugs, he works, he sweats; but it is a heartless and unpleasant work.

2. Legal obedience is very unprofitable work, as well as unpleasant; I will declare thy righteousneſs, and thy work; for they shall not profit thee, Isa. lvii. 12. The self-righteous Pharisee may fast twice a week, give alms of all that he hath; he may make long prayers, many prayers; he may both preach and pray frequently and fervently; yea, the poor legalist may work at his secret devotion and family devotion; he may wait on ordinances, and frequent communions, and run the whole round of duties; and when he hath done this thirty, forty, fifty years, all the profit is, he gets hell for his pains; To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices? Isa. i. 2. All is unprofitable.

3. The legal obedience is very carnal, for it is a life wholly destitute of the Spirit; This would I learn of you, says Paul; if you would be doctors of the law, let me have a lesson from you, if you can give it; Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Gal. iii. 2. Was it by the works of the law? I suppose not; nay, the Spirit is not received in that way: it is in and by the gospel of Christ. The legalist is destitute of the Spirit; whatever affectitious holiness he may have, or real holiness he may pretend to, he wants a sanctifying work, sealing work; Sensual, not having the Spirit.

4. Legal obedience crosses the most glorious design of heaven, particularly God's design in giving Christ, and Christ's design in coming to the world.

(1.) It crosses God's great design; What is that? It is even the exalting of his free grace: What is the great design of all the great works of God, viz. election, redemption, regeneration, providence? Why does he choose one, and reject others? Why does he choose a wicked Publican, and cast a righteous Pharisee to hell? Why does he redeem a poor ignorant, ill-natured man or woman from their miserable state, and let the rich and learned go to hell? Why does he regenerate an elect soul, after he hath been twenty, thirty years in the devil's service? and after they are regenerate, why does he in providence let them fall into straits, wants, sins, manifold temptations, troubles, affliction, desertion, and heavy complaints on these accounts? Why? All is to exalt free grace in the issue. But now the legalist crosses this design of God; he would have self exalted, his works exalted, instead of Christ, and free grace. He puts another righteousness in the room of the righteousness of Christ, and so takes the dung of his own righteousness, as Paul calls it, and casts it upon the face of free, rich, and sovereign grace, to cover, and hide, and darken it. O what a devilish design is this, in opposition to God's glorious design of making grace shine brightly!

(2.) It crosses Christ's great design in coming to the world: The grand intention of the Son of God, in coming from heaven, was, To bring in an everlasting righteousness, Dan. ix. 24. But behold, the legalist's design, in establishing his own righteousness, is, to make all Christ's labour to be lost labour; he endeavours to frustrate the very end of Christ's death, and makes it vain; If righteousness come by the law, Christ is dead in vain, Gal. ii. 21. Instead of Christ's everlasting righteousness, he sets up a righteousness that cannot last half a day, nor half an hour; nay, not a moment.

5. Legal obedience hath the evil of blasphemy in it. It reproaches the righteousness of Christ, as if it were not sufficient, as if his atonement were not perfect, as if his satisfaction were not full, as if his obedience were not perfect, unless it be patched up with the rags of the man's own righteousness. Is not Christ's righteousness perfect without their addition? O do not blaspheme the Son of God, and say in effect, his obedience was not a divine, perfect obedience; for thus you reproach his fulness and sufficiency.

6. Legal obedience issues in a terrible disappointment; the poor deluded man thinks, his prayers and duties, that he hath been performing for so many years, will make an excellent robe to cover him: I hope, says the man, I have something that will contribute to make me die in peace; I have something to make me stand in judgment, that others have not; for many a duty have I performed, many a prayer have I made, these twenty or thirty years; and many times have I prayed with very much warmness of affection, and liveliness of frame; and therefore I have a good hope, that God will be pleased, and all will be well with me. But, O what a fearful disappointment does the man meet with! Death comes; and if he die in the same legal dream, he goes down to the grave with a lie in his right-hand: The hypocrite's hope is like the spider's web; Why? What comes of it? The spider works it out of his own bowels; it is her house, it is her food, it is her fence; there she dwells, there she feeds, there she secures and shelters herself for awhile; but at the close of the day, or end of the week, the besom comes along, and sweeps her and her lodging, and all to the ground: Even so, the legalist, he works a web out of his own bowels, he wraps himself in this garment of his own spinning; here he dwells, here he works, here he feeds, here he shelters himself from all challenges, and apprehensions of danger; but behold, the besom of death and destruction comes, and sweeps him, and his refuge of lies down to the bottomless pit. If his eyes be open on a death-bed to see hell, to see the justice of God, to see the spirituality of the law, law, the imperfection of his duties, the emptineſs of his performances, and the ſandy foundation he hath been building his faith upon, then his conſcience roars, his heart deſpairs; he hath no peace, no comfort; but finds himſelf miſerably diſappointed. If his eyes be not open; what then? why, he dies in a deluſion, as he lived, ſinks into the lake of fire; and in hell he opens his eyes, and finds himſelf eternally diſappointed.——O ſee then, what ground there is to lament over this legal temper, which is indeed a damnable temper, where it hath a full reign.

Uſe fourth, viz. Of exhortation, both to them that are alive to the law, and to them that are dead to the law, of whom the text eſpecially ſpeaks.

1*ſt*, To unbelievers, and all theſe that are alive to the law. O! for the Lord's ſake, take no reſt till you get out of that damnable ſtate! O conſider what you are doing, ſo long as you are not dead to the law: the beſt thing that you are doing, in that caſe, is, that you are building your reſidence about the old rotten walls of the covenant of works. Perhaps you think you are a good proteſtant, you are a good Chriſtian, you have a good heart, you perform good duties, you partake of good ordinances, and what evil ſhould you fear?

1. I aſſure you, that you are under the curſe of the law of works; Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things that are written in the book of the law, to do them. And while you are under the law, and ſeeking to eſtabliſh a law-righteouſneſs of your own, all the people of God are obliged to ſay, that God is in the right to curſe you; they are obliged to ſay Amen, to all the curſes of the Bible againſt you; Curſed is he that confirmeth not all the words of this law; and all the people ſhall ſay, AMEN, Deut. xxvii. 26. If you will take the old covenant of doing for life, and juſtification, then you muſt take it with a vengeance, unleſs you do perfectly, and do to purpoſe, which is impoſſible for you; Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things that are written in the book of the law, to do them: And all believers can ſay AMEN to it, in the words of Paul; Let him that loves not our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, be ANATHEMA MARAN-ATHA, [i. e. accurſed until the Lord come.] 1 Cor. xvi. 22. While you are under the law, no bleſſing belongs to you, but all divine curſes; if you will not get out of your legal righteouſneſs, and get under the goſpel-covert of the blood of Jeſus, nothing but terror belongs to you; and nothing but terrors and curſes can I preach to you: for, As many as are of the works of the law, are under the curſe.

2. I muſt tell you, as you are under the curſe of the law, ſo you are under the command of the law; Do, and live. Though by the goſpel-call, you are not obliged indeed to ſeek righteouſneſs in yourſelf, in order to life, but to ſeek it in Chriſt; yet, by your unbelief, you keep yourſelf under the command of the law; If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandment; keep it perfectly, or elſe vengeance ſhall overtake you. It is not your little endeavours that will ſatisfy the law; though you ſhould read, faſt, mourn, and ſhed tears of blood all your days, it will not avail, or be to any purpoſe, in ſatisfying the law's demands: if you will pay any duty to the law, as a covenant, you are a debtor to fulfil the WHOLE law, Gal. v. 3. The law is a chain that is linked together, and if you take one link of it, the weight of the whole chain will be upon you; and ſo, if you will do any thing in obedience to the law, that you may be thereby ſaved and juſtified, you are under bondage to the whole law; and bound to do every thing perfectly, that you may be juſtified. O the miſerable bondage that you are under! You will never be able to ſatisfy the law; and ſo you are condemned already: yea, let me tell you more, you are a wicked ungodly creature: whatever you ſeem to be to others, or think you are yourſelf; yet, being alive to the law, you are a ſtranger to the life of God; for, till you be dead to the law, you ſhall never live unto God: though you look like an angel of light for holineſs, yet, being alive to the law, you have no true holineſs nor godlineſs. Ye that are ſtill leaning to your works, then you will meet with a ſad diſappointment; for, By the deeds of the law no fleſh living can be juſtified. But there are others, who ſeem to be upon another extreme; they ſay, the law is now abrogated, and we are not to ſeek juſtification or ſalvation that way; and therefore we are careleſs about the law, or about any duty of obedience. Yea, but let me tell you your doom out of the law alſo; you are a deſperate ſinner: becauſe you cannot ſatisfy the curſe of the law, therefore you run away from the commands of the law, and run away to the devil, inſtead of running to Chriſt. But I will tell you, though the law cannot juſtify, or ſave you, yet it can condemn you: it hath power to condemn you, though it hath none to ſave you; and it will condemn, and does condemn you, and all that are out of Chriſt: and therefore, for every ſin that you are guilty of, you muſt anſwer; and every ſin is enough to damn you, by virtue of the law. O then, may this be a mean to move you all that are under the law, to ſeek in to Chriſt, Who is the end of the law for righteouſneſs, to every one that believeth! Come, poor, curſed, condemned, ungodly ſinner, if you would live unto God here, and live with him hereafter, come out from under the heavy yoke of the law; Chriſt hath a good and perfect law-biding righteouſneſs to give you, though you have nothing to bring to him, but ſin, and guilt, and miſery, and hell about you, yet come to him; and if you cannot come, O go to him, and tell him that you cannot come; and plead, that, by his omnipotent power, he may draw you; and if you do ſo in truth, it is one to a thouſand, if he does not meet you half way. O man, you cannot be ſaved, to the credit of God's holineſs, unleſs you join with Chriſt's righteouſneſs, which anſwers alſo the threatening of the law, and ſatisfies the juſtice of God. In this way, mercy can take vent, to the credit and honour of all God's perfections. O man, woman, are you for this way of it? O then ſay, Farewel to the law of works for ever: here is a more noble and glorious way. O bleſſed be God for ever, if that be the bargain betwixt Chriſt's righteouſneſs and your ſoul! O may the Lord draw you to it! But now,

2*dly*, To you that are believers, and have cloſed with Chriſt, and ſo are dead to the law: remember, you are not to live a lawleſs life for all that. My exhortation to you is, that, being dead to the law, you live unto God. Let me offer ſome motives and directions, and the rather that I have taken ſome pains to gather together, and lay before you many things relative to a legal temper, for guarding you againſt the Neonomian extreme, on the one hand; let men beware leſt their carnal hearts abuſe this doctrine of grace to Antinomian licentiouſneſs, on the other hand. Sure I am, the goſpel-doctrine of itſelf hath no ſuch tendency: though an ignorant world may ſuſpect the doctrine of the goſpel, the doctrine of Chriſt's righteouſneſs, as if it were againſt a perſonal righteouſneſs or holineſs; I declare to you, in the name of JEHOVAH, that the contrary is true; and aſſure you, that you will never live according to the law, as a rule of holineſs, till you be dead to the law, as a covenant and condition of life. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. If the light of the glorious goſpel, even the light of the glory of God, in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, did once ſhine into your heart, then, beholding this glory of the Lord, you would be changed into the ſame image, from glory to glory, by the Spirit of the Lord; yea, to believe the goſpel ſavingly, is the way to fulfil perfectly. The true believer may be ſaid to fulfil the law, both as it is a covenant, and as it is a rule: As it is a covenant, he fulfils it perfectly and legally in his Head and Surety, in whom he hath perfect, everlaſting righteouſneſs: And as it is a rule, he fufils it perfectly alſo, with a perfection of parts here, and a perfection of degrees hereafter: and in both theſe reſpects may that word be explained, Rom. i. 3, 4. where the righteouſneſs of the law is ſaid to be fulfilled in believers, whoſe character is, that they walk not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit. Now, I would preſs you to this ſpiritual walk, this holy life, which is a living unto God; for, though your holineſs be not neceſſary for your juſtification, that is the damnable doctrine of Popery; though, I ſay, it be not neceſſary for your juſtification, becauſe you are dead to the law in point of juſtification; yet it is neceſſary, becauſe you are dead to the law, for this very end, that you may live unto God in point of ſanctification, and that you may be holy.

and

More particularly for motives, conſider the neceſſity of holineſs, in theſe following particulars.

1. It is neceſſary in reſpect of God; and here (to uſe the method of a great divine on this head) conſider how the will of God, the love of God, the glory of God, obliges you in particular, believer, to live unto God.

(1.) The ſovereign will of God obliges you to holineſs; This is the will of God, even your ſanctification, 1 Theſ. iv. 3. It is the will of God the Father, he hath ordained it; We are his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works, which God before had ordained that we ſhould walk therein.—It is the will of God the Son; I have ordained you that you ſhould bring forth fruit, and that it ſhould remain, John xv. 16.—It is the will of God the Holy Ghoſt, whom we grieve by our ſins, if we do not ſtudy holineſs.

(2.) The love of God obliges you to holineſs; yea, this is the end of the electing love of the Father, the purchaſing love of the Son, and the operating love of the Holy Ghoſt. It is the peculiar end of the electing love of the Father, who hath choſen us that we ſhould be holy, and unblameable before him in love, Eph. i. 4. He hath choſen us to ſalvation, through ſanctification of the Spirit.—It is the peculiar end of the purchaſing love of the Son, Who gave himſelf for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify to himſelf a peculiar people, zealous of good works, Tit. ii. 14. And who loved his church, and gave himſelf for it, that he might ſanctify and cleanſe it, by the waſhing of water, and preſent it to himſelf a glorious church, not having ſpot, nor wrinkle, nor any ſuch thing, but that it ſhould be holy, and without blemiſh, Eph. v. 25, 26, 27.—It is alſo the peculiar end of the operating love of the Holy Ghoſt; his whole work in us, and for us, conſiſting in preparing us for, and enabling us to the duties of holineſs, and bringing forth the fruit thereof in us.——Believer, if you have any regard to the ſovereignty of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt; any regard to the love of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, it obliges you to holineſs of heart and life.

(3.) The glory of God obliges you to holineſs, and makes it neceſſary. Would you glorify the Father? then let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they ſeeing your good works, may glorify God. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit.—Would you glorify the Son? It is the will of God, that all men honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. And how is this done? even by believing in him, and obeying him; Ye are friends, ye evidence yourſelves to be ſo, if ye do whatſoever I command you.—Would you glorify the Holy Ghoſt? It is by ſtudying holineſs; for, we are his temple; and holineſs becomes his houſe and temple for ever; and he is diſhonoured when his temple is defiled.——Surely, believer, when I ſpeak to you, I cannot be ſuppoſed to ſpeak to one, that neither regards the ſovereign will, love, nor glory of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt; though your holineſs ſhould all be loſt, and never regarded, which is impoſſible; yet here is reaſon enough for it.

2. Holineſs is neceſſary in reſpect of yourſelves; you are neceſſarily obliged to holineſs; your own honour and peace is concerned here: It is gainful; Godlineſs is great gain, having the promiſe of this life, and that which is to come. It is pleaſant; for, Wiſdom's ways are pleaſantneſs, and all her paths are peace. There is no peace, ſaith my God, to the wicked; but the fruit of righteouſneſs is peace, and the effect of righteouſneſs, quietneſs and aſſurance for ever. Yea, it is honourable, and the greateſt honour you can be advanced unto; to be holy, is to be like unto God.

3. Holineſs is neceſſary in reſpect of others; you are obliged to holineſs: it may tend to the conviction and converſion of others. On the one hand, it may tend to their conviction, and to ſtop their mouths, who are enemies of God, and that both here and hereafter. (1.) It may ſtop their mouths here in a preſent world, as you ſee, 1 Pet. ii. 15. This is the will of God, that with well-doing, you may put to ſilence the ignorance of fooliſh men. Ignorant fools may call you hypocrites; they may call you Antinomians, and enemies to the law: now, by well-doing, you give them an unanſwerable document, that though you be dead to the law, as a covenant, yet you put honour upon the law, as a rule of holineſs; and ſo make them aſhamed of their baſe calumny, according to that, 2 Pet. iii. 16. Having a good conſcience, that whereas they ſpeak evil of you, as of evil-doers, they may be aſhamed that falſly accuſe your good converſation in Chriſt. And, (2.) Holineſs in you, believer, may tend to ſtop the mouths of God's enemies hereafter, in the day of judgment: it is ſaid, The ſaints ſhall judge the world, not only as they will be aſſeſſors with the Son of God, and applaud him in all his judicial proceedings; but in regard their holi-

neſs

neſs and good works will tend to the confuſion, and conviction of the wicked. And indeed the good works of the ſaints will meet them one day, with a changed countenance, that they ſhall ſcarce know them: they ſee them now to be all black, defiled, and deformed; but they will then be brought forth beautiful and glorious, to the ſhame of the wicked, Mat. xxv. 34,—40.——On the other hand, your holineſs may tend to the converſion of others; Having your converſation honeſt among the Gentiles, that whereas they ſpeak againſt you as evil-doers, they may, by your good works which they ſhall behold, glorify God in the day of viſitation, 1 Pet. ii. 12. The holineſs of profeſſors hath ſometimes tended to the converſion of the profane, who, when the day of their gracious viſitation hath come, have glorified God upon that account, 1 Pet. iii. 1, 2.; and therefore ſays Paul; This is a faithful ſaying, and theſe things I will that thou affirm conſtantly, that they which have believed in God, be careful to maintain good works; for theſe things are good, and profitable unto men, Tit. iii. 18.

4. Holineſs is neceſſary in reſpect of your ſtate; you ſtand obliged to holineſs. Are you in a juſtified ſtate, accepted into friendſhip with a holy God, Who is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity? Should you not evidence your juſtification by your ſanctification? Is it not neceſſary that you ſhould be holy, if you dwell in the preſence, walk in the ſight, and ly in the boſom of ſuch a holy God? Are you in a ſanctified ſtate? Wherefore was you regenerate? Wherefore got you a new heart, and a new nature, and a holy principle of grace, but that you ſhould be holy?—Are you in an adopted ſtate? Why ſo? but that you ſhould live like the children of God, and be followers of God, as dear children? O! was you not juſtified, adopted, and ſanctified for this end, that you might live unto God? If we be believers, what a ſhame is it for us, to live unſuitably to our ſtate, as many times we do? Is that all the thanks we give to God for his favours, that we ſhould trample his ſtatutes under our feet, diſhonour his name, break his laws, and grieve his Spirit? It does not become you; it is not like you, believer: he hath loved you with an everlaſting love, and drawn you with loving-kindneſs: will you act like a devil in enmity againſt him, becauſe he hath acted like a God of love towards you? O fy for ſhame, believer! Tell it not in Gath, publiſh it not in the ſtreets of Aſkelon; leſt the daughters of the Philiſtines rejoice, leſt the daughters of the uncircumciſed triumph, 2 Sam. i. 20.—Have we not the hope of glory? and ſhall we not, having this hope, purify ourſelves even as he is pure?—Are we partakers of the precious promiſes? Then, Having theſe promiſes, dearly beloved, let us cleanſe ourſelves from all filthineſs of the fleſh and ſpirit, and perfect holineſs in the fear of the Lord.—Are we heirs of glory? and ſhall we not ſeek to have our right and title unto glory cleared? Rev. xxii. 14. Bleſſed are they that do his commandments that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates to the city; that is, either that your right may be made evident, according to that word, Ye are my friends, if ye do whatſoever I command you; that is, you thus evidence yourſelves to be my friends: or, concerning this right, know that there is a right of merit, and a right of meetneſs, both neceſſary: a right of merit, believer, you have not in yourſelf, but in Chriſt; and that is eſtabliſhed in juſtification through the righteouſneſs of Chriſt: a right of meetneſs you muſt have in yourſelf from Chriſt, and that is in ſanctification and holineſs.—— What ſhall I ſay, Are you not dead to the law, that you may live unto God? Are you not to teſtify your gratitude towards him, that hath provided another law-righteouſneſs than your own? Are you not to difference yourſelf from the world, that are walking in the broad way to hell and damnation, and under the curſe of the law, and the wrath of God?—Are you not delivered from the wrath to come, and of all men in the world under the greateſt obligations to be holy? Should you not ſtudy to pleaſe that God that hath pitied you?—Hath he waſhed you in his blood? and ought you not, through his grace, to ſtudy, to let it be known to the world, that his blood hath a virtue to ſanctify you?—Yea, hath he not promiſed, Sin ſhall not have dominion over you, becauſe ye are not under the law, but under grace? ſhould ye not ſtudy, through his grace, to let it be ſeen, that his promiſe is verified in you?

5. Holineſs is neceſſary in reſpect of the danger you are in, if ye do not ſtudy holineſs. If you be a child of God, you are indeed freed from the curſe of the covenant of works, that penalty can never reach you; but, is it nothing to you, that your heavenly Father ſhould chaſtiſe you, hide his face from you, deny an anſwer to your prayers, hide your evidences of heaven from you, give you up to the tyranny of your luſts, and then take vengeance on your inventions.

6. Holineſs is neceſſary in reſpect of the advantage herein. You are obliged to holineſs; why? in this way you may come to live joyfully, and die comfortably: in this way your integrity may be ſupported, as it was with Job; in this way you may come to have ſweet communion with God, according to Chriſt's promiſe, John xiv. 21. He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loves me;—and I will love him, and will manifeſt myſelf to him. In this way you ſhall be fitted for ſerving him in your generation, 2 Tim. ii. 19. In this way you will have an evidence of your juſtification, 1 John iii. 9. In this way you ſhall bring down the bleſſing of God on every work of your hand, all that ye do ſhall proſper, Pſal. i. 4. Yea, in this way you ſhall become a public-good, a common-good, a bleſſing, and a benefit to all about you, both in communicating good to them with whom you converſe, and in diverting judgments from theſe that are about you, as ten righteous men would have preſerved Sodom: O what a Sodom is the preſent generation! And as it is like Sodom and Gomorrah, and perhaps a thouſand times worſe, in reſpect of ſins againſt law and goſpel-light, which Sodom never had; ſo, if the Lord do not leave us a remnant, we ſhall be like Sodom and Gommorah, in reſpect of judgments.——All theſe things, and a thouſand more that might be adduced, ſhould preſs you mightily to the ſtudy of holineſs, and living unto God: you are dead to the law, that you may live unto God. But next,

For direction. Now, here the queſtion may be propounded, O how ſhall I live unto God? I ſhall offer you no directions but one, which my text leads me to, and it is this. If you would live unto God, O ſtudy to be more and more dead to the law. The more you are dead to the law as a covenant, the more will you live according to the law as a rule: What! do you not find a legal ſpirit that remains with you, and weakens your hands in duties of holineſs? When you are wreſtling at duties in your own natural ſtrength, it is a legal old covenant way; and do you not find it a hard, heavy, weariſom taſk? I ſuppoſe there is little holineſs there: but when you are leaning on the ſtrength of Chriſt, do you not find your ſoul enlarged and quickened in duty? When you perform duty from a principle of ſlaviſh fear, that is a legal way; and do you not find your hearts weakened, and little heart to the work? But on the contrary, when the love of Chriſt conſtrains you, is it not then that you run with pleaſure in the ways of his commandments? Yea, ſin hath dominion over you, when you are, and in ſo far as you are under the law; for the motions of ſin are by the law: the law irritates corruption, and cannot ſubdue it; for it is the grace of God, revealed in the goſpel, that effectually teaches to deny ungodlineſs and worldly luſts. To be dead to the law, is to be married to Chriſt; it is to be brought off from the firſt Adam, and united to the ſecond Adam. And, believer, as you are in Chriſt, ſo you are to abide in him, if you would be fruitful, and live unto God; As the branch cannot bear fruit of itſelf, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me, John xv. 4. Now, to abide in him, is juſt to be ſtrong in the grace that is in him, and to continue to be ſtrong in him by faith; and this is neceſſary in order to fruitfulneſs: as, though an imp be grafted into the root, if it be not faſtened and take firm rooting, it does not come to fruitfulneſs; ſo the ſinner is made a Chriſtian, by being cut off from the law, and ingrafted into Chriſt; but he is not a fruitful Chriſtian, if he do not take a ſtrong grip of Chriſt, and draw virtue from him: therefore, Abide in me, and I in you, ſays Chriſt; and, O but it is well ſaid! for, if he do not abide in us, we cannot abide in him. We will never abide in him by the grace of faith, unleſs he abide in us by the Spirit of faith. If we provoke God to take away his Spirit, our faith fades, fails, and decays; and then we depart from the Lord by an evil heart of unbelief.—Here is the way then to live unto God, and to bring forth fruit to him, even to die more and more to the firſt huſband, the law, and to live by faith upon your bleſſed Huſband, Chriſt.

QUEST. But, by what outward means ſhould we thus live? May we not neglect duties, ſince we are dead to the law? Nay, God forbid. It was the devil's temptation to Chriſt, to caſt himſelf headlong from the temple, becauſe God had promiſed to preſerve him in all his ways; ſo, believer, God hath promiſed to preſerve you; he hath promiſed that ſin ſhall not have dominion over you, and that you ſhall never periſh; and is the devil tempting you therefore to throw yourſelf down headlong from the temple, and from temple-means and ordinances, public and private? O tell that abominable devil, as Chriſt did, It is written, Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God. If you neglect means, you tempt the Lord your God, who hath commanded you to uſe means, and made this the method of the communication of grace and ſtrength, to wit, in the uſe of ſuch means, as faith, prayer, reading, hearing, meditation, watchfulneſs: therefore, O be diligent in the uſe of theſe means; only do not confide in the means, by putting them in Chriſt's room: give means their own room, and do not expect, without the grace of the new covenant, that means will do the buſineſs. Grace is the ſpring from which the living water does flow, and means are the channel and pipes through which the water is conveyed; and if the fountain do not ſend out ſtreams, all the conduits and pipes in the world can never convey it unto us. Therefore, in the uſe of means, be ſtill looking to the Lord: look to him, both for grace to uſe the means, and for grace to bleſs the means. If you lay any ſtreſs upon the means, they become unprofitable. In the uſe of theſe means, O cry, cry mightily to the Lord, that he would kill your ſelf-confidence: cry for the Spirit of life, to quicken you, that you may live unto God; for, till the Spirit of life enter into the dry bones, there will be no ſtirring, no motion, no living to God: cry for the Spirit of faith, ſo as you may ſay with Paul in the context, I live, yet not I, but Chriſt liveth in me; and the life I live, is by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himſelf for me. O cry for faith, and the aſſurance of faith: no doubt, one may have faith, and yet want that aſſurance, which we commonly call ſo; but whether there be ſome kind of aſſurance or perſuaſion in the nature of faith, is a queſtion that I do not here enter upon: only, this I am ſure of, from the word of God, that doubting is no part of faith; for faith and doubting are as oppoſite as light and darkneſs. Some believers indeed have many doubts, many doubts, many doubts: why? becauſe they have little faith, little faith, little faith: O thou of little faith, wherefore didſt thou doubt? And I find the believer who walks in darkneſs, and hath no light, he is directed to faith, as the antidote againſt his darkneſs and doubting; Let him truſt in the name of the Lord, and ſtay himſelf upon his God. Cry, I ſay, for the Spirit of faith; and faith will work by love: cry for a goſpel-ſpirit; for I teſtify in the Lord's name, that goſpel-holineſs will never flouriſh among us, or in the generation, till we be more free of a legal ſpirit: and that we will not live unto God, unleſs we be dead to the law.

SERMON

SERMON IX.*

The BEST BOND; or, the SUREST ENGAGEMENT.

JEREM. XXX. 21.

For, Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? ſaith the Lord.

MY friends, after that the firſt Adam's heart departed from the Lord, ſo as to violate the covenant of works, never one heart of all his poſterity could, or would have approached unto God again, but had remained in their natural enmity againſt him, had not the ſecond Adam ſo engaged his heart unto God, in our favours, as to draw the hearts of many after him: and if we could this day ſee in to Chriſt's heart, and diſcover his heart-kindneſs in this matter, ſo as to unite our hearts to him, and to God in him, and get the knot ſealed in the ſacrament with God's ſeal; it would make this a day to be much remembred to all eternity. O then, let your hearts be looking up to the Lord, that you may ſee in to the heart and boſom of this ſcripture, and in to the myſtery of this great queſtion, Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? ſaith the Lord.

The Lord, by the prophet Jeremiah, had been comforting his church, by ſeveral excellent promiſes relating to their return out of the Babyloniſh captivity, typical of the glorious things reſerved for the church in the days of the Meſſias: particularly in the preceeding verſe, it is promiſed, that they ſhall be bleſt with an excellent government, Their nobles ſhall be of themſelves, they ſhall not have ſtrangers and enemies to be their judges, but theſe of their own nation. Their governor ſhall proceed from the midſt of them. This hath a reference to Chriſt our Governor, David our King, as you may ſee by comparing this with ver. 9th, They ſhall ſerve the Lord their God, and David their King, whom I will raiſe up unto them. This Governor is of ourſelves, being in all things made like unto his brethren: I will cauſe him to draw near, and he ſhall approach unto me. It is a ſingle perſon that is ſpoken of, and the perſon is the GOVERNOR, and the GOVERNOR is CHRIST. God the Father did cauſe him, as Mediator, to draw near and approach to him; he commanded and authorized him to do it; he ſanctified and ſealed him for this end; he appointed and anointed him for this purpoſe, and he accepted of him, and declared himſelf well-pleaſed in him; and therefore he ſpeaks of it with wonderful pleaſure, Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? When God draws a perſon near to him, he is even delighted with that approach to him, whereof he himſelf is the cauſe; much more if it be ſuch a perſon as here, the Governor of Iſrael; For, who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? Here is the iſſue of the excellent promiſes that were made to Iſrael, by way of anticipation of ſome objection that might be made, How ſhall all this be done? Why, Chriſt the Governor hath engaged for all that either God calls for from you, or that he promiſes to you. He is one that ſhall not fail, nor be diſcouraged, till he hath ſet judgment in the earth, Iſa. xlii. 4. Thus all the promiſes come to us in Chriſt; they come from God through him, and ſhould lead us up to him, in whom they are all Yea and Amen. They are rivulets that ſweetly flow out and run forth from the ocean to the city of God, to the houſe of the mourner, to the field of the withered and decayed, to the habitation of the hungry and thirſty, yea, to the grave of the dry bones, to make the dry land ſprings of water, and to make the wilderneſs to bloſſom as the roſe. What theſe excellent promiſes are, that thus run forth, you may ſee in the preceeding part of the chapter: For example, ver. 17. though the wound ſeem incurable, God will make a cure for it; and though you be thrown off at all hands, and thruſt out at every door, and none ſeek after thee, yet I will put honour upon thee; yea, I will glorify thee, and thou ſhalt not be ſmall, as it is, ver. 19. And the ſum of all the promiſes is, ver. 22. Ye ſhall be my people, and I will be your God: I will work in you all that you want; and that is, You ſhall be my people: and I will be to you all that you need; and that is, I will be your God. O that we could take hold of this promiſe! It is as much as to ſay, I will make you holy, and what I would have you to be; for, Ye ſhall be my people: and I will make you happy; for, I will be your God. O! but upon what conſideration, or on what account will he do all this? My text opens the ground, For, who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? ſaith the Lord. Why will he do ſo much kindneſs to any poor worm of Adam's houſe? Why, becauſe Chriſt, as Mediator, hath engaged his heart to approach unto God in their room, to do all that was requiſite for making a vent to this kindneſs and favour of God towards man.

I know that ſome take the words to be ſpoken of the people of God their drawing near by faith, and in point of duty engaging themſelves to approach to him through his grace. This is a conſequent that follows upon the other; and therefore I ſhall not exclude it from its own room in the application of this ſubject, if the Lord will. But, with the beſt interpreters that I have ſeen, I apprehend it is ſpoken of Chriſt, holding out his undertaking for an elect world in the covenant of redemption, or grace, and becoming our Surety, engaging himſelf to the Father for us, in the view of our having ruined ourſelves, and broken our own credit and intereſt with God. The firſt Adam, our natural and federal head, in the covenant of works, he brake the covenant, and violated the engagement that he made of approaching to God, with his perfect, perſonal obedience; and ſo he, and we in him, loſt all our power with God. But behold, the ſecond Adam, having his heart filled and fraughted with love to a company of ſinful miſerable worms, ſuch as are here preſent, he takes on the engagement that Adam brake: and he being a perſon of intire credit, it was a done bargain, and God iſſues out all bleſſings on his account: For, who is he that engaged his heart?

* This was an action-ſermon preached immediately before the adminiſtration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, at Dunfermline, July 19. 1724. To which is annexed, a Diſcourſe on the ſame ſubject, delivered after the ſolemn work was ended. This ſermon hath undergone four editions.

of

In the words you may notice theſe four things.

1. The proper work and office of our Lord Jeſus as Mediator, viz. to approach unto God, and that for us, and in our room and ſtead, as the High-prieſt of our profeſſion. The prieſts are ſaid to draw near to God, Lev. x. 21. and xxi. 17, 18. It is ſaid, Exod. xx. 21. that Moſes drew near unto the thick darkneſs, where God was. So did Chriſt, our great Moſes, draw near and approach unto God.

2. Notice, in the words, his cordial compliance with his work; He engaged his heart to it: he received a commandment of the Father, who cauſed him to approach; he being the original cauſe and ſpring, as the connecting particle for does ſhew; FOR, who is this that does approach? Could any do it without me? No: the Father was firſt at work; but Chriſt was as willing to the work as his Father was to employ him: he engaged his heart to it; that is, he bound and obliged himſelf to it; he undertook for his heart, as ſome read it; he undertook for his ſoul, that in the fulneſs of time it ſhould be made an offering for ſin. His own voluntary compliance with his Father's will, and his compaſſion to fallen man, engaged him; and he was hearty and reſolute, free and chearful in it, and made nothing of the difficulties that ſtood in the way.

3. You have here the ſingularity of this fact, and the wonderfulneſs of it, expreſſed in the queſtion, Who is this that engaged his heart unto me? It points out the greatneſs of the perſon, the admirable nature of the work he eſſays. Chriſt is in all this matter truly wonderful; and when it is a God that expreſſes it in this manner, we may well aſk it with admiration, Who is this that engaged his heart to ſuch an undertaking? And then,

4. You have the divine teſtimony annexed to the whole, in theſe words, ſaith the Lord. Here is a noble ground for faith, even the teſtimony of the God of truth: let the mouth of unbelief be ſtopt, for the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it. God's teſtimony is our ſecurity; and we need no better than the word of a God teſtifying concerning his eternal Son. Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? ſaith the Lord.

OBSERV. That our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the eternal Son of God, cordially and willingly engaged himſelf to approach unto God in the work and buſineſs of our redemption.

I ſhall endeavour to clear this doctrine, and upon it ſpeak to the ſeveral parts of the text, in the following method: after that we have cleared the truth of the doctrine, we ſhall,

I. Shew what a wonderful perſon this is, that engaged his heart to approach unto God; as ſeems to be pointed out in this queſtion, Who is this?

II. The nature of the work that he engages himſelf in, while it is an engagement to approach unto God.

III. The ſingularity of the fact, included in the manner of the expreſſion, Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto God?

IV. The reaſons of the doctrine; or, why Chriſt came under this engagement: together with the reaſons of our faith concerning it; or, why it is, that JEHOVAH's teſtimony is added in theſe words, ſaith the Lord.

V. Draw ſome inferences by way of application of the doctrine, as the Lord ſhall pleaſe to aſſiſt.

Now, before I proceed to the method here laid down, I would offer you ſome ſcriptural proofs of the doctrine. That Chriſt willingly engaged himſelf herein, is evident,

1. From his accepting of the work and office; When ſacrifice and offering would not, then ſaid he, Lo, I come, etc. Pſal. xl. 7, 8. compared with Heb. x. 5, 6, 7.

2. From his reckoning it his glory and honour, that he hath taken this office upon him at his Father's call; as is plain from that expreſſion, Heb. v. 4, 5. No man takes this honour to himſelf, but he that is called of God as was Aaron: So Chriſt glorified not himſelf, to be made an High-prieſt; but he that ſaid to him, Thou art my Son, to day have I begotten thee: Thou art a Prieſt for ever.

3. From his promiſing to depend on his Father for his help and aſſiſtance in the work; Iſa. xlix. 5. Though Iſrael be not gathered, ſays Chriſt, yet ſhall I be glorious in the eyes of the Lord, and my God ſhall be my ſtrength. Iſa. l. 7. The Lord God will help me, therefore ſhall I not be confounded; therefore will I ſet my face like a flint, and I know that I ſhall not be aſhamed. Hence it was, that he endured the croſs, and deſpiſed the ſhame. I will put my truſt in him, ſays Chriſt, Heb. ii. 13.

4. From his promiſing ſubjection to his Father's will, in bearing reproaches, and laying down his life for thoſe that were given to him; Iſa. l. 5, 9. I was not rebellious, neither turned away back. I gave my back to the ſmiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from ſhame and ſpitting. And John x. 17. I lay down my life; and this commandment have I received of my Father. And,

5. According as he promiſed, ſo did he accompliſh the promiſe: His heart was ſet upon the work in the hardeſt part thereof; I have a baptiſm to be baptized with, and how am I ſtraitened till all be accompliſhed? And never did he reſt till he could ſay, It is finiſhed; I have glorified thee on earth, I have finiſhed the work which thou gaveſt me to do, John xvii. 4. Thus he fulfilled the engagement he came under. And then,

6. He expects the glory promiſed to him, and the accompliſhment of the glorious promiſe that was made to him upon his fulfilling his engagements; I have glorified thee on earth: and now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own ſelf, with the glory which I had from thee before the world was, John xvii. 4, 5. Yea, he challenges it as his due every way, ver. 24. Father, I will that thoſe whom thou haſt given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory which thou haſt given me: for thou haſt loved me before the foundation of the world.——And thus in all theſe things you ſee the truth of the doctrine cleared; and ſo we proceed to the illuſtration of the general method.

I. The

I. The first thing I promiſed, was, To ſhew what a wonderful perſon this is, that engages his heart to approach unto God; as is pointed out by the queſtion, Who is this? There are theſe following things wonderful in this perſon engaging.

1. Who is this? I anſwer, who but the eternal Son of the eternal Father, one God with him and the eternal Spirit; even the King eternal and immortal, who is ſaid to be over all, God bleſſed for ever, Amen. Rom. ix. 5. AMEN ſays the apoſtle; and AMEN let your hearts ſay to it, by putting the crown of abſolute divine Sovereignty and ſupreme Deity upon the head of our LORD JESUS this day, in oppoſition to the damnable error of Arianiſm, that is like to take deep root in Britain and Ireland, and ſpread like a gangrene, and eat like a cancer. Who is he as to his perſon? He is the ſon of God: and who is he as to his nature and eſſence? He is "the ſame in ſubſtance, "equal in power and glory with the Father "and the Holy Ghoſt." He is God over all, bleſſed for ever; and curſed is the communicant that ſhall not ſay AMEN. Under the great ſeal of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper, we make the apoſtle's confeſſion of faith, 1 John v. 20. that if any aſk, Who is this? We anſwer, THIS IS THE TRUE GOD, AND ETERNAL LIFE. This glorious engager, the Lord Jeſus, whoſe death we commemorate, is, with reſpect to his divine nature, the true God; and he hath upon his veſture and upon his thigh written this name, King of kings, and Lord of lords. This is the eternal Word, that was made fleſh; he took upon him our nature, and became man, that he might appeaſe God. The infinitely great quality of the perſon does highly commend his loving undertaking and engagement. But,

2. Who is this? It is One, who, though he was in the form of God, and thought it no robbery to be equal with God, yet took upon him the form of a ſervant, and was made in the likeneſs of man; and being found in faſhion as a man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the croſs, Phil. ii. 6, 7, 8. It is he, who, though his generation cannot be declared, his goings forth having been from of old, from everlaſting; yet engaged to be made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that are under the law, and was cut off out of the land of the living. It is he, who, though he was the Prince of the kings of the earth, and the King of kings, yet engaged to become a ſervant to ſervants, and accordingly girds himſelf to ſerve them, and to waſh their feet, John xiii. 4, 5. It is he, who, though he be admirable in his ſovereignty, His kingdom being over all, yet is matchleſs in his condeſcendency. Though he is one that could never have been known, unleſs he had made himſelf known; yet he hath ſhown himſelf to be one that is mighty in word and deed, ſaying, It is I that ſpeak in righteouſneſs, mighty to ſave, Iſa. lxiii. 1. It is he, who though he be the only Son, and dearly Beloved of God, yet engages to quit his Father's company, and take on his wrath and indignation. If it had been a ſimple privation of his Father's countenance for a little, it had been more than all the ſons of men were worth; for he was daily from eternity his Father's delight, rejoicing always before him, Prov. viii. 30. But it muſt be more; he engages to take on our ſin and guilt, and to bear our griefs; and, which is ſtill more, to undergo his Father's wrath; inſomuch, that though the Father's delight in him was never changed or altered, yet he engaged to become ſuch a ſtrange object of his delight, as that he ſhould delight to bruiſe him, and take pleaſure in making him a ſacrifice; Iſa. liii. 10. It pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him: he took pleaſure in bruiſing him in the mortar of his infinite vengeance, till he bruiſed his blood out of his heart and veins, and his ſoul out of his body; for, He ſwate great drops of blood in the garden; yea, bled to death on the croſs, and then gave up the ghoſt. Who is this? Who but he who was the pleaſant object of God's infinite love? Chriſt was loved of the Father in his dying, and for his dying in our room: he loves him in himſelf, and loves him as a ſacrifice; for it was a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmelling ſavour unto God, Eph. v. 2. But, O dear bought to Chriſt, was this love!

3. Who is this? who but that glorious One, whom we have infinitely diſobliged by our ſin, and had diſengaged to do us any favour, by our revolt from him, by breaking our engagements in the covenant of works, and by continual rebellion againſt him, and vexing his Holy Spirit, Iſa. lxiii. 10. Who is this? Even he whom the party that he engages for on the one ſide, does moſt loath and deſpiſe; for he is deſpiſed and rejected of men: we hid as it were our faces from him: he was deſpiſed, and we eſteemed him not; and yet he engages for theſe that were in actual oppoſition and enmity to him: for, while we were yet enemies, he engages for us; He died for the ungodly, Rom. v. 6. And God commends his love towards us, in that, while we were yet ſinners, Chriſt died for us, ver. 8. And when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, ver. 10. He loved them, that loathed him. Again,

4. Who is this? He is one that ſtood in no need of us, being infinitely happy in himſelf, and had loſt nothing, though all mankind had periſhed for ever; and yet, before we were not happy, he would expoſe himſelf to the greateſt miſery, reſolving that he would not be happy without us. He would rather come and endure the contradiction of ſinners againſt himſelf, reproach, blaſphemy, and all manner of indignities: though he was rich, yet for our ſake he became poor; and though he was exalted to the higheſt, yet he would be humbled to the loweſt. Let all the excellencies of heaven and earth be put together; let all the perfections that ever the world heard of, and infinitely more; let them be all gathered together, and infinity added to them, and all ſhining in one perſon, and that is Chriſt, O how rich! how glorious! And yet this perſon engages to die for vile worms, whom he might have trampled under his feet for ever.

5. Who is this? Why, he is one that could lay his hand upon both parties that were at variance, God and man; and ſo lay hold on both, and bring them together in himſelf, though at an infinite diſtance from one another; He hath made peace by the blood of his croſs, and reconciled heaven and earth, Col. i. 20, 21. He is one, that was able not only to remove the partition betwixt Jews and Gentiles, man and man, but to take down the partition-wall betwixt God and man, to bring the ſinner to God, and God to the ſinner; Chriſt hath once ſuffered for ſin, the juſt for the unjuſt, that he might bring us to God, 1 Pet. iii. 18. God is in Chriſt reconciling the world to himself: and so he is one that brings both together, by his almighty arm; This man shall be the peace; this God-man is our peace, being a friend to both parties: being God, he is such a friend to God, that he would let him want nothing of his due; he will give justice every farthing, and retrieve the whole glory that sin defaced: and being man, he is such a friend to man, that he will pay all our debt, recover all our loss, yea, and gain much more to us than ever we lost.

6. Who is this? He is one whose name is called WONDERFUL, Isa. ix. 6. But, who can tell the wonders of his person, the wonders of his perfections, the wonders of his offices, relations, appearances, birth, life, death, resurrection, ascension, and intercession? the wonders of his righteousness, the wonders of his purchase, the wonders of his love, in its height and depth, length and breadth; in its eternity, efficacy, and constancy? He is one whose name is WONDERFUL, whose followers, that bear his name, are for signs and wonders, Isa. viii. 18. Behold I and the children which thou hast given me, are for signs and wonders. Zech. iii. 8. Thou and thy fellows, that sit before thee, are men wondered at. And indeed the more of Christ that they have about them, the more they do become a world's wonder, as Christ himself was. What shall I say? Time would fail to speak of these things, and to mention his wonderful acts, his wonderful counsels, his wonderful way upon the earth, and in the hearts of his people; his wonderful works towards the children of men, both in judgment and mercy; and his wonderful conduct towards his own children. Let it suffice that this is he, whose name is, and shall be called, WONDERFUL.

II. The second thing proposed, was, To speak of the nature of the work he engages himself in, while it is said, he engaged his heart to approach unto God. The priests under the law, their approaching unto God did but adumbrate and shadow forth our High-priest his approach unto God, in our room and stead. In order to clear this point then, in the general, I premise these two things.

1*st*, All mankind were barred out from the presence of God, so as they could not approach to him in their own persons; and that by a three-fold bar.

1. The bar of a broken and violated law, or covenant of works. The covenant of works, you know, was, Do and LIVE, otherwise ye shall die: in which covenant the precept was Do, and the promise was LIFE, and the penalty was DEATH. Man, by his sin, hath broken the precept of doing, forfeited the promise of life, and incurred the penalty of death: now, if we were to approach God in mercy, this broken precept must be repaired, this forfeited life must be redeemed, this incurred penalty must be executed, and endured. Here is a bar that neither men nor angels can draw and take out of the way, in order to our approach unto God.

2. The bar of God's injured perfections, particularly God's infinite holiness, which stands up for the defence of the precept of the law; insomuch that none can approach to a holy God, unless his holiness be vindicate by a perfect obedience. Again, God's infinite justice, which stands up for the penalty, or threatening of the law; insomuch that none can approach to a just God, unless his justice be satisfied by a complete sacrifice. Now, as our natural want of conformity to the law, makes the holiness of God stand in the way of our approach to him; so our natural want of ability to give satisfaction, makes the justice of God to be a bar against our approach. O! who will draw this bar of God's injured perfections!

3. The bar of natural enmity and sin on our part; Isa. lix. 2. Your iniquities have separate betwixt you and your God, so as we cannot approach to him. We are enemies to God by wicked works. This is a bar that cannot be broken, but by an almighty arm.—Thus, I say, all mankind was barred out from the presence of God; no approaching to him.

2*dly*, I premise, That the work of him who shall approach to God, in our room, and as our representative, must include the breaking of these bars. He that will engage to approach unto God as our head, to bring us back to God, must engage to break these bars: And so,

1. To break the bar of a violated covenant of works. And accordingly, Christ comes; and, by his obedience to the death, He magnifies the law, and makes it honourable: The precept of the law that we had broken, he must fulfil, by obeying perfectly; the promise of eternal life, which we had forfeited, he must recover by redeeming the forfeiture, bringing in everlasting righteousness; the threatening and penalty of eternal death he must endure, or the equivalent, by coming under the curse of the law.

2. To break the bar of God's injured perfections, by vindicating the holiness of God, and satisfying the justice of God, that so these and the like injured attributes of the divine Majesty may not stand in the way; for, while they do, there is no approaching unto God.

3. To break the bar of man's natural enmity against God, otherways he that engages himself to approach unto God, cannot bring us to God with him.

These things being premised, we may the more easily see what is the work that the Lord Jesus engaged his heart unto, in approaching unto God: he comes to God in our room, who could not approach in our own persons. It is below the majesty of a great king, to treat and transact immediately with a guilty rebel and traitor: and so it is below the majesty of the great God, to transact immediately with wretched sinners: and who then will approach? Therefore he transacts immediately with Christ, a person of equal dignity with himself, as to his divine nature; and a person able to break these bars, and so make an open door for himself as Redeemer, and then, for all the redeemed at his back, to approach unto God as their eternal rest and happiness: and all this he does, by fulfilling the broken law; for, he came to fulfil all righteousness, by satisfying God's injured perfections; insomuch, that God is well-pleased for his righteousness-sake: and by destroying man's natural enmity; insomuch, that they are reconciled to God, by the death of his Son.

But, more particularly, I would shew here, 1. What engagements Christ came under. 2. What approach did he make to God, under these engagements. 3. Under what considerations are we to view God to whom he engages to approach.

4. In

4. In what ſtation did he engage to approach unto God.

1*ſt*, What engagement did Chriſt come under, when he engaged himſelf to approach unto this God? He came under engagements about the whole work of our redemption. And,

1. He engaged to put himſelf in the form of a ſervant, by taking on our nature, and taking our place in law, that ſo the law might reach him in the room of the guilty ſinner; otherways the law-curſe due to us could never have reached him. Now, to this engagement belong ſeveral things, which I ſhall ſhortly deliver in ſo many ſpiritual expreſſions.—He engaged to be made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law.—He engaged, even he who knew no ſin, to be made ſin for us, that we might be made the righteouſneſs of God in him. And thus,

2. He engaged to ſatisfy, not only the law, in all its commands and demands, but alſo all the injured attributes of the divine Majeſty, by bringing in everlaſting righteouſneſs.—He engaged to give himſelf a ſacrifice; and to give his ſoul an offering for ſin; and to give his life a ranſom for many.—He engaged to make peace by the blood of his croſs, and ſo to repair the breach betwixt God and man, making way by his blood, to the holy of holies, that we might have boldneſs to enter into the holieſt, by the blood of Jeſus by a new and living way, conſecrate to us through the vail, that is to ſay, his fleſh, that we might come again to God with full aſſurance of faith. And in order to this,

3. He engaged to redeem by power as well as by price, and to make a willing people in the day of his power; and that, having bruiſed the head of the ſerpent, and deſtroyed the works of the devil, he ſhould bring forth his priſoners out of the pit wherein there was no water.—He engaged to lead captivity captive, to take the prey from the mighty, that the lawful captive might be delivered, Iſa. lxix. 24, 25.; and ſo to reſtore the loſt image of God upon man, and to make them partakers of the divine nature. And thus,

4. He engaged not only to deſtroy ſin, and to condemn it in the fleſh, becauſe it tended to deſtroy God's law, to darken his glory, and to ſtrike at his being, as well as to ruin the ſinner; but alſo, to deſtroy death, and bring life and immortality to light: He engages to come, that we might have life, and that we might it more immediately.—And in all theſe Chriſt becomes engaged to the Father, for our debt, for our duty, and for our ſafety. And as he became engaged to God for us, ſo he became engaged to us for God; that having engaged to God for our debt, we ſhould be juſtified; having engaged for our duty, we ſhould be ſanctified; and that having engaged for our ſafety, we ſhould be glorified, and ſafely brought to heaven, to be for ever with the Lord.

(1.) He engaged for our debt, that it ſhould be paid every farthing, to the uttermoſt that the infinite holineſs of God could command in the precept of the law, and to the uttermoſt that the infinite juſtice of God could demand in the threatening of the law; and ſo he is able to ſave to the uttermoſt, becauſe he ever lives to make interceſſion, upon the ground of that complete payment that he made by his obedience unto death. And here ſtands the ground of our juſtification before God; this ground he engaged to God for us to lay down, and upon this ground he engaged to us that we ſhall be juſtified, ſaying, I will be merciful to their unrighteouſneſs, their ſins and iniquities will I remember no more.

(2.) He engaged not only for our debt, but for our duty: having engaged to God to make a purchaſe of all grace and holineſs for us, he engages, in his promiſe to us, to give us the new heart, and the new ſpirit, to make us know the Lord; and to put his Spirit within us, and cauſe us to walk in his ſtatutes; to put his fear in our hearts, that we ſhall not depart from him: and conſequently that we ſhall not ſin the ſin unto death, nor live and die under the power of ſin; and that ſin ſhall not have a final dominion over us; but that the law of the Spirit of life in Chriſt Jeſus, ſhall free us from the law of ſin and death. And in conſequence of theſe two engagements for debt and for duty,

(3.) He alſo engages for our ſafety, ſaying to his Father, I give them eternal life, and they ſhall never periſh; neither ſhall any pluck them out of my hand, John x. 28. He engages to the Father, That of all that he hath given him, he ſhall loſe nothing, but ſhall raiſe it up at the laſt day; and that they ſhall all be with him where he is, to behold his glory. And hence iſſue all the promiſes wherein alſo he engages to us for God, ſuch as, that he will ſave us from falling, and preſent us faultleſs before the preſence of his glory with exceeding joy; and that though we may be ſometimes carried captive of our enemies by conſtraint, yet that we ſhall overcome by the blood of the Lamb, and ſit with him on his throne, even as he overcame, and is ſet down with his Father on his throne: And that no croſs ſhall come, but what ſhall be for our advantage in the end, whatever for the preſent it ſeem to be to our ſenſe; but that all things ſhall work together for our good who love him, and are the called according to his purpoſe.

This leads me to a queſtion, Why, ſay you, who may expect a ſhare of this engagement of Chriſt? Does he engage in behalf of us all? I anſwer, in ſuch a manner as concerns all that hear me, that he engaged in behalf of all that were given him of the Father; and that none of all that hear this goſpel, may look upon themſelves as ſhut out, he expreſſes it thus, John xi. 37. All that the Father hath given me, ſhall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out: And conſequently he engages in behalf of all that ſhall not exclude themſelves from the benefit of this glorious engagement, by their final unbelief, in rejecting this Chriſt, and refuſing to be ſaved on theſe terms, which Chriſt engaged to fulfil. And ſo the door is open to you all, to put in for a full ſhare of all that Chriſt hath engaged to do; eſpecially if you think that your own perſonal bonds and engagements, vows, promiſes, and covenants, are not ſo good and ſufficient as Chriſt's perſonal engagement in your room: think you ſo, man, woman? O then, here is a good bargain for you; you that have no money to pay your debt; no grace to perform your duty; no ſtrength to ſecure your ſafety; O here is a Chriſt engaging to God for your debt, your duty, and your ſafety! O let your heart ſay with application, AMEN, it is a good bargain for me; and if ſo, God hath beforehand ſaid AMEN, ſo let it be. In a word, the ſum of Chriſt's engagement, that he came under in his approach to God, was, to fulfil God's law, to vindicate his holineſs, to ſatisfy his juſtice, to bear his wrath in our room, and to be made ſin for us, and ſo to be made a curſe for us, 2 Cor. v. 21. Gal. iii. 13. He engaged to be made a ſacrifice, a ranſom, a propitiation for us, and to be all that the glory of God's perfections in the matter of our ſalvation required.——Thus he engaged himſelf to approach to God.

in

2*dly*, What approach did he make to God under theſe engagements? In ſhort,

1. It was a near approach, by God's own allowance and appointment. See the context; I will cauſe him to draw NEAR, and he ſhall approach to me. We behoved to have ſtood at an infinite diſtance from God to all eternity, had not Chriſt been allowed to come near in our room. But behold, he made a near approach under the ſhadow of lawful authority; his Father authorized him therein, and cauſed him to approach: God the Father is the primary cauſe of our ſalvation; This commandment, ſays Chriſt, have I received of my Father, John x. 15. It is his Father's will that he came to do, Pſal. xl. 8. And how near Chriſt approaches to God in our room, under this authority, allowance, and command, who can tell among men or angels? For he came ſo near, as to lay his hand upon God; yea, to take God and all his glorious perfections, all his ſeemingly jarring attributes in his arms, as it were, and reconcile them one to another, and bind them together with the bond of infinite amity and harmony, to the higheſt glory of each of them, in the matter of our ſalvation: And hence, upon this near approach it was ſaid, Mercy and truth are met together, righteouſneſs and peace have kiſſed each other. Therefore,

2. It was a bold approach, by God's own aſſiſtance; as well as near, by his allowance. This is evident alſo in the text, I will cauſe him to draw near; and Who is he that engaged his heart to approach unto me? ſaith the Lord. It was a bold and courageous approach indeed; but it was by his Father's help and aſſiſtance; Iſa. l. 7. The Lord God will help me, therefore ſhall I not be confounded; yea, therefore have I ſet my face like a flint. It was ſuch a bold adventure, as none could have made but himſelf. And yet,

3. It was an humble approach: for, Though he was in the form of God, and thought it no robbery to be equal with God, yet he HUMBLED himſelf, and took upon him the form of a ſervant, Phil. ii. 8. He became his Father's humble ſervant in the work of our redemption; Behold my ſervant whom I uphold. He ſerved him in a ſtate of humiliation, from the time of his incarnation to the time of his exaltation. He was meek and lowly while he offered his humble ſervice to God for our ſake, and his humble ſervice to us for God's ſake, ſtooping down to waſh our feet, to waſh our hearts, to waſh our conſciences, to waſh our ſouls in his own blood, ſaying, If I waſh thee not, thou haſt no part in me. His approach to God was an humble and reverential approach, with holy filial fear and regard of his Father; therefore it is ſaid, Heb. v. 7. that in the days of his fleſh, he offered up prayers and ſupplications, with ſtrong crying and tears, to him that was able to ſave him from death, and was heard in that he feared How humbly did he cry to his Father in the garden, when he ſaid, Father, if it be thy will, let this cup paſs from me, nevertheleſs, not my will, but thine be done: Now is my ſoul troubled, and what ſhall I ſay? Father, ſave me from this hour; but for this cauſe came I to this hour; Father, glorify thy name. It was in the ſaddeſt earneſt, and deepeſt humility, that he approached to his Father in this work.

4. It was a ſolemn approach: Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? It is I, ſays Chriſt; and he ſays it with a ſolemnity, Lo I come, Pſal. xl. 7. Lo I COME, in the volume of thy book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God. Lo I COME; as if he had ſaid, Let heaven and earth be witneſſes to this approach of mine; let God and all the creatures of God atteſt it; for I am not aſhamed of this work which the Father hath given me to do: Lo I come.——Other characters of this approach may fall in upon the next general head: therefore I go to the next particular here premiſed, which will alſo further illuſtrate the nature of this approach.

3*dly*, Under what conſideration are we to view the God to whom he approached? Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto ME? What ME? It is to ME, ſays Jehovah. And here we would conſider the God to whom he approached in our room, in theſe following reſpects.

1. He engaged to approach unto God as an abſolute God. Chriſt, the ſecond Perſon of the adorable Trinity, perſonally conſidered, engaged in our name to approach to God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, eſſentially conſidered; to approach to the throne of infinite Majeſty. We have to do with a God in Chriſt, in all our approaches; and may not approach to a God out of Chriſt, otherwiſe we would be confounded: but Chriſt had to do with a God by himſelf. Chriſt is the Mediator betwixt God and man, but there was no mediator betwixt God and Chriſt: Chriſt muſt approach, as well he could, to God himſelf immediately, that we, through his mediation, might have acceſs to God. It was a ſaying of Luther's, Nolo Deum abſolutum; "Lord, deliver me from an abſolute "God, a God out of Chriſt;" for as he is terrible to ſinners, ſo, in himſelf conſidered, he dwells in light to which no man can approach, 1 Tim. vi. 16. But this inacceſſible Being is the God to whom Chriſt did approach.

2. He engaged to approach unto God as a commanding God, commanding perfect obedience, according to the tenor of the covenant of works; commanding perfect obedience in man's own perſon as the condition of life: and now, ſeeing, in the covenant of grace, a change of perſons is allowed, but no change of the terms or conditions, but that our holy God will ſtill be a commanding God, Chriſt accepts of the terms, and engages to fulfil the condition of life, be the command what it will: Lo, I come, to do thy will. Father, what is thy command? I come to thee as a commanding God, a Law-giver, to obey thy law; yea, Thy law is within my heart; or, as it is in the Hebrew, it is IN THE MIDST OF MY BOWELS. None, that had any blemiſh, was to approach or come near unto God, Lev. xxi. 21. If there had been any blemiſh in the perſon or righteouſneſs of Chriſt, he could not have approached to an infinitely holy and commanding God; and his coming to God under this conſideration, is juſt his coming under the law, or under the command, in our room.

3. He engaged to approach unto God as a threatening God, threatening death and wrath to the tranſgreſſors of his command, and ſaying, as Lev. x. 3. I will be ſanctified by all that approach, or come nigh unto me; I will either be ſanctified by them, or ſanctified upon them: and thus he had God to deal with, not only as a Commander and Law-giver, requiring obedience; but as a Judge requiring ſatisfaction when the law is broken. He approaches to God, not only as a God of infinite holineſs, whoſe command muſt be obeyed; but as a God of infinite juſtice, whoſe threatening muſt be execute: and therefore, he coming to God in the room of theſe that had broken the command, and incurred the threatening, it muſt follow that.

approach

4. He engaged to approach to God as an angry God, an offended Deity, and an Avenger of blood: The Lord laid on him the iniquity of us all; and under this load of ſin and guilt he approaches to the God, that was to take vengeance upon ſin in his own perſon, and all the vengeance that ſin deſerved: He engaged to approach to God as a diſpleaſed and incenſed God, that he might pleaſe him by his obedience, and pacify him by his ſatisfaction. He engaged to approach to that God, who is a conſuming fire to ſinners; and, taking their ſins along with him, he goes in to the very midſt of that devouring fire, which would have devoured and deſtroyed the ſinner himſelf eternally, that he might quench the flame of that fire with his blood; though he was burnt to death in the cauſe, that we might not burn for ever in hell. What is hell, but the fire of God's wrath? It is juſt God himſelf, as a conſuming fire, that is the hell of hell. It was a lamentable moan of a man upon his death-bed once, "We have "ſome in this life that will go to a quire for "us, ſome that will ſay maſs for us, ſome that "will plow for us, and ſome that will pray "for us; but, O where is there one that will "go to hell for us!" But behold, here is one that engaged his heart to approach to God, as a conſuming fire, and ſo to go to hell, and quench the fire of it for us; yea, and to drink off the cup of God's red-hot boiling vengeance to the bottom. For he engaged to approach to God as a God of terrible Majeſty, being content that infinite juſtice ſhould act upon him a tragedy of blood and wounds, that our ſalvation might be obtained without any detriment to divine juſtice, and to the higheſt glory of all the other divine perfections.——When Chriſt approached to God as an abſolute God, he came near, as it were, to the ſeat of his Majeſty, to preſent himſelf in our room; when he approached to God as a commanding God, he came near, as it were, to the throne of his holineſs, and there he was an obedient ſubject in our room; when he approached to God as a threatening God, then he came near, as it were, to his bench of judgment, and there he was a condemned pannel at the bar in our room; and when he approached to God as an angry and offended God, then he came near, as it were, to the tribunal of juſtice, the fiery tribunal of his indignation, and there the ſentence was execute upon him, while he gave himſelf to incenſed juſtice in our room.—Now, Chriſt having thus approached to God, according to his engagement, the God to whom he approached is ſo well-pleaſed with this approach of his, that now, by an act paſt at the ſame tribunal of juſtice, where he was ſolemnly condemned to death in our room and ſtead, he is as ſolemnly juſtified and abſolved in our room; therefore he is ſaid to be juſtified in the Spirit, 1 Tim. iii. 16.; and Chriſt himſelf ſays, He is near that juſtifies me, Iſa. l. 8. And therefore the Lord is well-pleaſed for his righteouſneſs ſake: and when the Spirit of Chriſt convinces of righteouſneſs, he will demonſtrate this from that argument, that Chriſt hath gone to his Father, John xvi. 10. And now the approach that he makes to God, is to a God whom he hath pleaſed and pacified in our behalf, whoſe Majeſty he hath allayed, whoſe command he hath fulfilled, whoſe threatening he hath ſuſtained, and whoſe wrath he hath endured, and for whoſe loving-kindneſs he hath made a vent; and accordingly it is vented by an audible voice from heaven, ſaying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed. Whatever approach now it is that Chriſt makes unto God, as an Advocate at the Father's right-hand, it is in the virtue and value of that engaged approach that I have mentioned; and ſo it is now to a God whom he hath pleaſed and pacified: and whatever approach we make to God in him, it is to a God reconciled in him, Rom. v. 10.——Thus you ſee under what conſiderations we are to view the God to whom Chriſt did engage to approach, and, Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? ſaith the Lord.

4thly, In what ſtation did he engage to approach unto God? Why,

1. He engaged to approach unto God in the ſtation of a Surety; therefore he is called, The Surety of a better teſtament: A Surety for God to us, that all that he hath promiſed in his word ſhall be made good; for in him are all the promiſes Yea and Amen, and he is engaged to ſee them accompliſhed: Alſo as a Surety for us to God, having given his hand to his Father, that all our debt ſhould be paid: Chriſt ſays to his Father, in a manner, as Paul ſaid to Philemon concerning Oneſimus, Philem. ver. 18, 19. If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account; I Paul have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it. So ſays Chriſt, Since theſe poor ſinners have wronged thee, O Father, by their ſin, and owe thee an infinite ſum, a debt of obedience and ſatisfaction, Put it on mine account; I JESUS have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it: I give my bond for it, ſubſcribed with my own hand: Lo I come to do it; in the volume of thy book it is written of me. And indeed he is a Surety that gets all the debt to pay, and all the duty to perform for the debtor and bankrupt.

2. He engaged to approach to God in the ſtation of a Mediator, therefore called, the Mediator of the new covenant. He is ſent of God to negotiate a peace betwixt God and man; and accordingly he is our peace, and travels betwixt the parties in order to their reconciliation. He is a repairer of breaches, and a reſtorer of that which he took not away, Pſal. xlix. 4. For, as Mediator, he reſtores that glory to God which he took not away; that obedience to the law which he took not away; that holineſs to man which he took not away; that beauty and order to the world which he took not away; that agreement and concord betwixt heaven and earth, betwixt man and man, which he took not away.

3. He engaged himſelf to approach unto God in the ſtation of an Ambaſſador, to ſerve him in that ſtation; and hence he is ſo frequently called the Sent of God. Chriſt magnifies his office as being the Sent of God, John iv. 34. My meat is to do the will of him that sent me; and to finish his work. John v. 30. I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me. Christ magnifies the faith that believes on him as the Sent of God; This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent. Yea, I have observed, that Christ is spoken of, as the Sent of God, betwixt forty and fifty times in that one gospel according to John. He is sent as the Father's Ambassador, with the Father's seal, appended to his commission; Him hath God the Father sealed.

4. He engaged to approach to God in the station of a mean Servant; for, He made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant; yet, a faithful Servant, faithful in all his house; a Servant according to God's heart; and as righteous as God would have him to be; By his knowledge shall my righteous Servant justify many. A Servant whom God glories in; Behold my Servant, whom I uphold; mine Elect, in whom my soul delighted. I might here show you how he engaged to approach to God in the station of a Prophet, Priest, and King; a Witness, Leader, and Commander, Isa. lv. 4. But what I have said, is sufficient to give us some view of the nature of the work he engaged himself to, in approaching to God. Therefore I come,

III. To the third general head proposed, which was, To speak of the singularity of the fact, intimated in the expression, Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? Now, that this was a singular engagement, will appear, both from the matter and the manner.

1*st*, Consider the matter of this engagement, and we will see the singularity of it, especially if we notice the mysteries that ly in the bosom of this engagement; particularly these Six.

1. The first mystery in this engagement is, that herein we may see the glory of the eternal God vailed with flesh, and dwelling in a tabernacle of clay; Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness, God manifested in the flesh. To see the sun in the firmament converted to a clod of dust, or the highest seraph in heaven to a crawling worm, had been but a small matter, if compared with this; for here we have heaven and earth, time and eternity, finite and infinite together in one person.—Here is the Antient of days becoming a young child; To us a Child is born.—Here is the everlasting Fountain of joy becoming a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief.—Here is the greatest beauty of heaven and earth with his visage marred more than any man, and his form than the sons of men.—Here is the Creator of the world, to whom the earth and its fulness belong, yet destitute of house and hold; The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air nests, but the Son of man hath no where to lay his head.

2. The second mystery wrapt up in this engagement, is, that here we may see the glorious Law-giver, whose will is a law to men and angels, subjecting himself to his own law, and that in the room of rebels, that had violated his law, and contemned his authority; for he was made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law.

3. The third mystery here to be seen is, that which might make us faint away with wonder and amazement, that the blessed God should, in a manner, become a cursed sinner, that cursed sinners might be blessed in him: behold the ever blessed God becoming a curse, Gal. iii. 13. And to be made a curse, is a stronger word yet than cursed.—Behold the ever holy God becoming sin, 2 Cor. v. 21.; and to be made sin, is a stronger word yet, than to be a sinner. He became a sinner by imputation, even he who knew no sin, that we might be the righteousness of God in him. He put his name in our bond, and wrote down himself the sinner, that our names might be put in his bond, and we might be righteous through his righteousness. But for the blessed God to become a curse, and the holy God to become sin, is more than if all the angels in heaven should become devils. Is there not somewhat singular here?

4. The fourth mystery wrapt up in this engagement, is, that here we see the Creditor becoming Surety for the debtor, and paying the debt that was owing to himself. The eternal Son of God was as much injured by our sin as the Father was, and yet he engaged to come and satisfy his own justice.

5. The fifth mystery here involved, is, in this engagement we may see the Judge of all the earth brought under condemnation: condemned by his own Father, whom he never offended; condemned by the law, which he never broke; condemned by sinners, whom he came to save from condemnation; condemned to death, though he be the Lord of life, and hath the keys of hell and death in his hand, and at his girdle.

6. The sixth mystery to be seen in this engagement, is, that here we may observe justice raging against the innocent, and absolving the guilty, and yet without any iniquity or injustice; a God of love and a compassionate Father forgetting, as it were, his bowels towards his only Son, and taking pleasure in his death; For it pleased the Lord to bruise him; and yet receiving these into his arms and bosom, who had violated his law, and contemned his authority, and grieved his Spirit.—And, by this means, here we see the righteousness of the law fulfilled in these that had broken the law, and never obeyed one of its precepts.—Here we may see the poor guilty sinner, that stands condemned by the law, condemned by justice, condemned by conscience, yet put in case to challenge the whole world to lay any thing to his charge, Rom. viii. 33.—By this mean also we see the debt paid and yet pardoned, the guilt of the sinner punished and yet forgiven.—In a word, there was this singular in it, that he engaged to bring the greatest good out of the greatest evil. Sin is the greatest of all evils, and that whereby, of any thing in all the world, God is most dishonoured; and yet there is nothing by which God brings greater glory to himself, than by the fall of man: upon these ruins mercy shall be built up for ever, says God; and mercy magnified to the highest, in a way wherein justice is satisfied to the uttermost; sin being condemned by a sacrifice; life bought by a death; and the gates of heaven opened by a cross. The mysteries contained in this engagement shew it to be singular.——And thus the matter of the engagement discovers the singularity of the fact.

2*dly*, Consider the manner of it, and here the singularity thereof will further appear: how did he engage?

1. He engaged alone, he alone; there was none that would or could engage to do this, but himself; Isa. lxiii. 3, I have trode the wine-press alone, and of the people there was none with me; among among all the creatures of God, there was none to take part with him in treading the wine-preſs of his Father's wrath: He ſaw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no interceſſor; therefore his own arm brought ſalvation, and his righteouſneſs it ſuſtained him, Iſa. lix. 16.

2. He engaged fully to do all, to ſuffer all, to purchaſe all, to apply all, and to be All in all; he engaged not only to do, but to ſuffer, 1 Pet. iii. 18. Chriſt hath once ſuffered for ſin, the juſt for the unjuſt, that he might bring us to God: not only to ſuffer, but to die, and to die for enemies, rebels, and traitors, ſuch as were given him of the Father; and not only to die, but to continue for a time under the power of death; though he was life itſelf, and could, in the firſt inſtance of time, have riſen up from the grave that he was laid into.

3. He engaged freely; his Father's cauſing him to approach, did not hinder the freedom of his engagement; for, as God, He and his Father are one, and have but one divine will; and, as man, his will is ſweetly ſubject to the divine will. He engaged ſo freely, that there was nothing in us, that could move him but miſery; there was none of us could deſire him to do it; he engaged before we had a being: there was none in heaven or in earth that could compel him to it; and there was nothing that he had to expect from us for his pains; we could never reward him for his work: and all that we ſhall do to eternity, is only, through his grace, to bliſs him for what he hath done.

4. He engaged firmly, and that both in point of conſtancy and courage. In point of courage; he engaged in the work courageouſly, though he had juſtice, and wrath, and hell, and heaven, and all on his top; yea, and poor man alſo, for whom he engaged; yet, how courageouſly did he go through with his work! ſo firmly, as not to be moved with diſcouragements. He went and ſet his face up to Jeruſalem, where he was to be crucified; and you ſee wherewith he encouraged himſelf, Pſal. xvi. 8. compared with Acts ii. 25. Becauſe the Lord is at my right-hand, I ſhall not be moved: God's hand was upon the Man of his right-hand, upon the Son of man whom he made ſtrong for himſelf; and therefore the right-hand of the Lord did valiantly; the right-hand of the Lord was exalted; the right-hand of the Lord did valiantly.—As he engaged firmly in point of courage, ſo alſo in point of conſtancy; he never took his word again, but ſtood to the bargain: neither fear of the wrath of his Father, nor ſenſe of the unworthineſs of the ſinner, nor yet the frequent falls and relapſes of his people, could make him alter: he foreſaw all their relapſes into ſin, and into the ſame ſins, yet could it not move him to break the bargain; therefore, Return ye backſliding children, I will heal your backſlidings, Jer. iii. 22.; yea, I will heal your backſliding, and love you freely, Hoſ. xiv. 4. Your inconſtancy, might he ſay, ſhall not make me inconſtant too: he hates putting away, and continues in his love.

5. He engaged timeouſly and ſpeedily; he did not linger, for the matter could not admit of a delay: when our neck was on the block, and the ax of divine judgment coming down, as it were, to give the fatal ſtroak, he cries ſpeedily, Hold, hold thy hand. What, might God ſay, will you come and be a ſacrifice in their room? No ſooner is the motion made to him, than preſently he was on fire of love to be thus imployed and ſubſtitute in our room as a ſacrifice; Lo I come he ſpeaks like one ready to run. When the plague was begun, Moſes commands Aaron to go quickly into the congregation to make an atonement, Num. xvi. 46. The ſentence of divine wrath, which is a terrible plague, was gone out; and therefore Chriſt does ſpeedily engage to make the atonement.

6. He engaged heartily; he engaged his heart to approach unto God. This being the main particular, with reſpect to the manner of the fact, or that branch of the ſingularity of it, expreſly mentioned in the text; therefore let us eſpecially take notice of this, He engaged his heart to approach.—He engaged his heart; that is, not only did he engage for his ſoul, as ſome underſtand it, that his ſoul ſhould be made an offering for ſin; but alſo, he engaged his heart; that is, he engaged willingly; and ſo it was with a thouſand good-wills: Lo I come, Father; thy will is my will.—He engaged his heart; that is, he engaged cordially, chearfully, and affectionately; I delight to do thy will, O my God! We never read that Chriſt had a ſad heart to quit, for a while, that joy and pleaſure that he had in heaven: Why, what was the matter? You ſee it, Prov. viii. 31.; he had ſo much pleaſure and ſatisfaction in the work he was engaged in, that it is ſaid, His delights were with the ſons of men, rejoicing in the habitable parts of the earth, even the places where his ſick patients lay. It was not for any pleaſure that he took in habitable places; nay, it was not places, but perſons in ſuch and ſuch a place: ſome of my ſick patients ly in this corner of the world, and ſome of them in that corner; ſome of them ly among the iſles, and uttermoſt parts of the earth; ſome of them ly in yonder iſle of Britain, ſome of them in Scotland; and, may not I ſay, ſome of them ly in Fife, and ſome of them in Dunfermline? He rejoiced in the habitable places of the earth, where he had patients to heal; His delights were with the ſons of men: For his heart was engaged in his work, he heartily conſented to it from all eternity. And though eternity cannot be divided into parts, yet, to ſpeak after the manner of our conception, he ſpent the reſt of that eternity in rejoicing in the thoughts of it.

But more particularly, that his heart was engaged, will appear, if you conſider,

(1.) That not only did he give his hearty conſent from all eternity, but ſo ſoon as ever he had created the world by his almighty arm, then preſently he falls about his work and buſineſs: for he was ſlain from the foundation of the world. It is true, he came not perſonally for the ſpace of about four thouſand years from the beginning of the world; but though he came not in perſon, yet he came by proxy. The infinite wiſdom of God thought fit to order matters ſo, that many a ſacrifice was ſent to be a ſhadow of this good thing that was to come; and many a ſervant did he ſend to aſſure them that he was a coming.

(2.) When the fulneſs of time was come, that he appeared on the ſtage of the earth, he ſhewed, in the whole courſe of his life, how much his heart was engaged in his mediatorial work. When he was yet a child, and his parents loſt him, and found him in the temple, and began to chide with him; What, ſays Chriſt? Luke ii. 49. How was it that you ſought me? wiſt ye not that I muſt be about my Father's buſineſs? Never did a hungry man delight more in meat, than Chriſt delighted in the work of our redemption: It was his meat and drink to do the will of him that ſent him.

ye

(3.) That his heart was engaged in the work, appears from his zeal againſt every thing that had a tendency to hinder his going on to the hardeſt and higheſt part of his work. What can be more expreſſive of a heart engaged in the work, than the paſſage you have, Mat. xvi. 23. There Peter began to rebuke Chriſt, when he ſpake of his ſuffering; Be it far from thee, Lord. One would think, that Chriſt would have taken this in good part, and that it was love in Peter; but we never read that Chriſt took any thing ſo ill: he turned about, like a man in the greateſt paſſion, and ſays, Get thee behind me, Satan: Never was ſuch a word heard from the mouth of Chriſt, and that ſpoken to a ſaint. It is Peter's voice, but the devil hath tuned it; What would become of an elect world, if I ſhould ſtop here? Get thee behind me, Satan. His heart was engaged to the work.

(4.) It appears from his longing to pay the debt which he had engaged to pay: I have a baptiſm to be baptized with, and how am I ſtraitened until it be finiſhed? He longed to be plunged over head and ears, as it were, in the ocean of divine wrath: and when it came near to the time of his death, it is noted, Luke xix. 18. He went before aſcending up to Jeruſalem; as a child, that is going with his friends to a place where he deſires to be, runs out before, as being fond to be forward; ſo Chriſt went before, and all the way talked of it to them, as we uſe to talk of what we pant after: Yea, when it came near to his ſuffering, he cannot forbear telling his diſciples, that with deſire he deſired to eat that paſſover, wherein he ſaw, as in a glaſs, how he was to ſuffer. And when Judas went forth to betray him, he ſaid, What thou doeſt, do quickly, John xiii. 37.; and when he was gone, he rejoiced, and ſaid, Now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in him: He reckoned the work done, becauſe the inſtrument that ſet all a-work was gone out. And, at the end of the 14th chapter of John, he brake off, as it were, in the midſt of the ſermon, and ſays, Ariſe, let us go hence. Of all works, preaching was moſt pleaſant to him; but behold he breaks off, and goes out, that he might be taken and crucified, that the occaſion might not ſlip. And then he does not ſtay till Judas found him out; No, he goes forth to the place where Judas and his band were, and offered himſelf a willing ſacrifice. When they ſaid, We ſeek Jeſus of Nazareth; he anſwers, I am he, John xviii. 4, 5.: and when Peter would have reſcued him, he bade him put up his ſword, ſaying, The cup which my Father hath given me to drink, ſhall I not drink it? Yea, when he was beaten and buffeted, how did he give his back to the ſmiters, and his cheeks to them that plucked off the hair? He was led as a lamb to the ſlaughter; and as a ſheep before her ſhearers is dumb, ſo he opened not his mouth. Yea, when hanging on a croſs, he had enough to provoke ſo great a ſpirit to have reſcued himſelf, when they cried, Come down, and we will believe thee: If thou canſt ſave thyſelf, we will believe that thou canſt ſave others: Nay, ſay they, he ſaved others, but himſelf he cannot ſave. He might, like a Sampſon, have broken down the pillars of heaven and earth about their ears; but he bears all patiently. And then, how his heart was engaged, appears in the very laſt act; He bowed his head, and cried out with a joyful heart, It is finiſhed: the work which my Father gave me to do, is finiſhed; the work which I engaged my heart unto, is finiſhed: And ſo he gave up the ghoſt, committing his ſpirit into his Father's hand, as a pledge and token that the engagement was fulfilled. And now, this work being accompliſhed, ſhall we not think that his heart is as much engaged to the work of redemption by power, as it was to the work of redemption by price? Yea, He hath entered into heaven, now to appear in the preſence of God for us, Heb. ix. 24. If, when we were yet enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son; how much more, being reconciled, ſhall we be ſaved by his life? Rom. v. 10. He that was dead is alive, and lives for evermore; and he ever lives to make interceſſion for us. He lives to apply, by the power of his Spirit, what he purchaſed, by the price of his blood.——Thus you ſee the ſingularity of the fact, both to the matter and manner of it; and how his heart was engaged to approach unto God: And ſo far is he from being diſſatisfied with the bargain, that never a repenting thought was in his heart to this day, with reſpect to the whole of his work.

IV. The fourth thing propoſed, was, To give the reaſons of the doctrine, why Chriſt did ſo heartily come under the engagement; together with the reaſons of our faith about it; or, why is it that Jehovah's teſtimony is added in theſe words, ſaith the Lord: Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? SAITH THE LORD.

Now, as to the firſt of theſe, viz. the reaſon why Chriſt did ſo cordially engage in this work. There are theſe four reaſons eſpecially that I would offer.

1. He engaged his heart, from obedience to his Father's command; I delight to do thy will, O my God. God the Father chooſed him to this ſervice; Behold my Servant, whom I have choſen; mine Elect, in whom my ſoul delighteth. And he authorized him in it, and cauſed him to approach: This commandment have I received of my Father.

2. He engaged his heart from zeal to his Father's glory. Though the whole creation of men and angels had been offered up as a whole burnt-offering, it would not have repaired the honour of God for one ſin whereby his honour is impaired: But Chriſt's engagement is what brings more glory to God, than if all mankind had ſtood, or yet fallen a ſacrifice to divine juſtice; therefore Chriſt, from a zeal to his Father's glory, did come under this engagement; The zeal of God's houſe did eat him up. By his engagement all the attributes of God are glorified.—God had a mind to ſet out his love and mercy to the utmoſt, and herein it is done more than any other way; God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life, John 3. 16. We may behold here the height and depth, the length and breadth of the love of God, in taking his Son out of his boſom, where he lay from eternity, and giving him for us. He looked over all the copies of his love, grace, and mercy that he had written in all his former works, and found them

ſhort

ſhort of the thing; therefore it is his will to write his love in letters of blood, upon him who is an infinite Spirit with himſelf: and, that this may be done, he gives him a body; A body haſt thou given me, that this body, this human nature, might be a ſacrifice for ſin. —God had a mind to ſet forth the glory of his juſtice to the utmoſt, and by this engagement it is done. What though the whole world were drowned in a deluge of water, or, as Sodom, burnt to aſhes? What though all the poſterity of Adam were doomed to everlaſting burning? What though every ſpire of graſs, or atom of duſt, were a rational creature, and for ſin thrown into hell? This would be indeed an act of excellent juſtice: but what is all this to the juſtice execute upon Chriſt, when he ſtood in our room? What are all other judgments to his bloody ſweat in the garden, and his expiring grones upon a croſs? Here is the higheſt act of juſtice imaginable, to make the ſoul of his dearly beloved Son an offering for ſin, when imputed to him. See Rom. iii. 23. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſneſs for the remiſſion of ſins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God. Here the awakened ſword of juſtice is drunk to full and complete ſatisfaction with the moſt noble blood that ever was or could be.—God had a mind to ſet forth his holineſs to the utmoſt: now the perfect obedience of men and angels might ſet forth his holineſs; but what is all this to the obedience of the Son of God, whoſe obedience does indeed magnify the law? God's law was never honoured, and his holineſs never ſhewed with ſuch a ſparkling luſtre.—God had a mind to ſet forth his power to the utmoſt; and now the arm of omnipotency was not ſo much manifeſted in laying the foundation of the earth, and ſtretching out the heavens as a curtain, and turning the wheels of providence, as in bringing about the ſalvation of ſinners by Chriſt; the power of God ſupporting Chriſt under that load of wrath, which would have cruſhed ten thouſand worlds: Once have I heard, yea twice, that power belongeth unto the Lord, Pſa. lxii. 11. Once have I heard it in the work of creation and providence, but far more glorioufly in the work of redemption, wherein he ſpoiled principalities and powers, bruiſed the head of the ſerpent, deſtroyed the works of the devil, diſarmed death, and knocked off the fetters of our ſpiritual captivity.—In a word, God had a mind to ſet forth his wiſdom to the utmoſt. Wiſdom ſhines every moment in the work of creation, it glitters every day in the work of providence; but all the treaſures of wiſdom are hid in Chriſt. Here is the wiſdom of God in a myſtery; the manifold wiſdom of God; particularly in uniting the moſt divine extremes: the divine and human natures are united in one perſon; the juſtice and mercy of God united in one joint harmony, for the ſalvation of ſinners, without robbing each other of their right, and ſo God and man united in an eternal fellowſhip; ſtubble is made to dwell with devouring fire, without being deſtroyed; and weakneſs to behold glory, without being overwhelmed; yea, ſtraw is made to dwell with everlaſting burnings; Who among us ſhall dwell with devouring fire? who among us ſhall dwell with everlaſting burnings? Iſa. xxxiii. 14. Why, even the believer can dwell with a God of terrible majeſty and infinite juſtice, and dwell there with ſatisfaction, and without hazard of being conſumed, becauſe of this engagement of Chriſt, whereby juſtice is infinitely ſatisfied.—Thus, I ſay, God had a mind to ſet forth the glory of his perfections: now, zeal for this glory of God engaged the Mediator's heart to this work.

3. He engaged his heart, from a view of his Father's reward; For the joy that was ſet before him, he endured the croſs, deſpiſing the ſhame, Heb. xii. 2. and now is ſet down at the right-hand of God, Heb. ii. 9. His Father promiſed him, that, having drunk of the brook in the way, he then ſhould lift up his head; and accordingly, he having humbled himſelf, and become obedient unto death, even the death of the croſs, therefore God hath highly exalted him, Phil. ii. 8, 9. In a word, it was the Father's promiſe to him, that, upon his making his ſoul an offering for ſin, he ſhould ſee his ſeed, and ſee the travel of his ſoul and be ſatisfied. And therefore his heart was engaged to the work.

4. He engaged his heart to this work; why? It was even out of love and pity to loſt ſinners: he ſaw us helpleſs and hopeleſs, and lying in our blood; and then our time was a time of love. Chriſt was drawn to this work; but what was it that drew him? even a cord of love: Love brought him out of heaven, and love nailed him to a croſs, and love laid him in a grave, and love made him riſe again, and mount up to heaven to agent our cauſe. On what deſign came he to the world? It was a deſign of love. What ſickneſs died he of? he was even ſick of love, and died in love. O! ſhall not this love beget love, and engage our hearts to him, whoſe heart was engaged to this work out of love to us? In a word, it was to engage the heart of ſinners to him, and ſo to make way for their approaching unto God in him.

2*dly*, As to the reaſon of our faith, in the laſt word of the text; it is built upon a Thus ſaith the Lord; Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? SAITH THE LORD. There is JEHOVAH'S teſtimony; and why is this added? Why?

1. Becauſe nothing is more quieting to the conſcience of a ſinner than the teſtimony of a God concerning a Saviour; God, by his holy Spirit in the word, teſtifying of Chriſt to the conſcience, ſaying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed. True peace of conſcience is grounded upon this teſtimony.

2. Nothing is more ſecuring to the ſoul; for God's teſtimony is our ſecurity; Pſal. xix. 7. The teſtimony of the Lord is ſure. It is very ſure, Pſal. xciii. 5. Here is ground for the aſſurance of faith; the ſure word and teſtimony of a God that cannot lie.

3. Nothing is more rejoicing to the heart; Pſal. xix. 8. and Pſal. lx. 6. God hath ſpoken in his holineſs, I will rejoice: Why? nothing ſpeaks out more love than this, when JEHOVAH ſays the word, as well as does the work. The ſoul cannot but rejoice when the Lord ſpeaks to it; at leaſt, here is ground of joy unſpeakable; John xv. 11. Theſe things have I ſpoken to you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full.

4. Nothing is more ſilencing to unbelief than this: why? here is the very utmoſt length that unbelief can go; for, ſays the unbelieving heart, if God would ſay it, then I would believe it. Well, Thus ſaith the Lord comes in here, to ruin and ſilence your unbelief. Here is the reaſon reaſon of our faith: for you are to notice two things in the text; the one is, the glorious object of faith, a Chriſt engaging himſelf in our room: The other is the convincing reaſon of faith; it comes with a Thus ſaith the Lord. Now, in order to get our faith fixed, and brought to a full aſſurance and certainty, we are not ſo much to look to the object of faith, or the thing to be believed, as to the reaſon of faith, and the ground of it, namely, God's teſtimony; he ſays it: his truth and veracity is at the ſtake to give us ſecurity; it is the great word of the great God. It is not the greatneſs of a promiſe that draws our faith, but the fidelity of the promiſer; nay, the greater the promiſe is, the more will we doubt of it, unleſs there be a ground for believing it. If a man of undoubted integrity come and tell you never ſo great things that he is to do for you, and give to you, the greatneſs of the things promiſed is not the reaſon of your believing him; nay, the greater they are, the further will you be from believing: but the reaſon of your believing is, becauſe the man is honeſt and able, and a perſon of intire credit, whom you can truſt. Even ſo it is here; there is a great thing propoſed to our faith, that Chriſt, the Sent of God, is engaged for our complete ſalvation; and upon this ground he promiſes in the context, I will be your God, and ye ſhall be my people. But, the greater it is, the further are we from believing it; and therefore we muſt have a reaſon for our faith: well, it is here, the God of truth ſays it, and we are to take it upon the teſtimony of the God that cannot lie. When Abraham was ſtrong in the faith, and againſt hope believed in hope, was it the greatneſs of the promiſe that ſupported his faith, or the reaſonableneſs of it? No, no; his body and Sarah's both were dead: but he conſidered the veracity and ability of the God that promiſed; He was fully perſuaded that he that had promiſed was able to perform, Rom. iv. 21. When Moſes was ſent to Iſrael in Egypt, to tell them that the ſet time was come that they were to be delivered from their Egyptian thraldom and bondage, and to be brought to a land flowing with milk and honey: here is a great promiſe: but O, ſays Moſes, how will they believe this? Why, ſays God, Go tell them I AM hath ſent you, even the God of beings, that can give being to what I ſay. I was known to their forefathers by the name, Lord God Almighty; becauſe I did mightily for them, to wit, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob: and now I am come to accompliſh my promiſe that I made to them concerning their ſeed; therefore I will be known now to them by the name, I AM THAT I AM. I have all Beings in myſelf from eternity, and can give a being to my promiſe. Here is a good ground for their faith. If we look not to this ground, the greatneſs of the promiſe will overſet our faith, while the man ſays, O! it is too good news to be true! It is too great for me! and ſo we reaſon ourſelves out of our faith: But, O! ſee who ſays it, and that it is the word of JEHOVAH, and here is firm footing for your faith.

V. The fifth thing propoſed, was the application of this doctrine, in ſome inferences. Is it ſo, that Chriſt, the eternal Son of God, did thus cordially engage himſelf to approach unto God in the work and buſineſs of our redemption? Then hence we may infer the following particulars: We may ſee,

1. The greatneſs of our ruin by nature, and the ſad caſe that mankind is in; that not one of all the poſterity of Adam can or dare approach unto God, or come under engagements for this end. If we do, we engage ourſelves to what is impoſſible to perform, and we approach to a fiery tribunal, where we are doomed to eternal death, unleſs we come under the wings of this glorious Engager and Approacher to God. This God will ſhew no regard to any perſonal bond or engagement of ours: for our perſonal credit is cracked and broken, not only originally in Adam, by the violation of the covenant of works, but actually in our own perſons: we never kept a word that we promiſed to God; we never kept our engagements to God one day to an end: and therefore God will not truſt us. I am far from diſallowing of perſonal covenanting and engaging, when it is put in its due place; that is, after a man hath once cloſed with Chriſt, as the principal Engager; and then vows, through his grace, and under the covert of his engagement, from gratitude, to ſerve the Lord, and walk in his ways: but for all other kinds of engagements, let us know, that God will take none of our bonds without a cautioner. And we are blind, if we do not ſee that our credit is cracked: look to our national engagements; our COVENANTS, NATIONAL and SOLEMN LEAGUE; and ſure our national credit is cracked and broken: never a nation was more ſolemnly engaged to God, and yet never any national engagement was more ſolemnly broken and buried; the credit of our miniſters and people, of our nation and church, are ſunk into the depth of defection, diviſion, error, ſecurity, and carnal compliances. And whereas our forefathers tranſmitted to us their poſterity, precious truths, and pure Confeſſions of Faith, worthy of the name of Reformers; how are we like to tranſmit to our poſterity a world of traſh and lumber, inſtead of precious treaſure? while, among other things, old Reformation-principles and doctrines are like to be carried down to ſucceeding generations after us, under the taſh of wildneſs, new ſchemes, and Antinomian-cant *. And as we ought to be humbled this day for the breach of our National Covenant and Solemn League; ſo we may ſee what is neceſſary, in order to the reviving of a covenanted Work of Reformation, and of our Solemn Engagements, even that the generation be brought to acquaintance with Chriſt, as the firſt and foremoſt Engager in their room; and then, that, under the acceptable covert of his engagement, they come under obligations, through his grace, to approach unto God, by returning to him and to their duty. O that the Spirit of wiſdom and revelation in the knowledge of Chriſt, were poured out for this end! However, as our national engagements are ſadly broken, ſo look to your baptiſmal engagements, your communion-engagements, and all your other particular engagements to duty; and ſee, that as our national, ſo our perſonal credit is cracked; for an evil heart of unbelief cauſes your departure from the living God, every hour of the day. And this is ſuch an univerſal diſeaſe, that there is not one of Adam's race that God can now truſt without a cautioner, nor allow to approach to him without a mids-man.

* This affair may be ſeen cleared up, Serm. IV. p. 70. Serm. VII. p. 129. the whole of Serm. VIII. particularly p. 149, 150.—— Although among the many peculiarly important and ſingularly intereſting doctrines of Chriſtianity there is ſcarce any that hath a greater tendency to promote holineſs, than the believer's being freed from the law as a covenant, in point of juſtification, in virtue of the meritorious obedience of Chriſt in his room; yet, in regard this doctrine is eminently calculated to advance the glory of God, in the manifeſtation of the freedom of his grace, and to debaſe the creature, in levelling pride and ſelf-confidence, there is hardly any that is more ſpurned at than this, in the age we live in, and by none more than the ſelf-ſufficient Legaliſt, who prides himſelf in, and vaunts mightily of his legal righteouſneſs; and ſo ſpeaks, writes, and reaſons againſt the Scripture-doctrine of free juſtification through the merits of Chriſt: yea, ſo much is he in conceit with his legal turn of mind, and external conformity to the law, that he ſticks at nothing that he thinks will bring a reproach upon his opponents; and therefore, let their abilities be never ſo great, and their character never ſo high, he is determined to calumniate their name, and depreciate their reputation: for this purpoſe he heſitates at nothing he imagines will gain his end; and hence we find, that introducers of new ſchemes in Divinity, diſturbers of the peace of the church, enemies to holineſs, friends to licentiouſneſs, advancers of Antinomianiſm, and what not, are the uſual epithets and appellations we meet with conferred upon them. But what period of the church produced more eminent divines, greater lovers of our Reformation-principles, truer patrons of genuine piety, more ſhining examples of true holineſs, greater promoters of external purity, and ſtronger oppoſers of licentiouſneſs, than the friends to the Marrow doctrine, of dying to the law, in point of juſtification, in order to living unto God, in point of ſanctification were, who were, and ſtill are thus impeached?—But they being fully perſuaded, that this is a doctrine agreeable to the inſpired Writings, and peculiarly calculated to promote holineſs, [Gal. ii. 19. Tit. ii. 11, 12.] they bore all this unjuſt calumny and defamation patiently, accounting it their greateſt honour to ſuffer reproach for the truth's ſake.

2. Hence ſee the glorious excellency of Chriſt, and the ſufficiency of this wonderful Engager for his people, in that he was able to approach to an offended God, and able to ſtand there in the ſinner's ſtead, and to plead for their good; able to ſtand the trial of infinite holineſs and impartial juſtice, and, where nothing was to be forgiven, was able to ſatisfy all that the law and juſtice could demand, and to finiſh every thing that was neceſſary to be done, in reference to man's ſalvation, and the work of redemption. O ſee his glory, ſee his glory! O glorious Engager, glorious Approacher! Behold his glory, and the glory of God in him! If you ſee any thing of this glory to captivate you, then the God, who commanded light to ſhine out of darkneſs, hath ſhined in your hearts, to give you the light of the knowledge of his glory in the face of Jeſus Chriſt.

3. Hence ſee what is the goſpel-way of a ſinner's engaging to duty, and approaching to God; Why, it is juſt to take on with this Engager, and ſo to engage under him; and to take on with this bleſſed Approacher, and to approach to God in him. In the old covenant of works, man got a ſtock of created grace in his own hand; and if he miſpent his ſtock, and became bankrupt, he was to anſwer for himſelf; he had no ſurety or cautioner to ſtand up for him, or to pay his debt, nor to approach to God for him: but the covenant of grace is better ordered than ſo, and therefore called a better teſtament, whereof Chriſt is the Mediator, in whoſe hand the principal ſtock is; and whatever ſmall meaſure of grace believers have beſtowed upon them, yet their ſtock can never be ſpent, and they can never break, or become liable to a law-purſuit, for the Cautioner keeps them and their ſtock both; and he being the Engager, they may engage to do any thing, yea, all things, upon his ſcore; I can do all things, through Chriſt ſtrengthening me: and he being the leading Approacher to God, they may approach to God with boldneſs, when he goes before them; We have boldneſs to enter into the holieſt, by the blood of Jeſus. Here then is a teſt of right engagements; you cannot be truſted if you engage alone; you muſt match with one that can make good your engagements. In your common affairs in the world, you know that no man will take a perſon's bond or engagement for a ſum of money; for example, if he know the perſon to be inſolvent, that can never make payment, but rather is always taking on more and more debt; but if that perſon, be he never ſo poor himſelf, will provide you a ſufficient cautioner, that will give his bond of ſuretiſhip for him, then you will accept of the perſon's bond under this cautionry; becauſe, though the principal, whom you have good ground to ſuſpect, ſhould break the next hour, and become utterly inſolvent, yet you are ſecure, becauſe you can purſue the cautioner when you will, upon his engagement and bond of ſuretiſhip. Well, juſt ſo is it here; poor broken bankrupt that thou art, there is no truſting of thy bond or engagement; God will not truſt any of the race of Adam; ſince the time that he brake, when he violate his firſt covenant-engagement. Nay, the Lord knows, you are ſo far from being able to pay your debt, that you are but every moment taking on more and more; but, be you never ſo poor and inſolvent, if you once accept of Chriſt for your Cautioner, then God will accept of any bond off your hand, that hath his name as the Engager in it; for, if you fail, your Cautioner is liable, and he is a rich and opulent Cautioner, ſponſable enough; and God ſeeks no better than his bond, though you be never ſo unable to pay; yea, God reckons himſelf ſecure, and that all ſhall be well enough paid, when Chriſt is the Cautioner and Engager accepted by you. He is ſecured of his honour; obedience to his law is ſecured, ſatisfaction to his juſtice is ſecured, glory to all his attributes is ſecured: and herein lies the triumph of faith, over all charges and challenges from the law or juſtice of God, Rom. viii. 33, 34. What is the charge? Why, ſays the law, you owe me a debt of obedience; yea, ſays juſtice, and you owe me a debt of ſatisfaction, becauſe of your diſobedience: nay, but ſays bold faith, you may produce what charges you will, but there is a diſcharge to counterbalance it. If you had my ſingle perſonal bond for payment, then I confeſs I would be liable; but as I can elide any law-purſuit againſt me, with the defence of my Cautioner's full payment in my room, ſo if you have any thing further to ſay againſt me, go to my Cautioner, who is engaged for all: he is able to anſwer all that you can ſay; and therefore let all challengers and him reckon the matter betwixt them.—In a word, right engagement is to engage upon Chriſt's engagement. What is that? It is juſt, as it were, to lay a wager upon Chriſt's head. I will wager upon his head, that I will get to heaven, in ſpite of all the devils in hell; I will wager upon his head, that the head of the ſerpent ſhall be bruiſed; I will wager upon his head, that ſin ſhall not have dominion over me; I will wager upon his head, that I ſhall perform duty, and do all things through him ſtrengthening me; I will wager upon his head, that my ſins ſhall be forgiven me; as the Jews, you know, confeſſed their ſins upon the head of the ſacrifice ſhadowing Chriſt; and what was the goſpel of it? Why, when it was done in the faith of Chriſt, the great ſacrifice, it was in effect to ſay, I will wager upon the head of this ſacrifice, that as it is ſufficient for the expiation of my ſins, ſo all my ſins ſhall be pardoned doned upon this ground. What ſay you, man? Will you venture all that concerns your holineſs and happineſs, grace and glory, duty and dignity; will you venture all upon Chriſt? Will you wager and engage upon his head? Then in God's name you ſhall gain the day. But here alſo is a teſt of right approaching to God in all duties and ordinances, and at a communion-table; why, it is juſt, as it were, a coming to the chamber of divine preſence, ſo as to come in at Chriſt's back, ſetting him before you as the firſt Approacher to uſher you in; I am the way, and no man cometh to the Father but by me. It is to come to God in the faith of Chriſt's having approached to him before you, and to come boldly, never fearing that his infinite holineſs ſhall daſh ſuch a filthy ſinner, nor that his infinite juſtice ſhall confound ſuch a guilty ſinner. Why, your Uſher, that hath gone before you to the preſence of this holy and juſt God, hath gratified his holineſs, and ſatisfied his juſtice both. —Here, I ſay, you ſee the right engaging and right approaching.

4. And laſtly, Paſſing all other inferences that might be drawn from the doctrine; hence ſee the duty of all that hear this goſpel, and what the Lord is calling you to this day; it is even this, that your heart be engaged to approach unto him, whoſe heart was engaged to approach unto God in your room; that ſo, approaching heartily to Chriſt, you may approach confidently to God in him; for there is no approaching to God but by taking Chriſt by the way. O then, let your hearts be engaged to approach unto Chriſt; this is the very deſign of all that we have been ſaying, even to engage your hearts to the Son of God. And, O Sirs, what in all the world will engage your hearts, if the engaged heart of Chriſt do it not? He is come here this day to court your hearts; the very heart of a Saviour is come down to court the heart of a ſinner, and to court you with this argument, That his heart is ſo much upon you, that he engaged his heart to approach unto God in your room. Away with the devil's logic, May be it was not for me that Chriſt engaged, nor for me that he approached unto God; for there is but a ſelect number, that were elected from eternity, for whom he engaged and approached. In order to ſhut this objection out of the way, let me tell you, man, that ſecret things belong to God, but to us the things that are revealed. Let an infinitely wiſe God anſwer for his own decrees, as well he can; but you dare not be anſwerable to God for meddling with them; and you meddle too far, if the thoughts thereof diſcourage you from coming to Chriſt this day. Will it be a good anſwer for you, before the bar of God? Lord, I thought, perhaps, I was not elected, and therefore my heart could never be engaged to Chriſt. What anſwer can you expect from God, but the like of this, Wretch that thou art, had you not my revealed will to be a rule of your duty? And did not I reveal, That upon the peril of damnation you was to cloſe with my Chriſt? And what had you to do with my ſecret decree? How durſt you attempt to be wiſe above what is written? Who but the devil could ſuggeſt that to your heart, that you was not an elect? And he was a liar for ſaying ſo, for he told you what he did not know himſelf. How does the devil act herein like himſelf, while he would carry you up to the pinnacle of the temple of eternal predeſtination at the firſt inſtant, that you may thence throw yourſelf down from the battlement of heaven to the bottom of hell, which was the way himſelf went, and he would have you along with him? O! will you regard the ruining ſuggeſtions of a black devil, more than the kindly motions of a Saviour? O! will you rather utſhoot the devil in his own bow, and draw an argument for faith from what was done from all eternity? Tit. i. 2. Was eternal life promiſed in Chriſt before the world began? was all engaged for from eternity? Then there is the leſs ado for me, when this promiſe of eternal life comes directed and offered; for, to you is the word of this ſalvation ſent, that Chriſt hath engaged for all that concerns our ſalvation; and we have nothing ado, but, through grace, to conſent that this Engager be ours, to do all for us. From all eternity the Mediator's heart was engaged to the work of our redemption; and from this infinitely high and eternal tower there are ropes of divine promiſes hanging down, for us to lay hold on with our hearts: For the promiſe is to us and to our children, and to all that are afar off. And when our hearts embrace any of theſe promiſes that are faſtened to Chriſt's engaged heart, then our hearts are carried up in God's order to the knowledge of the divine counſels, and go up the ſcripture-ſtair; while Satan would have us begin at the top, that we may fall down headlong. Now, among theſe promiſes that are let down from Chriſt's engaged heart, for us to embrace with our heart, there is one, Jer. xxxi. 2. I have loved thee with an everlaſting love, therefore with loving-kindneſs will I draw thee. O Sirs, here is a cord of love let down, and the upper end of it is faſtened to Chriſt's heart, and the lower end of it hanging down the length of your hearts: And, O! ſhall not Chriſt's heart and yours be knit together this day? here is a cord to bind his heart to your heart, and your heart to his heart. O! ſtrong cord of God's making! O! ſhall not the Saviour's heart and the ſinner's heart meet together this day? Will the heart of Jeſus gain no heart in this houſe to-day? Yea, we hope there ſhall be a meeting of hearts betwixt him and a remnant here. O then, ſinner, come in to his heart, for his heart is open: and I have a commiſſion to tell you, that his heart is open to you, and opened ſo wide, that you may all go in to his opened heart. It is not a hard heart like yours; No, no: If he had been as hardened againſt you, as your hearts were hardened againſt him, he would never have engaged ſo heartily to approach to God for you, nor ever ſent us to tell you his heart's love towards you. O believe it upon his word, Jer. xxxi. 20. He is not hard-hearted; no; his heart is a melting heart, ſaying, I do earneſtly remember you ſtill; my bowels are troubled for you; I will ſurely have mercy upon you. From the very time that I engaged for you, which was from all eternity, I do earneſtly remember you ſtill; and now the time of love is come, the time of letting out my heart toward you: my bowels are ſounding for you, and my heart is melting over you, and warm drops of love are falling down from my melted heart to your hard hearts, that they may be melted and diſſolved, ſo as both mine and yours may be melted into one, and being run together with the fire of my everlaſting lasting love, they may be engaged to each other for ever. O Sinner! sinner! sinner! O enemies! enemies to God, enemies to Jesus! O hard-hearted sinner! Words and rods, calls and threatenings, sermons and sacraments have not melted your heart; and if you go to hell, the flames of hell will never melt your heart: but here are the flames of infinite love from the heart of a God-man; what will this do? A God of love is come down, and must not the mountains melt before him? Yea, mountains of enmity and unbelief, and the hard flinty heart will melt like wax before him. A live coal from the flaming altar of Christ's engaged heart, is come down to put fire to your cold-rife heart. O! is the blessed fire kindled? Is your heart engaged to him or not? If not, will you consider,

(1.) What a sad thing it is, if your heart shall not be engaged to approach unto him: It says, the heart is engaged to some others than to Christ, that your heart is engaged to idols and lusts, and you cannot find in your heart to sign a bill of divorce from these. But, O! will you tell me, if your heart be engaged to the devil, engaged to the world, engaged to the flesh, and the lusts thereof, engaged to wicked company, engaged to corrupt courses, and that you cannot be disengaged from them, nor break these engagements, nor your covenant with hell? O! will any of these lovers to whom your hearts are engaged, will any of them engage to approach to God in your room, as Christ hath done? Will any of them engage to bring you to heaven, or to keep you out of hell? Nay, are they not engaged rather to ruin your souls for ever, if they can? And why should your hearts be engaged to your greatest enemies, that would lead you to destruction; and not engaged to Christ, who engaged his heart to approach unto God for your salvation and redemption? If your hearts be not engaged to Christ, it says you are, at best, married and engaged to the law; you are going about to establish a righteousness of your own; hoping to please God, and procure salvation to yourselves by your prayers and good duties: Your language is like that of the wicked servant, that said, Have patience with me, and I will pay you all. You are not yet pleased to have one to undertake for all in your room; and therefore, O sad is your state! for you stand under a personal obligation to pay all indeed: You are a debtor to do the whole law; and yet, because of your failure, you are under obligation to bear the whole curse of the law. O terrible! If you stay there, you must approach to the tribunal of God, in your own person. O! how will you approach to God without him! You will find God out of Christ a consuming fire.

(2.) Consider how sweet it is to have your hearts engaged to him, whose heart was engaged to approach to God for you: his heart was engaged to you before ever yours were engaged to him; yea, from all eternity; and you may rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Though your debt be never so great, he is engaged to pay it; though your sins be never so heinous, he is engaged to pardon them; though your corruptions be never so strong, he is engaged to subdue them; though your enemies be never so mighty, he is engaged to conquer them; and though the promises be never so precious in themselves, and unlikely to be accomplished to you, yet he is engaged to fulfil them; only, while you are here, on this side Jordan, he will accomplish them in his own time, and in his own measure, and according as your need, your work, and his glory do call for it. Yea, he is engaged to perform all your work, in you and for you, and to perfect strength in your weakness: he is engaged to guide you by his counsel, and bring you to his glory, and to lead you safe through the valley of the shadow of death into IMMANUEL's land: he is engaged for your debt, your duty, your safety, and all. O what a load-stone is this, to draw the heart and engage the affections of any rational soul, to engage with one that engages for all that you can need through time and through eternity! Why, say you, But must I engage to do nothing? O that old covenant, Do and Live, sticks fast to you: in the covenant of works, man was engaged to do all; but O, in the covenant of grace, Christ is engaged to do all. Why, man, if you can do any thing without Christ, you may try your hand; but why will you give Christ the lie, who says, without me ye can do nothing? And if that be a truth, O how sweet is it to have a heart engaged to him, that has engaged to do all! You may know from your experience, how sad a thing it is to take any engagement upon yourself alone, and on your own head: for it never abides a touch; and when you break your engagement, then you are quite dispirited, as if the covenant of grace were broken; and thus you turn your covenant of duties to God's covenant of grace, and so the covenant of grace to a covenant of works; and, in that case, no wonder that you find the law a hard and heavy task-master. But the covenant of grace is Christ's engaging to do all; it is not a bargain that God is making with you; for he will not make a bargain with the like of you; God knows you are a bargain-breaker; but it is a bargain made with Christ, wherein Christ hath engaged to God to do all for you, because you can do nothing: and now he courts your heart to fall in with this device of glorious and free grace.

(3.) Consider who it is that is courting your heart: It is he to whom the heart of God is engaged; Behold my Servant, whom I uphold; mine Elect, in whom my soul delighteth. God's heart was engaged to Christ from all eternity, not only because he was his eternal Son, but also because he engaged his heart to approach to him on your account. God's heart is so much engaged to him for that very reason, that he declares three times, with an audible voice from heaven, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleased; and all that he seeks is that you be well-pleased too. And, O you are ill to please, if that which pleases God, will not please you; and your heart is ill disposed, if it be not engaged to him to whom God's heart is engaged. God the Father put him upon this work, out of good-will to you: he caused him to approach on your account; and he is pleased with his engagement and approach; and nothing in the world will please God so much, nor make him take so much pleasure in you, as your being well-pleased with Christ and his undertaking, so as to find your heart engaged to him for it: for then you will please him more than ever your sins displeased him; and you will honour him more than ever your sins dishonoured him: Yea, then he will get full satisfaction for all your sins; because that glorious Engager, whom you close with, hath fully contented his heart; and so you will satisfy his justice more than your eternal damnation in hell could do. O! the heart of God is engaged to him, and the hearts of angels are engaged to him, and the hearts of all the redeemed are engaged to him: O! shall all hearts be engaged to him but yours! O there would be joy in heaven, and it would be a day of the gladness of Christ's heart, and it would give a glad heart to God, angels, and saints, if your hearts were engaged to Christ!

(4.) Consider whose heart he is courting: You perhaps think, surely it will be some very good heart that will please him: indeed I know none that have a good heart, by nature; and you that think you have a good heart to God, do but deceive yourselves: But, O he is even courting the love of that heart that is full of enmity against him; his love is seeking to break your enmity this day. What for a heart have you, man, woman? Be what sort of a heart it will, he is seeking it; My Son, give me thy heart. Is it a wicked heart, and a wandering heart, an unbelieving heart, a deceitful heart? Is it the heart of Manasseh in compact with Satan? Is it the heart of a Mary Magdalene, out of whom were cast seven devils? Is it the worst heart in all the world, and the worst heart that ever was in the world? a hard heart, a stout heart, a stony heart, a heart full of hell, and a heart like the devil? It is even the heart that he is seeking and courting this day: he engages to give you a new heart and a new spirit; and if you sign his engagement with your heart, saying, Content, Lord; he will make your heart to his mind by degrees; and your heart shall be according to his heart. What, say you, is that possible, that he is courting such a heart as mine? Would it not be presumption for such an one as me, vile, filthy, black, and ugly me, to trust for so much good at the hand of such an one as Christ? What, man! when God calls, is it presumption in you to answer his call? No; it is the greatest presumption in the world to sit his call, and refuse his kind embraces, when he offers to take you into his very heart. When Christ offered to wash Peter's feet, O did it not ill become him to say, Lord, thou shalt never wash my feet, John xiii. 8. Be your feet never so dirty, and your heart never so black, you have the more need to let Christ wash you.

(5.) Consider, that the present opportunity is a special season of letting out your heart upon him, when he is coming so near to you in this work. It is a dangerous thing to miss the tide when it is flowing: some of your friends and neighbours are in eternity, since the last communion here; and you may never hear another action-sermon all your life: and though you may hear other sermons, yet it is but now and then that the wind blows, and that the Spirit breathes; and it is dangerous to resist the motions that blow you in to the happy harbour of Christ's engaged heart: if there be a gale of heaven just now blowing, yet it may be over before an hour go about. O shall not your heart be engaged unto Christ! What if death approach to you, and snap the thread of your life in two? O! you would be more miserable than the devil to all eternity; for he never had such an offer as this. Death is approaching, judgment is approaching, eternity is approaching, and your heart not approaching to Christ: wo is me! what will come of you!

(6.) Consider, that Christ hath fulfilled his engagement to the Father for you, by bringing in everlasting righteousness; and God hath accepted it, and is well-pleased with it as the condition of the covenant, and all the promises thereof: and, upon this account, the promise is made to you, as follows immediately upon the text, I will be your God, and ye shall be my people. I WILL and YE SHALL, is the tenor of the promise; because Christ hath fulfilled the condition of it, so as you have nothing to do, but to say with the heart, Thy will be done. And if your heart be engaged to him, and made willing, the God who commends Christ so highly to you, in the words of the text, will turn it over to your commendation, saying, Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me, saith the Lord? Now, say not, that you want such and such qualifications and conditions requisite in these that give their heart and hand to the Son of God; if your heart stand off from him on this account, it argues a heart in league with the law as a covenant of works, which is but a black bargain now, for any of the fallen race of Adam; but the better testament is a better bargain, where Christ hath engaged for all fully, and you are only to take all freely: and never a good qualification will you have acceptable to God, till your heart be engaged to him whose heart was engaged to give all. If your heart be not thus engaged to Christ, to be obliged and indebted to him for all, then, though you had a thousand times more qualifications than you would be at, yet you shall go to hell with them, and perish eternally: and if your heart be once engaged to Christ, then, though you had ten thousand good qualifications, you will count them all but dung, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ, as Paul did. It is said of the creditor, concerning his two debtors, Luke vii. 42. When they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them all. So long as you think you have something to pay your own debt, or hope that you shall have something to make payment with, you are not in God's way of forgiveness; but when you have nothing to pay; not a penny in your purse, either to pay your debt of obedience and satisfaction to the law, as a covenant; or your debt of duty to the law, as a rule, and are content to take a cautioner, then he frankly forgives all. And so the best qualification is for you to see that you have nothing; no money nor money-worth, that you may be obliged to Christ for all.

What say you, man? Is your heart engaged to him? I think so, may some say; but it may be only a flash, because I have a deceitful heart. Why, man, be your heart never so deceitful, yet if there be such a heart-warming in your breast, as makes you subscribe to his engagement to do all for you, and to make you holy as well as happy, and to free you from sin as well as hell; if it be such as makes you come out of yourself, saying, I dare engage for nothing, but my heart goes in to Christ, as engaging to God for all; then, in God's great name, I will say, it is a good flash indeed; even a flash of heavenly fire, kindled at Christ's warm heart towards you, which will never cool to eternity, though your live-coal ſhould come under the aſhes again.

heart

What ſhall I ſay? O! is there any here, whoſe hearts are not yet engaged to Chriſt? O many, many! but, wo is me that there ſhould be any! O drunkard, ſwearer, Sabbath-breaker, whoremonger, mocker, here is a good bargain for you, even you whom we cannot allow to come to a communion-table; yet we allow you, yea, God allows you and commands you, and we in his awful name and authority command you to come to Chriſt, and take a full pardon of all your ſins, and ſubſcribe to Chriſt's whole engagement; and you ſhall have a title not only to the communion-table below, but to the communion-table above that ſhall never be drawn. Away, man, away with all objections againſt Chriſt; let your objections be ten thouſand times more and greater than they are, there is no room for one of them here; for Chriſt's engagement to do all things for you, anſwers all difficulties to you: and therefore, be you never ſuch a wretched ſinner, there is no objection you can make, but it is anſwered here, if your heart be not engaged to ſome other lovers. O, ſay you, I have not power, I cannot get my wicked heart engaged to him. O doleful and miſerable caſe! What is this, that infinite love and everlaſting kindneſs, flaming out of Chriſt's heart upon you, cannot engage your heart unto him! O! is there no power in this love? Is not love ſtrong as death, and the coals thereof coals of fire, which have a moſt vehement flame? O! here is a ſtrong flame, that is able to melt the hardeſt heart to the ſweeteſt compliance; and therefore, O will you bring theſe ſtrong cords of death, by which your heart is held, bring them to this fire, and it will burn and burſt them aſunder! Do not reſiſt the powerful love and precious grace of God, but be content to let it in to your heart, and it will draw and engage it. And therefore, ſeeing no argument will do but an argument of power; and ſeeing almighty Power uſes to ride in the chariot of this goſpel of grace; O then, will you join with me and ſay, O powerful arm of JEHOVAH, come and draw, come and draw; O exalted JESUS, come and draw, by the power of thy Spirit. Awake, O arm of the Lord, and put on ſtrength, and let the right-hand of the Lord do valiantly. Let all the heart-leagues with luſts and other lovers than Chriſt be broken this day, and Chriſt alone have the whole heart engaged to him; and let all the people ſay, AMEN, So be it, LORD. And if your heart ſay, AMEN, I hope your heart is engaged and made willing in a day of power: and being made willing to come to his Chriſt, you ſhall be made welcome to come to his table; having ſigned his engagement to approach to God in your room to do all for you, you may approach with boldneſs to God in him, and expect the ſame welcome with your Cautioner that goes before you. Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me? ſaith the Lord.

A DISCOURSE on the ſame SUBJECT, after the SOLEMN WORK was ended.

NOW, my friends, after the great work is over, I would aſk you, (whether you have been communicants or not) Have your hearts been engaged to Chriſt this day, as the glorious Engager and Approacher to God for you? I would tell you, if your hearts have been engaged to him, then your hearts have been diſengaged from all things beſides him: you have been brought to forſake your father's houſe, and the people that are yours, and to What have I any more to do with idols? There hath been a mutual donation betwixt Chriſt and you, as man and wife give up themſelves to one another. Ye have rendered up your love to him, inſtead of all other lovers to whom your hearts were engaged before; and ye look upon yourſelves as bound in love and gratitude, never to give a back-look to any other lover, ſo long as your preſent Huſband lives; and behold he lives for ever and ever: whereas your former huſband, particularly the law, is dead, and ye are dead to it, Rom. vii. 4. and are to expect nothing from it, becauſe you have all, and more than all, in him to whom you are now engaged, and whoſe heart is engaged to you. Yea, as ye have rendered up your love to him as your Huſband, ſo ye have rendered up your arms to him as your Lord: ye have ſurrendered all the weapons that have been weapons of unrighteouſneſs, to be weapons of righteouſneſs unto holineſs, never to fight againſt him any more, but rather to fight under his banner againſt all his enemies, eſpecially under his banner of love; for the love of Chriſt will conſtrain you both to work and war. Now,

Firſt, A word to you whoſe hearts have never yet been engaged to Chriſt. O do ye know what for a caſe ye are in? and whence it is that your hearts are not engaged to Chriſt? Why, ye are even ignorant of glorious Chriſt: for, They who know his name will love him, and put their truſt in him; but you are alienated from the life of God, through the ignorance that is in you; and enemies in your minds by wicked works: your carnal mind is enmity againſt God, and is not ſubject to the law of God; and your darkened mind is enmity againſt Chriſt, and is not ſubject to the righteouſneſs of Chriſt. Thus you are enemies to the Lord of life, and care not for him to be your Lord; ye are enemies to the word of life, and care not for that word to be your rule; ye are enemies to the Spirit of life, to the grace of life, the light of life, and the way of life: ye are dead, and under the power of death and of ſin, under the power of ſecurity and heart-obduration, having no favour of Chriſt about you; under the power of a ſordid choice, whereby ye ſet up the baſeſt of objects above our Lord and Maſter, whom yet the tongues of ſeraphims are not worthy to adore: behold, ye are chooſing ſome baſe luſts and idols in his room, or elſe inſolently capitulating with him upon the moſt ignoble and ignominious terms, to engage your heart to him, and to your luſts both, to him and to the world both, to him and to other lovers to be hugged in your boſoms with him, as if he were a miniſter of ſin, and a ſlave to ſerve your luſts; or at beſt, ye put him off with trifling delays from your heart, and let him ſtand at the door and knock, without ever having your heart engaged to come to him, or to let him come to you. Well, is that the matter with you? What is this that thou thou art doing, poor ſoul? Shall there be no gathering of the people to Shiloh for your part? Shall never our Lord's train and retinue be any whit the more for you? What! ſhall he have no train? Glory to him, that he will have a retinue to attend him, and no thanks to you; there ſhall be a number to follow the Lamb to heaven, though ye ſhould follow the devil to hell. But, Oh! may I yet beſpeak you in the name of Jeſus! And, O Jeſus, may I beg thy leave to be thy ſpokeſman, to tell them thy words? And now, ſince he hath ſet me here, and given me leave to ſpeak for him, I muſt tell you ſome of his words to you.

And, Firſt, I will tell you what is his complaining word upon you; Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life: All day long have I ſtretched forth my hands to a diſobedient and gainſaying people.

Again, I will tell you what is his lamenting word over you; O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem; O Dunfermline, Dunfermline, how often would I have gathered you as a hen doth her chickens under her wings, but you would not, you would not!

Again, I would tell you what is his aſtoniſhing word; Be aſtoniſhed, O heavens, at this, and be ye horribly afraid: for my people have committed two great evils, they have forſaken me the fountain of living waters, and hewn out to themſelves broken ciſterns that can hold no water. They reject fulneſs itſelf, and turn to an empty world, as if it were their heaven and their happineſs.

Further, I muſt tell you what is his weeping word. O ſhall he weep alone, and none drop a tear with him, while he is grieved at the hardneſs of your heart; and with the tear in his eye, weeping over the city, and ſaying, O if thou hadſt known, in this thy day, the things that belong to thy peace! but the time approaches when they ſhall be hid from thine eyes; the time of deſolation is coming, becauſe thou knoweſt not the time of thy viſitation. Do ye expect that theſe days will always laſt with you, and that you will never be deprived of ſermons, and miniſters, and ſacraments? Nay, they ſhall be hid from your eyes: Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live for ever? Nay, ſince the laſt communion here, one of our dear helpers, in this preſbytery, from whoſe lips you uſed to hear the joyful ſound, he is gone away to the communion-table above; and glory to God, that he got a full gale of heavenly wind, to drive him in with holy joy and triumph to the harbour of glory. But now, O ſinners, have ye no regard to Chriſt weeping over you, and ſaying, O if ye knew the day of your viſitation, before the ſhadows of the everlaſting evening be drawn upon you! And, O that ye knew the things that belong to your peace, before they be hid from your eyes!

But again, I muſt tell you what is his wrathful and threatening word; If you believe not that I am he, ye ſhall die in your ſins; and, How ſhall ye eſcape, if ye neglect ſo great ſalvation? If they eſcaped not who refuſed him that ſpake on earth, much more ſhall not we eſcape, if we turn away from him that ſpeaketh from heaven.

And, O! what if it come to his farewel word! I go my way, and ye ſhall ſee me no more, till he come in the clouds of heaven, and every eye ſhall ſee him; and then you will come to that word with it, who live and die with a heart never engaged to him; you will come, I ſay, to that word with it, O mountains and hills, fall upon us, and hide us from the face of the Lamb.

And how dreadful will his laſt word be to you, Depart from me, ye curſed, into everlaſting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels! Ye did eat and drink in my houſe, and at my table, but I know you not; depart from me: ye adventured to approach to my table, but your hearts were not engaged to approach to me; nay, your hearts departed from me; therefore depart with a vengeance; Depart from me, ye curſed.

But, becauſe it is not come to that with you as yet, nay, it is yet a day of ſalvation; I would tell you next, his expoſtulating word, or his intreating word; he would gladly take his word of wrath again, that ye whoſe hearts are ſaying, Away with him, may yet take your word again: he is ſaying, Why will ye die, O houſe of Iſrael? As I live, I have no pleaſure in your death; O turn ye, turn ye: Come, come, the door is yet open, the door of ſalvation is caſt up wide to the walls, that ye all may run in; the drawbridge of mercy is not yet taken up; the day of mercy is preſent; the day of judgment is but coming, and now I am looking to you, and ye are looking to me; and if ye be not looking on me, ye that are behind the pillars and lofts there, I hope ye are hearing me: and therefore, in the view of that moſt awful day, when we ſhall hear and ſee at another rate, before the flaming tribunal, I take witneſſes here, in the preſence of the great God, and all this numerous company, that I am giving you a new offer of Chriſt; as an Engager to do all for you; and that if you will but conſent to take him, and give him employment, yea, that if you do not reject him, you ſhall have him. None here ſhall have it to ſay, they got nothing at this communion: for, lo, you have got an offer of Chriſt, and if ye go away without him, we ſhall be witneſſes againſt one another at the great day of his appearance. O! Now is the acceptable time, and now is the day of ſalvation. O! are ye pleaſed? Are your hearts pleaſed with one to be a Cautioner for you, to ſave you both from ſin and hell, and that will engage for debt, and duty, and ſafety, and pave your way for approaching to God's glorious preſence for ever? Will ye have him for your head and captain? I allude to the words of Jephthah, Judg. xi. 9. If I fight for you and prevail, ſhall I be your head? O yes, yes, ſay they; well, ſo ſays Chriſt to you, If I engage to ſatisfy juſtice for you, and anſwer all law-demands for you, and take away all your ſins, and fight all your battles, and do all your work in you and for you, ſhall I be your head? O! is your heart engaged to ſay, yes? O man, woman, old and young, that are here, do your hearts ſay, AMEN, AMEN; content to have him as a Prophet, to take away the darkneſs of my mind; content to have him as a Prieſt, to take away the guilt of all my ſins; and content to have him as a King, to take away the power of all my luſts and idols, and to make me holy and happy in himſelf, that his name may be glorified in me, and his grace magnified for ever: O then, I hope, the day of ſalvation is begun, that ſhall be celebrated with joy to eternity. Therefore, let me cloſe with a word, in the next place,

2*dly*, To you whoſe hearts are engaged to the Lord Jeſus, whether ye have been communicants or not; and becauſe ſome ſuch may be in doubts, whether ever they have believed in Chriſt truly and ſavingly. Why, if your hearts be truly engaged to Chriſt, never make a queſtion about your believing; for a heart engaged to him is the beſt believing in the world; Rom. x. 10. With the heart man believeth unto righteouſneſs; and if your doubt remain, the beſt way of getting it reſolved, is, to let your heart go out upon him anew, as the glorious Engager and Approacher to God in your room. Are you afraid you come ſhort of heaven? So ye may indeed, unleſs Chriſt had engaged to bring you there; but if ye lay ſtreſs upon his engagement, there is no fear. Are ye frightened you come ſhort of duty? So you may, if you be the only engager; but will ye truſt Chriſt for nothing? Where is your faith in his engagement, to do all for you and in you? What, may ſome ſay, would you have us all to turn Antinomians, to do nothing, and engage to do nothing, but leave all to Chriſt? The Lord pity a poor deluded world, that is wedded to a covenant of works. Will you tell me, man, is that Antinomianiſm, "to come out of your-"ſelf to Chriſt for righteouſneſs, to anſwer all "the demands of the law as a covenant of "works; and to come out of yourſelf to Chriſt "for ſtrength, to anſwer all the commands of "the law as a rule of life and holineſs, and "ſo to engage for nothing in your own perſon "alone, becauſe God cannot truſt your per-"ſonal bond, but to take Chriſt for your Cau-"tioner, and to lay ſtreſs on his engagement?" —And ſeeing you cannot approach to a holy and juſt God in yourſelf, look to Chriſt as the firſt Approacher for you, and then to approach to God in him. If you thus engage upon Chriſt's head, according to his promiſe, then engage to what you will; and if you approach to God in his name, then you may approach with boldneſs.

be

If you think of engaging and approching in your own name and perſon, that is the old covenant-way of engaging and approaching; and therefore no wonder then, if that be your way, that you be overwhelmed with fears and doubts, and diſcouragements.

But let gallant faith come in and ſay, Chriſt hath engaged, and therefore I have nothing ado but to truſt him for all, and in the uſe of means depend upon him: Chriſt hath approached before me, and therefore upon the red carpet of his juſtice-ſatisfying blood, I will go in to the holy of holies, even in to the preſence of a juſt and holy God. O have you thus approached to God at this occaſion? I know not, ſay ye; I would be glad to know. Why, if ye would judge of your approach to God in Chriſt, judge of your approach, not by the meaſure of it; for believers are only admitted ſometimes, as it were, to waſh his feet with their tears, like Mary, though at other times they may be privileged to ly in his boſom, like the beloved diſciple.—Judge not of your approach, by the matter of that which he gives you; for ſometimes you may be ſeeking one thing, and he may give another: It may be ye were ſeeking a feaſt of joy; but if he hath given you a feaſt of godly ſorrow, that is as good for you.—Judge not of your approach by your former experiences: It may be, ſome time a-day you was like a lamb in his boſom, ſaying, under a ſenſe of his love, This is my Beloved; and now, perhaps, you muſt ly like a dog at his feet, ſaying, under a ſenſe of ſin, Truth, Lord, I am a dog: well, that is a token of more a-coming.—Judge not of your approach by your own ſenſe and apprehenſion; for, David was not in a deſperate caſe when he was crying, as Pſal. xiii. 1. How long wilt thou forget me, O Lord, for ever? how long wilt thou hide thy face from me? When your longings are increaſed, though your ſtrength be ſmall, yet it is a notable feaſt; for, He will ſatisfy the longing ſoul, and fill the hungry with good things. Be thankful if you get as much as holds your ſoul in life, though you get not much. Know, that though he will be faithful to the accompliſhment of all his promiſes, and to do all that he hath engaged for, yet the times and ſeaſons are in his hand, and he hath his own meaſure of communication: if ſome of you received what you would be at, you would grow giddy, and be ready to cry with Peter, It is good for us to be here, and forget the other work that God hath for you in the world. He is engaged by promiſe; but know, moreover, that he accompliſhes his promiſe according to your need, and as it is for your good and advantage, and according as he hath work and buſineſs to put in your hand. Now, ſome here, I hope, have got their hearts engaged to approach to a God in Chriſt, upon the ground of Chriſt's engagement to approach to God in their room; and I hope they can ſay it with holy confidence, that their hearts have been drawn, and they have been cauſed to approach to God: and if ſo, then, I hope, you can ſay of the water of the well of ſalvation, O ſweet, ſweet! O how ſweet are thy words to my taſte! ſweeter than honey to my mouth! And that all other things in a world are but empty traſh, loſs and dung, in compariſon of him. O the gallant fops of the world would think ſhame of themſelves, if they knew how much contempt the pooreſt ſaints on earth do pour upon them, and all earthly glory and gallantry, when they get near to God!—Surely, if you have been favoured with this approach to a God in Chriſt, it hath brought you to a great wondering at the grace of God. O what am I? and what is my father's houſe? Why did he paſs by my neighbour, my huſband, my wife, my brother, my ſiſter, and fix his love upon me, the vileſt of them all?—It hath brought you to great humility and abaſement; Now mine eyes ſee thee, therefore I abhor myſelf, and repent in duſt and aſhes.—And alſo to a great longing after more fellowſhip and communion with him; O when wilt thou come unto me! O when ſhall I come and appear before thee! O to depart in peace, for mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation! O to be among the four and twenty elders that are before the throne! O to be drinking at the fountain-head! Why, what means this language, poor ſoul? It ſeems you are juſt lying in his lap; He hath loved you with an everlaſting love, and therefore with loving-kindneſs hath he drawn you: His heart is engaged to you, and your heart is engaged to him; the Spirit hath been ſent to faſten Chriſt's heart and your heart together, and the knot ſhall never be looſed; Him that cometh, I will in no wiſe caſt out.

And now, that he is engaged to do all for you, O does not equity and gratitude require, that you be wholly engaged to him, and that for ever? Let your hearts be more engaged to him than ever; let your affections be engaged to love him; let your wills be engaged to obey him in his preceptive and providential will; let your thoughts be engaged to think upon him and his loving-kindneſs; let your tongues be engaged to ſpeak to his praiſe; In his temple ſhall every one ſpeak of his glory; let your whole life be engaged to his ſervice, and all ſo engaged as to depend on him for all. He hath engaged for all, that you may depend on him for all; and all the ſervice you perform will be vain and to no purpoſe, unleſs it be done in the faith of his engagement to do all in you and for you. The believer hath two hands, the one a holding hand, and the other a working hand; like a woman ſpinning at the wheel, (to uſe a homely ſimile) the one hand holds the thread and draws it down, and the other hand goes round and ſets about the wheel; now, if ſhe do not hold the thread conſtantly with the one hand, it is to no purpoſe though the other hand go round with the wheel: even ſo it is here, the one hand of the believer is the hand of faith, whereby he takes faſt hold of Chriſt, and draws grace and virtue from him; the other is the hand of obedience and ſervice, which is accepted only in Chriſt, and upon the ſcore of his engaging for all, and to do all our work in us and for us. Now, if the hand of faith let go the hold of Chriſt, ſo as not to draw virtue from him, nor depend upon his engagement, it is in vain that the other hand of obedience and ſervice doth go its round: but, when faith keeps faſt hold of Chriſt's engagement, then there is profitable ſervice and obedience; for, we are accepted in the Beloved. Let faith take a view daily of your priviledges in Chriſt: O how ſtrengthening for your work and warfare would it be to you, if you had the lively faith of his engagement! It would make you approach to God in every duty with boldneſs. Did you believe that his honour is engaged for your through-bearing, till you arrive at glory; that his faithfulneſs is engaged, his power is engaged, his name is engaged, his truth is engaged, his credit is at the ſtake; for he hath ſaid, I will never leave thee nor forſake thee; I will put my Spirit within thee, and cauſe thee to walk in my ſtatutes: Is he thus engaged? Then let faith keep a faſt grip of his engagement; and when faith is like to loſe the grip, remember, that he who hath engaged for every thing that concerns you, hath engaged for faith too, having promiſed to keep your faith that it fail not, and to keep you by his power through faith unto ſalvation. Therefore, in the want of faith, look to his engagement for it; and in the weakneſs of faith, look to his engagement to ſtrengthen it; and in the trial of faith, look to his engagement to ſupport it. Let not your faith depend upon your faith, but your faith and dependence be wholly on Chriſt, for all that you need with reſpect to work and warfare, duty or difficulty, ſoul or body, grace or glory, time or eternity; then will God put your name and Chriſt's together, ſaying, Who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me?

SERMON X.*

GOSPEL-PRINCIPLE the Foundation of GOSPEL-PRACTICE; or, the great Duty of Receiving Chriſt, and Walking in him, opened.

COLOS. ii. 6.

As ye have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him.

YOU have here ſuch an ordinary text that perhaps there are few preſent but have heard ſermons preached upon it: and yet it is ſuch an extraordinary text that we can never hear enough upon it, nor ever reach to the bottom. There is more in it than ever yet we ſaw or felt. It contains a ſum of heart and life religion, and of all that concerns either faith or manners; a GOSPEL-PRINCIPLE, which is believing in Chriſt; and a GOSPEL-PRACTICE, a walking in him: As ye have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him.

The apoſtle here, in this epiſtle, gives a good copy to all the miniſters of Chriſt to follow in their preaching and teaching. 1. To inform the judgments of people, and lay a good foundation in the knowledge of Chriſt. 2. To excite their affections after Chriſt, and to rouze and awaken them to a walk and converſation ſuitable to their knowledge and faith; knowing that there can be no ſure building erected in a goſpel-walk, unleſs there be a ſure foundation laid in a goſpel-principle. That the believing Coloſſians were well informed and inſtructed, the apoſtle notices, to the commendation and praiſe of free grace; and he exhorts them to perſevere in the doctrine wherein they were taught by Epaphras, a faithful miniſter of Chriſt, chap. i. 7.: However there were falſe teachers that had crept in among them that were ready to beguile them with enticing words, chap. ii. 4. and that had actually ſeduced and carried away the Galatians from their true faith which they formerly profeſſed, Gal. i. 6, 7.; yet he would have the Coloſſians to ſtand faſt in their faith, and in that doctrine which had been truly and honeſtly delivered to them. The apoſtle commends the Coloſſians for their ſtedfaſtneſs, as you ſee in the verſes preceding our text; and yet he exhorts them more and more to this duty, as you ſee from the verſe following the text; which may let us in to ſomething of the intent of the text itſelf; intimating, that the doctrine of Chriſt had been brought to them, and they had believed it, and received it, and Chriſt in it, and that though this was well, yet it was not all; they were therefore, through grace, to perſevere in that doctrine; to walk forward in the knowledge of Chriſt, and his goſpel, and in the practice of what they knew.

* This Subject was entered upon on a thankſgiving-day after the celebration of the ſacrament of the Lord's ſupper at Kinglaſſy, and afterwards proſecute and finiſhed, in a ſeries of diſcourſes at Dunfermline, in the year 1724. Never before publiſhed.

it

The verſe that goes before the text ſets before us two things that denote the good conſtitution and temperament of a right church, ſuch as the church of the Coloſſians was. 1. The firſt is its order; O but it makes a beautiful church when all things in it are ordered according to the pattern ſeen in the mount, with reſpect to the doctrine, worſhip, diſcipline, and government! When the doctrine is ſound and lively; the worſhip, pure and ſpiritual; diſcipline, powerful and impartial, and the government, beautiful and regular: but it is a very unpleaſant appearance in a church, when confuſion, with reſpect to all theſe, doth take place. 2. The ſecond was ſtedfaſtneſs in the faith. The apoſtle rejoiced to behold, in the church of Coloſs, not only their order, but their ſtedfaſtneſs in the faith of Chriſt, in the doctrine of the goſpel; for, when a church fails in this, then all goes to wreck. If the apoſtle Paul were on earth, and to write an epiſtle to the church of Scotland, would any think that he would have this to commend us for, Our order and ſtedfaſtneſs in the faith? O for ſuch a proſpect of affairs in this iſland, that we who have been Corinthians, in reſpect of our diſorders and diviſions, and Galatians, in reſpect of our unſtedfaſtneſs in the right faith of Chriſt, and the revolt of many from Reformation-truth, may become Coloſſians in reſpect of our order and ſtedfaſtneſs in the faith; I joy to behold your order and ſtedfaſtneſs, ſaith the apoſtle.

Now, as there are two things in that preceding verſe that ſhew the good conſtitution of a church in general; ſo, in this text, there are two things that ſhow and ſet forth the good ſtate of any church-member in particular, or of a true Chriſtian; the firſt is, the receiving of Chriſt Jeſus the Lord; the ſecond is, a walking in him. And we may conceive theſe two as having a reference to two things mentioned in the preceding verſe, namely, order and ſtedfaſtneſs; for, as there is no order, but all in confuſion in that ſoul where there is no faith, or receiving of Chriſt; ſo there is no ſtedfaſtneſs in the faith, where there is no walking in him. And as the text ſtands properly connected with the former verſe by the particle THEREFORE; As ye have THEREFORE received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him: From the connexion of theſe two verſes, I ſay, you may obſerve, That churches of the beſt conſtitution, both for the order and ſtedfaſtneſs of their faith, had need to be exhorted to hold faſt their principles and to keep their way. This obſerve, I think, may be obvious to you at the firſt view; it is the ſcope of the apoſtle all along the chapter to fortify this church againſt ſwerving and declining from the truths of Chriſt; and why does he ſo? even becauſe truth is but one, and when received is all reduceable to this one word, the receiving of Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, who is the centre of truth. Truth, I ſay, is but one, let all the men in the world ſay what they can about it, or the ſeveral branches of it, truth is but ſimple and one; but error is many. And the apoſtle, in order to fortify them from ſwerving from the truth, offers ſeveral caveats in this chapter. One is ver. 4. And this I ſay leſt any man ſhould beguile you with enticing words; ENTICING WORDS are the bait wherewith the credulous and ſimple ſort of people are taken; ſuch as the apoſtle notices, Rom. xvi. 17, 18. The ſimple are they that are caught with this bait of enticing words, like merchants that put off ſlight and corrupt wares with the fineſt words.—Another caveat is ver. 8. Beware leſt any man ſpoil you through philoſophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men; after the rudiments of the world, and not after Chriſt: and as the former is a bait to the ſimple; ſo here is a bait to the more learned, where human philoſophy, and natural reaſonings are ſet in oppoſition to ſcriptural truth, as it is in Chriſt Jeſus.—A third caveat is ver. 16. Let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink, or in reſpect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath-day. Where he cautions them againſt all legal ceremonies, the error of Judaizers, and theſe that are ſymbolizers with ceremony-mongers.—A fourth caveat he gives, even to this church of Coloſs, is, ver. 18, 19. Let no man beguile you of your reward, in a voluntary humility, and worſhipping of angels, intruding into thoſe things which he hath not ſeen, vainly puft up with his fleſhly mind: and not holding the head, from which all the body, by joints and bands, having nouriſhment miniſtred, and knit together, increaſeth with the increaſe of God. Where the apoſtle cautions againſt ſtrange paradoxes and opinions in religion. Although ſome, for maintaining the faith of their forefathers, have been calumniate as if they were bringing in new ſchemes of doctrine *, we could ſhow how ſome, in oppoſition to them, have brought in ſtrange opinions that were never before heard tell of in this church; ſuch as, goſpel-repentance before faith and juſtification; a new ſcheme and principle that may be charged with not holding the Head, Jeſus Chriſt, and faith in him as the head of all other goſpel graces. Of the like nature is that of maintaining, the believer's obligation to take the law out of the hand of a God out of Chriſt. How is this, and many other points that I could name, chargeable with not holding the Head Chriſt, from which all the body, by joints and bands, having nouriſhment miniſtred and knit together, increaſeth with the increaſe of God?—A fifth caveat is againſt all ſuperſtitious ordinances of men, ver. 21, 22, 23. Theſe ſuperſtitious ordinances of men are but a tempting of God, Acts xv. 10. Why tempt ye God to put a yoke upon the neck of diſciples, which neither we, nor our fathers, were able to bear? The apoſtle there ſpeaks of legal ceremonies that were inſtituted of God, after they came to be aboliſhed; and the argument is the ſtronger: for, if it was a tempting of God to make uſe of theſe ceremonies that God himſelf had inſtitute of old, then what prodigious tempting of God is it, to bring in ſuch a ſuperſtitious and ceremonial ſervice into the worſhip of God, as is intirely of human invention?—In a word, the ſixth caveat is againſt all deviations whatſoever from Chriſt and his truth, and this is the ſcope of the whole chapter: He fortifies them againſt all deviations and declinings; and how does he that? juſt as you would do to a houſe that leans to the one ſide; what would you do? ſurely you would labour to get it upright and perpendicular to its foundation: Even ſo, the apoſtle ſtrives to make the church here perpendicular, and upright upon their foundation, and that is Chriſt and his doctrine; exhorting them, under the phraſe of holding the head, ver. 19. and getting a full aſſurance of underſtanding to the acknowledgement of the myſtery of God. And ſo in the text, and immediate context, it is expreſſed by a walking in him, a being rooted and built up in him, and eſtabliſhed in the faith as ye have been taught.

* The foundation of this calumny is accounted for, Serm. IV. p. 70. and particularly Serm. VIII. p. 149, 150. Serm. IX. p. 178.

of

The apoſtle here uſeth ſimilitudes, and there are theſe three compariſons couched here, 1. That Chriſt is the way; and this is implied in theſe words, walk ye in him. 2. That Chriſt is the root, and this is implied in theſe words, rooted in him. 3. That Chriſt is the foundation, and that is implied in theſe words, built up in him. Why, ſay you, how can a man ſtand rooted and ſtable, and yet walk? why, you may walk, and yet keep your way ſtedfaſt; you may build, and yet build high in Chriſt; you may be rooted in Chriſt, the true vine, and yet grow in him. And hence that emphaſis, in the 6th and 7th verſes, As ye have received, and as ye have been taught. Why, ſome may think they cannot grow unleſs they change and over-grow their principles, as a child does overgrow his old clothes. But why cannot a man mend his pace, and yet go on in his right path ſtill? Cannot a man build high, and yet build upon the foundation ſtill? Cannot a man grow in grace, and in the knowledge of Chriſt, and of the truth of Chriſt, and yet grow upon the everlaſting root ſtill? Yea ſurely: we are to walk as we have received, and to be eſtabliſhed as we have been taught. And here is comfort to believers that are of the loweſt form, ſuch as have no great ſtock of knowledge to trade with in difficult queſtions; here there is comfort that fundamental points are few and clear; ſo few, that a weak capacity, in any meaſure divinely ſpiritualized, may bear them; and ſo clear, that a dim eye, in any meaſure divinely enlightened, may ſee them. Would you know what is the field where all the flowers of truth grow? it is the word: therefore, ſays Chriſt, Search the ſcriptures, for theſe are they that teſtify of me. The ſcripture is God's word, God's field; and Chriſt is the treaſure hid in the field: ſearch in that field till you find the treaſure, and then you will find all truth treaſured up in them. Hence the apoſtle, Eph. ii. 20. ſums up all fundamental truths in two words to believers; Ye are built upon the foundation of the apoſtles and prophets, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf being the head corner-ſtone. There is the ſum-total of doctrinal fundamentals, or fundamental doctrines. Yea, the very ſame apoſtle hath learned us to ſum up all in one word, πάντα καὶ ἐν πᾶσι Χριστός, Chriſt is All, and in all. God can, with one glance of Chriſt's glory, in the light of his word and Spirit, give you a view of all. Why, the ſcripture is to be believed, becauſe it is inſpired by God, it is a garden of God's planting; but there is a garden within that garden: the goſpel is the paradiſe of the whole ſcripture, and Chriſt is the tree of life in the midſt of that goſpel-paradiſe.

But beſides the doctrinal fundamentals, there are what we may call practical fundamentals which pertain to the ſtate and being of a true Chriſtian, and theſe are two, and they are both in our text; the one is a receiving of Chriſt Jeſus, and the other is a walking in him. The former, viz. the receiving of Chriſt is neceſſary to the eſſence and being of a Chriſtian; the latter, viz. walking in Chriſt, is neceſſary to the progreſs, growth, and well-being of a Chriſtian.

Now in the words, you may notice theſe four things. 1. The believer's character and privilege, he is one that hath received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord. 2. The believer's duty, namely, to walk in him. 3. The rule of his duty, which is to walk in him as he hath received him. 4. The connection betwixt the character and the duty, the one being ſuppoſed to the other, goſpel-faith being the ground of goſpel-practice; no walking in Chriſt unleſs there be a receiving of him: As ye have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him.

Now, I ſhall, as the Lord may aſſiſt, explain theſe parts of the text in the proſecution of this doctrine.

OBSERV. That as true believers are theſe that have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord; ſo they ought to walk in him as they have received him.

The method may be according to the parts of the text.

I. To ſpeak of the believer's character and dignity as a receiver of Chriſt Jeſus the Lord.
II. To ſpeak of the believer's duty, namely to walk in Chriſt.
III. To ſpeak of the rule of his duty, and the proportion it ſhould bear to his reception of Chriſt, namely, that he is to walk in Chriſt as he hath received him.
IV. To ſpeak of the connexion betwixt the character and the duty, or between receiving Chriſt and walking in him; where we may enquire into the order of this connexion and the reaſon of it.
V. Draw ſome inferences for the application of the whole.

I. The firſt general head is to ſpeak of the believer's character, he is one that receiveth Chriſt Jeſus the Lord. Receiving Chriſt and believing in him are equivalent terms, John i. 12. To as many as RECEIVED him, to them gave he power to become the ſons of God, even to them that BELIEVE in his name. And as they have power, or privilege, to become the ſons of God by believing in him, or receiving him; ſo they have power to receive him by virtue of their receiving the ſpirit of faith, by the means of the doctrine of faith, or the goſpel-doctrine, Gal. iii. 2. Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?—But that I may ſpeak more cloſely to this point, the receiving of Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, the text leads me to enquire into three things. 1. The act of faith as it is a receiving. 2. The object of it, Chriſt. 3. The capacity, or reſpect, under which this object is received, namely, as he is Chriſt, Jeſus, the Lord. Theſe points being very great and momentuous, I would touch at them ſeverally.

Firſt, The ACT of faith, it is called a receiving of Chriſt. Now to explain this act of receiving Chriſt, as diſtinctly as, through grace, I can, you may notice that it hath ſomething ſuppoſed that it relates to, and ſomething imported that it conſiſts in.

1ſt, It hath ſomething ſuppoſed that it relates to. This receiving then does refer or relate unto ſome offer or tender that is made of Chriſt to him that does receive him. For Chriſt is unknown to nature, he is unknown to reaſon, and unknown to the wiſdom of the wiſeſt men upon the earth, until he be revealed and offered, there being no footſteps of the goſpel in the heart or nature of man; whatſoever there there may be of the law, there is none of the gospel. Now, therefore, receiving relates to offering; a receiving-hand hath relation to an offering-hand, holding forth Christ to be received, and that is the hand of God's free grace in the dispensation of the gospel. And this offer of Christ unto sinners in the gospel, in order to their being believers, is sometimes in scripture called a giving of Christ, John iii. 27. A man can receive nothing unless it be given to him from heaven; and therefore we maintain, that as it is the duty of all that hear this gospel to receive Christ, and believe in him; so it is the privilege of all that hear the gospel that Christ is given to them in the offer thereof. It is true the giving in possession follows faith; My Father giveth you the true bread. The taking hand of faith, presupposes the giving hand of God. God's promise in the gospel is the offering hand, that offers Christ; a saving faith of God's operation, is the receiving hand which goes forth to the hand that offers; and when these two hands meet together, then the work is done, there is a receiving. But that you may the better understand this point of receiving Christ, by considering this offer that receiving relates to, there are three things that may be noticed. 1. To what kind of persons the gospel offers Christ. 2. Upon what grounds. 3. For what ends. Mark these three then in the offer of Christ.

1. To what kind of persons the offer is made. To whom doth the hand of the promise hold them out? The person to whom he is held out is no other than a lost sinner, a lost soul; Christ came to seek and save them that were lost: I mean not only these that are sensible of their lost state, but these that are in a lost state, whether they be sensible of it or not: if the gospel comes to them, the offer of Christ comes to them: To you, O men, do I call; and my voice is to the sons of men. We are warranted to preach the gospel to every rational creature, Mark xvi. 15. The offer of Christ comes to you. Why, may not sin exclude us from the offer? By no means; ——Christ came to save sinners, 1 Tim. i. 15. If sinners were excepted, all mankind would be excepted; for, all have sinned. But is it to gross sinners? Yea, Isa. i. 18. Come let us reason together, ——though your iniquities were like scarlet, I will make them white as snow; though they be red, like crimson, I will make them as wool:—to murderers of the Lord of glory was the offer made, Acts ii. 41. But are mockers and scorners under the offer? Yea, they are, as you see, Prov. i. 22, 23. But what if a person cares not for the offer, and thinks himself happy enough without Christ, and believes himself well enough as he is without him; is the offer of Christ to such? Certainly it is; Wherefore do you spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness, Isa. lv. 1, 2. But if a man be neither convinced of sin or misery, nor see any need of Christ, is Christ offered to him? Yea, undoubtedly he is; Rev. iii. 18. I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment that thou mayest be clothed. Let them venture to shut the door of the gospel-offer who will, we must open it in God's name to all who hear this gospel, and tell them that Christ is offered to them, that he may be received by them; and if there were no offer, it would not be their duty to receive, and so unbelief would not be their sin.—Again, let them shift the offer of the gospel who will, and think Christ is not offered to them, this offer will rise up in judgment against them, if they do not answer it; for he that believeth not, shall be damned: and one of two shall take place upon this universal offer, either ye shall receive him as offered, or ye shall all be made inexcusable that receive him not: I am pretty sure, though we reach not the first, yet the second shall take place, though I should say no more than I have said. The gospel-offer does not tell who will come; for many get the offer who will never receive the gift offered to them: but it tells who should come, and that is all: but though all should come, whether they be sensible of their lost state or not; yet these that see themselves lost, are in the fairest way to receive the offer of a Saviour; and none will come till God make them see themselves lost and undone without Christ, as all of you are lost indeed, though few are sensible of their lost state. However, I say to lost souls, Christ is offered to these that are spoiled by the sentence of the law, arraigned, convicted, condemned, and accursed; the hand of the gospel promise holds out Christ to you; for, where Moses leaves you, there Joshua finds you; where the law ends, there the gospel begins: the law ends in the shipwreck of the sinner, in splitting him upon the rock of its terrors and curses, drowning him in the ocean of divine wrath, and sinking him into the deeps of despair; and just there the gospel begins; it comes to the bottom of the pit of sin and misery, and offers a Christ, a Saviour. Thus, where Moses leaves you, there Joshua finds you. When the law ends, Christ begins; and when the soul is so shipwrecked by the law, that he is, as it were, all to pieces, to such an one is the gospel-offer most welcome; for the hand of grace holds forth Christ, like a plank after shipwreck, a plank, to swim ashore upon. Such a soul is encouraged to see no other qualification required of him to come to Christ, and receive him, but just that he is lost, which he finds himself to be; and there is no other condition or qualification required, but that you be a lost man, a sinful miserable person. Some will offer Christ upon such and such terms, saying, you must be so and so humbled, so and so penitent, before Christ can be offered to you; so that a man that finds himself a lost, sinful, unhumbled, impenitent, wretched creature, can never come to their hand, or meddle with what they offer: just like a man holding out a cup of excellent wine to his friend, and offering him a drink, but in the mean time he hath made the wine scalding hot upon the fire, so as the man, to whom it is offered, dare not touch it with his lips: even so, many offer Christ, and hold forth the cup of salvation to the people, but they heat their gospel-liquor, as it were, red hot upon the fire of the law; I mean, with so many legal terms, conditions, and qualifications, that the poor soul, that finds himself a lost sinner, every way sinful, destitute of all good qualifications, dare not come near, and thinks he may not, he ought not come near with his lip to taste it. We need be at no pains to hinder sinners from coming to Christ, to receive the offer, for they are unwilling enough of themselves. Besides that, they they will never have a good qualification till they come to him and receive him, and all good in him; all grace and glory, all holineſs and happineſs.—Thus you ſee to what kind of perſons the offer of Chriſt is made, which the receiving of Chriſt doth relate to.

2. Upon what ground is the offer made? or, what is the ground upon which Chriſt is offered? To this I anſwer only in general, It is juſt upon the ground of free grace; ſovereign grace to Chriſt crucified. And hence the goſpel is called by the name of GRACE, Tit. ii. 11. The grace of God that bringeth ſalvation hath appeared to all men, or, as in the margin, The grace of God that bringeth ſalvation to all men: it brings the offer of Chriſt, and ſo of ſalvation to all men to whom the goſpel comes; and it is grace that does it, without the conſideration of any condition, or qualification in us. Sovereign grace is a thing that can neither be promoted by our goodneſs, or hindered by our badneſs. Free grace that makes the offer looks neither to the worthineſs, nor unworthineſs of the receiver; neither to his merit, nor demerit; neither to the merit of his virtue, nor the demerit of his vice. It is the hand of the promiſe that offers Chriſt to the loſt ſinner, upon the ground of free grace alone: and here is the moſt inviting encouragement to a loſt ſinner that can be, that as he hath no worthineſs to plead for him, [which if he had, grace would be no grace;] ſo his unworthineſs is no bar againſt him; for, if it were, then grace would be no grace alſo in this reſpect: for if your worthineſs did work it, then it would not be the work of grace; or, if your unworthineſs did hinder it, then it would not be the doing of grace: Yea, grace would never do any thing at all; for all are unworthy: here there is encouragement to all ſinners to receive an offered Chriſt. But what is the obſtruction? Why, when a man ſhould take hold of Chriſt, then his heart goes about to mar the freedom of grace, before he dare venture his ſoul upon it; and how is that? Even by ſeeking ſome qualifications in himſelf that Chriſt ſhould be offered unto him: Why, I ſhould be ſo and ſo holy, before I meddled with Chriſt; ſo and ſo humble and penitent, before I reckon the goſpel-offer belongs to me. Thus a man naturally would be looking after ſomething in himſelf, and he would gladly find it, that he may thus build the goſpel upon the law; God upon the man; Chriſt upon ſelf; and free grace upon works; for it is no better than ſo: and thus the ſoul will not come to free grace; he will be obſtructing himſelf; and in this mire he lies till free grace teach him how to come to the market of free grace, without money, and without price; till then all is but nothing: the ground of the offer is free and ſovereign grace. What a great deal of latent obſtructions are there that hinder our receiving this offer of Chriſt made by free grace! Why, when a loſt ſinner comes ever to find himſelf a loſt ſinner, then he ſtands aback, becauſe he thinks either he is too much loſt, or too little loſt. Either, 1. He thinks he is too much loſt, his ſins are ſo very great; and ſo the man ſecretly ſays, that he would buy his pardon with his own goodneſs, if he had it, and will not be obliged to free grace for it; or by this means he magnifies the demerit of his ſins, above the merit of the blood of Chriſt, which is a great affront poured upon the infinitely glorious bargain that is in his offer. Or, 2. He thinks he is too little loſt, his ſenſe of ſin and humiliation is ſo very little; and this is another obſtruction. He would be more broken and more humbled before he thinks the offer belongs to him; and this ſhews the fulneſs of his heart, that though he thinks he cannot buy Chriſt at the goſpel market, with his good works, yet he would buy and purchaſe Chriſt with his humiliation, deep down-caſting, and the like. Now, this cannot be, it is but a rotten excuſe; for what though you ſhould ſink as far into the deeps of legal conviction, as deſpair itſelf; yet, will that deſpair merit any thing at the hand of God, or yet make God better pleaſed with him? No: to deſpair is to diſpleaſe him, as well as to preſume. And as you cannot preſume, if you come to take him in the tenor of our text, namely, as a Chriſt, as a Jeſus, as a Lord, (of which afterwards;) ſo you cannot deſpair, if you know that the ground of the offer is free grace. Would you be humbled to deſpair in yourſelf, and of all your excellencies, and of recommending yourſelf to God by any good, any humility of yours, it were a good deſpair; but if you would be humbled for ſin, ſo far as to expect thereupon the favour of God, and forgiveneſs of ſin, this can never be. But here a queſtion may be propoſed, What meaſure of humiliation ſhould I have? We anſwer, So much humiliation as makes you ſee your want of humiliation, your want of all good, all grace, all conditions, and qualifications; ſo much as ſhall oblige you to relinquiſh your own fancied goodneſs, and make you to come to Chriſt for all, and accept of him upon goſpel terms, and the term of the goſpel is free grace. I will tell you, by a compariſon, the true level of humiliation: When is the metal ſufficiently melted in the fire? it may be burnt in the fire, and it may be melted too little; but when is it enough? Why, it appears to be melted enough when it runs eaſily into the mould: but now, it is not the melting that gives it the ſhape, the form, or faſhion, but the melting makes it run into the mould, and the mould gives it the form or ſhape; ſo I ſay here, When is the ſoul melted enough? it is when it runs into the goſpel-mould. There are ſome that have, as it were, too much of the fire; there are theſe that apprehend themſelves ſuch great ſinners that they dare not come to Chriſt. There are others that have too little of the fire; theſe are they that only think they are not ſo good as they ought to be, and therefore they ſhould not come. There are others that have nothing of the fire at all; and theſe are they that think they are good enough already, and they need not come to receive Chriſt. But then only is the ſoul melted enough in the fire, when it runs into the mould. What is the goſpel-mould? It is even Chriſt. And when the melted ſoul, like melted lead, or other metal, runs into this mould, then, and not till then, does it get a good ſhape: it is not the melting that gives it the ſhape or faſhion, or form, but it is the mould that gives the form. And ſo never expect to have any good form, any good ſhape, any good qualification, till your ſoul run in to this mould, by receiving Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, thus offered to you upon the ground of free grace.—And thus you ſee the ground of the offer.

3. For

3. For what end is the offer made? Why, Chriſt is offered to the loſt ſinner, upon the ground of free grace, to be both a Jeſus and a Lord. As he is to be received as ſuch (of which we may afterwards ſpeak,) ſo he is offered as ſuch, even as a Saviour and a Lord; that is, he hath coupled the ſalvation of Chriſt, and the dominion of Chriſt together; and it ſhows that all whom he ſaves he will ſanctify; that whom he ſaves by the price of his blood, he will conquer by the power of his Spirit; he being the Chriſt of God, Anointed of God, Sealed of God, to be both a Saviour and a Lord; and he is offered for this end to be both. This ſhews what a ſuitable offer it is to the poor ſinner that is both under the wrath of God, the curſe of the law, condemned to hell-fire, which makes him ſtand in need of Chriſt as a Saviour; and alſo, he is under the power of ſin, the ſlavery of luſts, the bondage of Satan, which makes him ſtand in need of Chriſt as a Lord; and here is encouragement to the poor ſoul, that would be ſanctified as well as juſtified, Chriſt is offered for wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption: he is not offered as a Saviour only, to ſave from hell; but as a Lord alſo, to deliver from ſin. Now, what is the great obſtruction here, that hinders the receiving of the offer? Why, it is even the falſe heart that would divide ſalvation from dominion; would be content to have his ſoul ſaved, but not to have the ſin conquered; would have Chriſt as a Jeſus, but not as a Lord: the man would be under his garment, and yet not under his government. In this caſe, the man is not ſo much out of love with ſin, as out of love with hell; not ſo much in love with Chriſt, as with his benefits; while his guilt craves Chriſt's ſalvation, but his luſts oppoſe Chriſt's Lordſhip: If Chriſt were offered as a cloak to your luſts, then the falſe and bloody calumny of ſome would be true, that we call men to believe, and then live as they liſt. Why, if Chriſt were offered as a Jeſus, a Saviour, and not as a Lord, then ſuch a thing might be ſuppoſed; but let the mouth of calumny be ſtopt: we offer Chriſt to ſinners, upon the ground of free grace, both as he is a Jeſus and a Lord; and I defy any man in the world to receive this offer, and yet deſire to live as he liſt. It is not poſſible in nature. For if the language of a man's heart be, Lord, let my ſoul be ſaved, but let my luſts reign; in this caſe the offer is not received; for then the man ſays, Let me have Chriſt as a Saviour, but not as a Lord; and ſo the offer not being received, it is not faith, but a fancy, a deluſion; for, at the ſame time that he deſires ſuch a latitude, he refuſes the offer of Chriſt as a Lord; yea, and betrays the rottenneſs of his faith in him as a Saviour, while he would divide ſalvation from dominion, and Chriſt's prieſthood from his lordſhip.

When God brings a man therefore to receive his offer in the goſpel, he makes him to paſs under three convictions, which three you read of, John xvi. 8. When the Spirit is come he will convince the world of ſin, of righteouſneſs, and of judgment. 1. He paſſes under the conviction of ſin; both of his general ſin, in rebelling againſt and contemning the authority of a commanding God in the law; and of his particular ſin of unbelief, in deſpiſing the grace of a promiſing God in the goſpel. 2. He paſſes under the conviction of righteouſneſs; that is, of the righteouſneſs of Chriſt as a Saviour, a Prieſt, a ſacrifice, and as the Lord our righteouſneſs, for juſtification: he is convinced that he is loſt for ever without an intereſt in this righteouſneſs. 3. He paſſes under the conviction of judgment; that is, of the government of Chriſt; making the man willing to be ſubject to him, as well as juſtified by him; to be under the dominion of his grace, as well as under the covert of his blood. Now, till a man have paſſed theſe three convictions, he is ſtill blocked up, and concluded under unbelief.

There are two things, which when they do appear, tend mightily to draw out the heart toward the goſpel-offer; the one is in us, the other is in Chriſt. The firſt is, the neceſſity of the ſinner; and the ſecond is, the excellency of the Saviour. The neceſſity of having Chriſt upon pain of death, and excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt. The one makes the man willing to be ſaved by him; the other makes the man willing to be ſubdued by him. Such is my neceſſity; Oh I muſt have him for a Jeſus to me! Such is his excellency; Oh I muſt have him for a Lord to me! And thus he is brought to go in to the proper ends of the goſpel-offer, namely, to receive Chriſt as Jeſus the Lord.

Thus I have ſhewed you ſomewhat relative to the offer which this receiving of Chriſt relates to. And from this manner of offering Chriſt, it appears, that though the offer be to ſinners, and grounded upon free grace, yet what a hard thing, yea, how impoſſible it is, without the almighty power of God, to receive the offer, or to believe in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. What a mighty hard work it is! when there are ſuch obſtructions in the way. Many think it is an eaſy thing to be believers; and ſo it may be ſaid indeed of a multitude of ordinary, ſuperficial, dogmatical believers in the world. But ſaving faith, though it be the eaſieſt and ſweeteſt thing in the world, under the conduct of divine grace, and the drawings of the divine Spirit, yet without that, it is the hardeſt thing in the world. Why?

1. For a loſt ſinner, under the curſe of the law, to believe that God ſhould be as good to him, as the promiſe of the goſpel tells him, is hard; nay, he is afraid the promiſe be too good to be true, and this argues his want of faith; for whatever unbelief does, faith never queſtions the truth of God's promiſe.

2. For a proud man to be beholden to free grace, when he hath been building his hope all his days upon ſome good work or deed of his own; for ſuch a ſinner to ſtrip himſelf of his own righteouſneſs, and look upon it as a filthy rag; how hard is this! nay, publicans and harlots go to heaven ſooner.

3. For a ſinner filled with ſelf-love, ſelf-eaſe, ſelf-will, ſelf-wiſdom, ſelf-ſufficiency, ſelf-eſtimation, ſelf-juſtification, to deny himſelf, his ſinful ſelf, his natural ſelf, moral ſelf, worldly ſelf, religious ſelf, and go wholly out of himſelf, and wholly in to Chriſt for all; all this is very hard: and yet for this end Chriſt is offered that he may be thus received, even for wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, redemption, and all; for wiſdom, that is, as a Prophet to teach you; for righteouſneſs, that is, as a Prieſt to juſtify you; for ſanctification, that is, as a King to ſanctify you; and for complete redemption, that that is, for your all in all; even the whole of your salvation, in time and through eternity. Now, the hardness and difficulty of believing and accepting of this noble offer, does not ly in some great work that you have not power to do, for faith and works are opposite here; believing is not working; He that believeth, is he that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifies the ungodly, Rom. iv. 5.: but the difficulty rather lies in some great worth, and apprehended good, that you have no will to quit, till a day of power make you willing; such as, your own wit and wisdom, which you oppose unto Christ as a Prophet; your own works and righteousness, which you oppose unto Christ as a Priest; your own strength and power, together with your own self-love and sin-love, which you oppose unto Christ as a King. In receiving this offer, the man not only quits his sin and lust, which is very hard; but quits his righteousness and works, which is yet harder. Need I to explain this, for preventing mistakes, in this critical age and day of reproach? When I speak of quitting our works; I mean, a quitting them, not in point of performance, but in point of dependence; it is a quitting the law, not as a rule of obedience, but as a rule of acceptance, or as a covenant of works. Now, I say, it is the hardest of all for a man to quit his works and righteousness, and have no hope of any favour or acceptance with God for them; for the light of nature will tell him, that he should quit his sins; but the light of nature, and the remainders of the legal covenant in him, will never tell him that he should quit his works and righteousness; nay, it will tell him, on the quite contrary, that he must do, or be damned; that he must do and live; and work so and so well, and God will accept of him. This is the way of the covenant of works, the natural way; and to quit that way is right hard, so as to venture all upon the works of another, the righteousness of another: Indeed it is not so hard for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, with his bunch on his back, as for a rich man; I mean, one that is rich in his own conceit, rich and increased with goods, and standing in need of nothing; nay, it is impossible for him with his bunch of duties and works of righteousness on his back, to enter into heaven. Some by the needle-eye understand the wicket of the gate of Jerusalem, no camel with his burden could go in; so it is here. Others by the camel understand a cart-rope, as they think the word we translate camel may be rendered; and as a cart-rope cannot go through a needle's eye, unless it be untwisted and put through the needle's eye thread by thread; neither will any get to heaven, unless the cart-rope of his righteousness be untwisted and dissolved piece-meal; for otherwise his cart-rope will be fit for nothing, but casting anchor on the sandy bank of the law, where his vessel will be broken to pieces, and his soul will sink into the sea of God's wrath; for, By the deeds of the law no flesh living can be justified.

So that, I say, the difficulty here lies not so much in some great thing that you have not power to do, but in some great thing that you have not will to undo: and so the greatest knack of true religion lies in being made willing; and the great power of God is necessary for that end; Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power; and when this day of power comes, then, to receive the offer of Christ for the ends for which he is offered, becomes as easy as ever before it was hard; why, the offer takes hold of the man's heart, and the offering hand takes hold of the receiving hand; like a child that never had a pen in his hand, and cannot write a word, the father takes the child's hand within his, and leads it; so here, the Lord takes the man's hand, and leads it to write down his name, to sign the offer, saying, I accept.

Now, what shall we say? Is there any here to whom the offer is come with power? The external dispensation of this gospel, and revelation of this offer, make it the unquestionable duty of every one of you to accept and receive it; but it is the internal effectual revelation of it only, that will determine you actually to accept and receive it freely, without money, and without price; without terms and conditions on your side; renouncing all the good qualifications you dreamed of having to recommend you to him, and coming to him for all; like a black and ugly monster coming to accept of an offer that can make you fair and clean. It is an offer of all things in Christ; and nothing makes it hard and uneasy but yourself, that you will not quit an all, that is nothing, and take an all, that is all things. The natural man finds it hard, because it is a quitting all the good that he has; but the enlightened soul finds it easy, because it is just a taking all the good that he wants; and when he is taking all things in Christ, he does not find it hard to quit all in himself: why, he sees all things loss and dung, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ; and when he sees that, he finds it is not hard to relinquish a heap of dung for a heap of jewels, and a pearl of infinitely great price in the midst of them. O! is there any here welcoming God's offer? Here is his offering hand, where is your receiving hand? Here is the hand of grace offering, where is the hand of faith accepting? Is any here taking God's offer off his hand? Do you see the offer is to you; to you, man; to you, woman: whether young or old? To you is the word of this salvation sent. The greater gift it is that is offered to you, the less will you be ready to take, as long as you think, it cannot be to me. But to you, I say, it is, man, woman; whoever you are, the promise is to you; the offer is to you, be who you will. Now, are you receiving, are you taking God's offer? Why, if you be doing so, it is easy, through grace, to know that you are doing so. How do you know when you are taking a gift that a man offers you, in an outward sense? The man holds it out in his hand, saying, Take it; and if you receive, then you hold out your hand to his, saying, Content, I will take it: or, if your hand be short, and cannot reach his, yet you will hold it out in testimony of your acceptance, saying, Well, come and give it. So here, in a spiritual sense, if you be taking God's offer off his hand, then your heart will be determined to say, Content, Lord; even so I take the unspeakable Gift that thou offers: or, if your hand be short, or withered, that you think you cannot get the offer embraced as you would, yet you will be stretching out heart and hand as you can, saying, Come, Lord, and give what thou offers; even a whole Christ to be wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, redemption, and all to me. O! is this the language of your soul, I have nothing, but let Christ

Chriſt come and be all to me; I can do nothing, but let Chriſt come and do all for me; I have a world of ſelf-enmity, and innumerable evils, that oppoſe Chriſt within me, but let Chriſt come in and put all to the door that hold him out; I cannot take him, but let him take me, and take my bleſſing for ever? Why, if that were the language of your heart and ſoul, I hope there hath been ſome ſecret power working in you to make you thus far to receive the offer of God.——And thus I have conſidered the offer which the receiving of Chriſt relates unto. Now I told you that as to this act of receiving we would conſider what it relates to, and what it conſiſts in. Having then ſhewed what it relates to, namely, the offer, I come to ſhew,

2*dly*, What it conſiſts in. Here I need not tell you, that receiving and believing are all one, according to John i. 12. and this believing is not a mere notional perſuaſion, or dogmatical opinion concerning Chriſt; for that is too ſlight a thing to be accounted a receiving of Chriſt; but this receiving of Chriſt,

(1.) In general to expreſs it in a word, if poſſible, it may be called (as one of our renowned commentators expreſſes it) a fiducial knowledge; that is, ſuch a knowledge of Chriſt as leads the ſoul to an aſſured confidence in him. Our Shorter Catechiſm defines faith to be, a receiving of Chriſt, and a reſting on him for ſalvation, as he is offered in the goſpel. And this reſting is not ſo much a different act from that of receiving, as it is a continuation of that act of receiving; for when we receive him for ſalvation, we begin our reſting on him: and when we reſt upon him for ſalvation, we continue our receiving of him, or believing in him. The reception, is the reſt begun; and the reſting, is the reception continued. And therefore whatever application of Chriſt is imported in reſting on him, the ſame is imported in receiving of him. And as Chriſt is offered to every one in particular, that hear the goſpel; ſo it is the duty of every one to receive the offer by applying Chriſt to himſelf, for his own particular good, benefit, and ſalvation. I could here lay before you ſeveral terms or expreſſions whereby this faith, or receiving of Chriſt, is held forth in the ſcripture, but I confine myſelf to the text. Receiving of Chriſt is, "a going out of the "whole ſoul, to cloſe with Chriſt for complete "ſalvation to a man's ſelf, as he is offered in "the goſpel;" and ſo the language of faith is, Here is an offer made by God to me, to me myſelf; and therefore I receive Chriſt for ſalvation to myſelf according to the offer, and that with my whole heart and ſoul; for, With the heart man believeth unto righteouſneſs: My heart truſted in him, and I am helped, ſaid the pſalmiſt. Some make faith to be only an act of the will, that they may exclude from the nature of faith that perſuaſion which yet cannot be excluded. In oppoſition to ſuch we aſſert, That, according to ſcripture, faith is an act of the whole ſoul; the underſtanding, will, and affections: and hence theſe, and the like ſcriptures, make faith to be an act of the ſoul, Pſalm lvii. 1. O my God, my ſoul truſteth in thee. Pſal. xvi. 2. O my ſoul, thou haſt ſaid unto the Lord, thou art my Lord. O my ſoul, wait thou only upon God, for my expectation is from him. My ſoul maketh her boaſt in the Lord. My ſoul thirſteth for the living God. Return to thy reſt, O my ſoul. All eminent expreſſions of faith. Now, I ſay, this receiving of Chriſt is the ſoul's cloſing with him; the ſoul's going out toward him; or going in to him as offered, ſo as to become one with him. As you ſee how grafts are knit to the ſtock, ſo as to become one with the ſtock, and one in the ſtock, or elſe it cannot live in a vegetative manner; ſo the ſoul is by faith knit and unite to Chriſt, the root, to be one with him, and one in him: for true faith ſo cloſes with Chriſt, as not merely to have a Chriſt without the man; but a Chriſt within him; and therefore the ſoul, by faith, goes in to Chriſt, ſo as not only to unload his debt, and leave his ſin and guilt upon him, but alſo to ſurrender himſelf into his poſſeſſion and propriety. But that I may further open up this act of receiving Chriſt, I would

(2.) And more particularly conſider the nature thereof in the following qualities of it.

1. This act of receiving Chriſt is a ſpiritual act, in oppoſition to natural acts done by natural wit and ſtrength: men may believe that way with a cradle faith, a natural faith, a common faith, and believe unto perdition; but will never believe to the ſaving of their ſouls. True faith is a ſpiritual act, under the conduct of the Spirit of faith; and therefore faith is called a fruit of the Spirit, Gal. v. 22.; and of the power of the Spirit, even the exceeding greatneſs of his mighty power, Eph. i. 19. It is a fruit and effect of the day of God's power, and the revelation of his arm, Iſa. liii. 1. It is the gift of God, and a fruit of his free grace; and hence we read of ſome that through grace believed, Acts xviii. 27. The power of the Spirit of Chriſt creates it where it is not; and that ſame power of the Spirit excites it where it is. It is a ſpiritual act.

2. This act of receiving Chriſt is a judicious act, in oppoſition to darkneſs and confuſion. The man being acted by the Spirit of faith doth act judiciouſly and diſtinctly, as in a matter of the greateſt concern, with judgment and underſtanding, ſaying, as John vi. 68. To whom ſhall we go, thou haſt the words of eternal life: We believe and are ſure, that thou art that Chriſt the Son of the living God. The man believes the promiſe, and the doctrine of grace and ſalvation ſo judiciouſly, that, as his judgment approves it as a truth, ſo the will accepts it as a good; This is a faithful ſaying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Jeſus Chriſt came into the world to ſave ſinners, of whom I am the chief, 1 Tim. i. 15.

3. This act of receiving Chriſt is a warrantable act, in oppoſition to preſumption and deluſion. True faith acts upon a ſufficient warrant. It acts upon the warrant of an objective ſufficiency; there is a ſufficient Chriſt preſented to him. O the ſufficiency of his perſon, being God-man, in one perſon! the ſufficiency of his offices, whether his general offices, as a Mediator, a Surety, a Redeemer; or his particular offices, as a Prophet, Prieſt, and King; the ſufficiency of his righteouſneſs, his doing and dying, his obedience and ſatisfaction; the ſufficiency of his power, being able to ſave to the uttermoſt; the ſufficiency of his will, while he proclaims his good-will towards men, and that God is in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf. Beſides, faith acts upon the warrant of a general diſpenſation of grace, through Chriſt, in the external revelation of the word, where the elect are not characterized more than others, but life and ſalvation through Chriſt held out to ſinners of mankind without diſtinction of nation, ſtate, or condition; and ſo in an indefinite way. Thus run all the promiſes, except theſe that are made to believers, or ſuch as have grace already; to them indeed the promiſes are definite, as alſo they are definite to the elect in the purpoſe of God; but in the external diſpenſation of the goſpel, they are indefinite and general, Acts ii. 32. Rom. ix. 4. And as the promiſe is indefinite, ſo the call is univerſal, whether by exhortations, invitations, counſels, or commands, to all and every one to come and receive Chriſt, and all his ſure mercies, freely. And upon ſuch like warrants as theſe does faith act.

4. This act of receiving Chriſt, it is an adventuring act, in oppoſition to diſpondency, diffidence, and diſtruſt: hence it is called a boldneſs; We have boldneſs to enter into the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus. It is a venturing our ſouls, our life, upon the blood of the Son of God, and upon the promiſe of God in Chriſt. To receive Chriſt, and believe, is in effect to ſay, I adventure my ſoul upon nothing in the world, but upon the promiſe of a God that I have provoked, and been an enemy to all my days; I have nothing but the word of this God, and yet I muſt venture upon it my everlaſting all. It is an adventuring grace, like Peter upon the boiſterous water, with this in his mouth and heart, Maſter, ſave me, Mat. xiv. 30. To venture upon the promiſe of a provoked God, and to believe him to be a God in Chriſt reconciled, according to his word, upon the account of the ranſom he hath found out, and the propitiation he hath ſet forth; here is the boldneſs of faith. It is a venturing act.

5. This act of receiving Chriſt, it is an evangelical act, in oppoſition to a legal faith. It is evangelical in the ground of it: legal faith acts upon the ground of a legal inherent ſtrength, and perſonal righteouſneſs; but true faith upon a borrowed ſtrength, and an imputed righteouſneſs of another, ſaying, Surely in the Lord only have I righteouſneſs and ſtrength; and ſo it is a ſelf-emptying grace, ſtripping the man of his own righteouſneſs, of his own ſtrength, and taking him intirely off his own bottom. It is evangelical in the order of it, receiving him as a Jeſus, and then as a Lord; firſt for juſtification, and then for ſanctification: legal faith perverts that goſpel-order, ſeeking ſanctification firſt, that upon that bottom it may build its juſtification; Seeking righteouſneſs, as it were, by the works of the law, Rom. ix. 32. It is evangelical in its fruit; legal faith is a fruitleſs faith, it brings forth no acceptable fruit, either from a right principle or to a right end; and ſo all its fruits of good works are rejected, as unprofitable and vain: but true faith brings virtue and good from its object; ſuch as, eaſe to the conſcience, quiet to the mind, holineſs to the heart, and holy luſtre to the whole life; when faith touches, if it were but the hem of Chriſt's garment, virtue comes out, and heals the ſoul; grace comes forth, and purifies the heart; yea, it brings forth all the good fruit of goſpel-grace; Out of his fulneſs have we all received and grace for grace, John i. 16. Faith is the receiving grace, and other graces are received by it; it fetches them out of Chriſt's fulneſs; it brings out repentance, and then it is a penitential faith: goſpel repentance is in it, and with it, and after it, but not before it. As true faith is a penitent faith; even ſo it is a humble faith, a joyful faith, a thankful faith, an obediential faith, a working faith; yea, faith is the root of all theſe fruits that natively grow upon it, and go along with it.

6. This act of receiving Chriſt, it is a particular, appropriating, fiducial act, in oppoſition to the general doubtſom faith of the Papiſts, which we have abjured in our National Covenant. The man that believes, truly believes applicatively. The man that receives Chriſt rightly, receives him with a particular appropriation to himſelf; juſt as a man eats and drinks for his own particular benefit; and hence faith is called an eating of the fleſh, and drinking of the blood of the Son of God; that is, he takes home Chriſt, his merit, righteouſneſs, mediation, and the benefits thereof to his own ſoul. And thus it is alſo a fiducial act, importing an aſſured confidence, according to the meaſure of it, in oppoſition to a doubtſom faith. A doubtſom, wavering faith is not the faith that receives Chriſt; nay, it is a faith that receives nothing, if we will take God's word for it, James i. 5, 6, 7. If any man lack wiſdom, let him aſk it of God;—but let him aſk in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the ſea driven with the wind and toſſed; for let not that man think that he ſhall receive any thing of the Lord. Why then, a doubtſom faith receives nothing, far leſs ſuch a prize as Chriſt. I know how ſome have been reproached on this head, notwithſtanding of this plain ſcriptural doctrine, as if they aſſerted, that they had no pity upon doubting believers. Really we ſhould have no pity upon ourſelves if we ſhould ſay, that no believers have their doubts. Well, ſay you, may not a man that hath faith have doubts? Yea, to be ſure he may; but his doubts are not his faith, but his unbelief; and who ever ſaid but a believer may have much unbelief? I would aſk ſuch perſons, may not a man that hath grace, have corruption? And yet you will own that his corruption is none of his grace; nay, it is the direct oppoſite of grace: even ſo, a man that hath faith may have doubts, but yet his doubts are not his faith; but his ſin, his unbelief, and the quite oppoſite of faith: there is no doubting in his faith, even as there is no corruption in grace; they are antipodes. And it is not by his doubting, but by his believing, that he receives any thing from God. The Lord deliver us from juſtifying a doubtſom faith which Chriſt reproves; O thou of little faith, wherefore doſt thou doubt? Some make doubting a mark of faith; but it is ſuch a mark of faith as corruption is a mark of grace, as in the following ſenſe; Why, ſay you, there is a notorious profligate ſinner, that ſays he never doubted all his days, but ſtill had a good hope; that is indeed a ſign that he hath no faith: whereas the poor ſoul that finds a world of doubts may yet be a true believer. Very true; and therefore I ſay it is ſuch a mark as corruption is a mark of grace, in this ſenſe; there is an impenitent wretch that ſays he never ſaw what they call corruption within him all his days; nay, he bleſſes God he is a good Chriſtian, a good neighbour, and hath always had a good heart to God: there is an evidence that he hath no grace: whereas the poor ſoul that finds corruption working, and ſin raging within him, may yet be a true ſaint. Thus as corruption felt may be a mark of grace, becauſe grace fights againſt corruption; even ſo, doubting felt may be a mark of faith, becauſe faith fights againſt doubting, and oppoſes it, as being quite contrary to its very nature. But will any any therefore put doubting into the nature of faith, as if it were essential to faith to doubt? Or, will any therefore exclude persuasion from the nature of faith, as if it were not essential for faith to be persuaded, because the man that has faith is sometimes doubting? Just as if it were not in the nature of the eye to see, because the man that hath eyes is sometimes sleeping: nay, we say, it is in the nature of faith to see, and be assured, and persuaded, because it is a fiducial act; hence these and the like scriptures, Rom. iv. 20, 21. He staggered not at the promise of God, through unbelief, but was strong in the faith, giving glory to God; being FULLY PERSUADED, that he that had promised was able to perform. And Heb. xi. 13. it is said of all the Old Testament believers, to whom notwithstanding the revelation of the object of faith was not so clearly made as under the New Testament, that they received the promise: well, but what sort of an act was that receiving act of theirs? why, it follows, they were PERSUADED of them, and embraced them.

The common sense of mankind usually takes faith, or believing, for a persuasion: I believe such a thing; that is, I am persuaded, or assured of it; I do not doubt it: I believe such a man; that is, I am persuaded it is truth that he says: if the honest man give me his word, his oath, his bond, this fortifies the persuasion, and certifies the person that hath ado with him. So here, to believe, is to be persuaded, assured, and certified upon the word, the oath, the bond, the promise, the covenant, yea, the blood and righteousness of a God; and he that believeth upon such a ground, as all true believers do, must believe with persuasion, according to the measure of faith: if it be a weak faith, it is a weak persuasion; if a strong faith, a strong persuasion. And it is not a natural persuasion, a man's persuading himself, and so no more of it; nay, it is supernatural, and comes of God, which the former does not; Gal. iv. 8. This persuasion cometh not of him that calleth you; intimating, that right persuasion cometh of God.

This act of receiving Christ then is a fiducial act, a fiducial persuasion, which some call a fiducial assurance. I know that one great ground of mistake in this point is, the confounding of fiducial assurance with evidential assurance. The former is the assurance of faith, and in the nature of it; the latter is the assurance of sense, and the effect of faith; and is not properly faith at all, but sense: they differ in their acts; by fiducial assurance, we receive Christ as ours; by evidential assurance, we know him to be ours: the former every believer hath, when he acts faith; the latter many believers want, even when they act faith; because, though they may be conscious that they are acting, yet they may not be conscious of the quality of the act, if it is saving or not.—Again, this fiducial and evidential assurance differ, as in their acts, so in their order; we first believe by a fiducial persuasion, and then we are sure by an evidential persuasion; the one is the cause, the other the effect: the persuasion that is in faith, is like heat in the fire; the persuasion that is after faith, is like fire in the room, that is the effect of the other.—They differ in their object; the object of fiducial assurance is without the man, and looks to the promise of God, and righteousness of Christ; but the object and foundation of evidential assurance is within the man, and looks to the work of God within; such as graces, attainments, and experiences.—They differ in their effects; the effect of fiducial persuasion is justification, the effect of evidential persuasion is consolation: a man is not justified by his evidential knowledge, or by knowing that Christ is his; but he is justified by his fiducial knowledge, or his receiving and resting on Christ for salvation, as offered in the gospel. By his knowledge, shall my righteous Servant justify many. Faith is a fiducial act.

7. In a word, It is an interesting act, whereby a man is interested in Christ and all that he is worth; insomuch that upon his believing, all his debts are paid: as a woman that is in debt, upon her marriage to a rich man, all her debt is paid; because, by her marriage, all her debt is transferred upon the husband that hath married her: so the soul, being married to Christ, hath all his debt paid; the soul being now under the covert of its husband, is not answerable for his own debt, nay, hath not his own sins to answer for, but Christ the husband answers for them.—And thus much concerning the act of faith in receiving Christ; it is a spiritual act, a warrantable act, a venturing act, an evangelical act, and a fiducial act, as also an interesting act. I come now to consider,

Secondly, The OBJECT of this act, namely, Christ; As ye have received CHRIST: which admits of a double interpretation. 1. By Christ may be meant Christ doctrinally considered; or the doctrine of the gospel of Christ. 2. By Christ may be meant Christ personally considered; or Christ himself received in and by that doctrine.

1. I say, by Christ may be meant Christ doctrinally, or the doctrine of the gospel of Christ, as Eph. iv. 20. Ye have not so learned Christ; that is, ye have been otherwise taught the doctrine of the gospel. And whoever views accurately the context here, both the verse preceding the text, and the verse following, as formerly explained, will find, that by Christ here may evidently be understood the doctrine of Christ, or the gospel. And indeed none can receive Christ, and reject his doctrine; but, in receiving Christ, must first receive his doctrine, and so Christ therein; and so he that receiveth Christ is said to believe the gospel; and every true receiver of Christ is a receiver of his doctrine, because that is the seed by which he is conceived and born, and it is the milk by which he is brought up and nourished to eternal life, 1 Peter i. 23. chap ii. 2. I need not here stand to commend the gospel doctrine. It is enough to say, that by the Lord's blessing upon it, it is the seed to conceive, and the milk to nourish all the children of God. Why? it is the channel in which the Spirit runs; Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Gal. iii. 2.—It is the organ of the almighty power of God; I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God to salvation, to every one that believeth: his power in working faith, his power in measuring faith, and his power in saving sinners in a way of believing, is put forth in the gospel; Why? For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith, Rom. i. 16. 17. The law hath convinced many, but never converted one to this day; and a gospel minister may preach the law for many good ends, but it is the gospel part of preaching that doth the business, buſineſs, if the power of God be going along with it; for the goſpel only is the channel wherein the converting power of the Spirit runs; Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God: wherein Chriſt is revealed in order to his being received. It is not the goſpel of itſelf, but the Chriſt revealed therein that heals the ſinner. It is like the ſerpent lifted up upon the pole in the wilderneſs; the pole did not heal, but the ſerpent upon the pole, that healed the ſting; but the pole held it up to be ſeen: Even ſo, it is not the pole of the goſpel that heals, but Chriſt lifted up upon the pole. It is Chriſt that is to be received, but he is to be received as offered in the goſpel; and the goſpel holds out Chriſt to the eye of faith: it is with reſpect to Chriſt what the pole was with reſpect to the ſerpent; and therefore they that pull down this pole of the goſpel in any reſpect, they take away Chriſt from the eye of the wounded ſoul, the ſtinged ſinner; they that pull down the pole, they take away the ſerpent out of view that the ſinner cannot ſee it. Caſt down Chriſt they cannot, but they will pull down the pole, and ſo take him out of ſight. They that are concerned to have, or to give others a ſight of Chriſt, will be concerned to have the pole ſtreight that holds him up; I mean, the goſpel ſound and clear that holds him forth.

Now, there is no good merchant for the kingdom of heaven, but, for the treaſure's ſake that is hid in the field, will buy the whole field; Mat. xiii. 44. The kingdom of heaven is like a treaſure hid in a field; the which, when a man hath found, he hideth; and for joy thereof goeth and ſelleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field. Well, did the man buy the treaſure only and not the field; as many think they can take Chriſt, and reject the goſpel? No; he went and bought the field where the treaſure was. The treaſure is Chriſt; the field is the goſpel; and he bought, he received the goſpel; and ſo had the treaſure in it. Every true believer values the goſpel at a very high rate; and the reaſon is, becauſe it is the field where the treaſure is hid, where Chriſt is to be had. And yet withal many may receive the goſpel-doctrine by a dogmatical faith, an opinionative faith, and not receive Chriſt himſelf. This is a faith that thouſands periſh by; but true faith receives the goſpel, and Chriſt in it. Therefore,

2. By Chriſt here, as the object of faith, we are to underſtand Chriſt himſelf to be received; Chriſt perſonally conſidered. The object of faith is Chriſt the Son of God, not excluding the Father, and the Holy Ghoſt; for each perſon of the glorious Trinity is the object of faith; Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, one God; but this God would be as inacceſſible to us as to the fallen angels, were it not through Chriſt. Chriſt, you know, ſignifies ANOINTED, and to receive Chriſt is to receive him as the Meſſiah, the Sent, Sealed, and Anointed of God, Iſa. lxi. 1. His anointing ſignifies his ſingular ordination to be our Redeemer, and to perform the work of our redemption; for, Him hath God the Father ſealed, John vi. 27.; SEALED, by the ſupereminent unction of the Holy Ghoſt, and authorized of the Father to it: he did not undertake this work preſumptuouſly, without a call, but by the ordination and appointment of God. His being the Chriſt, points out his eminent qualifications for the work of our redemption; as he is a Redeemer of God's ſending, ſo of God's qualifying; He hath laid help upon one that is mighty; one that is able of himſelf, and enabled of his Father to work out our ſalvation and redemption work: and ſo to receive Chriſt is to receive God's Sent, God's Anointed, God's Sealed one. And here faith views the divine authority of his commiſſion in that he is given of the Father to be a Prophet, Prieſt, and King; and came from the Father in his name and authority. And hence there is nothing that Chriſt commends more in the New Teſtament than this faith that believes his divine miſſion, his divine ordination to this mediatory work; as John xvii. 8. I have given unto them the words which thou gaveſt unto me, and they have received them, and have known ſurely that I came out from thee; and they have believed that thou didſt ſend me. To receive Chriſt then, is to receive God's Ambaſſador, God's Anointed; and that is a noble faith.

But again, to conſider the termination of faith upon this glorious object; the man that receives Chriſt, receives him as a living root, and as a glorious head: as a living root, in whom he is implanted; and as a glorious head, to whom he is united. Faith goes in to him; and ſo by faith there is a ſaving implantation in him, a ſpiritual union to him: and ſo this receiving of him makes all that is in Chriſt yours. If a man ſhould look for life and righteouſneſs from Chriſt without union to Chriſt, it is as if a woman ſhould look for an eſtate from a man by conveyance, and not by marriage: now, God gives not any ſaving benefit to ſinners by conveyance, but by marriage and union with Chriſt. Many indeed have a great deal of gifts, parts, and abilities; and ſuch knowledge as peradventure you may call it revelation; theſe things are given to men through Chriſt, but with this difference; ſome, they receive theſe things from Chriſt as a ſteward, that may diſpenſe them; but not from him as a head, flowing in to them as members. To natural men, and wicked men, theſe things come from Chriſt as a ſteward; but they come not from him as a head of union; for theſe only that are united to him by faith have ſpiritual bleſſings flowing to them from Chriſt, as the head, to them as members. It is true, that unions are great myſteries; the union of God and man, into one Chriſt, is a great myſtery; the union of Chriſt, and all his members unto one body, is a great myſtery; the apoſtle calls it a great myſtery, ſaying, I ſpeak concerning Chriſt and his church, Eph. v. 32. The believer receiving Chriſt, is in him as a member is in the head, and as a branch is in the root; and in him ſo as that he lives by the life of Chriſt, and is righteous by the righteouſneſs of Chriſt, and is acted by the Spirit of Chriſt. Neither is this union to Chriſt by receiving him leſſened by this, that Chriſt is in heaven, and we upon the earth; for as the union between man and wife is not leſſened the one towards another, though they be a thouſand miles aſunder (though the communion is not ſo much:) ſo here, the union that we have to Chriſt, by receiving him, is not leſſened by his being in heaven, and we upon the earth: It is true, the communion is not ſo cloſe, nor ſo intimate, as it would be, if we were in the ſame place with him; but the union is not leſſened; they are united and married to the perſon of Chriſt by receiving him.

Now,

Now, the object of faith being Christ's person, and the receiving of Christ, a closing with this person, here is the honour of all the saints. What a comfortable and honourable station is it to be a member united to this glorious Head! And therefore, before I pass this, I would acquaint you with a thing which you will find true in your experience, namely, many are very much troubled and tried in seeking this and the other benefit from Christ, such as the pardon of sin, and mortifying of corruption; they seek and are never the better; and what is the reason? Even because they begin at the wrong end of the gospel; at the wrong end of religion and Christianity: they seek the things of Christ but not the person of Christ; they look out for his graces and benefits without closing with his person. O! says one, for such and such a benefit from Christ, and such and such graces of his Spirit; very well, but would you have them from Christ without union to him? Would ye have blessings from Christ without Christ himself? Why, what though you should get some blessings from him, if you live and die without him. O, says one that goes to a sacrament, O for some communion with Christ! very good; but here is the falsity; you would have communion without union to him, and that cannot be. Union to his person is the foundation of true communion with him in his benefits; and therefore you may seek communion with him, and yet neglect the foundation. You cannot have true communion without union by faith, receiving Christ himself; for as the graft cannot have sap from the root unless it be set into the stock; if it be not ingrafted it cannot have communion with the root; so neither can you have these graces and comforts that you would have in a way of communion with him, unless it be first in a way of union to him. And therefore, let it be your great business, through grace, to close with Christ himself, the person of Christ, as he is handed to you in the doctrine of the gospel: never rest till the offering hand of the gospel, and the receiving hand of faith meet together; for when Christ is received, then, and not till then, is there a real union; and this is the foundation of all true and spiritual communion.—Thus much shall suffice concerning the object, namely, Christ doctrinally and personally considered. But the object will be further cleared by the following purpose, namely,

Thirdly, The CAPACITIES or respects in which Christ is to be received, namely, as a JESUS, and a LORD. There are three letters of Christ's name here that point him out beyond all other names in the world. I have formerly told you that Christ is offered in these capacities, and I have just now spoke of the first letter of his name, viz. CHRIST, the Anointed of God; and indeed it is not found faith that doth not take him as the Sent of God, and qualified of God for the whole redemption work. But the other two letters of his name remain yet to be touched at. And you may consider them under this view as the two-fold capacities in which we are to receive Christ, namely, as Jesus the Lord. 1. As he is Jesus. 2. As he is the Lord.

1. As he is JESUS, that is, a Saviour. This is the first name given to Christ in the New Testament, Mat. i. 21. His name shall be called JESUS, because he shall save his people from their sin; and it is the best name that sinners can hear tell of; it is a name above all names, both for the glory of him that bears it, and the comfort of them that hear of it. Now, to receive Christ as a Jesus, is to receive him as a singularly mighty Saviour, that is able to save to the utmost, as appears by his doing, dying, suffering, satisfying, conquering; and surely, he that was able to atone God, and conquer the devil, is able to save sinners. To receive him as a Jesus, is to receive him as an universal Saviour; I mean, not only in the apostle's sense, 1 Tim. iv. 10. that he is the Saviour of all men, but especially of them that believe; but I mean in respect of the salvation that he brings to them whom he makes to believe in him; and so I mean, in the sense of the same apostle, Acts xiii. 39. By him all that believe are saved and justified from all things, from which they could not be justified by the law of Moses. What law of Moses? Why, as his ceremonial law could not do the business; for, It was impossible that the blood of bulls or goats should take away sin, satisfy offended justice, or pacify an wounded conscience; so his moral law could not justify; for we, having broken and transgressed it, instead of justifying us it condemns us; therefore, What the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, that Christ by the gospel does; he justifies from all things; from all guilt, so as the believer can never become liable to the sanction of the law. Some would have the believer justified only from some things, as it were, and still liable to the lash of the law; but we maintain the apostle's doctrine, that the believer is justified from all things, so as nothing can be laid to his charge; and seeing it is God that justifieth, who is he that can condemn, or make him liable thereunto? To receive him as a Jesus, then, is to receive him as a complete Saviour, a perfect Saviour; that saves meritoriously, by the price of his blood and his mediation for us; and efficaciously, by the power of his Spirit and his effectual operation in us; that saves from the law as a covenant, both in its commanding and condemning power; that saves from death, hell, and wrath. But SALVATION is a great word that we cannot now enlarge upon; only, to receive Christ as a Jesus, is to receive and rest upon him alone for salvation, and all the salvation that we need, temporal, spiritual, or eternal, in a suitableness to his promise and offer in the word.

2. As he is the Lord; which imports a desire to be subject to him, as he is a King; and to be conquered by him, as well as saved by him. Christ hath upon his vesture and thigh this name written, KING of kings, and LORD of lords: He is the King and Head of his church; the government of all is upon his shoulder, particularly the government of Zion, where he hath left officers to rule under him, according to the laws of his kingdom, and in a suitableness to the liberties of his subjects, pointed out in his word; and to have any hand in marring the beautiful order of his government that he hath appointed, or incroach upon the liberties of his people, doth ill become any that profess to receive him as a Lord; as little doth it become them to say in effect, Our Lord delays his coming, and so begin to smite their fellow servants, and so fall out with one another, especially when a common enemy is creeping in that would would ſubject the government of Chriſt's houſe intirely to a ſecular power, whether it be patrons or prelates, princes or popes. Surely they that receive Chriſt as a Lord and King over themſelves will not be careleſs or indifferent about his lordſhip and government over Zion as a King and Head of his church; for if they be careleſs about his government that way, whether it ſtand or fall, they give evidence of their never truly receiving him as a Lord.

But more particularly, to receive him as a Lord, is to cloſe with him for ſanctification as well as ſalvation, and to welcome him in his kingly office, to ſubdue ſin, conquer Satan, and deſtroy the works of the devil. A true believer does receive Chriſt not only as he is a Saviour, but as he is a Lord. Conſider both theſe capacities jointly, and they may ſearch every corner of your heart. The eye of a loſt ſinner is firſt upon Chriſt as a Saviour; ſo God propounds him, and ſo we may come to him; but notice, there may be much ſelf-love in ſeeking Chriſt, a Saviour, for ſalvation; for ſalvation may be deſired merely out of ſelf-love, which is evident, if we are for dividing Chriſt, for taking the Saviour, and leaving out the Lord. Many would divide between his ſalvation and his dominion; they would have Chriſt as a Saviour, to ſave from wrath; but not as a Lord, to deſtroy their luſts and ſins. But herein true receiving of Chriſt will diſcover itſelf; the Lord makes the man as weary of his load of corruption, as he is weary of his load of condemnation. The man that is weary of condemnation only, would have Chriſt as a Saviour; but he that is weary of corruption alſo, would have Chriſt as a Lord. But when the heart would have water as well as blood, then it is in a right temper; when the man would have water to purify the heart, as well as blood to pacify the conſcience. Our deſire of Chriſt for ſalvation, may be tried with this touch-ſtone, Whether we have the ſame deſire for Chriſt, the Lord; as for Chriſt, the Jeſus.

I think it is impoſſible there can be any more uprightneſs in your deſire after the ſalvation of Chriſt, than there is of a deſire after the dominion of Chriſt. Faith, whatever it is, will bring a man out from under the commanding power of ſin, as well as from under the condemning power of it. And however a believer may ly in darkneſs, yet I conceive, that ſoul is out of danger who is made willing to receive Chriſt both as a Saviour and a Lord; and ſo, willing to receive, out of his hand, poiſon to kill his luſts; as well as pardon to remove his guilt: the deſire of pardon of ſin, and the deſire of purification of heart, bear proportion; none can truly take Chriſt, as a Saviour for juſtification; but they will alſo truly take him, as a Lord, for ſanctification. This we maintain, let calumny ſay what it will; as if our doctrine were an enemy to holineſs *! What can be the ground of the calumny, I cannot know, unleſs it be that men cannot diſtinguiſh betwixt ſaving faith, and juſtifying faith; for ſaving faith (of which we are now ſpeaking) reſpects Chriſt in all his offices, as a Prophet, Prieſt, and King; but when we ſpeak of faith merely as it is juſtifying, we maintain, againſt all the ſubtil Popery in the world, that it reſpects Chriſt only as a Prieſt, as a ſacrifice, and propitiation; but not Chriſt as a King. For, to make that act of faith, that receives Chriſt as a Lord, to be the juſtifying act of faith, is the very ſoul of Popery, that builds juſtification upon ſanctification, or upon ſanctifying faith: whereas it is the receiving of Chriſt as a Prieſt, that alone juſtifies before God. It is true, faith in Chriſt as a Saviour and a Lord, go hand in hand together, they are inſeparably connected; even as the eye and the ear are both joined together in one head; yet it is not the office of the eye to hear, or of the ear to ſee, no; but it is the office of the eye to ſee, and of the ear to hear; even ſo, though faith in Chriſt as a Jeſus and as a Lord go together in one and the ſame believer, and at one and the ſame time, yet they have their different offices: Chriſt as a King and Lord is not the object of juſtifying faith, but only Chriſt as a Prieſt and Saviour. It is not Chriſt as the Lord, ſubduing my ſin, that is the matter of my juſtification before God; but Chriſt as a Prieſt paying all my debt: it is not my perſonal righteouſneſs, even in my gracious ſubjection to Chriſt as a Lord, that can be the ground of juſtification; but it is the righteouſneſs of Chriſt alone as a Prieſt, his doing and dying, that is the ground of juſtification. And therefore it is not faith dealing with Chriſt as a Lord that juſtifies, but faith's dealing with Chriſt as a Prieſt, a Saviour, and a complete Righteouſneſs. This is the doctrine of the word; which, when our Reformers began to publiſh, they were branded as enemies to holineſs and good works; and if ſomething of this be not at the root of many reproaches in our day, I know not what it is; and if this be the ground of theſe reproaches, we may gladly bear them as our glory.

But now, we are ſpeaking of the object of faith, more largely taken, in its latitude, as it is ſaving faith; which, we ſay, hath a reſpect to Chriſt in all his offices, and particularly, as in our text, it receives him as a Saviour and a Lord both; and truly, the receiving of Chriſt as a Lord, for ſanctification, is the beſt mark imaginable of right receiving of Chriſt as a Saviour, for juſtification. You may meaſure your faith and intereſt in Chriſt, not by the degree of your perſuaſion concerning him as a Saviour, but rather by the degree of his virtue and power in you as a Lord: it is better to meaſure it by the depth of his work in you, than by the height of your confidence in him, which may be too proud and bold. If you ſhould meet a man travailing upon the way, and should ask him how many hours high the sun is, you needed not marvel, if instead of looking up to the sun to see how high it is, he should look down to your shadow to see how short it is; for he can tell that way better than looking upon the sun itself: even so, if a man would judge how much of Christ is in him, the best way to try is rather to look downward than upward: look in to your heart and see what dash your pride hath got, and what abatement your corruption is brought under; for the shorter these dark shadows are in you, the higher is the Sun of righteousness. Now, the grand corruption of the heart of man, the great root-sin, which sets itself against Christ, as a Lord, I will tell you what it is, it is that lord of all mis-rule SELF; that is the lord that lords it over you; and all other sins are but the brats of Self: they are but sub-servants, under-servants to this great lord of self-love, self-pride, and self-righteousness. Now, a true believer is righteous by the righteousness of another; he lives by the life of another; he is acted by the spirit of another; and therefore he, of any man in the world, should have least of self in him; because Christ, as Lord, doth absolutely set himself against this great corruption. And therefore, if you would know one excellent way of judging of Jesus Christ the Lord his being in you, it is by the breaking and casting down of self; for the more full that a man is of self, the more empty is he of Christ; and the more full he is of Christ, the more empty he is of self; for the Lord-self, and the Lord-Christ, cannot stand together: the lordship of Christ and the lordship of Self are inconsistent; when you receive the Lord-Christ, then the Lord-Self is unhorsed and thrown down.——Thus much of the believer's character and dignity, as a receiver of Christ Jesus the Lord.

* The riſe and foundation of this injurious accuſation may be ſeen narrated, p. 70, 129, 149, 150, 178.——It hath been the fate of the witneſſes for the truths of God, in every period of the church, eſpecially ſince the commencement of Chriſtianity, to be traduced and reproached with the moſt ſcurrulous epithets and approbrious names. The bleſſed Author of the Chriſtian religion himſelf did not eſcape the obloquy, contumely, and cenſures of the world; and his diſciples were accuſed with being turbulent and peſtilent fellows, and ſuch as turned the world up ſide down. When it fared ſo with them, we need not be ſurprized that their ſucceſſors ſhould be flouted at, mal-treated, and evil ſpoken of by thoſe who do not favour the truth as it is in Jeſus.—About the time when our Author delivered theſe diſcourſes, an irreligious diſpoſition, and legal ſpirit was like to ſpread univerſally, and had arrived to ſuch a pitch, that many could not endure to hear ſound doctrine; and the teachers and defenders thereof were the objects of the reſentment both of the infidel and legaliſt. As our worthy Author was ſincerely attached to the doctrines of the goſpel, he could not but be ſincerely affected and truly alarmed at every incroachment upon the ſacred truths of his ever glorious Maſter; ſo this led him frequently to notice, in his public appearances, the aſperſions caſt upon him and others, in inculculating the moſt important truths of the goſpel of Chriſt, particularly their being derided as favourers of Antinomianiſm, and enemies to holineſs, for their befriending the freedom of the doctrine of grace, in aſſerting the neceſſity of ſinners dying to the law, in point of JUSTIFICATION, in order to their living to God, in point of SANCTIFICATION.

II. The second general head is, To speak of the believer's duty, having received Christ Jesus the Lord, then to walk in him. You have heard of the two tables of the law, and if you never heard of the two tables of the gospel, you may see them in our text; the first is to receive Christ, and the second is to walk in him. Though I make not the gospel, strictly taken, to be a doctrine of commandments and precepts; yet, where the law is in the hand of Christ, and where Christ is the ALPHA and OMEGA, there we will find the two tables of the gospel; Christ is All in all; and these two ALLS make the two tables of the gospel. Or, if the two tables of the gospel must answer to the tables of the law, then consider the law as a covenant, or as a rule, and we get both fulfilled in Christ; the law as a covenant is fulfilled by receiving Christ; the law as a rule is fulfilled by walking in him: and so the two tables of the law, in either of these respects, are answered by these two tables of the gospel; for Christ is the end of the law for righteousness, to every one that believeth.

I must only here touch a little, 1. At the denomination of the duty, it is a walking. 2. The qualification of it, it is a walking IN CHRIST. As to the

First, The denomination of this duty, it is a walking. I know many things might be said in running the parallel; but I do not design to squeeze the metaphor beyond the scope of the text, but just to notice what is intended therein. And there are these three things that I apprehend are intended. It plainly denotes, 1. Practice; 2. Progress; 3. Permanency.

1. It denotes practice, or practicalness. And this is opposed to a dogmatical faith, where there is no practical religion. These that have received Christ they ought to be practical Christians, practical believers; As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so WALK ye in him: let your faith be a working faith. As by the same hand that we receive a thing, by the same hand we work; so your faith, if it be saving, then as it receives Christ in the promise of the gospel, so it will work by love in the precept of the law: if it receive Christ in the covenant, it will work by love in the commandment; Gal. v. 6. In Christ Jesus, neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but faith that works by love: Why? his commandments are not grievous.

QUEST. If we have received Christ, what need more; Christ hath done all, and therefore we need do nothing?

ANSW. Indeed many good principles are abused in the world; e. g. Christ hath done all for his people in point of merit, and he does all in his people in point of power; and so without him we can do nothing: here is a good principle; but thence to infer, that the duty and lawful use of means is not ours, is to abuse this good principle to licentiousness.—When sin abounds, grace much more abounds; there is a good principle; but thence to infer, Let us sin, that grace may abound, is to abuse that good principle, and a turning the grace of God to wantonness.—We are justified by faith, without the works of the law; there is a notable gospel principle; but thence to infer, that a justified man needs not be conform to the law, here is a good principle abused; for, Do we make void the law, through faith? God forbid; nay, we establish the law.

There are two things concerning a justified person, which call for practical religion; the one is, God glorifies him, and the other is, he is to glorify God. God glorifies him; for, Whom he justifies, them he also glorifies, Rom. viii. 30. But then God is to be glorified as well as he, and will be glorified by all that are justified; and therefore, that they may glorify God, they are to bring forth good fruit. And, on this account, may the Lord deliver us from a dead, unfruitful, and unprofitable faith.

There are four great reasons why they that have received Christ, by a gospel-faith, should walk in him, by a gospel-practice; namely, because hereby the power of faith is seen; hereby the trial of faith is made; hereby the beauty of it appears to others; and the comfort of it accrues to ourselves.

1. Hereby the power of faith is seen, in that it leads to a gospel-practice How is it that its power is thus seen? Why, even in opposing many and strong lusts: though it should not conquer them, yet it opposes them; and to oppose and fight against sin, in scripture language, is to conquer it: this is a fighting the good fight of faith. The power of faith is seen in a gospel-practice, while faith is thus exercised in sowring the sweetest sin, in bearing the greatest burden, and making easy the hardest commandment. When Christ speaks of doing the greatest things, then he compares faith to the least things; when he speaks of removing mountains; then he compares faith to a grain of mustard- muſtard-ſeed: and indeed faith makes a man to remove mountains of pride, and ſets a man's hatred upon that which he loved; and ſets a man's love upon that which he hated. How ſhall a heavy-weight of lead be made eaſy to a child? Why, if you do not pare the lead, to make the weight leſs, then you muſt add ſtrength to the child; and if he has more ſtrength, though the weight be not pared, yet it makes no matter, becauſe the child hath ſtrength to bear it: even ſo, God in the goſpel makes the command light and eaſy; how ſo? not by paring, or abating the commandment, or diminiſhing the rule, (that is our corrupt way;) but God does it by giving more of faith, and more of Chriſt.——And ſo the power of faith is ſeen in carrying a man through the greateſt duties and trials.

2. Hereby the trial of faith is made; I ſay, by a goſpel-practice. Many judge of the truth of their faith by the degrees of their confidence; but the beſt trial is by the degrees of their conqueſt; the degrees of their conqueſt over ſin; the degrees of their conqueſts over their luſts and corruptions. As I ſaid before, you may know the height of the ſun by the ſhortneſs of your ſhadow, more than by the degrees of altitude. How much doth a man believe? even as much as his faith purifies his heart, and mortifies his luſts; ſo much does he believe, and no more. It is true, a man may be believing in Chriſt for juſtification, and coming under the covert of his blood, while in the mean time he ſees no meaſure of ſanctification; but on the contrary his heart full of hell, and enmity, and corruption; yea, but in the mean time what is that light wherein he ſees his own vileneſs, but ſanctifying light? And what is that grace whereby he is loathing and abhorring himſelf, but ſanctifying grace? And ſo when juſtifying faith is buſy flying under the covert of blood, ſanctifying grace is not idle; nay, the more that faith acts upon Chriſt for juſtification, the more will it act in purification. Again,

3. Another reaſon why a goſpel-faith ſhould have a goſpel-practice is, becauſe hereby the beauty of faith appears to others, and our light ſhines before men, ſo as they ſeeing our good works, do glorify God. The beauty of faith is ſeen by others, not in faith itſelf, but in the goſpel-walk and practice that it produces. If a man would know in the morning whether the ſun be riſen in the eaſt, he will readily look to the weſt, and ſee whether he can notice the reflection of the ſun-beams upon the top of a houſe, or the top of a hill; he looks the quite contrary way from the ſun; and yet he does it ingeniouſly enough: even ſo here, if a man would know you to be a believer, he will not look in to your faith, but will look out to your life, or look back to your converſation, and ſee what marks your faith makes there; hence faith the apoſtle, Shew me thy faith by thy works. Faith and works are contrary in point of juſtification, and yet when a man would ſee your faith, he will look to the contrary part, and ſee how it appears in your walk and work; and if it appears not there, the beauty of faith is not ſeen.

4. Hereby the comfort of faith accrues to yourſelves: even by a goſpel-practice you have the comfort of faith; for, Great peace have all they that love his law; the fruit of righteouſneſs is peace. There is no greater comfort in the world than for a man to get, by faith, maſtery over ſin, and grace to do duty for God. Whatever a man does for God, leaving ſelf behind him, it carries the ſweeteſt reliſh in the world with it. All duties, and ſufferings both, are made ſweet by this, that it is done for God. Self, in any duty, doth ſowre the duty be it never ſo admirable; Let every man prove his own work, ſaith the apoſtle, Gal. vi. 4. then ſhall he have rejoicing in himſelf, and not in another.——Theſe are ſome reaſons why goſpel-faith, in receiving Chriſt, muſt be attended with goſpel-practice in walking in him.

Many talk of practical religion in our day, but few know what it is to walk in it; they are like the lark that ſings with the higheſt, but builds with the loweſt: ſome ſing with the higheſt, as if they were almoſt angels; but where do they build? where are their affections? where are their hearts, their aims, their ends? They are low, earthly, and ſenſual. You that profeſs to be friends to the goſpel, O let the mouths that reproach religion be ſtopped by the power of religion in your walk. If the world call us Antinomians; It is the will of God that by well-doing we put to ſilence the ignorance of fooliſh men, 1 Pet. ii. 15. We account them the greateſt ſtars that give the greateſt light; ſo men will account them ſtill the greateſt Chriſtians that give the greateſt light, by their goſpel-practice in holineſs toward God, and righteouſneſs toward men. If you be not a better ſervant, a better child, a better parent, a better maſter, than you were, or than others are, what credit will religion get by you. Therefore, ſeek a practical-faith, leading to a goſpel-practice.

2. This walk imports not only practice, but progreſs; to ſtand ſtill is not to walk. Walking imports progreſs and growth from faith to faith, from ſtrength to ſtrength, from glory to glory. For the truth is, by reaſon of corruption, we are like the boat in a ſtream; if we go not forward by the oar, we go backward by the tide: ſo if we go not forward, by the ſtrength of grace, we will go backward, by the ſtrength and power of corruption; even as the boat in the ſtream cannot ſtand, it muſt go backward. It is true, people may be at a ſtand in religion and yet ſeem to walk; men may go the round of duties, and yet not be walking; like a ſpinning wheel, it goes round, but yet it is in the ſame place ſtill. Many may be called old-job-trot profeſſors; they are the ſame now that they were twenty years ago; no more holineſs, no more knowledge, no more experience.——QUEST. What is this growth and progreſs? I anſwer, It is not like a wheel that runs round, and ſtands ſtill in the ſame place; but where there is more knowledge of Chriſt, more inſight into the myſteries of the goſpel, more feeling of the power of the goſpel, more victory over luſts and corruptions, etc. there is growth and progreſs. It is true, a child of God may fall, and he may relapſe, and fall again; his feet may be benumned that he cannot walk: but here is the happineſs of a true child of God, one that hath truly received Chriſt, that his ſins are always beneficial to him; he will gain more in holineſs by one ſin, than a natural man will gain by an hundred duties: for his fall is like the ſtumbling of a horſe that makes him ride the faſter; ſo the believer may ſtumble, but when he gets to his feet again, he runs the faster, makes quicker progress in the ways of God; his fall humbles him, and makes him more dependent, more watchful, more circumspect, etc.

he

3. This walk imports permanency both in the way and doctrine of Christ, according to the following verse, Rooted and established in the faith. A single step is not a walk, it is a permanent motion; therefore it is called a being established in the faith, as we have been taught. Why, how can a man walk, and yet be rooted; walk, and yet stand stable? these are very inconsistent; 1 Cor. xv. 58. Be ye stedfast and unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord: STEDFAST, and yet abounding in the work; MOVING, and yet unmoveable: like the two feet of a pair of compasses, the one foot of the compass stands fast in the centre, and the other draws the line, and goes round: so it is with the believer, his faith is like the foot of the compass, that stands fast in the centre, Christ and his doctrine; but his gospel-practice is the part that is like the other foot of the compass, it never stands, but ever moves in the way of the Lord. He stands fast in the faith, and yet walks. As in walking one foot stands while the other moves, or else a man is leaping and not walking; so while we go forward in the way of gospel-obedience, we must stand fast in the faith; that foot must stand while the foot of obedience moves, or else we are like them that leap rather than like these that walk: I mean, there are some who will leap out of one doctrine into another, not being established in the faith of Christ, which was a stedfastness which the apostle commends in the Colossians here, in the verse immediately preceding our text. But as a tree that is planted in one place to-day, and transplanted to another place to-morrow, and so on from place to place, cannot bear fruit; so the soul that doth not stand fast, but leaps from doctrine to doctrine; from principle to principle; from profession to profession; and is unsettled in the principles of religion, cannot be fruitful: Therefore the apostle exhorts, Eph. iv. 14, 15. That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive: But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things which is the head, even Christ. And Heb. xiii. 9. Be not carried about with strange doctrines; for it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace.——And thus you see what may be imported in walking.

Secondly, The qualification of this duty is, it is a walking in CHRIST. Here is a great word, and many things might be said upon it; but all that I offer shall be in two short words on it at the time. To walk in Christ is not to walk in ourselves, but out of ourselves. Now, there is a twofold self-denial; a self-denial in point of sin; that is, a denying ungodliness and worldly lusts: this the grace of God that brings salvation teaches effectively, as the law teaches preceptively. Again, there is a self-denial in point of grace. Now, there is a twofold denial of grace, the one is in point of justification, and the other is in point of sanctification. Consider these two a little in order to know what it is to walk in Christ.

1. There is a denial of grace in point of justification; a self-denial with respect to grace in point of subsisting with God in justification. I would ask you, How do you subsist in a justified state? Are you justified by faith in Christ without the works of the law? Doth your grace, or sanctification, justify you, or expiate your sin? Nay, that which brought you into the favour of God at first must keep you there still. You that are brought into the favour of God, how do you stand in favour with him? It is not because of your savoury venison, but your elder Brother's cloaths; it is not your graces or best holiness, but the garment of Christ's righteousness that brings you and keeps you in favour with God. Now, to walk in Christ in the matter of justification, or looking for acceptance with God, is to be denied to your graces in point of acceptance; but to let Christ have his proper room: put not grace in the room of Christ and his righteousness; be as holy as you can, but never a whit more justified are you thereby; grace hath its place in sanctification, and walking before God, but it must have no place here; for a man doth not subsist in a justified state by his graces, or holiness; hence though Paul could say, Rom. vii. I delight in the law of the Lord after the inward man; but behold how denied he is to this, saying, O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of sin and death? What then does he? Thanks be to God, says he, through Christ; for there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ. He sets not sanctification in the room of Christ's righteousness.

2. There is, in some sort, a denial of grace, even in respect of sanctification; that is imported in a walking in Christ thus; even because a believer doth not walk in Christ merely by the strength of habitual grace; nay, he cannot do it but by the operation and motion of the Spirit of Christ that cometh down from above: for as we use to say, the ship does not go by its sails, but by the wind; the sails indeed take in the wind, but it is the wind that makes the ship to go: so, when a believer walks in spiritual obedience, either active or passive, in doing or suffering, it is owing to grace that comes down like auxiliaries, which makes him walk in him. This is what the apostle calls grace sufficient for him; My grace shall be sufficient for thee: and this makes a weak believer strong, in a moment, both for work and warfare. My grace shall be sufficient for thee; why, had not the apostle grace within him? Yea, but the scripture gives ground for this distinction; there is grace in a man, and grace with a man; grace in the believer, that is, habitual implanted grace; grace with the believer, that is, actual assisting grace, that comes and carries him on in his course, and by this means he walks in Christ, being denied to his own habitual grace, and resting on him for actual constant supply.—— To walk in Christ in both these respects, is for a soul to say, In the Lord only have I righteousness and strength: In the Lord only have I RIGHTEOUSNESS, there is the denial of grace, in point of justification: In the Lord only have I STRENGTH, there is the denial of grace in point of sanctification. *

But that I may a little more fully consider the qualification of this duty of walking in Christ, we may consider, 1. What it supposes. 2. What it excludes. 3. What it includes. 4. What it infers.

* Here seemed, in the Author's notes, to be the end of the first, and the beginning of a new discourse.

1ſt, What this walking in Chriſt ſuppoſes. Theſe two things eſpecially are ſuppoſed to a walking in Chriſt. 1. That Chriſt is the way. 2. That we have got in to that way.

1. It ſuppoſes that Chriſt is the way. To walk in Chriſt ſays plainly that Chriſt is the way; and therefore Chriſt ſays himſelf, John xiv. 6. I am the way, etc. There was once another way to heaven before the covenant of works was broken, namely, perfect perſonal obedience; but now there is no other way to heaven but Chriſt, Acts iv. 12. There is no name given under heaven, whereby to be ſaved, but the name of Chriſt. What ſort of a way Chriſt is, we may afterward ſhew in purſuing of this text; but here I ſhall only add, that whatever elſe be called the way, ſuch as the commandments of the law, and holy obedience thereto; yet, take Chriſt out of that way, and behold it will never reach half way to heaven; take Chriſt out of the Bible, and you will find no way for a ſinner there, but what will land him in hell. Chriſt is the good old way, the new and living way, and the way of holineſs itſelf; for there is no holineſs but what is contained in him and derived from him: and hence ſome eminent divines explain that ſcripture of Chriſt himſelf, Iſa. xxxv. 8. An high way ſhall be there, and it ſhall be called the way of holineſs. There is no holineſs where there is no walking in Chriſt. Never believe the tongue that ſays the preaching of Chriſt is a diſcouragement of holineſs; for to walk in him is the only way of holineſs: it is a holy walk, for he is the holy way.—It ſuppoſes that Chriſt is the way.

2. Our walking in Chriſt ſuppoſes that we have got in to that way. We cannot walk in him unleſs we be in him. And therefore receiving Chriſt is here preſuppoſed to a walking in him. By receiving Chriſt we get in to him; and then, and not till then, are we in caſe to walk in him. The union of matter and form makes a body; the union of ſoul and body together makes a man; the union of a man and Chriſt together makes a Chriſtian; and till then empty is he of Chriſt, and of all true good works or ſpiritual walking. A man may bring forth the fruit of good works, morally good, and materially ſo, and may bring them forth as a tree upon his own root, upon old Adam's root; but he can never walk in Chriſt or bring forth fruit in Chriſt, till he be in Chriſt; for what is fruit that grows upon a tree but the ſap of the root concocted into fruit: ſo, what is walking in Chriſt, or working in him? it is juſt the ſap of the Spirit of grace putting itſelf forth into the fruit of new obedience; and this ſuppoſes union and implantation into the root. Many err in this matter; they reſolve to walk in the way of duty before ever they have received Chriſt, or got in to him; and by theſe means, they think they will get in to Chriſt and receive him; they will walk ſo and ſo devoutly that they may receive Chriſt. Thus they invert the order of the text, and put the plough before the horſe; for, receiving of Chriſt, muſt go before walking in him: yea, it is impoſſible there can be a walking in him, before there be a receiving of him. Walk as you will before you receive Chriſt, it is a walking on your own legs; and to think that theſe will bring you to Chriſt, is as if a branch, by bearing fruit upon its own tree, could be thereby tranſplanted upon another tree; no: it is not by bearing fruit upon its own tree, but it muſt be cut off from its own root, ere it can be ingrafted into, or bring forth fruit upon another: even ſo, it is not your bearing fruit on your own old ſtock, or doing many good works that will bring you to Chriſt; nay, you are miſtaken; you muſt be cut off from your old ſtock, and from your own works, and ingrafted into Chriſt.——Thus, this walking in him ſuppoſes union to him. Therefore, 2dly, What this walking in Chriſt excludes. It excludes ſin and ſelf; a ſinful walk, and a ſelfiſh walk. So far as a man walks in Chriſt he cannot walk in ſin, nor walk in himſelf.

1. It excludes a ſinful walk, a walking in ſin or in the fleſh; for, they that are in Chriſt, they walk not after the fleſh but after the Spirit, Rom. viii. 1. Though they have ſin in them, yet they do not walk in it, like the reſt of the world; becauſe ſo far as Chriſt comes in, ſin goes out. Some ſpeak of forſaking ſin, in order to, and before coming to Chriſt; but never will you forſake ſin evangelically, till once Chriſt come to you, and you come to him. When Chriſt comes in to the temple, he drives out all the buyers and ſellers; and therefore, let him in, and he will make the houſe clean. His coming is like the coming of light; as the light comes in to the houſe, the darkneſs goes out: even ſo, as the Sun of righteouſneſs ſhines in to the ſoul, the ſhadows of ſin and darkneſs evaniſh.—When a man walks, he leaves ſomething behind him, which he turns his back upon; ſo he that walketh in Chriſt, he turns his back upon his old maſter, the devil, ſaying, Wo is me that I have been ſo long led captive by him at his will!—He turns his back upon his old acquaintance, the world, ſaying, O vain world! I have ſeen ſomething of the matchleſs glory of the Son of God, and therefore look upon all worldly glory as nothing, and leſs than nothing and vanity.—He turns his back upon his old luſts and idols, ſaying, with Ephraim, What have I any more to do with idols? Fain would he be rid of ſin; Lord, take vengeance on this luſt and that luſt; give it a dead ſtroak that it may never revive again.—He turns his back upon his old religion, that he may ſerve the Lord in newneſs of ſpirit, and not in the oldneſs of the letter. He leaves his cradle-faith behind him, and gets a faith of God's operation: He leaves his old hope behind him, which had no foundation but ſand, and is begotten again to a new and lively hope: He leaves his old legal way of performing duty behind him, and learns a new obedience, influenced by new covenant grace, and by the love of Chriſt conſtraining him. And therefore,

2. It excludes a ſelfiſh walk. This walking in Chriſt excludes a walking in ſelf; for the more that a man walks in Chriſt, the more does he walk out of ſelf: as Chriſt comes in, ſelf goes out; when Chriſt is received, ſelf is expelled. The ſelf-righteous ſinner is like an empty bottle filled with nothing but air, but pour wine into the bottle, and as the wine goes in, the air goes out: ſo, the ſoul is filled with nothing but airy ſpeculations, and a light, vain eſteem of himſelf; but let Chriſt in, let the wine of the Spirit be poured in to the ſoul, as that wine goes in, the air will go out. The ſelfiſh ſinner is like an empty ſtomach, filled with nothing but wind; but if wholeſom food

be

be received and digeſted; then the wind is gradually diſpelled: ſo here, the ſinner is filled with the wind of pride and ſelf; but if Chriſt, the bread of life, and water of life, be received and digeſted, then it diſſipates the wind of pride: his ſelf-eſtimation is turned to ſelf-abhorrence; his ſelf-juſtification is turned to ſelf-condemnation; his ſelf-love is turned to ſelf-loathing; his ſelf-dependence is turned to ſelf-renunciation; his ſelf-ſeeking is turned to ſelf-ſearching, and ſelf-examination, and to a ſeeking of God and his glory. Inſtead of ſerving himſelf, his deſire is now to ſerve God as his only Maſter: inſtead of exalting himſelf, his deſire is now to glorify God as his chief end: inſtead of pleaſing himſelf, his deſire is to pleaſe God, not to ſatisfy his juſtice, as a Judge, for that the Surety hath done, but to pleaſe his heart as a Father; he dares not venture on any thing that will diſpleaſe ſuch a kind Father: inſtead of reſting in himſelf, his deſire is to reſt in the Lord, and enjoy him, ſaying, O to enjoy him in his grace, and in his glory! to enjoy him in this and that duty; in this and that ordinance; until I enjoy him fully in heaven!

Now, when a ſelfiſh walk is excluded, it excludes at the ſame time, a natural walk, a legal walk, and a phariſaical walk.—It excludes a natural walk, which being grounded only upon the light of nature amounts to no more but a natural righteouſneſs.—It excludes a legal walk, which being grounded only upon the light of the law, and that as a covenant, makes but a legal imperfect righteouſneſs.—It excludes an hypocritical walk, which being grounded only upon the external light of the goſpel, makes only a phariſaical righteouſneſs, where the man hath the form of godlineſs, but denies the power of it.——Many things here might be added as to what this walking in Chriſt doth exclude, which may afterward fall in upon the application. I come, therefore,

3*dly*, To conſider what this walking in Chriſt doth include. Not to multiply particulars here either; there are two things more eſpecially that it ſeems to include. Walking in Chriſt is, 1. A walking in a conformity to him. 2. In the improvement of him.

1. It is a walking in a conformity to him, and ſo to walk in Chriſt is to be like him. In heaven the ſaints ſhall be like him, for they ſhall ſee him as he is: Even ſo here, when we behold his glory, and are changed into the ſame image then it is that we walk in him; even as the body walks where-ever the head walks; and where the head and the body walk, there the feet walk; all that is in the head walks. This then is a walking in him who is the glorious Head, when the members follow the Head, and walk in a conformity to him.—It is a walking in a conformity to his nature, being holy as he is holy, perfect as our heavenly Father is perfect, merciful as he is merciful, etc.—It is a walking in a conformity to his way of walking; 1 John ii. 6. He that ſaith he abideth in him, ought to walk even as he alſo walked: Did he walk in love to God and man? Did he walk in zeal, ſo as the zeal of God's houſe did eat him up? Did he walk in meekneſs, patience, humility, and activity, always going about doing good, never weary of well-doing? We are to walk as he thus walked.—It is a walking in a conformity to his ends that he ſet before him; his end was the glory of God, the advancement of his kingdom, the ruin of Satan's kingdom, and in all the praiſe of his rich and free grace; and ſurely we will walk in him, when we have theſe for our ends which were his ends.—It is a walking in a conformity to his law, which is a tranſcript of his communicable nature for our practice; he walked in a conformity to his own law, in all its holy, juſt, good, and merciful ways; and we walk in him, when we walk in a goſpel-conformity to the ſame.—It is a walking in a conformity to the relations that he comes under to us: and ſo it is a walking in him as our Redeemer, by price and power, which we do when we walk as theſe who are not their own, but bought with a price, therefore glorifying the Lord in our ſouls and bodies which are his.—It is a walking in him as our Head, by living as members of ſuch a Head, and deriving ſpiritual virtue from him.—It is a walking in him as our Father, depending on him as children upon their father.—It is a walking in him as our Judge, Law-giver, and King; and ſo a walking as theſe that are accountable to, and as we ſhall anſwer at the tribunal of this Judge; ſitting at the feet, and receiving the law from the mouth of this Law-giver; and yielding the tribute of praiſe, obedience, and ſubjection to this King.——In a word, it is a walking in conformity to the privileges we receive from him: Hath he enlightened us in the knowledge of himſelf? Then to walk in him, is to walk as children of light, and not as theſe that are in the darkneſs of ignorance.—Hath he called us effectually? Then to walk in him is to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called.—Hath he given us grace? Then to walk in him is to walk, not as graceleſs, but as gracious perſons; not as theſe that are in a ſtate of nature, but in a ſtate of grace.—Hath he pardoned our ſins, juſtified our perſons, brought us into peace with himſelf? Then to walk in him, is to walk ſo as to ſtand faſt in the liberty wherewith he hath made us free.—Hath he poured in the promiſe into our hearts? Then to walk in him, is to walk ſo as having theſe promiſes, to cleanſe ourſelves from all filthineſs of the fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſs in the fear of the Lord.—Hath he made us heirs of glory? Then to walk in him, is to walk as candidates for heaven, as pilgrims and ſtrangers in the earth, and ſo having our converſation in heaven.

2. It is a walking in the improvement of him. To walk in Chriſt is to improve him by faith, as we receive him thereby. It is to improve and make uſe of him for light, life, ſtrength, motion, acceptance, and all in him.—And ſo to walk in him, is to walk as theſe that have their life in him, and cannot live without him, no more than the body can live without the head; Without me ye can do nothing, John xv. 5.—To walk in him, is to walk as theſe that have their light in him, ſaying, The Lord is my light; and though I walk in darkneſs, the Lord will be a light to me.—To walk in him, is to walk as theſe that have their ſtrength in him, ſaying, Not that we are ſufficient of ourſelves to think any thing of ourſelves, but our ſufficiency is of God; and, I can do all things, through Chriſt ſtrengthening me: hence they are called to be ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt. Art thou in Chriſt? Then the grace that is in him is forthcoming for thee: as the life that is in the heart is in the toe, the foot, the outermoſt member of the body; ſo is the believer's grace in Chriſt; and the grace that is in Chriſt is in the believer: if the grace that is in Chriſt were not in the believer alſo in his meaſure, how could he be ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt?—To walk in Chriſt, is to walk as theſe that have their acceptance in him; we are accepted in the Beloved; not merely for his ſake, but in him as our Head; who having fulfilled the law, and ſatisfied the juſtice of God, his doing is ours, becauſe we are in him: the Head having done it, the body is reputed as having done it; and ſo we are accepted in him.—To walk in Chriſt, is to walk as theſe that have their motion in him: we cannot move ſpiritually, but by the Spirit of Chriſt; and indeed if our life and ſtrength be in him, our motion muſt be in him alſo.—To walk in Chriſt, is to walk as theſe that have their fulneſs in him; their wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption; and are complete in him by virtue of their union to him.——You ſee what a vaſt field is here, and how much lies in this walking in Chriſt. It is an improvement of him for all, as having our all in him.

is

And yet further, this walking in Chriſt imports ſuch an improvement of Chriſt by faith, as I told you before this walking did import. Walking, I ſaid, did import theſe three things eſpecially, namely, practice, progreſs, and permanency: ſo here, this walking in Chriſt imports a practical improvement of Chriſt; a progreſſive improvement of him; and a permanent improvement of him.

(1.) A practical improvement of Chriſt; that is, not only a receiving of Chriſt, and then ſuffering it to ly ſleeping, as it were, in the dull habit; but it implies faith in practical actings and vigorous exerciſe of it, and laying faſter and faſter hold upon him; and reducing your faith unto practice, that you may adorn the doctrine of God, our Saviour, in all things.

(2.) A progreſſive improvement of Chriſt; a following on to know the Lord. It is not a ſtanding ſtill, a ſitting down, or going back, but a walking in Chriſt, a going forward; Forgetting the things that are behind, and reaching forth to the things that are before, and preſſing towards the mark for the prize of the high calling of God, Phil. iii. 13. The man that walks in Chriſt can never get enough of him.

(3.) It is a permanent improvement of Chriſt. A man that takes a ſtep or two forward, and then ſits down again, he cannot be ſaid to walk: ſo, ſome take a ſtart of devotion, a fit of zeal and concern for religion, perhaps about a communion, but it dies out. Theſe cannot be ſaid to walk in Chriſt; for walking in him is a conſtant, permanent, perſevering, and continued improvement of him. It is true, this conſtant progreſs is not always diſcernable; ſaints themſelves may have their winter-withering, as well as their ſummer-fruit: and we are not to judge of the growth of a tree by looking to it this day from what it was yeſterday; for there may be no ſenſible alteration; but ſtay till the ſpring come, and then you will diſcern the flouriſh and the fruit; yea, let ſome years paſs, and then you may ſee ſome ſenſible growth of the whole tree: ſo, the children of God are not always to judge of their continued growth, by comparing what they are this day, with what they were the former day; or what they are this month, with what they were the former month, leſt there be no diſcernable advance; but let them (at leaſt if they be of any ſtanding in Chriſt) judge by what they are now, from what they were at their firſt ingraftment into Chriſt, and they will find that they have attained more knowledge of Chriſt than at firſt, more experience of his favour, more outlettings of his grace than they underſtood before; more inſight into the goſpel, more ſtroaks that their corruptions have got, and ſo more fruit and growth.

This improvement of Chriſt is permanent; it is a walking in Chriſt, and abiding in him; John xv. 5. He that abideth in me, and I in him; the ſame bringeth forth much fruit; for without me, [or, SEPARATE FROM ME,] ye can do nothing. And ver. 6. If a man abide not in me, he is caſt forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and they are caſt into the fire, and are burnt. To receive Chriſt, is to enter upon the bridge; and to walk in him, is to keep the bridge: for a downfal on either ſide is dreadful. Some fall down, as it were, on the right ſide of the bridge, as hypocrites and ſelf-righteous perſons; ſome on the left ſide of the bridge, as theſe that give themſelves over to profane practices. There is a few that keep the bridge, and theſe are true believers and receivers of Chriſt; or if they happen to fall, they are like a man that falls half down, as it were, and is kept up by a chain faſtened to his body; he may get a hurt by the fall, and put to a terrible fright by it, leſt he drown and periſh; but the chain pulls him up again: even ſo, the believer, he is tied, as it were, to the bridge by a chain, a double chain, namely, the ſpirit of faith dwelling in him, and the grace of faith wrought in him; for, He that is joined to the Lord is one ſpirit; and of this faith Chriſt hath ſaid, I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: yea, there is the chain of a ſure promiſe, the chain of divine faithfulneſs, the chain of an everlaſting righteouſneſs. However, if he do not keep the chain, he may fall ſo as to be put in fear of periſhing in the gulf of everlaſting wrath; and he may hing at the chain, as it were, betwixt hope and deſpair: he may hurt his peace and comfort by his unwatchfulneſs; and God may viſit his iniquity with the rod, and hing him over the gulf, till the chain pull him up again. It is therefore dreadful in any caſe not to keep the bridge. I come to conſider, 4*thly*, What this walking in Chriſt doth infer. It infers and brings along with it eſpecially two things, namely, a walking with his Father, and a walking in his Spirit.

1. A walking with his Father. Enoch walked with God. Walk humbly with thy God. And what is it to walk with God, but to walk in communion with him, and comfortable enjoyment of him? In communion with him; in a conſtant contemplation of him, ſanctifying the Lord in our hearts; in a conſtant affection to him, having his love ſhed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghoſt; and in a conſtant dependence on him, receiving our all from him by faith, and returning our all to him in duty and gratitude.—It is a walking in the comfortable enjoyment of him, as all our portion and happineſs, all our ſalvation, and all our deſire; renouncing all things in heaven and earth, as our portion, but a God in Chriſt alone: and indeed to enjoy God, is to enjoy all, and more than words can expreſs, or thought conceive; it is to enjoy BEING itſelf, in whoſe nature is ingroſſed all poſſible perfections.

2. It

2. It infers a walking in his Spirit; Gal. v. 16. Walk in the Spirit, and ye ſhall not fulfil the luſts of the fleſh. And to walk in the Spirit is, in ſhort, to walk in the light of the Spirit, as a Spirit of wiſdom and revelation in the knowledge of Chriſt.—It is to walk in the love of the Spirit, as a Spirit of love in the ſoul, working love towards God and man. It is to walk in the liberty of the Spirit, with enlarged hearts towards God, and the things of God. In the comforts of the Spirit, Acts ix. 31. In the ſtrength and power of the Spirit, Rom. viii. 2. And in all the graces and fruits of the Spirit, Gal. v. 22, 23.

III. The third general head of the method is, To ſpeak of the rule of the believer's duty, and the proportion it ſhould bear to his reception of Chriſt, namely, That he is to walk in Chriſt AS he hath received him. There are two things which the ſcriptures principally teach (as you may all know by your Catechiſm) namely, "What we are to believe concerning God, and "what duty God requires of man." Faith and practice are the two great things in it; what we are to believe, and what we are to do. This text then is a ſhort compend of the whole ſcripture; for it contains all that concerns firſt our faith, and next our practice: yea, it not only teaches what we are to believe, and what we are to do, or practiſe, but alſo how we are to believe, and how we are to practiſe. How are we to believe? Even by receiving Chriſt Jeſus the Lord; for believing and receiving is the ſame thing, John i. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the ſons of God, even to them that believe on his name. And ſo to believe aright is to receive Chriſt, and to receive him aright is to receive him as a Jeſus, and as a Lord; as a Jeſus, that we may be ſaved by the price of his blood; and as a Lord, that we may be governed by the power of his Spirit. Again, how are we to practiſe? Even by walking in him; and walking in him as we have received him. Now, as to the rule of the believer's walk, it lies moſt emphatical here in the AS and the SO in the text; AS ye have received, SO walk: which, in the general, imports, that a goſpel-walk is a walking by faith; for, AS we receive Chriſt Jeſus the Lord by faith, SO we are to walk in him, namely, by faith. There can be no right walking, or working, but by faith; this is the ſpring of the ſpiritual life; The juſt ſhall live by faith, Rom. i. 17. Hab. vii. 4. Gal. iii. 11. Heb. x. 38. And this walk is expreſly called a walking by faith, 2 Cor. v. 7. We walk by FAITH, and not by ſight. As ye have received Chriſt, ſo walk in him: Did you receive him by faith? So walk in him by a continual receiving of him, and drawing virtue from him to enable you to hold on your way.

More particularly, ſeeing the great emphaſis of the text lies in the AS, and SO, importing, that the walk is to be ſuitable to the reception, we would enquire what proportion and ſuitableneſs this walk ſhould have to the receiving of Chriſt: And here conſider, 1. The proportion and ſuitableneſs of this walk to the act of receiving, or the manner wherein we receive Chriſt. 2. The proportion and ſuitableneſs thereof to the object received, or to the capacities wherein we received Chriſt, namely, as he is Chriſt Jeſus the Lord.

Firſt, The proportion or ſuitableneſs of this walk to the act of receiving; or the manner wherein we received him. Here then I muſt addreſs the believer, who only is capable of this work, becauſe he only hath received Chriſt, and muſt enquire at him how he hath received Chriſt, that he may be directed how to walk in him.

1. Then, Did you receive Chriſt obedientially, and warrantably, upon the warrant of the call and command of God, requiring you to come to him, and receive him? Did you not ſee the authority of God interpoſed, ſaying, This is his commandment that ye believe in the name of his Son? And to this authority you was made to ſtoop in a day of power. Why then, as ye have received Chriſt obedientially, ſo walk ye in him, namely, obediently; from a regard to the ſovereign will and authority of a God in Chriſt. And this is the will of God in Chriſt concerning you, even that you receive the law from Chriſt's mouth, and out of his hand; This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed, hear ye him.

2. Did you receive Chriſt humbly and meekly? Was your ſoul humbled to the duſt when you received him? Did you ly proſtrate before him, under a ſenſe of your own emptineſs, weakneſs, and wickedneſs? Did you trample upon yourſelf as a beaſt, a dog, a devil, a lump of hell, having no confidence in the fleſh? Well, as ye have received him humbly, ſo walk in him; Walk humbly with thy God, Micah vi. 8. Walk in a humble dependence upon him, receiving your all from him by faith, and returning your all to him in duty and gratitude.

3. Did you receive him deliberately and reſolutely, with due deliberation, judgment, and conſideration, reſolving to take your hazard with him, to part with all for him, and to follow him whitherſoever he goes, to welcome his croſs and his crown? Why then, ſo walk ye in him, namely, with deliberation; weighing the advantages in one ſcale, and the diſadvantages in another, of walking in him or not. You will meet with nothing in this way, but what you was made to weigh, if you righly received him. Even though loſſes, and croſſes, and martyrdom ſhould be in the ſcale where Chriſt was; and the world, and all the profits, pleaſures, and preferments of it, in the other ſcale; yet you was made to chooſe Chriſt. Why then, ſo walk in him, by evidencing it in your life, that whatever reproaches you ſuffer for his name, or whatever trials you may ſuffer, you are at a point. Having deliberately received, deliberately walk.

4. Did you receive Chriſt uprightly, with the utmoſt integrity, ſincerity, and exactneſs? Why then, ſo walk ye in him, evidencing in your life the ſame uprightneſs and integrity: He that walketh uprightly walketh ſurely, ſaith Solomon: See then that ye walk circumſpectly, ſaith the apoſtle, Eph. v. 15. the word is ἀκριβῶς, that is, exactly, accurately, and preciſely. Some are cenſured as if they were too preciſe in their religion; but it is the command of God, that we be as exact and upright in the way of walking in Chriſt, as in the act of believing in him, and receiving of him.

5. Did you receive Chriſt cordially, chearfully, and lovingly? Did you receive him with the heart, and with a thouſand good-wills? And, oh! how ſweet was he to you in the day that God revealed him in you, and that you was made to ſtrike hands with him. Then ſo walk ye in him; that is, endeavour, through grace, to keep up that frame of heart that you had in closing with him, and to bring up your conversation to the way and manner in which ye received him, by walking in him cordially and chearfully; having the joy of the Lord for your strength; rejoicing in Christ Jesus; for, he meeteth him that rejoiceth and worketh righteousness; and entertaining a sense of his love which you had in the day of believing, so as his love may constrain you to obedience; and you may fear the Lord his goodness. In the day of believing was you not more elevated, and more chearful, than ever the bird that sat upon the brier? Was you not filled with joy unspeakable and full of glory? Away then with sinful discouragement in your walk, saying, Why art thou cast down, O my soul? why art thou disquieted within me? hope in God, for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God, Psal. xliii. 5.

6. Did you not receive him spiritually; that is, in the strength, and under the conduct of his own Spirit, without whose influence and assistance you could do nothing? Then, so walk ye in him spiritually, depending on the grace, strength, conduct, and influence of his Spirit, for strengthening you both for your work and warfare; and so, with the true circumcision, worshipping God in the Spirit, praying in the Holy Ghost, and walking in the Spirit of Christ. The Spirit is in every believer according to his measure; and when the believer is in the Spirit, then it is well with him; Rev. i. 10. I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day. The man that walketh in Christ as he hath received him, walketh not carnally but spiritually, just as he received him; and hence he cries for the Spirit, saying, Lord, hold me with thy free Spirit; and take not thy holy Spirit from me: Thy Spirit is good, lead me to the land of uprightness.

7. Did you not receive Christ speedily? Yea, none can tell how speedily the poor soul that saw himself ready to drop into hell doth flee to Christ in a day of power. Oh! with what eagerness, and earnestness doth the convinced sinner flighter after him? and how actively he runneth in to him? Well, did you receive him speedily and actively? So walk ye in him, by endeavouring, through grace, to be speedy in your motion, ready and active in his service. This is to have a walk suitable to the manner of your receiving of Christ. To be lazy and unactive doth not answer the right reception; but to run in the way of his commandments, and to run without wearying, this is suitable; for in a day of believing, the soul is far from wearying, nay, then he flies on the wings of faith and love.

8. Did you not receive him fiducially and confidently, having boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, and drawing near with full assurance of faith, and with some measure of application, appropriation, and persuasion? Whatever unbelieving diffidence took place, yet, according to the measure of faith, such was the measure of holy confidence, trust, and persuasion, founded upon the truth and veracity of God in the promise. Well then, so walk ye in him, whatever opposition be in the way; saying, with Job, Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him. Cast not away your confidence, saith the apostle to the Hebrews, which hath great recompence of reward, chap. x. 35.; and hold fast the confidence, chap. iii. 6. for, we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold fast the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end, ver. 14.

9. Did you not receive Christ wholly and undividedly, in all his three offices, and in all the four excellencies that the apostle puts together, 1 Cor. i. 30. for wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption? Did you receive him for WISDOM, to make you light in the Lord? for RIGHTEOUSNESS, to make you accepted in the Beloved? for SANCTIFICATION, to make you holy? and for REDEMPTION, to make you happy? Why then, so walk ye in him. Ye cannot walk wisely if ye do not improve him for your wisdom; ye cannot walk acceptably unless ye improve him for righteousness; nor holily, unless ye improve him for sanctification; nor safely, unless ye improve him for your complete redemption.

10. Did you not receive Christ orderly and evangelically, or in the gospel-order, namely, as the Lord your righteousness and strength; first, to be your righteousness for your justification; and then to be your strength for sanctification? The legal order is just the reverse of this; the man would do by his own strength, and then be justified by his own doing. But true faith receives Christ in the gospel-order; that is, first to be justified, by his righteousness; and then sanctified, by his grace and strength; knowing that his performances cannot be accepted, nor acceptable service, until his person be accepted in the Beloved. Now, have you received Christ orderly, then walk in him orderly; for, To him that ordereth his conversation aright, will I shew the salvation of God, Psal. l. 23. And walk in him evangelically as ye have received him; that is, from a gospel-principle; the love of Christ constraining to a gospel-end, the glory of a God in Christ; and in a gospel-manner, going on in the strength of the Lord, making mention of his righteousness, and his only.

In a word, Did you not receive him irreversibly, so as never to part with him? Why then, so walk ye in him, saying, as Ruth to Naomi, Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for, whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people; and thy God my God: Nothing shall part thee and me, Ruth i. 16, 17.——And thus we see the proportion that this walk should bear to the receiving of Christ, with respect to the manner of receiving him.

Secondly, The proportion or suitableness of this walk to the object received, or, to the capacity wherein we receive him, comes next to be spoke to. Here we may consider, 1. The three generals mentioned in the text, CHRIST, JESUS, the LORD. 2. The manifold particulars that are comprehended under, and deduceable from these; and in all these we may view the proportion that our walk should bear to our faith objectively considered.

1st, Notice the three generals in the text holding forth the object of faith, CHRIST, JESUS, the LORD. And,

1. Have you received him as the CHRIST the Anointed of the Father? so walk ye in him; even in him as the Christ. Now, as I noticed in the former part of the doctrinal heads, Christ is to be considered both doctrinally, and personally.

Consider Christ doctrinally; that is, the doctrine of Christ, which you, believer, have received, while you received Christ in his word and in the doctrine of the gospel. As ye have received, ed, or believed the doctrine of Christ, or the truth of the gospel, so walk ye in it. If you consider the text, with the context, both preceding and following, you will see that Christ, doctrinally considered, is particularly here intended, not excluding, but including Christ personally considered. And indeed none can receive Christ, and reject his doctrine: If a man profess to take Christ, and yet neglect the gospel, he is a liar; for he that will have the treasure, must buy the field where the treasure is, Mat. xiii. 44. Now, did you receive Christ doctrinally, by receiving the truth as it is in Christ? then so walk yē in him; that is, walk in the truth; 2 John ver. 4. I rejoiced that I found thy children walking in truth. I am the way and the truth, says Christ: If we walk in this way we must walk in the truth. And this intimates to us,

(1.) That they cannot be walking in Christ, who are not zealous for truth, and against error; zealous for Christ, the Truth, in opposition to all error; and so to walk in Christ, is to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints; for, if we have received the truth, as it is in Christ, then to walk in him, as we have received him, is to maintain his truth, and persevere in the true doctrine of the gospel, in opposition to all error on the right and left hand, not holding the head, Col. ii. 19. If a man be careless whether truth sink or swim, he is not one who walks in Christ, or holds the head. Some instead of holding by the head, they hold by the foot; it is enough to them, that such a good man, or such a learned man says so and so, concerning this or that truth; and so they let the head go, and hold by the foot, not regarding the truth as it is in Christ, but the truth as it is delivered by such a man, whom they esteem, and such another man, that hath this and that good character. Why, Sirs, if ye have received Christ as the Truth, then ye are to walk in him as the Truth; as the head and the heart of the Truth, and not to hang your faith on the belt of any man or angel; for, If we, or an angel from heaven, preach another gospel, let him be accursed. Again,

(2.) It intimates to us, that they cannot be walking in Christ, who are not zealous against all abolished ceremonies; for Christ is the Truth, in opposition to types and ceremonies: these were shadows of things to come, but the body is Christ, ver. 17,—23. The false apostles joined the doctrines of Christ with the ceremonies of Moses; but the Colossians are exhorted, that as they have received Christ, the substance of all the shadows and ceremonies, so they should walk in him, not in Moses; The law came by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ: And if they that profess to receive Christ, as the substance and body of all the ceremonies, and yet do walk in conformity to the Mosaical ceremonies that were institute of God, do not at all walk suitably to their profession of receiving Christ; much more they that profess to receive Christ, and yet conform themselves to ceremonies that were never institute of God at all, but are the mere inventions of men; such as, the abjured ceremonies of the church of Rome and England. Though ceremonial service and superstitious worship had never been abjured, by solemn National Covenant, as it was; yet we stand obliged, by the word of God, to renounce and reject the same; because we are obliged to walk in Christ, and to walk in him as we have received him: and if we received him aright, we have received him doctrinally as he is the Truth; the Truth, in opposition to error; and the Truth, in opposition to shadows and ceremonies. Again,

Consider Christ personally, as he is the Anointed of the Father. Now, believer, have you received Christ as the Anointed of God? that is, not only have you been made to believe that he is sealed and authorized of the Father to his mediatorial work, and qualified for it of the Father by the supereminent unction of the Holy Ghost; but also, have you, by faith, gone in to him, and closed with him as such, and so art made a partaker of the same anointing of the Holy Ghost, by virtue of union to Christ; for, He that is joined to the Lord, is one spirit? Why then, so walk ye in him; that being in him, you may abide in him by a lively faith; John xv. 5. be rooted and built up in him, and established in the faith, ver. 7th of this chapter where the text lies, Even in Christ in whom ye are builded together, for an habitation of God, through the Spirit, Eph. ii. 22.—Have ye received him as the Christ, the Anointed of God? Then so walk in him, by improving him and employing him still to anoint you with the same anointing.—Have ye received him as the Christ, the Authorized of the Father? Then so walk in him, by employing him as one that hath a warrant and authority to save, to heal, and help you in time of need.

2. Have you received him as a JESUS, a Saviour? This is another title he hath in the text; as one that saves from the guilt of sin, the wrath of God, the curse of the law, and from all things from which ye could never be justified by the law of Moses. Why then, so walk ye in him; even in him as a Jesus, in which capacity ye have received him. Be daily looking to him for daily salvation; and daily flying in to his saving arms, and taking shelter under the shadow of his blood and righteousness; and let your walk and conversation before God and the world, evidence that you have received him as a Jesus, a Saviour.

(1.) Have you received him as a Jesus? so walk in him before God, by resting on him for complete salvation; and rejoicing in him as God's Salvation, as old Simeon called him; Now mine eyes have seen thy Salvation. Look not for any salvation you need from God, by any other means, but only in and through this Jesus; for the excellencies and perfections of God do all stand against you and your salvation by any other way: but in this Jesus he can save you to the honour of all his attributes; to the glory of his justice, the honour of his truth, and the praise of all his other perfections; I am the way, says Christ, no man cometh to the Father but by me: and to walk in this way, as ye have received him, is just, having received him to be the way to the Father, to be still coming nearer and nearer to God in this way, till salvation be complete, and till you come to the end of your faith, the salvation of your soul.

(2.) As ye have received him as a Jesus, so walk in him before the world, by giving evidence in your conversation that this Jesus hath saved you, and called you with a holy calling; and by setting him forth, as you can, to all that are about you, that he is an excellent Saviour, the chief among ten thousands; that he is an able Saviour, viour, mighty to ſave; and that he is a complete Saviour, a perfect Jeſus. Tell your children, families, friends, and all that you can have regular acceſs to do good unto, that religion is no fancy; but that which you have heard, and ſeen, and handled, of the word of life, declare you unto them, that they may have fellowſhip with you, if they hear; that you have ſeen a glory in Chriſt that they never ſaw; and felt a ſweetneſs that they never felt, a joy unſpeakable, and a peace that paſſeth all underſtanding, which they are ſtrangers unto: it may ſtir them up to ſay, as it is, Zech viii. 23. We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you. Sirs, a ſervant will commend his maſter that may be little worthy of commendation; and will not you commend a Jeſus who have received him as ſuch, and walk in his name? Micah iv. 5. For all people will walk every one in the name of his god, and we will walk in the name of the Lord our God for ever and ever. Again,

3. Have you received him as a LORD? This is another letter of his name in the text; and theſe three letters of his name, Chriſt, Jeſus, the Lord, point him out beyond all other names in the world. Have you, I ſay, received him as a LORD? Then walk in him as a Lord, otherwiſe you walk not in him as you have received him. The true believer doth not only receive Chriſt as a Jeſus, and Saviour; but alſo as a Lord, and Governor. Many would divide betwixt his ſalvation and his dominion; they would have Chriſt as a Saviour, to ſave them from wrath; but not as a Lord, to deſtroy their luſts and ſin: but the true receiver of Chriſt is as weary of the load of corruption, as he is weary of the load of condemnation; and therefore not only being weary of condemnation, would he have Chriſt as a Saviour, but being weary of corruption, he would have Chriſt as a Lord: and indeed when the heart would have water as well as blood, then it is in a right temperature; when the man would have water to purify the heart, as well as blood to pacify the conſcience, this argues honeſt receiving; for Chriſt comes by water and blood, 1 John v. 6. He comes not only to juſtify, but alſo to ſanctify; he comes not only as a Jeſus, to ſave by price; but alſo as a Lord, to ſave by power.

Now, have you received Chriſt in the capacity of a Lord? Then ſo walk in him as he is a Lord, and as ye have received him. The reſt of the world give evidence that they never received him as a Lord, by their practical ſaying, that they will not have this man to reign over them: but know, man, that he will never be a Jeſus to ſave you, if he be not alſo a Lord to conquer you, and reign over you; and you can never receive him as a Jeſus, and reject him as a Lord, without being rejected of him in both theſe capacities; for he will not be a Jeſus where he is not a Lord. But you, believers, who have received Chriſt as a Lord, are you walking in him as theſe that have thus received him, and giving evidence that ye have received him as a Lord, before God and the world? Surely, if it be ſo, it will ſome way appear by the language of your hearts, and the language of your lives. The language of your hearts will be, O Lord, other lords have had dominion over me; but now by thee only will I make mention of thy name: Oh! may Chriſt be the Lord of my heart, and of all the thoughts of my heart, ſo as they may be captives to the Son of God; and of all the affections of my heart, ſo as they may terminate upon him alone; and of all the deſires of my heart, ſo as they may go out after him. Why, the reſt of the world ſhew they never received him as a Lord, becauſe the devil, the world, and the fleſh, have the whole of their hearts, their thoughts, affections, and deſires, being wholly taken up with evaniſhing worldly luſts, idols, and trifles. But though the world may have much of a believer's heart ſometimes, yet it hath but the white of the egg, as it were, Chriſt hath the yoak of the heart of that man; his top and ſuperlative thoughts and deſires, becauſe he hath taken Chriſt for the Lord of his heart.—Again, if you have received Chriſt as a Lord, then you will ſo deſire to walk in him, by ſaying, O let him be the Lord of my tongue! while others are ſaying, Our tongues are our own, who is Lord over us? and ſo looſing their tongues againſt heaven, by curſing, ſwearing, railing, reproaching: but, O ſays the man that hath received Chriſt the Lord, May Chriſt be the Lord of my tongue, and may it be occupied in his ſervice, in praying, praiſing, and edifying diſcourſe upon all occaſions, Sabbath and working days. Many by their carnal diſcourſe and converſation, and by their evil and unprofitable communication, give evidence that it is not Chriſt, but the devil, that is lord of their tongues.—Again, if you have received Chriſt as a Lord, then you will ſo deſire to walk in him as to make him Lord of your time, ſo as not to ſquander it away with idle company, idle viſits, idle diverſions; as if it were good for nothing but to be caſt away upon any trifle; but you will deſire and endeavour to walk circumſpectly, not as fools, but as wiſe, redeeming the time. Many ſhow that Chriſt is not their Lord, by living as if they were lords of their own time and talents, which yet are but lent of the Lord, who ſays, Occupy till I come.—If you have received him as a Lord, then ſo to walk in him, is to make him Lord of your life, ſo as to live to him; the Lord of your ſouls and bodies, ſo as to glorify him in your ſouls and bodies which are his. Others live as if they were lords of their own life, lords of their own ſouls, and might caſt them away at random; and lords of their own bodies, and might defile them with drunkenneſs and whoredom as they pleaſe; an evidence that Chriſt is not their Lord.—If you have received him as a Lord, then ſo to walk in him, is to make him Lord of your conſciences, and the Lord of your light, ſo as not to enſlave your light and conſcience to any man on earth, any devil in hell, or any idol in the world. Many give evidence that Chriſt is not their Lord, by croſſing their light and conſciences for a trifle; whereas if Chriſt were the Lord of their light and conſciences, they would die in his cauſe rather than put out his candle which he hath kindled in their breaſt.—Again, if you have received him as a Lord, you will ſo walk in him as to make him the Lord of your wills, he having made you willing in the day of power; whatever remaining enmity or rebellion of will take place, yet your habitual deſire will be to have your will in ſubjection to his will, whether preceptive or providential, without fighting againſt his precept, or fretting againſt his providence; at leaſt every fighting and fretting thought will be matter of exerciſe to you, while your ſoul's deſire will be to have a due ſubjection

to

to his precept, and submission to his providence. The rest of the world give evidence that Christ is not their Lord, because they are such as carry as if they were lords of their own wills; their wills were never subdued.—Again, if Christ be received as a Lord, you will so walk in him as to make him the Lord of your comforts and enjoyments in a world, so as to bless him when he gives or takes, saying, It is the Lord that giveth, the Lord that taketh, blessed be the name of the Lord. Take worldly comforts away from a man that never took Christ for his Lord, he will cry, O ye have taken away my gods, and what have I more? But the believer will say, even with respect to spiritual, as well as outward comforts, It is the Lord, let him do what seemeth good to him; if he himself be my Lord, let him dispose of me and mine as he will.—If you have received Christ as your Lord, then so walk in him as to make him Lord of your graces, who gives grace, and the exercise of it, as he pleases; and so your desire will be to be strong, not in yourselves, or your own grace, but strong in the grace that is in Christ, saying, if you want any grace in exercise, O! he is the Prince exalted by the right-hand of God, to give it, and therefore to him will I look for it; or if you have any grace, O! it is not of me, it is by grace I am what I am. —You will own him also as the Lord of your duties, and the Lord of ordinances, that only can put a blessing in them for your good; and as the Lord your righteousness in whom alone you can have acceptance; and the Lord your strength, from whom alone you can have assistance: they that perform all their duties in their natural strength, and so think to have acceptance of God, and favour with him upon their doing so, they both put themselves in the room of the Lord their strength, and their duties in the room of the Lord their righteousness.—— In a word, if you have received Christ as the Lord, you will walk in him by making him the Lord of your faith. The false apostles made Moses the lord of their faith and obedience, equal with Christ; and therefore they joined the Mosaical ceremonies with the doctrine of Christ; but the Colossians had received Christ Jesus the Lord, and so they are called to walk in him as they had received him. Some make the church the lord of their faith; they believe as the church believes, or as this or that man believes, which shews that Christ is not their Lord. Some make the devil the lord of their faith, they believe the devil rather than the God of truth, and the devil the father of lies learns them to believe a lie: see 2 Thess. ii. 11, 12. Some make their reason the lord of their faith, they believe no more than their carnal reason can digest. But the true believer makes Christ the Lord of his faith; and the veracity of Christ the ground of it, and the doctrine of Christ the rule of it: It is true, the devil, and the believer's remaining unbelief, wage war against his faith, and seek to be lords of his faith; and it is a shame that the believer in the day of battle should yield to any other lord, and let his faith, hope, and confidence fall to the ground: It is a marvellous fault in believers to call the love of God, and the truth of God in question upon every occasion by unbelief. Faith is the believer's shield, and hope his helmet, Eph. vi. 16. Now, would they not be very foolish who would wear their shield and helmet when there is no war nor stir; and as soon as ever they see an adversary coming, or a battle beginning, then to cast away their shield and helmet, and to do so usually? Why, even so it is with many, perhaps true believers; they will talk of their faith and hope in a time of prosperity and ease, when all is in peace, and no seeming war from heaven or hell; then they wear their shield and helmet: but when war comes, when affliction comes, and temptation comes, then they childishly cast away both their faith and hope, both their shield and helmet; and till their sense and reason be satisfied, they will not be persuaded. Oh! how dishonouring is this to the Lord whom ye have taken to be the Lord of your faith, the Captain of your salvation. To walk in Christ as ye have received him for a Lord, is to make him the Lord of your faith in spite of the devil and the world, who seek to lord it over you and your faith.——Finally, if you have received him as your Lord, you will so walk in him as to make him the Lord of your obedience. Others by obeying the devil, and obeying their lusts and idols, and obeying the sinful commandments of men, show that Christ is not the Lord of their obedience. But, believer, if you walk in Christ, as you have received him, give evidence that he is the Lord whom you obey and serve, saying, with Joshua, As for me, and my house, we will serve the Lord. And then, let it be the language of your life and conversation before the world, that Christ is your Lord. If you would judge of yourselves that Christ is your Lord, it is even to be tried by your subjection unto him, and his subduing of sin in you. The higher the Sun of righteousness is risen, the shorter will the shadows of your sin and corruption be. If the world judge of your receiving of Christ, as a Lord, and of your faith, they will judge it by your walk and conversation, and by your works, as I said above, upon the second head.

2*dly*, I come, as I proposed, to notice all the manifold particulars comprehended under, and deduceable from, these generals in the text; and in all these we may further view the proportion that our walk should bear to our faith objectively considered. Now, these generals in the text comprehend all the particular capacities wherein he is held forth in the gospel; and to name all these, at present, were impracticable; we offer but some of them for instances, and yet shall endeavour, through grace, not altogether to scrimp or scroof over the matter, that we may hold forth this Lord Jesus Christ as a full Saviour, answering all the cases that any poor sinner can be into.

Now, you know, that Christ is to be received as he is offered in the gospel, according to your Catechism, which says, "That faith in Jesus Christ, "is a receiving and resting upon him alone "for salvation, as he is offered in the gospel:" The receiving relates to an offering; and he is to be received as he is offered, and then walked in as he is received. The question then is, How he is offered in the gospel, or in what capacity, that we may know further how he is to be received, that so being thus received, he may be thus walked in? Well, his being offered as a CHRIST, a JESUS, a LORD, as I have shewed already, comprehends these following particulars; (and while we are telling you in what capacity Christ is offered, O look to the Lord to give you grace to receive him as he is offered; that having received him in these capacities, you may so walk in him.

1. Christ Jesus the Lord is offered in the gospel in the capacity of a Prophet and Teacher, that being thus received ye may so walk in him. Is there any poor, blind, ignorant souls here, that know nothing of God, or Christ, or the covenant of grace? Behold, Christ is offered to you in the capacity of a Prophet that hath compassion on the ignorant, saying, Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, Mat. xi. 29. Never will you learn till you be bound and entered to Christ; for, Who teacheth like him? Job xxxvi. 22. Ministers may preach, but they cannot give you a capacity to learn; but a Christ can give you a heart to know, as well as an ear to hear; for he gives eyes to the blind, ears to the deaf, and understanding to the simple. What is the reason that there is so much preaching, and so little spiritual profiting and spiritual life? It is even because Christ, the great Prophet, is so little with us, 2 Kings iv. 31. There was neither voice nor hearing by the prophet's staff, until the prophet came and stretched himself upon the dead child: even so it is here, the staff of a preached word does not the business, till the great Prophet come. Now, have you entered yourselves to be his scholars? Have you received him as a Prophet? Then, so walk in him by daily improvement of him in that capacity, to enlighten your understanding, saying, Lord, I have heard much of thee by the hearing of the ear, but little have mine eyes seen of thee: I have been long in Christ's school, but made little proficiency: O come and teach me to profit! let my eyes be opened, that, in the ordinances of thy institution, I may see the glory of God, the vileness of sin, the beauty of Christ, and the excellency of his righteousness.—Thus having received him as a Prophet, so walk ye in him, by coming always for more and more instruction from him.

2. Christ Jesus the Lord is offered in the gospel in the capacity of a Priest, that being thus received ye may so walk in him. How sweet is this offer of Christ to all poor things that are wrestling with the guilt of sin, and the debt they owe to the justice of God! for it is only in Christ that God is well-pleased, even in him whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness, that he might be just, and the justifier of them that believe in Jesus. They that believe in Jesus, the propitiation, have gotten all their debt paid, and God's honesty and fidelity is such, that he will never crave the debt over again. Christ is offered as a Priest for reconciliation, and a Priest for intercession. They that take hold of Christ as a Priest, they have nothing ado in heaven but they are sure to have it done; for, there he makes continual intercession for us. Are you so vexed with temptations that you cannot get a composed thought in duty? Here is refreshment from the presence of the Lord, even a Friend in heaven, who never gives over to make intercession.—Now, have you received Christ as a Priest? Then, so walk in him, by daily improving him, his satisfaction and intercession, as the ground of your peace with God, pardon of sin, and acceptance in every performance.

3. Christ Jesus the Lord is offered in the gospel in the capacity of a King and a Captain, that being thus received, ye may so walk in him. Behold! he is held forth as a King, to subdue, by his power; to conquer, by his grace; and defend, by his providence, from all temptations without, and corruptions within: and as a Captain, even the Captain of our salvation, who hath good skill to lead on in the battle, and victory is still upon his side, Psal. xci. 4. there you see he hath wings wherein you may trust, and his truth shall be thy shield and buckler; thou shalt not be afraid of terrors by night, nor for the arrows that fly by day. He is a Captain whose name is, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the mighty God, the Prince of peace; a Prince exalted by the right-hand of God, to give repentance to Israel, and remission of sins. Now, have you received him thus as a Prince, a Captain of salvation? So walk in him, by employing him still to subdue all your sins, and to defend you from all spiritual and temporal evils. To defend you from all spiritual evils; for, you wrestle not against flesh and blood, but principalities and powers, and the rulers of the darkness of this world, and spiritual wickednesses in high places; therefore, be strong in the Lord, Eph. vi. 10, 12.; For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds, 2 Cor. x. 4, 5. To defend from all temporal evils: But here a question may be moved, How doth this Captain defend his soldiers from temporal evils, calamities, and afflictions? To which we reply, It is even by taking away the sting of them. Some may think, how are the Lord's people supported under the temporal evils they are meeting with! Why, the everlasting arms are underneath them, and that is enough. If the Lord see fit that temporal goods be taken from them, he makes it up an hundred fold in giving them spiritual goods. They would count it good interest who get ten of the hundred; but behold! the people of God get a hundred fold in this life, and for any loss in temporals they get it repaired in spirituals, as in the intimation of the pardon of sin, and there is gold for copper. Many know not how the Lord supports his people under the difficulties they are brought into in this world; but he hath pledged his word to defend them from all temporal and spiritual evils, and he never failed in his word, wherein he hath said, The place of their defence shall be the munition of rocks.—Now, to receive Christ as a King and Captain to rule and defend, is to receive him as he is offered; and to improve him daily for this end, is to walk in him as we have received him.

4. Christ Jesus the Lord is offered in the gospel in the capacity of an Ark and a Refuge, that being thus received, we may so walk in him. He is held forth as an Ark and a Refuge. Now, have you received him as an Ark, that only can save you from drowning by the flood of God's wrath, saying, "Lord, there is no other "ark to save me but thee, for I am shipwreck-"ed in Adam, and there is no plank, but Christ, "to bring me to shore!" Have you therefore clasped to him by the hand of faith, saying, Lord, save me, or else I perish? Why then, having thus received him, do you so walk in him; keep within your Ark, and abide in him, seeking no other ark, and reposing confidence no where else; this is to walk in him as ye have received him.—Have you received him as a Refuge and hiding-place, Isa. xxxii. 2. saying, "Lord, I flee to thee to hide me; for the aven-"ger of blood, the law and justice of God, are

"at

" at my heels purſuing me; and if they find me " afar off from thee, I am ſlain without mer- " cy; the clifts of the Rock are my only hiding- " place, which I take to be a ſafeguard to me?" Well then ſo walk ye in him, by taking ſhelter ſtill in this ſanctuary.

5. Chriſt Jeſus the Lord is offered in the goſpel in the capacity of a Cautioner or Surety, that being thus received we may ſo walk in him. There are two things requiſite in a cautioner, and both are to be found in Chriſt: The one is that he be ſolvendo, able to pay all the debt; and the other is that he be willing, as well as able, to undertake the debt. Now, Chriſt is able to ſave to the uttermoſt all that come to God by him, Heb. vii. 25. and all comers are welcome; Whoſoever will let him come: q. d. the will ſhall not be wanting on my ſide. Now, have you, as a bankrupt-debtor, received Chriſt as a Surety, ſaying, " Lord, I owe many thouſands " more than I can pay, but thou haſt a ſuffi- " cient ranſom to pay all my debt; and I flee " to thee as my Surety, that I be not ſeized by " juſtice, and dragged to the priſon of hell."— Have you thus received him as a Surety? Then ſo walk in him by employing him ſtill as a Surety for debt and duty both; for clearing your conſcience with reſpect to all your debt, and for carrying your ſoul honourably through every duty, and doing all your works in you and for you.

6. Chriſt Jeſus the Lord is offered in the goſpel in the capacity of an Advocate, that being thus received we may ſo walk in him; Theſe things I write to you, that ye ſin not; but if any man ſin we have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous, 1 John ii. 1. Well is it with the poor ſoul that hath many challenges for ſin and guilt, and is ſadly exerciſed therewith, when yet it can put its caſe in the hand of him who is an Advocate with the Father; he can fully anſwer and propoſe able defences againſt all challenges from conſcience. But, alas! I fear there are many ſleeping conſciences among us. However, freedom from all challenges is only by the blood of Chriſt, and the faith of his advocating our cauſe with the Father; and well is it with us that we have a righteous Jeſus, a ſinleſs Jeſus, for our Advocate, who can comfort under the ſaddeſt diſcouragement, and relieve from the ſaddeſt intricacy; for, he underſtands all heart-ſecrets, his underſtanding being infinite: and he is not lordly in his employment. There is much lordlineſs among earthly advocates, and great men of that profeſſion; you muſt come and wait at their gates, with hat in hand, and perhaps never be the better; for advocates with us may be honeſt, and yet loſe a good cauſe: but here is an Advocate in your offer, to be received by you, who never loſt a cauſe that was put in his hand.—Now, have you received him as an Advocate? Then ſo walk ye in him by ſtill employing him in that capacity, ſaying, " Lord, my crimes are great, my " cauſe is bad, but never a cauſe miſcarried " that thou took in hand: Oh! let every one " of thy wounds be as ſo many open mouths " to plead for me; let thy blood ſpeak, that " ſpeaks better things than the blood of Abel."

7. Chriſt Jeſus the Lord is offered in the goſpel, in the capacity of a Phyſician, that being thus received we may ſo walk in him. We are full of plagues, maladies, ſores, and ſpiritual diſeaſes. Chriſt is exhibite to us as a Phyſician that hath ſkill of all diſeaſes, and can heal them all be what they will; Pſal. ciii. 3.—Who healeth all thy diſeaſes: he knows the right time of applying the healing word; Pſal. cvii. 20. He ſent his word, and healed them, and delivered them from their deſtructions: He heals with his own blood, and mixes his own blood with the word, a ſtrange mixture and compound to be a healing potion; for, he ſeals the word with his blood. Many are whole, and ſee no need of the Phyſician; they are whole-hearted, their hearts were never pierced with an arrow of legal conviction. But, if you have ſeen your malady, and prized the remedy; if you have received Chriſt as a Phyſician, then ſo walk ye in him, by coming ſtill with your broken bones to his door, ſaying, " Lord, here lies a Job full of " boils, a Lazarus full of ſores at thy gate; " here a paralytic hand; here a blind eye; here " a hard heart; here is a plague and there is " a wound; here is my atheiſm, ignorance, " enmity, unbelief; oh! heal, heal; let me " have a touch of thy garment, and I ſhall be " whole."—Now, if you have received Chriſt as a Phyſician, to continue in the improving of him thus, is to walk in him as ye have received him.

8. Chriſt Jeſus the Lord is offered in the goſpel in the capacity of a Head and Husband, that being thus received we may ſo walk in him. Chriſt is offered in the goſpel as a friend in the room of all friends, a friend that ſticketh cloſer than a brother; a huſband to the widow, a father to the fatherleſs, and a ſtay to the orphan; When my father and mother forſaketh me, the Lord will take me up, Pſal. xxvii. 10. And Jer. xlix. 11. Leave thy fatherleſs children upon me, I will preſerve them alive; and let thy widows truſt in me; and again, Thy Maker is thy husband. Our Lord hath a kind heart to the widow and orphans; for, he is an ocean of love, and a fountain of mercy, and he hath a liberal hand towards them; for he gives durable riches and righteouſneſs; and I will fill their treaſures, Prov. viii. 21. All the ſilver and gold in the world cannot fill one's heart; but ſays Chriſt, I will fill their treaſures. Let a graceleſs man have the greateſt ſubſtance in the world, he is but a poor miſerable wretch; but the pooreſt ſoul married to Chriſt hath durable riches, yea, unſearchable riches, Ephef. iii. 8. Take the greateſt prince and monarch in the world, a few figures in arithmetic will count all his wealth, and all that he is worth; but all the arithmetic in the world cannot count the believer's ſtock, who hath Chriſt for his Friend and Huſband; for, it is the unſearchable riches of Chriſt. They that are ill-friended in the world, may be ſupplied here; Chriſt is offered as a Friend, a Head, and Huſband.— Now, have you received him as a Head, and Huſband? Then ſo walk in him. Have you received him as ſuch ſome time a-day when you was brought to ſay, " Lord, though I be " the moſt deformed, black, and unworthy " bride that ever was, having nothing but po- " verty, debt, and danger to recommend me " to thee; yet ſince thou, who art the chief a- " mong ten thouſands, art content to match " with me, behold! I ſay, AMEN to that mar- " riage-covenant, deſiring to aſſent to all the " articles of it."—Have you thus received him, I ſay, as a Head and Huſband? Then ſo walk ye in him by maintaining the relation, and ſaying, My Beloved is mine, and I am his; and again,

I am

I am my Beloved's and my Beloved is mine, Song vi. 3. Let me ſee more and more, that neither death nor hell, ſin or Satan ſhall be able to looſe the marriage-knot; and let me have ſweet communion and fellowſhip with this glorious Head, and love-communications, and love-viſits from this glorious Huſband.—Thus you may come to walk in him as ye have received him.

9. Chriſt Jeſus the Lord is offered in the goſpel in the capacity of a Helper and Reliever, that being thus received we may ſo walk in him and improve him. He is offered, I ſay, as a Helper of the needy, and a Reliever of the burdened ſoul; he is therefore declared to be a preſent help in time of trouble, who gives grace to help in time of need; and with reſpect to all burdens ſays, Caſt thy burden on the Lord, and he will ſuſtain thee. Now, have you received him as a Helper? Then ſo walk ye in him by ſtill taking his help, and employing him to help you, ſaying, "Lord, I have deſtroyed myſelf, but in "thee only is my help; help me in reſpect of "deliverance from the mire of ſin and miſery "into which I have caſt myſelf; help me in re"ſpect of ſupply out of thy fulneſs, for never "a poorer wretch came to thy door than I; not "a penny of grace is there left to help me, "not a crumb to keep in my life; oh! let me "not go from thy treaſure-houſe without an "alms; for there is bread enough in thy houſe and "to ſpare; though I be a dog, let me not go "without a crumb." Thus by faith and prayer you may walk in him as a Helper if you have received him as ſuch.—Again, have you received him as a Reliever? (to put both theſe together that are ſo nigh of kin) Then ſo walk in him by employing him ſtill to relieve you of your burdens, ſaying, "Oh! ſin is heavier "than a milſtone, and how many of theſe "milſtones are on my back! Angels cannot "free me of my burdens; for the burden of "one ſin ſunk many thouſands of them to the "bottomleſs pit: ſaints cannot do it, they have "burdens enough of their own; nay, the "whole creation cannot bear my burden; for "it groans under the weight of me and it: but, "Lord, art not thou the Rock, the mighty Rock, "on whom God hath laid the help of poor "ſinners? The Lord hath laid on him the ini"quity of us all; and there I roll my burden, "even upon this Burden-bearer: let me be "eaſed, for the Rock can bear it without any "difficulty."——In this way, having received him as a Reliever and a Burden-bearer, you are to improve him, and ſo to walk in him.

10. Chriſt Jeſus the Lord is offered in the goſpel in the capacity of a Shepherd, that being thus received we may ſo walk in him. See Iſa. xl. 11. He ſhall feed his flock like a ſhepherd; he ſhall gather the lambs with his arms, and carry them in his boſom, and gently lead thoſe that are with young. Chriſt is held forth in the goſpel as the wiſe Shepherd that knows his ſheep, and puts his mark upon them, and ſeals them; The foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this ſeal, The Lord knoweth them that are his; they are ſealed by the holy Spirit of promiſe.—He is the careful Shepherd that hath a fold for them; Other ſheep I have that are not of this fold, them alſo I muſt bring, and they ſhall hear my voice.—He is the faithful Shepherd, that rejoiceth in the thriving of his flock, and will give an account, a good account of all the ſheep; hence he ſays, This is the will of my Father, that of all he hath given me I ſhould loſe nothing, but ſhould raiſe it up at the laſt day, John vi. 39.; and he will at that day ſeparate the ſheep from the goats.—He is the kind Shepherd, that feeds, and leads, and heals, and watches, and waters, and defends, and gathers his flock. —Now, have you received Chriſt as a Shepherd to perform theſe kind offices toward you? Then ſo walk ye in him by depending on him for the continual communication of that paſtoral care. Faith is called a returning to the Shepherd of our ſouls, 1 Pet. ii. 25. Ye were as ſheep going aſtray, but are returned to the Shepherd and Biſhop of your ſouls: Now, the life of faith and walking in him in this capacity is juſt a remaining with him, and depending on him as a Shepherd. It is a depending on him as a Shepherd to feed you; for, he feeds his flock as no other ſhepherd doth; he feeds them upon a green paſture, and the paſture is himſelf; John x. 9. I am the door, by me if any man enter in, he ſhall be ſaved, and he ſhall go in and out and find paſture; compare this with John vi. 51. I am the living bread that came down from heaven; the bread that I give is my fleſh, which I give for the life of the world.—It is a depending on him as a Shepherd to lead you; The Lord is my Shepherd, I ſhall not want. He leadeth me by the ſtill waters; he leadeth the blind in a way they know not: He maketh darkneſs light before them; he guides them by his counſel, and brings them to his glory; and if you walk in him, you take him for your guide, and follow him as your guide, and employ him as your guide to give you counſel, becauſe he is the wonderful Counſellor.—It is a depending on him as a Shepherd to heal you; but of Chriſt as a Phyſician I ſpoke already.—Again, it is a depending on him as a Shepherd to watch over you; for he is the watchful Shepherd that watches his flock night and day; the watch-man of Iſrael ſlumbers not nor ſleeps: he never gives ſo much as a nap, for then we were undone, in regard Satan never ſleeps, and enemies are never idle.—It is a depending on him as a Shepherd to water you; he waters his flock as well as feeds them; and as he feeds them with his fleſh, ſo he waters them with his blood, and with the influences of his Spirit: here is the river the ſtreams whereof make glad the city of God: he pours water on him that is thirſty, and floods upon the dry ground.—It is a depending on him as a Shepherd to protect you; for he defends his flock from all wolves, from all harm and injury: know you what the devil ſaid of Job? though he be the father of lies yet he ſpake a truth, when he would gladly have had God's hand of protection removed from Job, chap. i. 10. Doth Job ſerve God for nought? haſt thou not made an hedge about him and his houſe, and all that he hath on every ſide? I believe there are many of you know not that the devil is going about your doors ſeeking to devour you; but here is the mercy of all the flock of Chriſt, that their Shepherd hath ſet an hedge about them, that nothing may harm them; neither can violence touch them without his ſpecial permiſſion and order, and that for their advantage; for, all things ſhall work together for their good.—Finally, it is to depend upon him as a Shepherd to gather you; He gathers the lambs with his arms: they go aſtray many times, and wander ſo far away that they ſeem to be quite loſt; but he ſeeks and ſaves that which is loſt; and he hath a long arm to gather them, and bring bring them back to himſelf, that they may get a mark anſwerable to his gracious care in reducing them; Iſa. lxii. 12. Thou ſhalt be called, Sought out, a city not forſaken. Have you received him then as a Shepherd? So walk ye in him as to employ him to gather you from all your far wanderings; your wandering thoughts, your wandering words, your wandering affections, your wandering converſations, ſaying, with the pſalmiſt, Pſal. cxix. 176. I have gone aſtray like a loſt ſheep, ſeek thy ſervant; and ver. 10. O let me not wander from thy commandments; and if I wander, O bring me back, and let thy hand be upon the man of thy right-hand, the Son of man whom thou haſt made ſtrong for thyſelf; and henceforth I will not go back: turn thou me, and I ſhall be turned; draw me, and I ſhall run after thee.

Have you received him in the capacity of a Mediator and Peace-maker? Then ſo walk in him, by employing him ſtill to take up all quarrels between God and your ſoul, ſaying, "Lord, "ſtand betwixt me and the flaming ſword; "and let me have the ſenſe of the Father's love "the atoning blood of the Lamb; and bring "the news of peace to my ſoul."

Have you received him as the Ranſomer of captives? Then ſo walk in him, by employing him ſtill to aſſert your liberty, to knock off your fetters, to looſe your bands, and to bring your ſouls out of priſon, that you may ſerve him and praiſe him.

Have you received him as a Saviour? Then ſo walk in him, by employing him to carry on your ſalvation to perfection; and to ſave you from ſin, from the law, from death, and wrath.

Have you received him as a Sun, as the Sun of righteouſneſs? Then ſo walk in him, by rejoicing in his light, and ſhunning all the darkneſs of ignorance and error; O houſe of Iſrael, walk ye in the light of the Lord.

Have you received him as your righteouſneſs and ſtrength? Then ſo walk in him, by going in the ſtrength of the Lord, making mention of his righteouſneſs, and of his only.——You may ſee what a large field of matter is here; there would be no end of ſpeaking of the way or the walk here, becauſe Chriſt is the way, and the walk ſuitable thereto is accordingly moſt extenſive.

Thus you ſee the rule of the believer's walk, and what proportion and ſuitableneſs his walk ſhould have to his receiving of Jeſus Chriſt the Lord, and ſuitable to all the capacities wherein he receives him.

I may add to all that has been ſaid, that Chriſt is offered as a pattern and example. Have we received him in that capacity? then let us ſo walk in him. The body muſt walk where the head walks; the head and body muſt walk where the feet walk; and the head having influence upon the body, the feet muſt walk in a conformity. They that have received Chriſt as a pattern and example, if they walk as they have received him, muſt, through grace, follow his example; that is, they are to follow him in his faith; for, he truſted in his Father; ſo muſt we beware of caſting off the profeſſion of our faith, or deviating to error and hereſy. They are to follow him in his love, Eph. v. 2. Walk in love, as Chriſt alſo loved us; being followers of God as dear children.—They are to follow him in his holineſs; Be ye holy as I am holy.—In his zeal; The zeal of God's houſe hath eaten him up, even his zeal for the glory of God.—He walked in a conformity to the will of God; did always the things that pleaſed him; ſought the glory of his Father in all he did:—In his activity; he went up and down doing good; never reſted till he ſaid, I have finiſhed the work which thou gaveſt me to do. So we are not to weary in well-doing.—In his meekneſs, patience, and humility; Follow me for I am meek and lowly.—In his boldneſs and conſtancy, in adhering to the truth in ſpite of all oppoſition; For the joy that was ſet before him, he endured the croſs, and deſpiſed the ſhame. So we are to take up the croſs and follow him.——This is to walk in him as we have received him.

IV. The fourth general head propoſed in the method was, To ſpeak of the connexion betwixt the believer's character and the believer's duty, or betwixt receiving Chriſt, and walking in him; where we promiſed to enquire into the order of the connexion, and the reaſons of it. Now, in ſpeaking to this head we may conſider, firſt, in general, how this text, and the duties therein called to, are connected with the context; and ſecondly, in particular, how the parts of the text are connected one with another, and ſo come more cloſely to the order of this connexion.

Firſt, Let us conſider, for clearing this matter the more evidently, how this text, and what we are called to therein, are connected with the context. The ſhort text is ſome what longer, if you take it with what went before, and what follows; for, texts of ſcripture are like the links of a chain that are faſtened together, ſome before, and ſome after. Look before, and then you will ſee, that the apoſtle ſpeaks to believers; in whom he notices their order, and the ſtedfaſtneſs of their faith in Chriſt: look after, and then you will ſee, that this receiving of Chriſt, and walking in him, are joined with a being rooted and built up in him, and eſtabliſhed in the faith. And thus looking to the ſcope round about the text, and viewing both ſides of it, I notice theſe two remarks for your edification.

1. Remark, That thoſe whom the apoſtle commend, for their ſtedfaſtneſs in the faith, yet he doth exhort to walk in Chriſt. See ver. 5. compared with the text. And this teaches us this excellent leſſon, That Chriſt is to be lived, as well as known; to be lived in, as well as believed in. The beſt of believers hath need of the ſpur of exhortation ſtill to walk: proportionable to the knowledge and faith that a believer hath in Chriſt, anſwerably will he find a need of Chriſt, and of living and working in him: and ſo proportionable to his knowledge and faith, ſhould this living and walking in Chriſt be. A man may have much of the knowledge and faith of the Son of God, and yet walk very anſwerably to that meaſure of faith and knowledge that he hath; and a man may have a little meaſure of faith and knowledge of Chriſt, and yet live in very much of that little knowledge and faith, by walking in Chriſt proportionably thereto. There are luſts to be mortified in the believer, as long as he lives; there are paſſions to be ſubdued by the Spirit, and graces to be quickened and blown up by the Spirit, that they go not out: This may take up the whole man, and there is no end of this work, till ſin be quite aboliſhed, and grace be perfected. And ſo there is work enough for the believer all his days: though he be eſtabliſhed in the faith, he will find work enough ſtill to be working and going on. Therefore, the beſt believers need the ſpur of exhortation, to quicken them to practical obedience. Suppoſe a man be highly advanced in the knowledge of Chriſt, ſurely the more knowledge he hath, the more doth he ſee into himſelf, and the more corruption will he ſee in himſelf than he ſaw before: as by the bright ſun that ſhines in at the window, we will ſee thoſe motes fly up and down, that we cannot ſee by the clear day-light. The more light, the more a man ſees into himſelf, and ſo the more corruption doth he find in him, than before he thought of. Yea, take any man that walketh in Chriſt, and he hath this property, the further he goes, the leſs he thinketh he hath gone: and it is a certain truth, a man that hath gone a great way forward in religious exerciſes, the leſs he thinks he has done: for the nearer he comes to God, the greater doth he find this God to be, and the knowledge of him ſtill the more myſterious; and the farther he dives into this deep, the deeper doth he find it to be. And therefore, even thoſe, that are commended for their ſtedfaſtneſs of faith, need to be exhorted to walk in Chriſt: here is walking, and walking further and further. If any man ſhould ſay, I care for no more than will bring me to heaven; this very thought ſhews the corruption and rottenneſs of his heart; and that he ſeeks grace to be ſaved, and not to be fruitful. It is a great flaw in a man's heart, in the very deſiring of grace itſelf, when he deſires grace to be ſaved, ſo as he may be glorified in heaven; and not grace to be fruitful, ſo as God may be glorified on earth. I ſhall not ſay but ſomething of this naughtineſs may be in the heart of a true believer; but ſurely, wherever it is in its full power and dominion, it evidences the man to be no believer, to ſeek grace merely as it is a beneficial grace, to get heaven for himſelf; but not as it is a ſerviceable grace, to be laid out in the ſervice of God in Chriſt.—This is one remark from the precedent text.

2. Remark is from the ſubſequent context, That walking in Chriſt, and being rooted, built up in him, and eſtabliſhed in the faith, are coupled together: compare the text with ver. 7. And ſo we are taking a look of the other ſide of the text, walk in him, rooted, built up in him, and eſtabliſhed in the faith. And theſe are coupled together two ways, both as to the manner of walking, and as to the end of walking: the manner of walking in him, ſo as to be alſo ROOTED in him; and the end of walking in him, ſo as to be ESTABLISHED in the faith.

(1.) They are coupled as to the MANNER of walking in Chriſt; for it is a walking in him ſo as to be alſo rooted and eſtabliſhed in him. Why, here is walking, and yet a ſtanding ſtill, a being rooted. It is here juſt as it is with the foot of the compaſs; the one foot of the compaſs ſtands faſt in the centre, and the other goes round, and draws the line: ſo it is with the believer; as to his faith, he ſtands faſt and unmoveable in the matters of doctrine, that is the foot of the compaſs that keeps the centre and ſtands faſt; but as to his goſpel-obedience, or obediential walking, according to the command in the law, in the hand of Chriſt, that is the part that moves forward, and indeed never ſtands. And thus the believer moves, and yet ſtands faſt; walks, and yet is rooted and eſtabliſhed. As it is with a man in walking, there is ſtill one foot ſtands, while the other moves, or elſe a man does not walk, but leap: ſo, many do not ſtand faſt in the faith, with one foot; nor walk in the truth, with the other foot, as it were; but they leap out of one doctrine to another, not being eſtabliſhed in the faith, nor walking in Chriſt, ſo as alſo to be rooted in him. And thus we may underſtand the ſcriptures that ſometimes injoin us to go forward, and ſometimes command us to ſtand faſt: you may thus reconcile the ſcripture that ſays, ſtand faſt in the faith; and another ſcripture that ſays, Run the race ſet before you: why, in the way, run; in the truth, ſtand. If a man ſtand ſtill in the way of obedience, ſuch a man ſtands when he ſhould run; but if he runs out of the faith or doctrine of the goſpel, this man runs when he ſhould ſtand. If a tree be removed to-day from this place, and tranſplanted to-morrow to another place; and ſo on from place to place, it drys, and cannot bear fruit: even ſo, the Chriſtian that changes from doctrine to doctrine, decays in fruitfulneſs; he is looſe, and not eſtabliſhed in the faith, and ſo cannot walk in Chriſt; for theſe two are coupled together, namely, walking in him, and being rooted and eſtabliſhed in the faith.—Thus they are connected as to the manner of walking in Chriſt.

(2.) They are coupled as to the END of walking in him; for, the end of walking in Chriſt, is to be rooted and eſtabliſhed: It is a remarkable promiſe made to the poor feeble ones in Chriſt's houſe, John 7. 17. If any man will do his will, he ſhall know the doctrine whether it be of God: This doctrine is not man's, but God's. Now, how ſhall I know whether the doctrine be of God, or not: why, if you do his will, you ſhall know it; that is, by walking in Chriſt he ſhall get much experience: for, as true knowledge makes way for practice; ſo, goſpel practice makes way for more knowledge and experience. O but a practical Chriſtian, is the moſt experienced Chriſtian in the world! You may very eaſily obſerve, that a tree is not rooted in a day; but the more it grows upward, the more it is rooted; and the more it is rooted, the better it is: ſo, they that walk in Chriſt ſhall be confirmed and eſtabliſhed in the faith. You will never find a man of mere notional knowledge, that hath any rootedneſs or ſtedfaſtneſs; nay, but the practical Chriſtian comes to be more and more an experimental Chriſtian. He that doth his will, ſhall know the doctrine: the meaning is not, that our knowledge and experience is owing to our work; but that, where a man, through grace, is helped to practical religion, ſo as not to ſatisfy himſelf with notions and ſpeculations, but ſo as to ſubject himſelf to the preceptive will of the Lord, that man is in the high way of growing in knowledge, and further experience.—Thus the text ſtands connected with the context.

Secondly, Let us conſider how the parts of the text ſtand connected with one another: As ye have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him. Here you ſee, receiving of Chriſt, and walking in him, are coupled together: what God hath joined, no man ſhould put aſunder, otherwiſe it is at his peril. And though theſe two cannot be ſeparate in reality, yet the moſt part of people people separate them in effect: some pretend that they receive Christ, and yet certainly they do not walk in him; and some, on the other hand, seem to walk in him, in some outward good life and works, and yet certainly do not Christ. Now, if you sever these two sorts of professors from the rest in the visible church, those that profess to receive Christ, and yet do not walk in him, and those that seem to walk in him by their good works, and yet have not received him, you will find, that those that truly receive Christ, and walk in him, are very thin sawn: for, as few of those in scripture, that called Abraham, Father, were indeed his children; so our Lord tells us, as few of those that pretend to Christ, are indeed Christians. Look upon the greatest part of the world this day, it is unchristian; because they receive not Christ: look to the greatest part of Christendom, and they are unchristian too; because they walk not in him, though they pretend to receive him: these two must be coupled, and the dividing these two, mars the whole. He is no Christian that does not receive Christ; and he is no receiver of Christ, that doth not walk in him: and therefore he is no Christian that doth not walk in Christ: in a true Christian both these meet, receiving and walking. It may be said of many, The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau: Their voice is the voice of a Christian, but their hands are the hands of an atheist, or an infidel. Where Christ is most named and professed, without being truly received, there he is dishonoured. Search the whole world over, and where will you find the most proud, the most cruel, the most selfish, the most carnal, wicked, and worldly persons? it is even among notional and nominal Christians, who, hearing of Christ, either profess to receive him, but never walk in him; or, fancy they walk in him, and yet never receive him.

If you ask me, Where is the most unsavoury dung-hill? I answer, It is where the sun shines hotest: so, in these days of the gospel, where in the world will you find the greatest sins committed, or the most nauseous dung-hill of sinful corruptions? it is even where the sun shines hotest, and where the gospel shines brightest: think not strange to see, that where the gospel shines most brightly, there the devil works most spitefully, that he may break this chain, viz. the receiving of Christ, and walking in him: when these two are cut asunder, it spoils all.—Thus much for the connexion.

But now, the order of this connexion follows to be considered: it is first a receiving of Christ, and then a walking in him; receiving is first, in as much as the branch must first be in the vine, before it can bear fruit: there must be an inbeing, before there can be a fruit-bearing, John xv. 1.—5. There it is Christ's doctrine, and here it is the apostle's. Now, we must enquire into the reasons of this order, that there must be a receiving BEFORE a walking, and a walking AFTER the receiving. We would therefore shew, 1. Why there must be a receiving of Christ, BEFORE there can be a walking in him. 2. Why there must be a walking in him, AFTER the receiving him.

1st. Why there must be a receiving of Christ, BEFORE there can be a walking in him.

1. Because receiving of Christ is that which constitutes and gives being to a Christian. Now, we have a common rule, that esse must go before operare; that being must go before working; life before walking. Now, if you ask, What it is that constitutes and gives being to a saint, to a Christian, to a believer? I reply, It is this receiving of Christ; it is by this means that we become the sons of God; John 1. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he power, [or PRIVILEGE,] to become the sons of God; even to them that believe on his name. It is by this means, that, we having union with Christ, have the righteousness of Christ; Phil. iii. 9. That I may be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, but the righteousness of God by faith: first, we must be found in him, before we can have any thing from him; and this union is by a faith of his own operation: this gives the being and constitution; for, till we receive Christ, we are not unite to him, and so have no spiritual life or being. It it true, in regeneration, the Spirit of life comes in to the soul; but the first act of spiritual life is faith, whereby the soul closes with Christ, and so becomes a Christian indeed. As the union of matter and form, makes a body; the union of body and soul together, makes a man; and the union of a man and Christ together, makes a Christian; and sap from this root, makes him a growing one: so, it is not good fruit, that makes a good tree; but the good tree, that makes the good fruit: and as it is sap from the root, and the reception of it, that makes the branch to bring forth; so it is not the fruit of works and obedience that constitutes a Christian, or gives him a being, but it is the reception of Christ, the receiving of him as Jesus the Lord; and therefore that must be first.

2. Because receiving of Christ is the rise and ground of walking in him; and therefore receiving is first, as the cause before the effect. A man may bring forth the fruit of works morally good, and may bring them forth upon his own root, as a natural man; but he can never walk in Christ, until he do it in virtue of receiving Christ, and receiving sap from him. As the fruit of a tree is the sap of the root concocted; so walking and working in Christ, is just the sap of the Spirit of grace, putting forth itself into obedience; and that sap must be received from the root, ere it can be produced in fruit; and therefore receiving must go before walking. None can walk in Christ unless they be in him: as the branch cannot bear fruit in the tree, unless it knit to the stock; so we cannot walk in Christ, without being united unto him. Works and duties though they be performed in a conformity to the law, as the rule; yet this is not walking in Christ, unless it be done by virtue from Christ, and drawn out of him. Conceive it thus; a man may write a copy by his own art and skill, and a man may write with his hand by another man's guiding it; even so, out of moral principles, a man may shape his actions according to the law and rule; he may write this copy with his own hand: but then, as one that writes with his hand in another man's hand that guides it, so one that is in Christ, walks indeed in a conformity to the law as a rule, otherwise it is no walking aright in Christ; but he walks in the life and Spirit of Christ, he writes after the copy with his hand in the hand of Christ, being acted by these influences and graces of the Spirit, that, through his union with him, are always flowing to him. And thus a believer's walkwalking is distinguished from all other walkings in the world, he being acted by the very Spirit and life of Christ: he bears fruit by the sap and life, which he receives from the tree of life, to which he is united; and not upon the old stock from which he is transplanted.

3. The third reason, why receiving of Christ goes BEFORE walking in him, is, because receiving of Christ is one of the principal things, whereby any soul can honour God. The world little considers this, how God is honoured by their taking Christ off his hand; how he is honoured by this act of faith in receiving of Christ: for, by receiving him, we renounce ourselves, all confidence in the flesh. Now, while a man hath any thing to trust to in his own opinion, he will never seek after Christ the Saviour; but when a man begins to count all his gain loss, and can throw himself over board, that he may come to Christ only; how doth this glorify and honour God!—Again, when a great sinner, that lies under an infinite load of sin and guilt, notwithstanding all discouragements from the multitude and magnitude of his sins, though infinitely great, yet doth so value the truth of God's word, and lay such stress upon the veracity of his promise, as to break through all discouragements, and throw his soul upon God's promise, saying, If I perish, I perish; what infinite honour doth this bring in to the crown of heaven!—Again, when a benighted soul sees no light of comfort in all the world, and yet can throw himself upon a God in Christ, saying, Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him; this honours God greatly: for, still we may mark this at any time, the faith that carries the soul through the greatest difficulties and cotrarieties to God, doth bring the greatest glory and honour to him. Men do not think they honour God, but by outward works of piety, equity, charity, and the like; but, however we ought to glorify God that way; yet God gets the greatest glory by the strongest faith. Abraham was strong in the faith, giving glory to God: How did he honour God this way? Even by trusting God, notwithstanding all unlikelihood, Rom. iv. 19, 20, 21. Yea, by faith God is so much honoured and glorified, that nothing pleases him without it; Without faith it is impossible to please God, Heb. xi. 6.

4. The fourth reason is, because before a man receive Christ, he hath neither power nor will to walk in him; but by receiving of him, he hath both: before receiving of Christ he hath no power nor ability; but he is acted and enabled by receiving of Christ to walk in him. As it is impossible for a dead man to walk; so it is impossible for a man that hath not received Christ to walk in him. No unbeliever, no unregenerate man ever did, or can walk in Christ; such a man is not in him, all his works are out of him. But, on the contrary, every man that hath received Christ by faith, is in Christ; and being in him, he hath all righteousness and strength in him, and so ability to walk in him; and he may be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus; strong in the Lord: he hath also a new principle; the seed of God in him. And as he hath a power, so he hath a will to walk in him; for his enmity and antipathy against God and Christ is broken; so that it becomes as easy and pleasant to walk in Christ, as before it was uneasy, unpleasant, and hateful. If water be poured out, it will run downward to the centre; but water metamorphosed and transformed into air, would mount upwards, because of its new principle; and it is impossible for it to come down: so here, before you receive Christ by faith, whereby you are united to him, it is impossible but that you should go downward to your own centre, to seek yourselves in what you do; but when a man hath another principle, he goes the quite contrary way, with as much easiness as he did the other way; so it is with every believer, as far as he is under the influence of the new Spirit, that is put within him. And so you see why receiving is first.

2*dly*, Why there must be a walking in him, AFTER the receiving of him; and so we are come to the reasons, why believers should walk in Christ as they have received him; or why a GOSPEL-FAITH must have a GOSPEL-PRACTICE*. Why it is every way reasonable and necessary, and that in respect of God, and man, and ourselves, and our faith.

1. The first reason, why they that receive Christ must walk in him, is in respect of GOD, that he may be glorified; and CHRIST, that he may be honoured. It is by walking in him that we glorify and honour him: the glory of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost is concerned here; for the glory of the FATHER, as the end; the SON, as the way; and the HOLY GHOST as the guide, are all honoured by this gospel-walk; John xv. 8. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit. John xvii. 10.—And I am glorified in them, says Christ. And the believer being the temple of the Holy Ghost, surely he is glorified when his temple is not defiled, by a sinful walk. In a word, it is a great affront upon Christ, not to walk in him as we receive him: it is the greatest injury done to Christ; By this they give great occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme, 2 Sam. xii. 14. A wrong step in a believer, is very dishonouring to God, and makes enemies to blaspheme the name of the Lord. Therefore,

2. The second reason, why they that receive Christ are to walk in him, is in respect of MAN, that they may be edified, and brought to glorify God: also, Let your light so shine before men, that others, seeing your good works, may glorify God. Men will not look in to your heart, to see your faith; nor up to your head, to see what knowledge you have; but down to your feet, to see what for a walk you have: they cannot look to the sap that is within, but they will look to the fruit that is without, and judge of the tree by the fruit, and of your faith by your works.

3. The third reason, why they that receive Christ are to walk in him, is in respect of YOURSELVES, who are believers, and receivers of Christ, that you may be confirmed; for you are to judge the truth of your faith, not by the degrees of your confidence, but by the degrees of your conquest over sin, Satan, and the world, in a gospel-walk; even as you may know the height of the sun by the shortness of your shadow, rather than by the degrees of altitude; if the shadow be short, the sun is high; if the shadow be long, the sun is low: so here, if the shadow of sin and corruption be long, your faith is low; but if it is short, your faith is in a more lively exercise. How can you have the comfort of faith, if you do not rise and walk, as you have received him? If you do not walk, it is a sign you never received light, 1 John i. 7.

* See what was said on the second general head, page 199, 200. Hereby the power of faith is seen, the trial of faith is made, the beauty of faith appears to others, and the comfort of faith accrues to ourselves, etc.

in

4. The fourth reason, why they that receive Christ, are to walk in him, is in respect of FAITH itself: faith, where-ever it is, brings in this walk in point of necessity, congruity, obligation, and encouragement.

(1.) In point of necessity: It is native, as I said, for a man that hath received Christ to walk in him; it implys a contradiction, not to walk in him, and yet to receive him; How shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Rom. vi. 2. The believer is dead, and his life is hid with Christ in God, Col. iii. 3. If ye be dead and buried, united to Christ, in his death and burial, how can ye live in sin? You can no more live therein, than a dead man can come back, and eat and drink in the world. Therefore, if you do not walk in Christ, ye plainly declare that your pretending to receive him, was but a cheat and a sham; for, he that receiveth him must walk in him, and will walk in him, and cannot but walk in him. Why? he that receiveth Christ, receiveth him as a Jesus and as a Lord: which infers two parts of practical religion; the fiducial part, which is a receiving him as a Jesus, a Saviour; and the obediential part, which is a receiving him as a Lord, and so walking in him as a Lord and Law-giver: so that they who receive him, must walk in him.

(2.) In point of congruity: Is it not congruous to the soul's deed in receiving him? Did you not receive him as the way to the Father? Why then, if you walk not in him, you take another way, and look to another airth.—Is it not congruous to the end for which you received him? Did you receive him only to look to him a while, and then to let him go? No; if ever you received him, it was that you might abide in him.

(3.) In point of obligation: there is the strongest obligation upon any man that receives Christ, to walk in him; even as in marriage, when two are married together, there is a mutual obligation they come under, to those duties that are required of each of them: so, a man when he receives Christ, he is married to him, and so comes under the strongest, and yet the sweetest obligations: for, in the day of espousals, the soul is made to say, as Jer. l. 5. Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord, in a perpetual covenant, that shall not be forgotten: It is a joining to the Lord as our strength, to carry us on in the way wherein we should go; so that we may be exalted to mount up with wings as eagles, run and not weary, walk and not faint.

(4.) In point of encouragement: the man that receiveth Christ, hath the greatest encouragement, and incitement in the world, to walk in Christ: for, he, receiving Christ, receiveth all things that can contribute for carrying him on in this way and walk. What does a man receive, when he receives Christ? 1. He receiveth the pardon of all his sins; In him we have redemption through his blood, even the remission of sin, Col. i. 19. And what encouragement is this, to walk in Christ! May not a man love much, who hath so much forgiven him? 2. When you receive Christ you receive peace and reconciliation with God; We have peace through the blood of his cross, Col. i. 19. And what encouragement is this, that you have to do with a reconciled God! O strong encouragement to walk in him! 3. When you receive Christ, you receive grace; for, Out of his fulness we receive, and grace for grace. And what encouragement is this to walk in him, that you receive grace from him! Do you not receive him for this end, that you may have grace in him, and grace from him? And why then not walk in him as ye have received him? 4. When you receive Christ, you receive the promise, yea, all the promises of the new and well-ordered covenant; for, they are all Yea and Amen in Christ. He hath given us exceeding great and precious promises, saith the apostle Peter, 2 Pet. i. 4. And now, Having these promises, saith the apostle Paul, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God, 2 Cor. vii. 1. 5. When you receive Christ, you receive the Spirit; and here is the principle of a holy walk: I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes. Is not this encouragement, to walk in him as ye have received him, that you have the Spirit dwelling in you as an inhabitant? 6. When you receive Christ, you receive the adoption of children; Rom. viii. 15. Ye have received the Spirit of adoption. And again, Gal. iv. 4, 5. Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, ABBA, Father. John i. 12. To as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God; even to them that believe on his name. Is not this encouragement to be followers of God as dear children? 7. When you receive Christ, you receive a right and title to eternal glory; John xiv. 2, 3. In my Father's house are many mansions:—I go to prepare a place for you, and I will come again, and receive you to myself, that where I am, there you may be also. And what encouragement is this to walk in him, in the joyful hope of walking with him in white for ever! 8. When you receive Christ, you receive all things in him. I cannot tell what you receive, or how much you receive, when you receive Christ; for he is all in all: and in him dwells all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, Col. ii. 9. It pleased the Father, that in him should all fulness dwell, Col. i. 19. And in him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, Col. ii. 3. He is all for present support, and all for after happiness: and if he be yours, all is yours. What more encouragement can be given to walk in him, and improve him as your all?——Thus you see, why walking in him must go AFTER the receiving; and why believers in Christ are to walk in him.

Now, what say you of your Christianity, man? you that profess to be a Christian, that is, a receiver of Christ Jesus the Lord, do you so walk in him? I believe it to be a needful work to Un-Christ many that pretend to be in Christ: you know Christ, in his preaching, went about to Un-Moses some; to bring the Jews from under the wings of Moses, under whose name they did the works of the devil; and from under the wings of Abraham: he shows whose children they were, indeed not Abraham's, but the devil's. Even so, it were a needful work to Un-Christ some persons, that pretend to be Christians, and to bring them from under the wings of Christ, under whose wings they do the works of the devil: Surely, if ever Christ was received by you, so as to be in you, he would produce these graces in you, which he himself had, and which he himself preached, while he was here: but while men bring arguments from Christ, to shelter their base lusts and idols, their base ends and purposes, it is the greatest dishonour done to the name of Christ; for, The foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are his: and, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ, depart from iniquity.——Thus much for the fourth general head, viz. the connexion between the believer's character and the believer's duty; or, between receiving Christ and walking in him.

If believers, who have received Christ, do not walk in him, none in all the world will; if they stand still, who will go forward? Many there are in our day, that are like the sun in Joshua's time, that stood still; nay, many worse, like the sun in Hezekiah's time, that went backward ten degrees; they have gone backward many degrees: few there are like the sun in its ordinary course, still going forward; still walking in Christ, as the sun doth run in the firmament. It is true, as the sun once stood still, and another time went backward; so the saint may stand still, and through temptation, be driven backward: but his denomination is to be taken, from his ordinary course, and habitual walk. It was the commendation of Enoch, that he walked with God: and how shall one walk with God? It is by walking in Christ. And how shall one come to walk in Christ? It is by the means of receiving him, under the influence of heaven; As you have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him.

V. The fifth thing was the application of the doctrine. Is it so, that it is the great and indispensable duty of all true believers, who have received Christ Jesus the Lord, to walk in him as they have received him? then hence many things might be in inferred, and many uses deduced: I shall confine myself to these four in a special manner. 1. For information, to instruct us in some precious truths. 2. For reproof, to convict us of some errors, both doctrinal and practical. 3. For examination, to try our faith and obedience. 4. And more especially, for exhortation, to excite and direct us, both to receive Christ and walk in him.

First, The first use is for information. Is it so, that a gospel-principle, or a gospel-faith is the foundation of a gospel-practice, then hence see,

1. The nature and excellency of the gospel; it is just that whereby God makes an offer of Christ to us, and all salvation in him; for the receiving of Christ here, hath a relation to the offer. A receiving faith presupposes an offering hand: now, Christ is offered to us in the gospel; there is God's offering hand: but where is our receiving hand of faith? Alas! whence is it, that we cannot take Christ that is offered to us? Even because our hand is full: the empty hand is a receiving hand; but our hands are so full of sin, so full of the world, so full of self-righteousness, that we have not an empty hand, to receive what is offered to us by the hand of free grace, in the gospel: and we have no will to quit our hold of that, with which our hands are full, and hence cannot take a grip of Christ offered to us. However, herein lies the excellency of the gospel, that it is a Christ, a Jesus, a Lord that is offered to us therein: and the gospel is to be pressed on this account, because, as all that reject it rejects Christ; so, all that receives it truly doth receive Christ in it. Human doctrine, however true, brings nothing but, at best, knowledge and speculation to us; but gospel-doctrine brings salvation to us: yea, the Saviour himself to our hand, to be received: and, when the offering hand of the gospel, and the receiving hand of faith meets together, then the good work is begun.

2. Hence see the nature and excellency of faith; it is a receiver of Christ Jesus the Lord, as he is held forth in the word and sacrament. It is true, there is a difference between the receiving of Christ in the word, and the receiving of him in the sacrament, i. e. in the Lord's supper. More generally, in the word, all sinners are welcome to Christ, as a Saviour and Lord; and in the sacrament, all believers are welcome to come to him anew. But more particularly, in the word we receive Christ under an offer and a promise; but in the sacrament, we receive him under a pawn, a pledge, and a seal. However, herein lies the nature and excellency of faith, that it is a fiducial reception of Christ Jesus the Lord. You say you believe, man; but, what is it that you do believe? Is it only that God offers Christ to your faith? Why, surely there is more than a believing that Christ is offered to you: what is a poor man the richer for believing, that one offers him a shilling? What is a condemned man the better for believing, that a pardon is offered to him? But, do you receive the offer? It is true, many come not this length to believe truly, that God offers Christ to them in particular; and yet where it is without any more, it is but the faith of the truth of the offer: you believe this to be a truth; and if you believe no more, that faith doth but serve to your just condemnation: it is not merely the truth-acknowledging, but the Christ-receiving faith that bringeth salvation. A woman may believe a man to be rich and honourable, and real in his suit; yet, that believed, doth not make marriage, but actual consent to take him for a husband: Even so, a man or woman may believe Christ to be a full, glorious, and suitable Saviour and Lord, and real in his suit and offer; but, that believed, doth not make marriage and union to Christ, but actual consent, to take him for your Saviour, and your Lord.

3. Hence see, what is the glorious object of faith; and, therein also the difference between saving and justifying faith. Christ Jesus the Lord is the object of faith; and faith, as it is saving, doth embrace Christ in all his offices, and in all these capacities, as Christ Jesus the Lord. But now, there are two special branches of salvation, namely, justification and sanctification; and these being two different things, faith acts upon Christ for them, in a different manner. Faith acts upon Christ for justification, as he is a JESUS; or by receiving him as a Jesus: faith acts upon Christ for sanctification, as he is a LORD; or by receiving him as a Lord. In justification we receive him as a Jesus, to be saved from the guilt of sin; in sanctification we receive him as a Lord, to be delivered from the power of sin. Now, though both these acts of faith goes together, to make up saving faith; though they be inseparable from one another, in the same faith; yet they differ, as the eye and the ear in the same head: for, as we do not see with the ear, nor hear with the eye; so, neither are we justified by that act of faith, that that receives Christ, as a Lord, for sanctification; but by that act of faith that receives him, as a Jesus, for justification: we are not justified by that act of faith that receives Christ, as a King; but by that act of faith that receives Christ as a Priest *. However, when we speak of salvation in general, which respects both justification, sanctification, and all; the object of it is a whole Christ, both as a Jesus and a Lord; to be redeemed by him as a Jesus, and governed by him as a Lord. It is not true faith that blows hot and cold out of the same mouth; that cries, HOSANNA to the Son of David; and yet says, We will not have this man to reign over us.

4. Hence see what is the root of right religion, and where it begins; and what is the root of true obedience, and the principle of it: It is rooted in union to Christ by the faith of God's operation; for, there is no walking in him, till once there be a receiving of him. Men may have a moral walk, a fair outward life, a good complication of many excellent beautiful virtues, and the matter and metal of them may be very good; but, like coin that does not pass, they want the king's superscription upon them; having nothing of Christ in them. Yea, these moral virtues that some boast of are, many times, the greatest obstructions against Christ, that can be; while the man is puft up with his self-fitness, and self-righteousness. A bottle stopped with gold receives not so much, as an empty shell will do: even so, some may be filled and stopped with golden virtues; and hence they receive not so much as an empty soul, destitute of all these, will do. But here perhaps you will say, Is there any need that a change be wrought upon a virtuous man, one that has lived a virtuous life all his days? Yea, surely there is; for, there is as great a difference between a life of moral virtue, and a life of true grace, as there is between the light of the stars, and the light of the day: and, when grace changes such a man, it is a change from star-light to day-light: let him have never so many virtues, all these stars will not make a day. It is true, religion is under a great eclipse in our day: and, as a bright star will shine and make a figure, in the eclipse of the sun; so will moral honesty, when true Christianity is under such an eclipse: but yet, let me tell you that this is not a gospel-state: The true invisible church is a woman clothed with the sun, the Sun of righteousness. There must be an implanting into Christ, a receiving of him; before there can be any true gospel-walk. Religion must begin at receiving; and the walking that goes before receiving, is but morality at best; and whatever use it may be of to others, it is not what will be for your comfort or salvation.

5. Hence see, that the doctrine of the gospel, doth give no room for licentious walking. They reproach the gospel, who slander it as a doctrine of carnal liberty and licentiousness: for, it calls to receive Christ, and then to walk in him. GOSPEL-LIBERTY, is not a liberty to sin, but a liberty and freedom from sin. True believers are practical Christians: as by the same hand we receive a thing, we also work; so faith is the receiving hand, that receives Christ in the promise; and it is a working hand, that works by love in the commandment: and love makes his commandments not grievous. Why? because faith's receiving Christ and the promise, is first: for, in the law, the obedience to the command is first, and this engages the promise; Do this, and live: but, in the gospel, Christ and the promise is first received, and this brings in gospel-obedience to the law, and that in all duties, both of humility towards God; and righteousness, towards man. In humility towards God; or, walking humbly with him: What a scandal is it, to hear it said, There goes a proud professor; there goes a drunken professor of religion, or the like; but a humble walk before God, adorns religion; and self-denial is the glory of all our duties. The doctrine of the gospel is a doctrine according to godliness; it gives no toleration to sin, or impiety toward God.——In righteousness towards man, doth this gospel-obedience also vent itself: duties of religion, without righteousness towards man, are hateful to God; I hate your sacrifices, saith the Lord; they are full of blood. True religion is practical; it doth not ly in profession, but gospel-practice; not in talking of Christ, but walking in Christ. Many, as I said before, are like the lark that sings with the highest, but builds with the lowest; they sing with the highest, as high as angels, in their profession, but they build with the lowest, as low as devils in their practice: in their profession they sing and mount toward heaven; but in their practice they build upon the earth, and their affections are low, earthly, and sensual: they build their nest in the earth. —Gospel-liberty doth not ly in some faint resolutions; but real performances, through the grace of Christ. Many, under convictions, will flee to their good purposes and resolutions; like a mariner in a storm at sea, who, for the time, will do any thing; but when the danger is blown over, he is just where he was. A man that hath the falling sickness, in his lucid intervals may resolve to fall no more; but it is to little purpose, without some application to the disease, that lies within: so it is with resolutions, upon convictions of conscience; without application to Christ, for mortifying grace, to subdue their corruptions; and purifying grace, to wash away their pollutions. —Gospel-liberty doth not ly in legal conviction; for, without union to Christ, by faith, there is no true sanctity, or gospel-walking; whatever way a man may be bruised, in the mortar of legal conviction and humiliation, and broken with the hammer of the law: cut a bee in pieces, yet she puts forth her sting; so here, still the sting of enmity remains: let iron be broken into pieces, yet still it remains hard; so, a heart may be broken in pieces, and yet remain hard and unhumbled. But true humility is, when the soul is melted, so as to run into this gospel-mould; so as to receive Christ, and walk in him.

6. Hence see, that true religion is a qualified motion; for it is a WALK. It is a progressive motion, a moving forward; a pressing toward the mark; a going from strength to strength; from glory to glory; from faith to faith: We are like the boat in the stream, if it goes not forward by the oar, it will go backward with the tide; it cannot stand still. Many, as I noticed before, are like a wheel, they go round, yet still keep the same place; they go the external round of duties, but having no union to Christ, make no progress in the way of holiness. But this walk is progressive; the man grows in grace, and and in the knowledge of Christ.—It is a permanent motion: it is a motion, and yet a ſtedfaſtneſs, as I ſaid before; for, the man ſtands faſt in the faith, and yet walks faſt in obedience: he walks in Chriſt, rooted and eſtabliſhed in him, as ye have been taught. The apoſtle guards the Galatians from declining from the ſimplicity of the goſpel, upon this argument, Gal. i. 8. There is not another Jeſus, than he whom we have preached; there is not another Spirit, than he whom ye have received; there is not another goſpel, than that which we have publiſhed; if there were another, then ye might receive it; but becauſe there is not another, therefore keep by this Jeſus: there is but one Chriſt, and truth cannot be but one; if there were more truths than one, or more goſpels than one, the apoſtle could not have ſaid there, If we, or an angel from heaven, preach another goſpel, let him be accurſed. Whatever manifold articles of truth there be, yet truth itſelf is but one; and Chriſt the centre of truth is one: if there were any more truths or goſpels but one, why would the apoſtle curſe the angels, that ſhall preach another? for that which they preach may be truth too: no, ſays he, ſpeaking of juſtification by Chriſt, and not by the works of the law, If any man, or angel from heaven, preach another doctrine, let him be accurſed; this doctrine we are to hold faſt. It is a permanent walk.—And again, it is a perpetual motion; a perſevering thing; a conſtant motion: to walk is not to make a ſtep or two, but imports conſtancy; The righteous holdeth on his way. It is true, his ſin may make him go halting; and this is what makes a ſaint continually jealous, that he knows nothing of walking in Chriſt; becauſe he thinks, it is not a conſtant motion that he makes; but is many times and ways interrupted. But I would ſay, for the encouragement of the weak believer, that ſin may be felt, and yet the walk in Chriſt may be conſtant; a man may be lame, and halt in his walking, and yet go on; Jacob wreſtled with God, and yet went away halting; Paul had a thorn in the fleſh, that made him halt; however, he ſaw the uſe of that thorn, like a corroſive to eat away the proud fleſh growing: Leſt I ſhould be exalted above meaſure, there was given me a thorn in the fleſh. Hence, ſays one of the fathers, "Proud hearts have need of ſins, as proud "ſores of eating plaiſters:" in this caſe it is better to feel a corruption, than to be quite of it. A child of God will ſometimes ſee his grace, by looking to his ſin: To apply to this a ſimile that I uſed for repreſenting another thing: A man may look for the ſun's riſing in the eaſt; but he that looks for it toward the weſt, on the top of a high tower or ſteeple, may ſee it firſt: Even ſo, a man may ſee and know his grace ſooner many times, by looking to his ſins, than to his graces, though they be contrary one to another: grace is more apt to ſee ſin than to ſee itſelf; for, the eye that ſees other things, doth not ſee itſelf: ſo, grace may not ſee itſelf, but it ſees ſin and corruption; and thus humbles, and ſo carries the man forward.——Finally, it is a regular motion; it is a walking by rule; a walking in Chriſt, according as we have received him: of which I ſpoke at large, in the doctrinal part.

* See this important point of doctrine more copiously handled above, at the close of the first general head, page 197, 198.

7. Hence ſee what is the way to heaven: Chriſt is the way, and holineſs is the walk in it; and ſo, holineſs is as neceſſary to heaven, as a man's walking in a way, is neceſſary to come to his journey's end: hence, Without holineſs no man ſhall ſee God; for, it is juſt a walking in the way to heaven: and the excellency of holineſs lies in this, that it is a walking in Chriſt by faith. Chriſt is the only way: he that thinks to reach to heaven out of this way, ſhall wander like a blind man, and never come there. The text ſhews, how faith and manners all centre in Chriſt. In our RECEIVING Chriſt, is the act of faith; in our WALKING in him, is the life of faith: He is the all of our faith and obedience. In our receiving, he is the object to be received; in our walking, he is the way we are to walk in. Many pretend to be Chriſtians; but, being ſtrangers to Chriſt, they are monſters: for, to be a Chriſtian without Chriſt, is like a body without a head.

8. Hence ſee, that true faith is never alone, but ſtill joined with goſpel-obedience; As ye have received, ſo walk. He that would disjoin faith from obedience, endeavours to walk with one foot, which is impoſſible. Faith and works, faith and holineſs, are the two feet, by which a man doth walk in Chriſt: and when the Spirit of Chriſt doth promote the one, he doth promote the other alſo. If a man ſhould eſſay to go upon one foot, he could not walk, but only hap, which would be impoſſible for him to continue long in: neither can obedience be without faith, nor faith without obedience; but according to the meaſure of the faith, ſuch will be the meaſure of the goſpel-walk. As the fuller a veſſel is, the faſter will it run over at the top; ſo, the fuller views a man gets of Chriſt, by faith, the faſter will he run in the way of evangelical obedience. When Jacob had ſeen the ſweet viſion in Bethel, he lift up his feet, Gen. xxix. 1.: it put mettle into him. So here, when the poor ſoul hath once received Chriſt, and got the faith of his own operation, he is made chearfully to run the way of his commandments. Therefore,

9. Hence ſee, that the believer hath always much ado with Chriſt; having received Chriſt, he is ſtill to make uſe of him, by walking in him: habitual grace will not do his buſineſs, without actual grace. The believer is like the ſhip; it is not enough that he have the ſails of grace implanted, but he muſt have the wind of the Spirit filling his ſails, otherwiſe he cannot make way towards the heavenly port. The believer is like a branch, that hath nothing of its own, but what it receives from the root, even as itſelf doth ſo ſpring from the root: he is like the moon which, as appeareth from the eclipſe, hath no light of itſelf, but increaſeth, and cometh to full, as it receiveth from the ſun. Let none think, that believers have no further uſe for Chriſt, after their firſt believing and receiving of him; nay, as Chriſt is the author, ſo is he the finiſher of faith: Therefore, As ye have received him, ſo walk ye in him.

10. Hence we may ſee, what is the beſt fortification againſt all ungodlineſs, and antidote againſt apoſtaſy. This inference I deduce from the text, compared with the whole context; for it comes in with an antidote againſt defection: for he tells, there were ſome that went about, to burden them with vain philoſophy, human propoſitions, and ſuperſtitious ceremonies, ver. 8, 16, 17, 18, 20, 23. You ſee then, I would not go off from the ſcope of my text, to ſpeak upon this ſubject; for, how doth the apoſtle fortify them againſt theſe evils? It is even by this; As ye have receiv- ed Christ, so walk ye in him: So that receiving him and walking in him, is the only way to be kept from defection. Let a man receive Christ, and he will reject these things; let a man walk in Christ, and he will go out of the way of these dangerous rocks; if a man receive Christ, and walk in him, he will abandon and slight all the trash of hell and Rome. He that hath enough ado to get food for his family, he will not bestir himself, to take in chaff and trash; but, if a baker come with an armful of bread, he will take in somewhat from him: so it is here, they that see a need of Christ, and receiving of him into their house, their heart, as the bread of life, they will not be careful to take in empty chaff, and superstitious trash. They that take in Christ, the body, the substance, will not regard the shadow and ceremony, ver. 17. And why are ye subject to ordinances, or burdened therewith? saith the apostle, ver. 20. Men will not willingly suffer under impositions in their free-holds in the world; and far less should they suffer the world to impose burdens upon their souls; such as the burdensom worship of antichristian, prelatic, abjured ceremonies. You heard the last Lord's day, of the evil of such superstitious ceremonial worship, as it is a breach of Scotland's Covenants, and a profanation of God's name, and an incurring the judgment threatened in the third command: nay, as my reverend brother * told you the danger of it, so I would tell you the antidote against it; and it is just in my text, to receive Christ, and to walk in him. As Christ and Antichrist are opposites; so, if you receive Christ, you cannot but reject the trash of Antichrist. To walk in Christ, and to walk in the road of superstition, is irreconcilable: let Christ in, and Antichrist will out: let faith take place, and superstitious fancies will evanish.

ed

In a word, O see that your faith be a Christ-accepting faith, so as to receive him; and a Christ-improving faith, so as to walk in him: If your faith be not of this kind, it is not a saving, but a damning faith. Many have a faith that keeps them from faith; a believing that holds them fast in unbelief. All the terrors of the law draws no blood, all the invitations of the gospel moves you not; why? because you ly under the canopy and shelter of this faith and believing, which defeats the operation both of law and gospel, till God open your eyes to see through it. O seek, that the Lord may bring you to a faith, that receives Christ indeed, and so walks in him! The life of believers, after conversion, is an active life: none of them can say, Now I have no more ado, having received Christ; I may walk at random, and live as I list; no, by no means: after Israel were come through the Red-sea, they had a wilderness to walk through; and so it is with every believer, while here in this world: but though he hath a journey to go, yet he hath the greatest encouragement to walk forward; for, he is in Christ, in whom he hath all fulness; and therefore let duties be never so difficult, and his emptiness and insufficiency for them never so great, yet no ground of discouragement, while he is in Christ, and complete in him; and called to walk in him in the whole course of his progress; yea, to walk in him as he hath received him. And if believers were walking in Christ, so as to keep up the the same frame of heart in their walk, that they had in their closing with Christ, it would be the sweetest and pleasantest life imaginable: O what a holy, humble, sensible frame of spirit, took place when you were receiving Christ! how precious! how sweet! how lovely was Christ every way to you then! what strong desires after him, and ardent love to him, and joyful delight in him, took place, in the day when you joined hands with him! And now, what a sweet life would you have, if this frame of soul was maintained, through grace, in your walk and conversation? Why, this is what you are here called to; As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him.

Secondly, The second use is for reproof and refutation of errors, both doctrinal and practical. I begin with the former of these, namely,

1st, DOCTRINAL errors, which this doctrine doth refute and reprove. And,

1. It refutes the error of these, who take fiducial application out of the nature of justifying faith, while our text makes faith to be a receiving of Christ Jesus the Lord. It is not only an assenting to the truth of the gospel, but a "receiving "and resting upon Christ, and his righteous-"ness, therein held forth, for pardon of sin, "and for the accepting and accounting of a "man's own person righteous, in the sight of "God for salvation;" as our Larger Catechism describes justifying faith, and confirms their description from, Acts xv. 11. We believe that, through the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, we shall be saved. So that, a man's believing that he shall be saved, through the grace of Christ, and receiving and resting on him, for this end, is made the very essence of justifying faith, by the purest standards of this church, in a conformity to the word of God: so much assurance and appropriating persuasion belongs to the nature of faith, according to the doctrine of all our Reformers, that take away unbelief from faith, and not a single doubt will remain behind. Whatever doubts may be in the believer, there is no doubt in his faith: it is his unbelief that creates his doubts, and not his faith. The general doubtsom faith of the Papists, is not faith but unbelief: and therefore no wonder that our forefathers abjured it, in our National Covenant. It is not a woman's believing a man to be rich and honourable, but her actual consent to take him for her husband, that makes marriage; so, it is not people's believing Christ to be a great and glorious Saviour, but actual reception of him for theirs, that makes a spiritual marriage and union to Christ: the receiving of Christ, hath as close and particular an appropriation of Christ to ourselves in it, as a man's receiving of the meat and drink, whereby his body is nourished; and therefore it is called an eating and drinking of the flesh and blood of the Son of God; John vi. 53,—57. Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day, etc. What is more ours than the meat we eat? Yet know, the best meat and drink doth no good, except you make it your own.

2. This doctrine refutes the error of these, who confound the covenant of works and the covenant of grace; the law and the gospel; justification and sanctification. The gospel-order of things things described in our text, while it makes justifying faith, in receiving Christ, to go before sanctification or walking in him, doth refute the legal mixture that many make in our day, while they put DOING in the same room it had in the covenant of works; for the legal order was, Do, and live; first the duty, and then the promise; and so, the promise was made to doing and walking uprightly: but the gospel-order is, first the promise, and then duty; first Christ is received, and the promise of life in him, and then the duty of walking in him follows; the soul being sweetly encouraged, by the promise, to the duty. The inverting of this order is legal doctrine with a witness. For men to make a promise of life to any duty or work of ours, though wrought by grace, is to turn the gospel-covenant to a covenant of works; where the promise of life was made to man, upon his doing, by the grace and strength he had received from God in his first creation: It is a new mould of a covenant of works, to make the promise of life to our duty and work, wrought by the grace of God, in the new creation: nay, the promise is not made to our working now, but to Christ, and in him to us; and this promise of life being made, and apprehended and received in Christ, then, and not till then, can a man evangelically work and walk in Christ, as he hath received him.

* The Rev. Mr. JAMES WARDLAW, our Author's Colleague.

With the same breath, it refutes the inverting of the gospel-order of justification and sanctification: for, whereas our text makes justification by faith, in receiving Christ, to go before sanctification or walking in him; some now-a-days will tell us of gospel-repentance, which is a special part of sanctification, going before faith and justification; yea, necessary in order to it. The repeating of our text is refutation enough to such doctrine: For, it plainly informs us, that justifying faith, receiving Christ Jesus, is requisite first, in order to sanctification or walking in him; and so to actual holiness: for, habitual grace is infused by the Spirit, in regeneration, at the same time that the Spirit enables the soul to receive Christ; but actual holiness cannot take place, till after this reception; and to this agrees the antient saying of some of the fathers, Fides fœta justificat ante partum; i. e. "Faith, however fruitful and big with child "of good works, yet, it justifieth before it "bring forth any." All the promises are Yea and Amen in Christ, and made to him. It is true, godliness is said to have the promises of this life and that which is to come, 1 Tim. iv. 8.; but it is not to godliness of itself, but godliness in Christ. All that live godly, do it in Christ, 2 Tim. iii. 12.: no godly walking but in Christ; and therefore no promise to a godly walk, but in Christ: To make a promise belong to our doing then, or to make our works have a federal causality, or conditionality, in obtaining life, is erroneous legal doctrine.

3. This doctrine refutes the error of those, who bring the BELIEVER under an obligation, to obey the law as in the hand of God Creator, out of Christ: Whereas, here he is laid under obligation only to walk in Christ; that is, to obey the law in Christ: not to have any thing to do with an absolute God, but a God in Christ; As ye have received Christ, so walk ye in him. The believer hath nothing to do with a God out of Christ: the authority and majesty of God is in Christ, in whom all the fulness of the Godhead dwells. And by the authority of God the Father, we are obliged to take the law, only out of the hand of Christ, who, in regard of essence, is one with the Father; and who, as Mediator, God-man, is not divested of his essential glory: This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleased, hear ye him: My name is in him, saith the Father: my authority, supremacy, sovereignty, and all: and we dishonour the Father, if we put not this honour upon the Son, to receive the law from his mouth. It is so far from derogating from the honour of the Father, that we cannot honour him any other way, than in Christ; for there is no coming to the Father but by him; and no right walking but in him.

4. This doctrine refutes the error of those, who would bring the BELIEVER, in any respect, under the yoke of the law, as a covenant of works; while, "being in Christ, he is wholly "and altogether delivered from it; so as his "person is not under it, either as to its com-"manding or condemning power, so as it can "neither justify nor condemn him," as our Confession and Standards assert. It can neither justify him for his obedience, nor condemn him for his disobedience: Why? he is justified by faith, in receiving Christ, before ever he can obey by walking in him; and so cannot be justified by his obedience to the law: and being justified, his justification is perfect in Christ, and his perfect righteousness: he is freed from condemnation, and no more liable to it for his disobedience, whatever contrary apprehensions he may have, than those that are already in heaven are liable to condemnation. It is true, he is liable to fatherly wrath and chastisement, while here, but being in Christ, his glorious Head, and a part of Christ mystical, he is no more liable to condemnation, so long as he remains united to Christ, which is to eternity. When a man receives Christ, and rejects the law as a covenant; when he is married to Christ, he is divorced from the law, Rom. vii. 4. Ye are dead to the law, by the body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that ye should bring forth fruit unto God. Where also you see the believer's freedom from the law, as a covenant, strengthens his obligation to it as a rule; For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness, to every one that believeth. His righteousness of merit, for justification, is the end of the law as a covenant; his righteousness of Spirit, for sanctification, is the end of the law as a rule: and both these are reached by receiving Christ, and walking in him.

5. This doctrine refutes the error of those, who make the believer's obedience to be influenced, by the legal hopes of heaven, or slavish fears of hell. Why, to receive Christ as a Jesus, is to receive him as a Saviour, to save from hell, so as to bring the man to heaven; and to walk in him as we receive him, is to walk in him as a Saviour, and so to improve him for that salvation; both negatively, in delivering from hell, and all things that lead to it; and positively, in bringing him to heaven, and to all the means that lead to it: and therefore, as far as we do not improve him, for both these ends, we do not walk in him by faith, but depart from him by unbelief. To walk in Christ, as we have received him, is to obey him as a Saviour; and to obey him as a Saviour, that hath purchaſed heaven for us, and ſatisfied vindictive juſtice in our room: and yet to obey from a legal hope of heaven, as if our obedience was to obtain it; or from a ſlaviſh fear of hell, as if our obedience could procure freedom from it; I ſay, to walk in him, and obey him as a Saviour, and yet to be influenced by ſuch a legal hope or ſlaviſh fear, is inconſiſtent; for the one is the believer's duty, the other his ſin: the believer may be guilty of it through his unbelief, but it can never be his duty. To have the faith of hell, is the believer's duty; but to be moved by the fear of hell, is his ſin, and makes his obedience ſo far ſlaviſh and ſervile, not filial: to fear hell is to fear vindictive wrath, or the wrath of a terrible judge, which is oppoſite to the holy fear of him as a loving Father, which is always his duty. And ſurely, to walk in Chriſt, and yet to fear the wrath of a God out of Chriſt, are contrary; for, to fear God in Chriſt, is to fear him as a God reconciled in Chriſt, and not as a judge dealing with us, according to the tenor of the covenant of works, which is in vindictive wrath. There may be the fear of hell, where there is not a ſpark of grace, or true faith; as we ſee in devils and reprobates; their fear of the puniſhment of ſin may take place, while their willingneſs to ſin lives: and ſo this fear no more changes the inclination of their wills, than the whip or chain doth the nature of the fox or wolf. It is holy fear that works a godly ſorrow, and it is this godly ſorrow that brings forth theſe ſeven fruits you read of, 2 Cor. vii. 11. And thus godly ſorrow, which is the happy mother of ſo many good children, is cauſed, like Peter's weeping, by the looks of Chriſt; the reproofs, the frowns, the offences of a gracious God thaws the heart into melting fears, and would do ſo though there was no hell; as a meek child needs no other houſe of correction than his father's looks.—Again, hope of heaven is the believer's duty, when it is looked upon as a reward of grace; for, he is to have reſpect to the recompence of reward; and may excite and influence him in his obedience; but the legal hope of heaven, ſo as to expect to obtain it, by our obedience and good works, is a Chriſtleſs doctrine: for, to ſay that our works doth ſave us, is to deny that Chriſt is our Saviour. How is he your Saviour, if you might ſave yourſelves by your works? Or, wherefore ſhould he die to ſave you, if any works might have ſaved you? Nay, ſays the Apoſtle, If righteouſneſs come by the law, Chriſt is dead in vain. If you do good works, to get the inheritance of heaven thereby, you do not walk in Chriſt; for, eternal life is the gift of God, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. And if you ſeek to attain ſalvation that way, you would receive the good, not as the gift of God, but as a debt unto you; and make yourſelf fellow with God, becauſe you will take nothing from him for nought.

hath

6. This doctrine refutes the error of thoſe, that make good works and holineſs the product of man's free-will, natural power; or, at leaſt of the common and general aſſiſtance of God; or to proceed from him only as the moral cauſe, and not by way of powerful efficiency. Surely ſuch do alſo herein err, that lay ſo much ſtreſs upon natural endeavours, and moral ſerioufneſs, as to connect the ſame infallibly with ſaving grace: ſurely none of thoſe duely ponder, that faith is the gift of God, and the work of God's almighty power, requiring the ſame powerful efficiency, that raiſed Chriſt from the dead; and that true obedience and good works, is a walking in Chriſt; and that walking in Chriſt, is a walking by the ſtrength and power of the Spirit of Chriſt, who ſays, that without me ye can do nothing. Paul tells us, in his own name, and in the name of all believers, that they are not ſufficient of themſelves, to think any thing, as of themſelves, but that their ſufficiency is of God; and that it is God that worketh in us, both to will and to do of his good pleaſure. All the working and walking that men are capable of, before they receive Chriſt, is but evil works before God; for, without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God; and whatſoever is not of faith is ſin. "And ſurely evil works never make a "good man; for good works themſelves do "not make a good man: no works, good or e-"evil, makes a man either good or evil. As "good fruit makes not a tree good, nor is it "evil fruit that makes a tree evil; but a good "tree bears good fruit, and an evil tree evil "fruit: ſo, good works make not a good "man, nor evil works an evil man; but a "good man bringeth forth good works, and "an evil man bringeth forth evil works. For, "as the tree is good, ere it bringeth forth good "fruit; and evil, ere it bringeth forth evil "fruit: ſo, a man is good, ere he bring forth "good fruit; and evil ere he bring forth evil "fruit. So that our works make us neither "good nor evil*."

If a man hath not received Chriſt, he is not a good man, and cannot walk in Chriſt, or do any good work; but if a man hath received Chriſt, then, and not till then, is he a good man, and ſo is capable of walking in Chriſt, and bringing forth good works: yea natively doth this good tree bring forth good fruit.

Thus you ſee, how this doctrine ſets itſelf in oppoſition to manifold erroneous principles: theſe are only a few of many that might be named, which this text and doctrine doth refute; and too many of them are either directly, or indirectly countenanced in our day, even by public acts †, and thoſe that ought to contend moſt zealouſly for the truths of Chriſt.

The doctrine of the goſpel is like a bridge, by which alone men can go from this valley of miſery, to the regions of bliſs and happineſs; and the principles of religion, or truths of the goſpel, are like ſo many arches which, joined and united together, doth make up this bridge: and therefore, theſe errors that doth overturn any of theſe principles, do, as it were, cut out an arch from the bridge, whereby a breach is made, and the paſſage by it unto heaven, is either cut off, if the error be fundamental; or greatly obſtructed, if it nearly concerns the

* Theſe are the words, and part of the articles of that valiant and heroic champion for the truth, and famous martyr for the cauſe of CHRIST, the Rev. Mr. PATRICK HAMILTON, who was raiſed up by God to be a happy inſtrument of our reformation from popery, in contending zealouſly againſt the abominations of Rome, till he at laſt fell a ſacrifice to his cruel and mercileſs enemies, by chearfully yielding his body to the tormenting flames at St Andrews, while in that fiery chariot, through the aerial region, his ſoul aſcended to the celeſtial country, to poſſeſs eternal bleſſedneſs, on the laſt day of February 1527.—The famous Mr. GEORGE WISHART, ſuffered for the ſame good cauſe, in the very ſame place, and in the ſame manner, on the firſt of March 1546.

† Our author here has his eye upon the acts of aſſembly 1720. and 1722. condemning the Marrow of Modern Divinity. See above p. 70, 149, 150.

funda-

fundamentals of religion. Some perhaps will think, Whether or not am I making all these fundamental errors, and so all that maintain them to be cut off from heaven; and consequently accuse the most part of the ministers of this church, except a very few? To which I would reply, That, as I do not desire to be like those, that think all Blackamoors except themselves; so I presume, that the judgment of the generality of the church of Scotland is to be gathered from the the public Standards of doctrine, in our Confession, and Catechisms, deliberately enacted by this church, and to which all profess adherence; and not from any particular Acts relative to doctrine, either made by an oversight, or maintained by mere human authority. And therefore, whatever may be the dangerous consequence of public deeds of that nature; yet, I entertain charity for the most part of the ministers of the church of Scotland, that the later Acts, that seem to clash with our Standards, hath nothing of their deliberate approbation. However, the least truth ought to be sacred to every one of us, who are called to prove all things, and hold fast that which is good: For, the loss of the least truth, whether you reckon it fundamental or not, is of dangerous consequence: the loss of the least divine truth, is as the loss of a diamond out of a ring; or of a jewel out of the Mediator's crown. The gospel is like a ladder, that hath so many steps, or rounds; every truth is like a round of the ladder; and by these rounds we climb up to heaven: if you break off any round, you are in danger of falling; and your climbing up is rendered either difficult, or impossible. The truths of the gospel are like stepping-stones over a deep water; take away any of these stones, and you make such a wide and dangerous step, that you are in hazard of falling into the deep. I now proceed,

Secondly, To the other branch of this use of reproof, namely, to mention some practical errors that this doctrine doth reprove; as,

1. Those that walk in darkness; we read this of the wicked, Psal. lxxxii. 5. That they walk on in darkness; even in the darkness of ignorance, error, sin, and security. Can they walk in Christ who walk in darkness? No: If any man say he hath fellowship with Christ, and yet walk in darkness, he is a liar, 1 John i. 6.

2. Those that walk in vanity, Jer. ii. 5. Thus saith the Lord, What iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they have gone far from me, and have walked after vanity, and are become vain? O the vanity of mind, the vanity of thought, word, and action! Is this to walk in Christ? No, no: he says, Follow me, for I am meek and lowly in heart.

3. It reproves those that walk in profanity and lasciviousness; 1 Pet. iv. 3, 4. For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquettings, and abominable idolatries: wherein they think it strange that you run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you. Do these walk in Christ, that walk in drunkenness, whoredom, swearing, Sabbath-breaking, and such like abominations? Oh it is blasphemy to think it!

4. It reproves those, that instead of walking in Christ, do walk in lies; Jer. xxiii. 14. I have seen also in the prophets of Jerusalem an horrible thing; they commit adultery, and walk in lies, &c. They that walk in hypocrisy and lies, instead of walking in Christ, do rather walk in the devil, the father of lies, and who was a liar from the beginning. God's children are called children that will not lie.

5. Those that walk as slanderers, Jer. ix. 4, 5. Every brother will utterly supplant, every neighbour will walk with slanders. O slandering tongue! Is that the way to walk in Christ? No, no. See what is the character of a godly man, that shall abide in God's tabernacle, and dwell in his holy hill; he is one that speaks the truth in his heart; he backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doth evil to his neighbour, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbour, Psal. xv. 2, 3.

6. Those that walk in pride: such a walk you have described in the daughters of Jerusalem, Isa. iii. 16. Because the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with stretched forth necks, and wanton eyes, walking, and mincing as they go, and making a tinkling with their feet. And you see how Nebuchadnezzar learned to preach this doctrine, after the Lord had humbled him for his pride, as low as the beasts of the field: Those that walk in pride, he is able to abase, Dan. iv. 37.

7. Those that walk in carnality, or walk after the flesh, and after the imagination of their own evil heart, and so walk contrary to God: See such a walk described, Eph. ii. 2, 3. Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past, in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh, and of the mind, and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others. To walk in Christ is a spiritual walk; and surely they do not walk in Christ, who walk in the flesh, 2 Cor. x. 3.

8. Those that walk in superstition; even in superstitious worship and ceremonial customs, Acts xxi. 21. We read there of some that walk after the customs, viz. the Jewish ceremonies, that were abolished: Those walk not in Christ the substance, who walk in the shadow, Col. ii. 17.

9. Those that walk in self, or self-righteousness; Going about to establish their own righteousness, not submitting themselves unto the righteousness of God, Rom. x. 3. Thus, some make works their righteousness; some make faith their righteousness; and they walk in this faith, not in Christ by faith: but it is not faith that saves merely, but Christ received by faith. As it is not the laying on the plaister that heals the sore, but the plaister itself that is laid on; so it is not our faith, or receiving of Christ, but Christ received by faith that saves us. It is not our looking to the brazen Serpent mystical, but the mystical brazen Serpent looked unto by faith, Christ received by faith, that saves us. O but self is subtile! But if we knew ourselves, self-knowledge would be a school-master of humility. One of the first works which the word and Spirit works in men, is to give them light to go down into the dark celler of their hearts, and make discoveries: we are proud because we do not know ourselves; he that knoweth himself, loaths himself; he that knoweth his wants, prays in earnest; he that knoweth his weakness, fears, and flies to the Rock; he that brings knowledge of himself to a sermon, gathers out of the garden those herbs, that are medicinal to him. It is true, the heart is deceitful, and who can know it? but as we need not taste all the water of the sea, or every drop thereof, to know know that it is ſalt and brakiſh; nor taſte every apple of the tree, to know the tree: ſo, the taſting of ſome evils of our heart, may make us to know what we are; ſo as to make us flee out of ourſelves to Chriſt.

10. This doctrine, in a word, reproves all Latitudinarians and Libertines, who think they believe, and ſo that they may do what they pleaſe; having received Chriſt, they think there is no need of walking in him: they pleaſe themſelves with a ſuperficial, opinionative, inoperative faith. Know, Sirs, that men are not to judge of themſelves, either by their faith without works, or by their works without faith; but by their faith, as it works by love.—The legal hypocrite judges himſelf, by his works without faith. But, as by fair and beautiful children, we cannot judge of lawful marriage; ſo, neither by the fruit of good works, can a perſon judge of his marriage to Chriſt: where there was never a formal conſent, or receiving of Chriſt Jeſus, all the profeſſed walking in him, is but hypocriſy.—Again, the goſpel hypocrite judges himſelf, by his faith without works; he profeſſes to receive Chriſt, but he walks not in him. A man may have a ſound faith, and yet not a ſaving faith; he may be called an orthodox believer, but yet an heterodox practitioner, an erroneous walker; found in his principles, but not in his morals; and this diſcovers the noughtineſs of his faith: for, true faith works by love.——May the Lord bear home the reproof himſelf, and give us underſtanding in all things.

The third uſe of the doctrine is for trial and examination.

There is but one Being that we have moſt to do with, in all the world, who yet is moſt neglected by the generality of mankind, and that is God, the Being of all beings; Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, one God. There is one of theſe perſons of this glorious Trinity, that ſtands very nearly related unto man; and yet men are generally very little acquainted with him, and that is the ſecond perſon, the Son of God, who is God-man in one perſon. God and man cannot meet together in peace, after our fall into ſin, but only in this centrical place, this glorious perſon, God-man, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt: without union to him, and communion with him, we cannot meet with God in mercy: Now, the way to have union to him, is by receiving him; and the way to communion with him, is by walking in him: And ſo, the whole myſtery of true religion lies here before us; As ye have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him.

There are two things that we all need to examine and try, namely, Our STATE, and our WALK; our ſpiritual being and our ſpiritual well-being: both theſe are before us in the text. The ſtate and being of a Chriſtian lies in this, that he hath received Chriſt: the behaviour, and well-being of a Chriſtian lies in this, that he is one that walks in Chriſt. And therefore let us try in both theſe particulars. 1. Let us try our faith, namely, if we have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord; and ſo come to try our ſtate and ſpiritual being. 2. Let us try our goſpel-obedience; namely, if we be walking in Chriſt; and we may thus know our well-being.

Firſt, Let us try our FAITH, whether we have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, yea or not: And ſo, whether or not we be in a ſtate of grace. O man, woman, poor dying mortals; according as you have this faith or not, ſo will it fare with you through all eternity: if you die in unbelief, you die in your ſins, John viii. 24. And better die in a ditch, and die like a dog, than die in your ſins. If you die in your ſins, you will riſe in your ſins, and ſtand at the tribunal of God in your ſins: you can never receive remiſſion of the guilt of ſin, nor redemption from the power of ſin, ſo long as you have not received Chriſt; and therefore reflect ſolemnly upon this matter, man, whether you have received Chriſt or not. If all that you are worth in a world, lay in one precious ſtone, and that ſtone was to be tried by a ſkilful jeweller, whether it were true or falſe, whether it would fly or endure, under the ſmart ſtroak of his hammer; ſurely your thoughts could not be unconcerned, about the iſſue of ſuch a trial. Why, man, woman, all that you are worth in this world, and in the world to come, depends upon the truth of your faith, which now we call you to try, whether it will fly or endure the trying ſtroak of the hammer of God's word: Have you no concern in this matter? You would be loath to put to ſea, though it were but to croſs a ſhort ferry, in a rotten lecky bottom: and will you dare to venture into the ocean of eternity, in a falſe rotten faith. O man! can you be too exact and careful about that, on which the determination of your whole eſtate depends, and that for ever. Well then, ſay you, How ſhall I know, if I have received Chriſt, by a ſaving faith? I do not incline to multiply marks. There are two queſtions, I would have you to examine this great matter by; whether you have ſaving faith, or not, ſuch as hath received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord. 1. Enquire how it was created by the Spirit. 2. How it was acted in your ſoul.

1ſt, How was it created by the Spirit? Many pretend to faith, but can give no account, how they came by it, or where they got the hand to receive Chriſt withal: but it is Chriſt that receives and embraces the ſoul, before the ſoul can receive or embrace him. Faith is the fruit of the creating power of the Spirit of God: and hence, as it is called the fruit of the Spirit, Gal. v. 22.; ſo it is called the faith of the operation of God, Col. ii. 12. And ſuch a powerful operation, as is called the effect of the exceeding greatneſs of his mighty power, which he wrought in Chriſt, when he raiſed him from the dead, Eph. i. 19, 20. But ſome have experienced the powerful working of the Spirit in creating faith, that yet cannot give a diſtinct account of his operation therein; and therefore I will tell you of theſe two or three things, that the Spirit doth uſually in creating this faith, whereby the ſoul receives Chriſt.

1. He prepares his way by a work of conviction, John xvi. 8. and legal humiliation. The Spirit firſt convinces of ſin, and then of righteouſneſs: and ſurely the child of faith is not ordinarily born without pangs; ſome have greater pains than others, but all have their meaſure of conviction of ſin, and deep concern about their loſt ſtate by nature. Now, were you ever deeply convinced, and ſtabbed to the heart, by the ſharp ſword of the law; and put to that plight, Men and brethren, what ſhall I do? Were you ever put to your wits-end, ſo as you knew not what to do in all the world, or what hand to turn yourſelves to? Were you at that paſs, that that you would have given a thouſand worlds for light and direction, where you might find outgate and deliverance to your weary ſpirit? Were you ever deeply weighted and affected, with your guilt, ſin, and danger, by the powers of the world to come; and the thoughts of your ſpiritual and eternal ſtate actuating upon your ſoul, with ſuch invincible force, that you could have no reſt, no ſatisfaction, no contentment, till you got ſome ſovereign outgate? Was you ever deeply wounded upon the account of your ſin? Was it like a ſword in your bones, and like a weight of iron, and a mountain of lead upon your ſoul? Surely, if ever you have received Chriſt, you have ſeen a need of him. When you are ſick, you will readily ſee the need of a phyſician; when poor, you will ſee the need of riches; when naked, you will ſee the need of cloathing: whatever temporal ſtraits ly upon you, you will find your need of ſuitable ſupply: Even ſo, if ever the Spirit of conviction hath come in, ſurely you have ſeen a need of Chriſt, a need of mercy and pity, and of a ſovereign antidote againſt your maladies and miſeries, which have been diſcovered to you.

2. The Spirit having convinced the ſoul of ſin, in order to make the ſoul ſee a need of Chriſt, having brought the man to conviction, doth next bring him to deſperation; I mean, to ſelf-deſpair: This is imported in the language of thoſe, Acts ii. 37. Men and brethren, what ſhall we do? They are at a total loſs about deliverance, and the way of eſcape. It is an emphatic word to this purpoſe, the apoſtle uſeth, Gal. iii. 23. Before faith came, we were kept under the law, ſhut up unto the faith, which ſhould afterwards be revealed: SHUT UP unto the faith, συγκεκλεισμένοι, as men BESIEGED and DISTRESSED in a garriſon, in time of a ſtorm, when the enemy pours in upon them through the breaches, and overpowers them; there is but one port or gate, at which they can eſcape, and to that they all throng, as deſpairing of life, if they take any other courſe: Even ſo doth convictions beſiege men, and diſtreſs them, beat them off from all their holds and entrenchments, and ſhut them up unto Chriſt, as the only way of eſcape. The man once thought his duties would ſave him; his reformation would ſave him; that a little repentance would ſave him, or that a ſtricter life would do the buſineſs: but now there is no hope appears in the whole horizon of ſenſe; there is no way but one, Chriſt or condemnation for ever. Now, the man is brought to ſay; Oh! I cannot deliver myſelf out of that wretched ſtate: men and angels cannot deliver me: all my former refuges will not ſecure me: I find the bed is too ſhort, the covering is too narrow; and if I truſt to theſe Egyptian reeds, they will not only fail me, but pierce and wound me too.

3. The Spirit, in working this faith, whereby the ſoul receives Chriſt, having wrought the ſoul to this conviction, this ſelf-deſpair, doth next bring the ſoul readily to the greateſt pinch and ſtraits, and ſolemn concern, that ever it was under about any thing in the world, as we ſee in the experience of the jaylor, Acts xvi. 29. He came trembling, and aſked, why the judgment of the great day was acted by way of anticipation in his conſcience? It is with no little concern, that people do revolve theſe and the like queſtions in their minds daily: What ſhall I eat? what ſhall I drink? and, how ſhall I and mine be fed and cloathed? But ſurely, much deeper impreſſions upon the heart, when the ſoul is under the awakening influences of the Spirit of bondage, do theſe queſtions make in the man's breaſt; What ſhall I do to be ſaved? and, What ſhall come of me through eternity? The man is brought to a ſolemn and awful concern about his everlaſting condition; and to be in ſad earneſt about his eternal ſtate. All frolics and frothineſs doth evaniſh, and here the man lies at God's mercy, unable to help himſelf, and unworthy that God ſhould help him; and owning that he deſerves to be thrown into the bottomleſs pit; and that it will be a wonder of grace, and a miracle of mercy, if God ſhall pity him. And then,

4. The Spirit, in working this faith, whereby the man receives Chriſt, doth come in to the ſoul by a powerful, ſaving, conquering illumination; even as a Spirit of wiſdom and revelation, in the knowledge of Chriſt, Eph. i. 17. Some enlightening work, ſetting home the law, and diſcovering ſin, makes way for what I have already mentioned: but now, ſaving, powerful, illumination takes place, for diſcovering the glorious object of faith, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; for there muſt be a ſeeing of the Son, ere there can be a believing in him, John vi. 40. As faith without works, ſo the conſequent of it is dead; as faith without light, ſo the antecedent of it is blind: faith is the hand whereby we receive Chriſt, but knowledge is the eye by which that hand is directed. Now, hath ever God opened your eyes, and given you a heartſom view of Chriſt, the King in his beauty, as fairer than the children of men; as more glorious than mountains of prey; as brighter than the firmamental ſun, in his meridian ſplendor and glory? Have you got ſuch a view of him, that, ſuppoſe God ſhould come to you with Chriſt in one balance, and ten thouſand worlds, full of all imaginable pleaſures and honours, in another balance; and ſaid to you, Which of them will you chooſe? You would have rejected all thoſe with diſdain and abhorrence, and your ſoul would have flightered after a Redeemer, ſaying, I count all but loſs and dung for the excellency of the knowledge of Chriſt Jeſus my Lord? Have you got ſuch glorious diſcoveries of the grace and love of God in Chriſt, in the goſpel, as hath drawn out your heart to the offer thereof? It is by the ſhining of the goſpel light, through the free promiſe, into the heart, that the man is turned from darkneſs to light. The higheſt natural light will leave a man ſhort of the diſcovery of ſin, in its exceeding ſinfulneſs; and of the riches of grace in Chriſt, for the recovery of loſt ſinners: theſe cannot be ſeen aright, till they be revealed by the divine Spirit; Fleſh and blood revealeth them not, Mat. xvi. 17. The heart ſtood immediately before, at an infinite diſtance from the Lord Jeſus, and was full of oppoſition againſt him: but now, a divine power being exerted, by the word of the goſpel, for drawing the ſoul off from all other objects, to pitch upon Chriſt alone for ſalvation, in the way of free grace; then it accepts of the bleſſed offer, when all arguments in the world before could not prevail with it. Hath the Spirit of God cleared up to you the goſpel-offer of Chriſt, in order to your receiving of him? for, therein is the righteouſneſs of God revealed from faith to faith. It is in a goſpel-glaſs, that the the ſoul gains a right diſcovery of the excellency of Chriſt, and that righteouſneſs of his, without which there is no ſalvation. This firſt acquaintance with Chriſt doth make ſuch a powerful alteration, by diſcoveries above ſenſe, bringing the heart towards Chriſt beyond all other means, that it uſually hath a mark upon it, in ſo much that it is moſt evidencing, and carries its evidence along with it. Such firſt things have a mark upon them, and are of a moſt deſirable nature; the ſtate thereupon being ſo vaſtly different from what it was, how refined ſoever the nature was before.——Thus try your faith by the way how it was created by the Spirit.

2*dly*, How was faith acted in your ſouls, when Chriſt was received? or, how did it act? To be ſure, in general, faith acts under the influence of the ſame Spirit that works it; for, as he works it, ſo he draws it forth to act and exerciſe; and, under this conduct, the ſoul, in receiving Chriſt, acts in the following manner.

1. The ſoul, in receiving Chriſt, doth act humbly; Ezek. xvi. 63. That thou mayeſt remember, and be confounded, and never open thy mouth, becauſe of thy ſhame, when I am pacified towards thee, for all that thou haſt done. O but a ſoul convinced of its unworthineſs, and deſert of hell, and that ſcarce can expect any thing but utter damnation, how doth the firſt dawnings of mercy melt and humble it! O whence is this to ſuch a worm as I! He ſtands behind Chriſt weeping and waſhing his feet with tears. When one of the firſt works of the word and Spirit is, to give the ſoul a light, to go down to the dark cellar of his heart, and make diſcoveries, ſo as he is ſtanding amazed, and trembling at the ſight of himſelf: and the next work of the Spirit is, to lead him in to the lightſom chamber of the King of glory; to bring him from darkneſs to light; how is he melted with the ſenſe of mercy!

2. The ſoul in receiving Chriſt, doth act vehemently, and with ardent deſire after Chriſt, and hungering and thirſting after righteouſneſs; and crying for faith itſelf, which yet may be hid from the man's own ſight, ſaying, Lord, I believe, help my unbelief: he ſees his own inability to believe, and that the work of faith is wholly ſupernatural; and crys, O enable me to come to Chriſt! O give me Chriſt, or I periſh for ever! It is thy work, O reveal thy arm! O man, woman, where are the bed-ſides, and ſecret corners where you have beſieged heaven with ſuch a cry? ſaying, O for a drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem! O for a drop of that precious blood! O for a ſmile of a God in Chriſt! As the hart panteth after the water-brooks, ſo panteth my ſoul after thee, O God, Pſal. xlii. 1.

3. The ſoul in receiving Chriſt, acts intirely and undividedly; he receives him as CHRIST JESUS the LORD. As the three offices are undivided in Chriſt, ſo are they in the believer's acceptance: O my ignorance, ſays the ſoul, makes him neceſſary and deſirable as a Prophet! O my guilt makes him neceſſary and deſirable as a Prieſt! And my ſtrong corruption makes him neceſſary and deſirable as a King! To receive Chriſt as a Jeſus, in ſubmitting to his obediential righteouſneſs, for acceptation unto life, is faith unto juſtification, Rom. x. 10. And to conſent to have him for our Lord, to rule over us, by his Spirit dwelling in us, is faith unto ſanctification, Rom. viii. 9, 10, 11. Is it thus that you receive Chriſt?

4. The ſoul in receiving Chriſt, acts confidently; for, in him we have boldneſs and confidence, through the faith of him; for it acts upon an infallible teſtimony, the divine veracity and faithfulneſs; or, Thus ſaith the Lord, is the firm foundation upon which faith is built: faith is a ſetting to the ſeal, that God is true. When faith is acted, God gives the man a teſtimonial; Heb. xi. 5, 6. Enoch had this teſtimony, that he pleaſed God: But without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. But what is yet more ſtrange, faith not only gets a teſtimonial from God, but gives a teſtimonial to him, as I formerly noticed; John iii. 33. He that hath received his teſtimony, hath ſet to his ſeal, that God is true. It is a receiving the record of God; here is the confidence and aſſurance of faith, according to the meaſure of it; and all acts of faith without this are but as ſo many arrows ſhot at random, into the open air.

5. The ſoul in receiving Chriſt, acts violently; The kingdom of heaven ſuffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. It acts peremptorily, ſaying, If I periſh, I periſh; at Chriſt I muſt be. It acts in a manner wilfully; Although he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him. I will not let thee go, until thou bleſs me. The ſoul ventures upon the free grace and faithfulneſs of God, in the greateſt diſtreſſes; and here it lies, as it were, at anchor, in ſuch ſtormy days, Heb. vi. 19.

6. The ſoul in receiving Chriſt, acts excluſively, excluding all other ſaviours, all other helps, all other props; receiving him and reſting upon him alone; ſaying, I will make mention of thy righteouſneſs, even of thine only, Pſal. lxxi. 16. And be found in him, not having mine own righteouſneſs, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt, the righteouſneſs which is of God by faith, Phil. iii. 9. To depend partly upon Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and partly upon our own, is to ſet one foot upon a rock, and another in the quick ſands: Chriſt will either be to us, all in all, in point of righteouſneſs, or elſe nothing at all; as he did the whole work, ſo he will have the whole praiſe: If he be not able to ſave to the uttermoſt, why do we depend upon him at all? If he be, why do we lean upon any beſide him? If we lean partly on Chriſt, and partly on ourſelves, or our own good works, wiſhes, actions, or affections, we infallibly ruin ourſelves. If a man ſet one foot upon dry land, and the other upon deep water, and lean to them both with equal weight; yea, if he give any of his weight to the water, he will ſink there: So here, if a perſon reſt partly upon the merits of Chriſt, and partly, or in any degree, upon his ſelf-righteouſneſs for ſalvation, he will inevitably periſh. Man's righteouſneſs indeed was once in himſelf; and becauſe he was endowed at firſt with a perfect rectitude of nature, and ability ſufficient to have yielded perfect obedience to the law, and thereby to have obtained eternal life, had he perſevered in his integrity: ſo there is ſtill a mighty bias in his heart, though now depraved, to ſeek righteouſneſs by the works of the law; and all his beſt actions ſavour much of this legal turn of mind. It is with all Adam's poſterity as with bees, which have been accuſtomed to go to their own hive, and carry all hither; if the hive be removed to another place, they will ſtill fly to the old place, hover up and down about it, and creep about the ſides of it, and rather die there than go to a new place: so it is with us, God hath removed our righteousness from ourselves to Christ, it is not now in ourselves but Christ; but, who is prevailed with to forsake self, and self-righteousness? Corrupt nature will venture to be damned rather than do it. The proud self-conceited heart will not stoop to live upon a stock of another's righteousness: but now, by faith, or in the day of believing, the man is brought to this; Surely shall one say, In the Lord have I righteousness and strength; and acts upon Christ exclusively, excluding all other Saviours, all other righteousness in point of justification; yea, and excluding all other Lords in point of sanctification: for, whereas unbelief says, We will not suffer this man to reign over us; and hypocrites say, We will have this man, and the world; this man, and our lusts both, to reign over us: Faith says, We will have none but this man, this God-man, to reign over us. A man may as lawfully join saints and angels, in his mediation with Christ, as his graces: "It is "gross idolatry, says one, [viz. Mr. Burgess,] "to make the works of God, a God; and it "is but a more subtil idolatry, to make the "work of Christ a Christ."

new

7. The soul, in receiving Christ, acts regularly; I mean, according to the gospel-rule, and suitable to the gospel-offer; So we preached, and so ye believed, 1 Cor. xv. 11. Faith answers the gospel-offer, as the impress upon the wax doth answer the engraving of the seal: so Christ offers himself, and so faith receives him, namely, for wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption.

8. The soul, in receiving Christ, acts methodically, receiving first the PERSON and then the BENEFITS: God gives CHRIST, and then with him all things, Rom. viii. 32. And so faith receives Christ, and then, in and with him all things. It is true, salvation must be most of all in the sinner's eye, at his first believing; and thus many in their acting faith at first, may be filled with much confusion, and are not distinct in their actings of faith: but this is the proper order in believing, as will afterward be more and more clear to every believer, upon his repeated acts of faith, first to accept the person, and then the benefits.

9. The soul, in receiving Christ, acts freely; he receives the water of life freely, Rev. xxii. 17. Isa. lv. 1. The man comes to receive Christ with an empty hand, as to one that justifies the ungodly; Rom. iv. 5. To him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness. To him that worketh not, in the law sense; not to work, and not to work perfectly, is all one to the law. Now, the man is convinced that, as he cannot work perfectly, nay, cannot work at all, so he comes to Christ as one that is in himself ungodly, acknowledging that the righteousness, by which, he can stand before God, is only in Christ, and not in himself, in whole or in part. The man comes emptied of all qualifications, to recommend him to God; he sees himself qualified for nothing, but hell and damnation; and thus comes freely, to get all good out of Christ's fulness: he is an empty-handed sinner; but he comes to one who is a full-handed Saviour; for he hath such a stock of grace as cannot be exhausted: angels have a fulness of sufficiency, but they have none to spare; but Christ hath a fulness of redundancy, that hath been flowing over to sinners, near these six thousand years, and yet it is not lessened: and it is he that lets out of his grace with the word you hear, or else you get no good of the sermon.

10. The soul, in receiving Christ, acts successfully and fruitfully; and by its fruit you may know it: for true faith is a fruitful faith. It brings forth the fruit of gospel-repentance, Zech. xii. 10. They shall look on him whom they have pierced and mourn. O but the apprehension of grace and mercy in Christ, thaws and melts the heart! It brings forth the fruit of love to Christ, his ways, his people; Faith worketh by love, Gal. v. 6. Again, To you that believeth he is precious. O! Whom have I in heaven but thee, and there is none in all the earth that I desire besides thee.—It brings forth the fruit of heart and life purity; Acts xv. 9. Purifying their hearts by faith. Morality may hide corruption, but faith purifies the heart from it; and it cleanses the hands also; the man is sanctified by that faith which is in Christ.—It brings forth the fruit of zeal; zeal for the Lord's name, and honour, and glory: O the man could wish, that all the world would come and admire him; that all the world would come and adore him, and love him! The man is made content to do and suffer for him, to live and die for him, so as he is a witness for Christ, at least in the intention, and a martyr in resolution: this takes place when faith is up.—Zeal against sin: O the more sweet that Christ is to the man, the more bitter is sin! O that abominable thing that God hates! He now resolves to pursue it to death: he not only confesses, but forsakes; not only forsakes, but hates; and not only hates, but kills and crucifies; and not only kills it, but desires to bury his dead out of sight; to have his seed buried in Christ's grave; to be saved with him and rise with him.—Zeal for God's house, and love to the ordinances of his appointment: O how amiable are thy tabernacles! Thy words were found of me, and I did eat them. The word and ordinances are the very food of faith: and the desire of the believer's soul is after the same: and here he is painful and diligent in his attendance upon the same. If we weigh the pains for bodily food, with the pains that men take for their soul, in the balance of the sanctuary, many would discover their want of faith, or their faith to be lighter than vanity: how do men, even without all sense of pain, undergo sore labour and toil, for the matter of a shilling? How, in the time of harvest, will they even melt themselves in the heat, and yet are merry and pleasant? How will they in winter ride to markets, and stand in the open and cold air all day long, to vent their commodities without fretting? But now compare this to the other: see what vain and fleshly excuses men will have, about the hearing of the word; as, who can endure to go to church when the weather is so hot, there is such crouding? and what a misery is it to stand all the time of the sermon? and, who can endure to sit an hour in the cold church? truly, it is enough to make a man catch his death! Why, man, can you endure the summer heat and winter cold about your outward affairs, and stand a whole day in your shop, or in the market, in the coldest of winter? and do you excuse yourselves, or fret for an hour in the church? Can you be content to labour six days, for your bodily food; and think you it great pains, to bestow one day in following the gospel-market for your souls! What does this argue in you, but that you have no faith to feed upon the word; no affection or desire after the bread of life, for your spiritual maintenance and sustenance? If you had a fervent zeal for the word, it would cool the heat of summer, and warm you against the cold of winter; you would little regard such trifles as cold and heat, wind and weather; these would evanish before this zeal, as the morning dew before the sun: these shifts and excuses could not stand the zeal of God's house; it would eat up and consume them. Now, try yourselves by these things.

day

It may be, some weak believer may be saying, Some of these marks I know to my experience; but others are dark to me, therefore I doubt of all. To which we reply, If indeed you have one saving solid mark, and can really close with it; it may satisfy you, though you be in the dark in others. If a child cannot go, yet if it can suck; if it cannot suck, yet if it can cry; if it cannot cry, yet if it can breathe, it is a mark of life: so, there may be breathings in the soul, that are evidential of life and faith, when other things are hid. O try yourselves, and look to God to search and try you! it is by his judgment you stand or fall.

Secondly, Let us try our GOSPEL-OBEDIENCE, or our walking in Christ. Christ is the way to heaven, and faith is the way to Christ: This faith hath two offices, the one is acceptance, and the other is dependence: O! what a mercy is it that we, who are by nature out of the way, have the way to heaven set before us, namely Christ; and the way to this way, namely, faith; and the nature and office of this faith: the first office of it, is acceptance, or the reception of Christ: the second office of it, is dependence on him, or walking in him; and both these are here before us in the text; As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him. Here is a very large field, and it is not possible to travel through it all; for it concerns both the internal disposition, and the external conversation; and to both these we must have a view, in the progress of this tryal. This walk in Christ is just the obedience of faith; and when we propose to try this, it is all one as to try, whether ot not we be living the life of faith; for, as to receive Christ, is to come to him by faith; so, to walk in him is to live on him by faith; for to walk in Christ, is to walk by faith, as we have received him; or suitably to the reception of him; as I shewed at length in the doctrinal part, and might resume it by way of tryal: but because I enlarged so much upon it then, shall offer some particulars distinct, at least in the enlargement, from what I then proposed and prosecuted. To be sure those do not walk in Christ, whom I spoke of in the use of reproof, that habitually walk in darkness of ignorance and error; that walk in vanity and profanity; that walk in lies and slander; that walk in proud self and superstition; that walk in carnal liberty, in rioting and drunkenness, chambering and wantonness; yea, these that never received Christ, are not capable of this walking in him; and therefore the root of this walk, is the reception of Christ, concerning which I offered some marks last day. Now, I insist the longer upon this use of tryal, not only because we may thereby try ourselves, but also therein be further instructed, concerning the nature and excellency of this walk. There are two general heads I propose in this part of the use of tryal, whether we know or not, what it is to walk in Christ, namely, 1. To try by the scriptural qualities of it. 2. By the gospel provision for it.

1st, Try this Christian walk, or walking in Christ, by the SCRIPTURAL QUALITIES of it. And,

1. It is a mixed walk: this we may view concerning it more generally; it is a mixed kind of a walk, interwoven with a great many vicissitudes: as long as believers are in this valley of tears, sometimes they walk in the light of God's countenance, sometimes they walk in darkness; Psal. lxxxix. 15. Blessed are the people that know the joyful sound; they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance. Isa. l. 10. Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of his Servant, that walketh in darkness and hath no light? It is a changable kind of walk, not in respect of the believer's state, nor yet his habitual tendency towards God and heaven; but in respect of his inward frame and outward condition; he is like a man that, in a journey, is sometimes going up hill, and sometimes down; sometimes in a valley, and sometimes on a mountain; sometimes meets with a piece of dirty way; sometimes a more plain and easy road. It is said of the wicked, Because they have no changes, therefore they fear not God: It is true, the wicked may have their outward changes, from prosperity to adversity; yea, and their inward changes, from an ill mood to a good mood; but as they are still always the same thing; so their most remarkable changes differ from the changes of God's people, whose mixed walk, and interchangable circumstances, do mainly consist, in their feeling sometimes the smiles, and sometimes the frowns of the Lord: now he shines and then he hides; now he is present and then he is absent: I said, my mountain standeth strong; but lo, thou didst hide thy face, and I was troubled. The changes of the hypocrite, is like that of a stone put into the fire; it is changed from cold to hot, but it is a hard stone still: but that of a believer, is like gold put into the fire; it is tryed and purified thereby, and purged from some dross.

2. It is a denyed walk; to walk in Christ is as much as to walk, not in ourselves; the man is denyed to himself, and his own understanding and wisdom; to his own strength and righteousness. The disciple of Christ must deny himself, and have no confidence in the flesh: hence it is called, a walking humbly with OUR GOD, Micah vi. 8. Augustine being asked, what was the first grace? Answered, Humility: What is the second? Answered, Humility: What is the third? Answered, Humility. Indeed it is the varnish of every grace; and God gives grace to the humble: he loves to lay his wines in the lowest cellars. The motto of a humble saint is, poor and needy; poor in spirit: and here the poorest are the richest; the man is empty in himself, but full in Christ; hath nothing in himself, but hath all in Christ; and is filled with self-debasing, God-exalting, grace-admiring thoughts, saying with Jacob, I am less than the least of thy mercies, Gen. xxxii. 10.; and with Job, I abhor myself, and repent in dust and in ashes; and with Asaph, So foolish was I and ignorant, I was as a beast before thee; and with Heman, I am more brutish than any man; and with Isaiah, I am unclean; and with Paul, I am the chief of sinners, and the leaſt of ſaints. It is a humble and denied walk, the man is denied to himſelf, brought out of himſelf.

3. It is a dependent walk; it is a living by faith in the Son of God, and dependence on him; like the ſpouſe, Going up from the wilderneſs, leaning on the Beloved. As it is with a woman, ſhe firſt gives her conſent, and becomes a wife; and then, being a wife, ſhe looks upon her huſband, as the only perſon to ſupply her, protect her, comfort her, and provide for her: ſo it is with faith, it firſt eſpouſes the ſoul to Chriſt, takes him as a Lord and Huſband; and then caſts all the proviſion of the ſoul upon him, all ſupplies and helps; truſts on him for righteouſneſs, for pardon of ſin, for grace, for ſtrength, for comfort, for eternal life; and commits all to him. 2 Tim. i. 12. I know in whom I have believed, and I am perſuaded he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him againſt that day. Though other things ſhould all fail, faith depends upon Chriſt: when the ſpider's web is ſwept down, yet you may ſee the houſe ſtanding ſure; even ſo, when the cob-webs of creature-confidences are ſwept down, faith will ſee a ſure foundation to reſt upon: Though the fig-tree ſhould not bloſſom, neither ſhall fruit be in the vines; the labour of the olive ſhall fail, and the fields ſhall yield no meat, the flock ſhall be cut off from the fold, and there ſhall be no herd in the ſtalls: Yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my ſalvation, Hab. iii. 17, 18. He that hath crutches, if he lean not on them in his walking, take away his crutches and he will walk ſtill; but take away a cripple's crutches, that goes upon them, and he comes to the ground preſently: ſo, if we did not, like cripples, lean upon theſe outward things, or outward frames, we would not be ſo eaſy thrown down, in their removal. To walk in Chriſt is to depend upon him; it is a dependent, a believing walk; leaning upon the word of God, his bare word: and indeed, if a man of worth ſhould be aſked a pawn, and not credited upon his word, he would take it in ill part: what a ſhame is it, that we cannot credit God, without pawn and caution!

4. It is an extenſive walk: what is ſaid of the commandment of God, we may ſay of this walk; I have ſeen an end of all perfection, but thy commandments are exceeding broad. It is a narrow way indeed and ſtrait, in regard of its difficulty to nature, and the paucity of thoſe that walk in it; but it is broad in itſelf, in reſpect of its extent. This walk of Chriſt extends to all the commandments of God; for the man that walks in Chriſt, hath a reſpect to all God's commands. It extends to all the duties of religion; and to all the graces of the Spirit. It extends to all the motions of the heart, and all the actions of life; to every thought, word, and deed. In all theſe, we are called to walk in Chriſt by faith. Yea, it extends to all the circumſtances of the believer's life; to all the indigencies of his life; and all the exigencies of his ſoul; for, the juſt ſhall live by faith, Rom. i. 17. Where is the believer on earth, but hath the ſenſible feeling ſtill of ſome diſtreſs or other, inward or outward; whether it be ſenſe of ſin, or ſenſe of guilt, or ſenſe of corruption, or ſenſe of temptation, or ſenſe of deſertion, or ſenſe of wickedneſs, or ſenſe of want, or ſenſe of affliction from God, or ſenſe of contradiction from the world? Now, in all theſe, he is to live by faith, and to walk in Chriſt, knowing there is enough in him to anſwer all. The ſoul cannot be caſt into any ſea, but Chriſt is a ſure ſhip and ſafe harbour. To walk in him, is to improve him in every caſe, and to truſt in him for relief, in every exigency. A man is ſaid to walk, not merely when he hath feet to walk with, but when he is making uſe of his feet, to carry him on his way: even ſo, a man walks in Chriſt, not merely when he hath faith, and hath received Chriſt, but when he is by faith improving Chriſt, in every time of need, for pardon, light, life, liberty, comfort, and communication: the habit and quality of faith is one thing; the uſe and exerciſe of faith is another. A man is ſaid to live by bread, not when he hath it in his cup-board, but when he takes and eats it: ſo, to live by faith, is to put faith to exerciſe; to bring the pitcher to the well and draw water. Why, ſays the man, that is walking in Chriſt, there is corruption working again; but I will away to Chriſt again to ſubdue it: Satan renews his temptations, but I will renew my addreſs to Chriſt; he will again bruiſe Satan under my feet: my comforts are gone, but I will go to Chriſt; he will come again, and my joy ſhall be full. The life of faith is a multiplied work, and a repeated work; it leads the ſoul often to look, even for the ſame kind of ſupply. To live by faith, is to keep houſe with Chriſt, and to be his daily gueſt; to rely upon him as often as we have need, and to draw ſtill from the ſame fountain.

5. This walk in Chriſt, is a goſpel-walk; Only let your converſation be, as it becometh the goſpel of Chriſt, Phil. i. 27. It is under a goſpel-conduct; according to a goſpel-rule; from a goſpel-motive; in a goſpel-manner; to a goſpel-end; and by a goſpel-ſpirit, which were a large theme, if I could inſiſt upon it. This goſpel-walk hath goſpel-holineſs in it, and ſo it is a holy walk; Be ye holy as I am holy: Holineſs becometh his houſe for ever: And without holineſs, no man ſhall ſee the Lord.—It hath goſpel-circumſpection in it, and ſo it is called a circumſpect walk; See that ye walk circumſpectly, not as fools, but as wiſe, redeeming the time, becauſe the days are evil.—And a watchful walk, knowing that there is a deceitful heart within, a flattering world without, and a tempting devil going about us: therefore, what Chriſt ſays to one, he ſays to all, WATCH.—It hath a goſpel-uprightneſs in it; and ſo it is called an upright walk; He that walketh uprightly, walketh ſurely: The way of the Lord is ſtrength to the upright: He will give grace and glory, and no good thing will he withhold, from them that walk uprightly.—It hath a goſpel-order in it; and ſo it is called a well-ordered walk; To him that ordereth his converſation aright, will I ſhew the ſalvation of God. And as a walk is orderly, when a man gives every duty its proper time and place, and ſuffers not one to claſh with another, or one to ſhuffle out another; ſo, goſpel-order in our walk, will make a man bring all from Chriſt, and then improve all for him: it makes a man live upon him as the ALPHA of his life, and to him as the OMEGA of it.—In a word, a goſpel-walk hath a goſpel-ſpirit influencing it; and ſo it is a chearful walk, according to the meaſure of the Spirit; The joy of the Lord, is the man's ſtrength: And this joy is not inconſiſtent with goſpel-ſorrow; for it may be, and frequently is, both a joyful and a mournful walk at once; for a man never begins to mourn as a child, till he hath faith to ſee God as a Father: the gracious looks of Christ are the springs of gospel-repentance; And blessed are they that thus mourn, for they shall be comforted.

as.

6. This walk in Christ, it is a heavenly walk: the man that walks in Christ, hath his conversation in heaven, where Christ is, Phil. iii. 20. There is here a heavenliness of thought: the man in this walk comes to be heavenly-minded; at least he is burdened, that he cannot get his thoughts placed on heavenly things, and best pleased with himself, when he gets his heart set in heaven. There is a heavenliness of speech that he endeavours, when he is walking in Christ; a heavenliness of language; a heavenliness of affections: a heavenliness of trading by faith and prayer, drawing bills of exchange, as it were, upon Christ for whatever he stands in need of. How unsuitable is it for them, that have received Christ Jesus the Lord, to have an earthly walk! like the bird they call the lapwing, that hath a crown upon his head, and yet feeds upon excrements. Hath the Lord crowned you with loving-kindness, and yet do you live upon the dung of this world; made you an heir to a kingdom, and yet you ly tumbling among ashes? If God hath given you the fountain of living waters, and yet you are anxiously careful about the drops, that are in the broken cistern; surely you are not walking in Christ. The saint that doth not live above the world, he lives beneath himself.

7. It is a stedfast walk; Be ye stedfast and unmoveable, 1 Cor. xv. 58. It is progressive, and yet stedfast; for as I have formerly noticed, the very word WALKING, imports progress and permanency. There is a constant progress in it; The righteous holdeth on his way, and he that hath clean hands, waxeth stronger and stronger. The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. True grace is of a growing nature. It is true, the believer may not be sensible of his growth, as we do not see ourselves or others grow; but that we are grown, is plain; neither do we see how much the light increases, by every step of the sun's rising higher; it is by imperceptible instances or degrees. When power of resisting temptations, and mortifying lusts, which before were too hard for us doth appear, we may see our growth; as we see our shadows are shortened, when the sun rises higher, but how much in a minute, we see not; yet it is a progressive walk. If the believer be not walking forward, he is not walking in Christ; for, when he walks in Christ, he is always coming speed; and this walk in Christ, or living by faith on him, is the only stedfast and abiding life and walk. Though the mariners, when they put to sea, may quickly lose sight of land, yet they never lose sight of heaven; how far soever they sail, in whatever tempest, yet still, if they look up, they will see the same heaven: even so, the man that walks in Christ, and lives by faith, his faith never loses its sight of its Rock; he may lose sight of land, sight of friends, and relations, and enjoyments of time, and all human props; but faith acted, will never lose sight of God, and Christ, and the promise: though all sensible enjoyments fly off, yet the man that lives by faith, is at no loss: What can he lack, who hath him that is all in all?

8. It is a familiar walk; So walk ye IN him. O! who can walk more familiarly, one with another than this, for one to walk IN another? walk IN him! Two cannot walk together, except they be agreed: here is the sweetest agreement and familiarity. There are several acts of familiarity, by which this intimate walk is expressed in scripture; and each of them might also be matter for our trial, whether we know this familiar walk.—There is communion between Christ and the believer; Truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with the Son, through the Spirit. He sups with them, and they with him.—There is communication; The secret of the Lord is with them; and they impart their secrets to him.—There is cohabitation; he dwells in them by his Spirit; I will put my Spirit within you. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be one in us: and they dwell in him by faith.—There is co-ambulation; he walks with them, and they walk with him; He walks in the midst of the golden candlesticks: they shall walk with him all the day long.—There is confabulation; he speaks to them, and they to him: they converse together; Thou saidst, Seek ye my face; my heart said unto thee, Thy face, Lord, will I seek.—There is mutual visitation; he visits them in a way of grace, and they him in a way of duty.—There is mutual feasting and banquetting; He brought me to the banquetting-house, and his banner over me was love.—There is mutual salutation and embracement; they greet each other with a holy kiss: Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth; for his love is better than wine. And they learn to kiss the Son, lest he be angry.—But I enlarge not upon these now: What know you of these things, when thus you see what sort of a walk it is, this walking in Christ?——Try yourselves, by searching into the scriptural qualities of it.

2*dly*, Try this walk by the GOSPEL-PROVISION for it. All that know this walk, and truly walk in Christ, they are provided for the journey: God sends none a warfare on their own charges; nor doth call any to walk in him, without providing them for the way. And there are these eight things that travellers need for their journey, and all these things spiritual travellers have in Christ; yea, and communicate from him, according to the exigencies of their journey.

1. The traveller must have a guide to direct him: even so, if ye walk in Christ ye have a guide; Christ himself is the guide: This God is our God for ever and ever, and will be our guide even unto death.—He is a skilful guide, that knows every step of the way.—A faithful guide, that doth not mislead his people.—A tender guide, that helps the weak traveller.—And a continual guide, that never leaves them nor forsakes them.—Now, what know you of his guiding you by his word and Spirit? Do you ever hear the voice behind you, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when you go to the right-hand, or to the left? And have you been made to resign yourselves to his conduct?

2. The traveller must have light, for it is hard to walk in the dark; and sight, that his eye may be upon the road: for though a traveller have light, yet if he shut his eyes, or suffer them to gad, or to wander, without noticing the way, he is fair to stumble, or turn aside; so the spiritual traveller, that walks in Christ, he gets light and sight: and indeed Christ himself is his light; for, He is the light of the world; and his Spirit is given to the believer, as a

Spirit

Spirit of wiſdom and revelation; and it is he that gives him ſight as well as light, and fixes his eye; hence prays the pſalmiſt, Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity, and quicken me in thy way, Pſal. cxix. 37. Right walking is influenced by the light of the knowledge of Chriſt: the more we know of Chriſt, the more will we walk in him; yea, and the more we walk in him, the more will we know him: He that doth his will, ſhall know his doctrine: they influence one another. Even as the body warms the cloaths, and then the cloaths warms the body: ſo, the knowledge of Chriſt leads to goſpel-practice; and goſpel-practice leads to more knowledge.

3. The traveller muſt have a cordial, that he faint not by the way: even ſo they that walk in Chriſt have a cordial provided; and indeed Chriſt, who is the way, is alſo the cordial; for, he is the conſolation of Iſrael: and he affords them ſometimes ſtrong conſolation, ſo as the joy of the Lord is their ſtrength. Wiſdom's ways are pleaſantneſs, though the world reproach it as a melancholy way.—Now, what know ye of the goſpel cordial, or of the intimations of divine love, filling your hearts, at ſometimes, with joy unſpeakable, and peace that paſſeth all natural underſtanding? This is what he affords, now and then, to thoſe that walk in him: he hath provided public inns for their refreſhment and entertainment; and theſe are the public ordinances of his grace; the banquetting-houſes, where he ſatiates and ſolaces his people with himſelf on the feaſt of fat things, even the true bread that cometh down from heaven, and diſplays his banner of love over them.

4. The traveller muſt have a purſe and money to bear his expences: even ſo, they that walk in Chriſt, they get unſearchable riches in him; out of his fulneſs they receive, and grace for grace: they get what they need, though not always what they would; but he is a wiſe diſpenſer, and they have enough in him: yea, are complete in him; in whom is fulneſs of merit for their juſtification, and fulneſs of Spirit for their ſanctification; Money that anſwers all things; yea, durable riches and righteouſneſs; riches that will not rot in the grave, nor take the wings of the morning and fly away, as temporal enjoyments do: here is enough to pay all his charges, ſatisfy all his creditors, and anſwer all the law-pleas of the devil, of conſcience, yea, of juſtice, and the law itſelf. Know you what it is, man, to be ſupplied out of this ſtock?

5. The traveller muſt have armour for his journey: even ſo, they that walk in Chriſt, they get weapons to defend them from robbers and wild beaſts, that are ready to bereave them of their life, and of their goods. See the complete armour of the Chriſtian, Eph. vi. 11,—17. You have the ſeveral pieces of armour there mentioned; and Chriſt himſelf is the great magazine of his military proviſion; he walks in Chriſt, and in Chriſt hath all theſe pieces of armour; therefore is called, to be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Are you acquaint with this way of travelling, and walking in arms, depending on the power of a Mediator to fight all your battles againſt ſin and Satan?

6. A traveller muſt have a girdle for his loins, to keep up his looſe garments, and to keep his loins firm, that he do not weary with the length of his journey: even ſo they that walk in Chriſt, need to gird up the loins of their mind, as the apoſtle expreſſes it; and to have their loins girt about with truth, Eph. vi. 14. Now, as Chriſt is the way, ſo he is the truth, and can give truth in the inward part, and therefore will provide them of a girdle. His truth ſhall be thy ſhield and buckler, Pſal. xci. 4. Spiritual travellers are therefore taught the truth, as it is in Jeſus: both the truth, in reſpect of goſpel-principles; and the truth of God in his promiſe.

7. The traveller muſt have ſhoes for his feet: even ſo, they that walk in Chriſt, they muſt have their feet ſhod with the preparation of the goſpel of peace; that is, with a heart prepared to adhere to the goſpel, and abide by it: now, this preparation of the heart is from the Lord. Do you find your heart prepared, fortified, and ſtrengthened by his grace, notwithſtanding of difficulties that are in the way of adhering to his truth, his goſpel, his cauſe, and his intereſt in the world?

8. The traveller muſt have a ſtaff in his hand, to help him forward, and to lean upon: even ſo, they that walk in Chriſt, have a ſtaff put in their hand; Thy rod and thy ſtaff, they comfort me, Pſal. xxiii. 4. And what is the ſtaff they lean upon? CHRIST himſelf is the main ſtaff; She goeth up from the wilderneſs leaning upon her Beloved. More particularly,

(1.) The ſtaff of his All-ſufficiency: ſaith God to Abraham, I am God all-ſufficient, walk before me; I have enough in myſelf, and enough for every creature: as the ſun hath light enough for a whole world; and a fountain water enough for a whole country. Walk before me; if you want light, you will look to the ſun; if you want water, you will go to the ſpring; and ſo, if you want any good, will you not look up to me, who am goodneſs itſelf, and infinitely able to ſuccour; All-ſufficiency itſelf, and infinitely able to ſupply? There is a ſtrong ſtaff.

(2.) The ſtaff of his promiſe; as when God ſays, I am thy ſhield, and thy exceeding great reward: Fear not, for I am with thee; I will uphold thee with the right-hand of my righteouſneſs. Not only have I all good, all-ſufficiency, but there is a promiſe, might he ſay, that all the good I can do, I will do it for thee: there is no particular want of the believer, but hath a particular promiſe. If you knew a man to be ſufficient, and to have an eſtate worth ten thouſand pounds, and all free, you would ſoon truſt him for an hundred pound: but if he ſhould tell you particularly, and ſay, Friend, I have a great eſtate, and I pray thee, if thou haſt need of any thing, at any time, repair to me, I give thee my word, and if that be not enough, my bond and ſeal, that I will help thee; it were enough, he needed ſay no more. Yet, thus ſaith the Lord to the man that hath received Chriſt; Not only am I an all-ſufficient God, but I promiſe that I will give thee grace and glory, and with-hold no good thing from thee: as true as I am God, I will not leave thee, nor forſake thee. Is not this an excellent ſtaff to lean upon?

(3.) The ſtaff of his power: Whatever God promiſeth, he is able to make good. Many a man is undone by ſuretyſhip; he ſuffers himſelf to be bound beyond his ability: but it is not ſo with God. If a ſubject promiſe to releaſe and pardon a malefactor, it is nothing; he is not be truſted, becauſe he hath not power of life or death. If a poor man promiſe to diſ-charge a great debt, no-body will credit his promiſe; becauſe his ability is not anſwerable to his undertakings: but behold here, Chriſt hath ability to make good all his promiſes: he hath promiſed great things; to pardon great ſins, to conquer great temptations, to ſubdue great corruptions, to convey great conſolations: well, but he is a great God; is any thing too hard for him? Do your particular wants ſtill increaſe and renew themſelves? Well, as veſſels which we fill to-day, need a new filling to-morrow; the ſtomach which we ſeem to ſatisfy juſt now, within a few hours is empty and craving again: ſo here, the ſoul that hath once taſted and ſeen that God is good, ſees that this taſte is not ſufficient to ſupport him, and that created fulneſs will ſoon be diminiſhed, if it is not daily ſupplied, and therefore ſtill wants more, ſaying, evermore give us this bread. But, here lies the comfort, that though the veſſel be dry, the fountain is not; though the veſſel be empty, the fountain is full: and his power to help is a creating power; ſuch as can command things into being. O what a wonderful ſtaff is this! Do you know what it is to walk with this ſtaff in your hand?

charge

(4.) The ſtaff of his fidelity: behold, the promiſes are ſealed with truth; it is God who cannot lie who hath promiſed: Faithful is he that hath promiſed, who alſo will do it. He takes his own time, but he will be true to his word; Behold, the days come, ſaith the Lord, that I will perform the good thing, which I have promiſed to the houſe of Iſrael, and to the houſe of Judah.

(5.) In a word, Chriſt himſelf, and his everlaſting righteouſneſs, his meritorious obedience to the death, with which God is well-pleaſed, and his valuable interceſſion, whom God heareth always, is the ſtaff which the believer leans upon: he that is the way they walk in, is the ſtaff they walk with, and lean upon; for, in him are all the promiſes Yea and Amen: and one word of promiſe from a God in Chriſt, is enough to faith. If a mariner can get to the top of the maſt, and deſcry but a point of land, then he is glad, and all is well: thus the believer by faith climbs to the top-maſt, and ſees the promiſe afar off, Heb. xi. 13.; and rejoices in Chriſt, in whom it ſtands faſt. Every believer is ordinarily brought to ſuch circumſtances, that, if he do not live by faith, he cannot live at all: he is brought to Jehoſhaphat's plight; We know not what to do, but our eyes are towards thee. It is with them, many times, as with a ſhip laden; on a ſudden it is broken to pieces, and now of neceſſity they muſt ſwim to the ſhore, to the rock: ſo doth God daſh all our lower confidences; he cracks our full ſtate; ſeparates us from all our ſenſible enjoyments; and, it may be, gives not a heart to any to ſhow us compaſſion; that, when ſorrows are poured in on all ſides, a man may have nothing in all the world left him, but God's Bible, his word of promiſe, his Chriſt; and here he may reſt, when all means under heaven cannot give relief.

Now, here are the qualities of this walk in Chriſt, and here is the ordinary proviſion that is given believers for this walk: a guide, a light, a cordial, a purſe, armour, a girdle, ſhoes, and a ſtaff. What know ye of this walk in Chriſt? Theſe are ſome ſcriptural accounts of it, by which we may try ourſelves. I fear this walk is a myſtery to many of us: theſe that never received Chriſt know nothing of it; and many that have received Chriſt, know but too little of this walk in Chriſt, this life of faith.

O man, woman; what do you think of Chriſt? and what do you think of this walk? Is he not a better portion than all the vanities of time can be to you? Yea, The portion of Jacob is not like theſe; for, he is the former of all things, and Iſrael is the rod of his inheritance; the Lord of hoſts is his name, Jer. li. 19. Is not this walk in him, a better walk than the world are taking, who are walking in the broad way, and reject Chriſt? Alas, Sirs! however lightly you think of Chriſt, and his way now, yet I will aſſure you, if you die not like a ſot, you will think otherwiſe when the dead ſweat begins to break upon you; you would then give a thouſand worlds to have ſaving acquaintance with this way and this walk: and it may be, all that you will hear then, inſtead of this goſpel, will be, As you have given the devil the flower of your age, ſo give him the bran alſo. O ſeek in to Chriſt, that you may know him, receive him, and walk in him!

There are two excellent gifts which all men ſtand in need of, and as God only can give them, ſo every one ſhould earneſtly covet them.

The firſt is CHRIST, who is expreſly called the gift of God, John iv. 10. This gift is the more to be prized, that when God gives it, he gives himſelf and his Spirit with it. When a man gets Chriſt, he receives God in and with him; and therefore Chriſt ſays to ſuch, My Father is your Father, and my God your God: and when a man receives Chriſt, he gets the Spirit in him and with him; for, If any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of his.

The ſecond is FAITH, which is expreſly called the gift of God alſo, Eph. ii. 8. When God gives this latter gift, he juſt gives grace to receive the former gift. Infinite Majeſty cannot give a greater gift than Chriſt; and infinite poverty cannot receive a greater, or more ſuitable gift: Chriſt is the greateſt gift that heaven can give, or earth can receive. There is a giving of Chriſt in the goſpel-offer, which is preſuppoſed to, and conſtitutes the duty of receiving: for, A man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven, John iii. 27. Now, the whole life of religion lies in theſe two things, viz. faith's reception of Chriſt; and faith's improvement of him: both are in our text; As ye have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him.

The fourth uſe of the doctrine is for exhortation. 1. To unbelievers who never received Chriſt, that they receive Chriſt Jeſus the Lord. 2. To believers who have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, that they walk in him as they have received him.

Firſt, The firſt branch of the exhortation is to all UNBELIEVERS who never have believed in Chriſt, that they believe in him, and receive him: this is the great call of the glorious goſpel, to all ſinners that hear this goſpel. And though believers, who have received Chriſt already, be called to receive him again and again; and ſo are not to exclude themſelves, but are to improve the call that is given to unbelievers, in order to their further reception of Chriſt; yet their duty falling more natively in my way, upon the latter part of the text, and ſo in the ſecond branch of the exhortation, I ſhall more eſpecially now addreſs myſelf, as the Lord may aſſiſt, unto thoſe that never yet have truly received Chriſt. O unbelieving ſoul, who art afar off from God, be exhorted to receive Christ Jesus the Lord. And that I may the more enforce this exhortation, I would, 1. Shew who they are that I call unbelievers, that never received Christ as yet. 2. Offer some motives and considerations to urge you to the receiving of Christ. 3. Give some directions, in order to the receiving of Christ. 4. Endeavour to remove some obstructions, and answer some objections against the receiving of Christ.—What I here propose, will make me launch further yet, into this gospel-subject, than ever I proposed, when I entered upon it, though I have enlarged much upon the text already: but yet, it being such a necessary comprehensive theme, containing, in a manner, the whole Bible in one verse; the whole gospel in one sentence; and so, being of the utmost concern, I think this may be sufficient ground and reason, for my enlarging thereupon, as the Lord may please to assist. And,

1*st*, I am to shew who they are that may be called unbelievers, who never yet received Christ: for, when I am calling all unbelievers especially to believe, it is fit you know whom I mean; for it is a great bar and hinderance to faith, in multitudes of people, that they think they are believers already, and that they have received Christ; and hence they never take a word to them, that is directed to them; and are proof against all the calls of the word, because they think they have faith already, they have believed already, and have received Christ already. But that they who never received Christ, may not deceive themselves, I will offer you some evidences of an unbeliever, that hath not received Christ. As the learned speak of twelve signs in the heavens, so I might tell you of twelve signs of unbelief, which, where they take place in their power, discover the man was never gained thereby, to the acceptance of Christ.

1. The first sign, or discovery of reigning unbelief, is total hardness of heart; when a man is not moved or affected with his own misery, nor the remedy provided by Christ, nor the invitations of grace in the gospel: It is said, Acts xix. 9. That divers were hardened, and believed not. An hard heart is one of the devil's impregnable forts, standing out against the word, and slighting the offers of Christ. Hardness of heart is known by the foolishness of it; When seeing, we see not; and hearing, we hear not: when we have the grammatical knowledge of things, but no spiritual discerning.—It is also known by the insensibleness of it; when men have no feeling of fear and terror by the law; no feeling of peace, joy, and hope by the gospel; no taste of the good word at all; but are as stones, unmoved with all that is spoken. This hardness shews your unbelief to be such, as that you have not received Christ. Believers may feel much heart-hardness; but this hardness I speak of, is past feeling; being seared as with a hot iron.

2. The second sign, or discovery of unbelief, is the total neglect of spiritual and heavenly things; when men make it not their business, to look after these things; They made light of it, and one went to his farm, another to his merchandise, Mat. xxii. 5. Do not thousands bewray their unbelief, and that they never received Christ, in that the world hath engrossed all their care? Would Christ, and heavenly things, be thus slighted, and lightly esteemed, if they soundly believed in him, or believed the word of God. Surely, when men make the world their main care, and take no heed to the great offers of the gospel, they do not look upon it as a certain truth, whatever faith they fancy they have.

3. The next sign, or discovery of unbelief, is a secret suspicion concerning the truth of the gospel; like him that called the gospel, Fabula Christi; they look upon it as an excellent fable, a golden dream, to make fools fond of it; and that all opinions in religion, are but a LOGAMACHY, a mere strife of words, a doctrine to set the world together by the ears, and that they need not trouble their heads about it. [They may have some understanding about the truth of the gospel, but no assurance of understanding, Col. ii. 2.] It is true, such thoughts may rush into the heart of a godly man, but they are abominate and cast out with indignation: but in wicked men they reign and dwell; they live by these kind of principles: natural atheism in them is not cured; and that faith they pretend to is but a loose and wavering opinion, not a grounded and settled persuasion, of the gospel: the assurance of understanding, spoken of Col. ii. 2. depends upon experience, and an inward sense of the truth, and is wrought by the Holy Ghost, when the gospel comes not in word only, but in power, and in the demonstration of the Spirit.

4. The fourth sign, or discovery of unbelief, is a secret rejecting of the counsels of salvation, Acts xiii. 46. All natural men are children of disobedience; out of pride scorning either the messages of God, for they are foolishness to them; or the messengers of God, Is not this the carpenter's son? Is not this preacher of the word, such and such an insignificant person? Thus unbelievers fancy of the methods of grace used to gain them.

5. The fifth discovery of unbelief, is unholiness of life and conversation: the truth of faith brings in the obedience of faith, Rom. xvi. 26. Where the prince is, there will his train be; where faith is, there will gospel-obedience be; and where unbelief is, there is disobedience: faith hath its train of gospel services; unbelief hath its train of ungodly practices. When men give themselves up to drunkenness, and whoredom, and Sabbath-breaking, and swearing, and lying, and backbiting, and live as carnally and careless as infidels, who will believe that they are believers, let them say what they will?

6. The next discovery of unbelief, is mens hearing the word, without ever applying it to their own use: without application it worketh not; it causeth not a man see himself involved, and inclosed, and included in the general promise, or precept, so as to give a particular answer; as Psal. xxvii. 8. the call is in the plural, Seek YE my face: the answer is in the singular; Thy face, Lord, will I seek. The gospel-call is general; Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and receive him: the answer must be particular; I believe, Lord, help my unbelief. When people suffer truths to hover in the brain without application; or learn things as children do their Catechism by rote, never reflecting, what am I? what have I done? where am I going? what will become of me? what effect hath this word upon me? unbelief remains undisturbed.

7. The seventh sign, or discovery of unbelief, is total apostacy, or falling off from God: for, as by faith we ſtand, and continue in well-doing, Rom. ii. 7. if we are believers; ſo, by unbelief, or by reaſon of unbelief, men fall off from God, they tire and grow weary of his ſervice; and ſo wholly give up with it.

as

8. The next ſign, or diſcovery of unbelief, is final deſperation; Jer. xviii. 12. There is no hope, but we will walk after our own devices, and we will every one do the imagination of his evil heart. When men think there is no hope, it is in vain to trouble ourſelves: when they think their damnation is fixed, and therefore reſolve to go to hell as faſt as they can; ſuch deſperate wickedneſs there may be in the heart of man, like thoſe, Job xxi. 15. What is the Almighty, that we ſhould ſerve him? and what profit ſhould we have, if we pray unto him?

9. The ninth diſcovery of unbelief, is people's diſtruſting all preſent means, ſaying, If one come from the dead, they would believe: if we had oracles or miracles, or if God did ſpeak to us from heaven, then we would believe: but Moſes and the prophets are a ſufficient ground of faith, and if we believe not them, neither would we believe, though one roſe from the dead. Extraordinary means will not work with them, upon whom ordinary means doth not prevail.

10. The next ſign and diſcovery of unbelief, is demurs and delays as to a complete cloſing with Chriſt: here is a refined degree of unbelief; the man ſeems to approve the report of the goſpel; hath nothing to object againſt Chriſt; but there is a ſecret, dilatory, procraſtinating, delaying ſpirit in him: he hath a will for a future, but not a preſent choice of Chriſt: he cannot yet bid adieu to his beloved luſts; A little ſleep, a little ſlumber more he muſt have, in the lap of his Delilah. Luke ix. 59. Follow me, ſays Chriſt; why ſays the man, Lord, ſuffer me firſt to go and bury my Father; excuſe me for a while. Again, ver. 61. Lord, I will follow; but let it be deferred for ſome time; let me firſt go and bid them farewel which are at home at my houſe. Thus awakened ſinners put off Chriſt, as Felix did Paul, with delays; theſe delays are but a ſly rejection of Chriſt: a will for hereafter, is a preſent nill: your reſolving will hereafter ſays you have no heart at preſent. But the longer you delay, the more averſe will you be from believing: and before your hereafter come, you may be in hell.

11. The next ſign and diſcovery of unbelief, is men's receiving a falſe Chriſt, an idol of their own fancy, inſtead of the true Chriſt: they that compound Chriſt, or add any thing to him, make to themſelves a falſe Chriſt; as they that would have Chriſt and the world both, Chriſt and their luſts both; Chriſt they muſt have to ſatisfy their conſciences; and luſts they muſt have to ſatisfy their heart. Hence they meditate and mediate a league, between Chriſt and their darling idols: ſuch a mixed Chriſt is a falſe Chriſt. Thus many would make their own righteouſneſs, their tears, and melting affections, in part, if not wholly, their Chriſt. As the goſpel hypocrite makes his very faith his Chriſt; ſo the legal hypocrite makes his duties his Chriſt. The politic hypocrite will join his carnal prudence with Chriſt's wiſdom, and ſo make it in part his Chriſt. The refined hypocrite will make the common aſſiſtance and influences of the Spirit reſts to him, and put them in the room of Chriſt. Are not all theſe ſo many falſe Chriſts? Yea, a divided Chriſt is a falſe Chriſt, while men would receive him as a Jeſus, to ſave them from hell; but not as a Lord, to rule over their luſts: they would ſhare in his benefits, but not in his perſon. There is ſomething in Chriſt that they like, and ſomething that they diſlike; they like the blood that came forth of his heart, to waſh their guilty conſciences; but they diſlike the water that came forth alſo, to waſh their filthy hearts.

12. The laſt ſign and diſcovery of unbelief, is men's receiving a true Chriſt in a falſe manner; as when Chriſt is received, but not in his grandeur. A prince is then received aright, when he is received according to his dignity: if a ſubject ſhould receive his prince, and entertain him no otherwiſe than he would do a peaſant, or country neighbour, this would be interpreted a contempt: So, if Chriſt be not received according to his grandeur, and dignity, and ſtate, he counts it a contempt rather than a right reception of him. Chriſt will be received as a LORD, or not at all: he will be a KING, or nothing. This was the ſin of the Jews, they could be content to receive Chriſt as a great Prophet, as the Mahometans do; but they did not receive him according to his grandeur, or that greatneſs and glory which he was inveſted with, and therefore they are ſaid not to receive him; John i. 11. He came to his own, but his own received him not. Whereas John ſays of the believing Jews that received him, that they beheld his glory, as the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth; that is, they received him in all his grandeur, ſplendor, majeſty, and glory. Thus men receive not Chriſt, but ſhew their unbelief, even in receiving the true Chriſt in a falſe manner. When Chriſt is not received as he is offered in the goſpel, he is received in a falſe manner: He is offered fully, freely, cordially, and conſtantly; and the right reception is alſo full, free, cordial, and conſtant: men may therefore receive him in a falſe manner, which is as good as rejecting of him; when they do not receive him fully, without dividing him; freely, without buying him; cordially, without reluctancy; and conſtantly, without repentance, or being diſſatisfied with the bargain.

Now, let all theſe twelve ſigns and diſcoveries of unbelief be conſidered, and they will ſhew, how many pretenders to faith are yet unbelievers: even all that are under the power of heart-hardneſs; live in the total neglect of ſpiritual and heavenly things; in a ſecret ſuſpicion of the truth of the goſpel; and a ſecret rejecting of the counſel of God; in habitual unholineſs of life and converſation; and that hear the word without any application ſuitably to themſelves; who give themſelves up to a total apoſtaſy, and a final deſperation; a diſtruſting of all preſent means; to delaying and demurring about cloſing with Chriſt; who either receive a falſe Chriſt, or yet a true Chriſt in a falſe manner. Theſe are unbelievers, that have not yet received Chriſt the Lord. I now proceed, 2dly, To the next thing propoſed, namely, to offer ſome motives and conſiderations to urge you to the receiving of Chriſt. If any here would know what is that ſtar, by which they may be led to the place where the Lord Jeſus lies? why it is juſt this everlaſting goſpel; it points out Chriſt, ſaying, Behold the Lamb of God. There are but two great requeſts that heaven makes makes to us all by this glorious gospel: The first request is to all Christless persons whatsoever, that hear this gospel, viz. That they receive Christ Jesus the Lord. The second is to all Christians that have received him, viz. That they walk in him: As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him. Now, you would know before hand, that no motive will move you, no argument will persuade you to receive Christ, unless it be backed with the almighty power of God: and therefore if you think salvation a business worth your while, O send up an ejaculatory prayer to heaven, that God would make this gospel, the power of God to your salvation, through Jesus Christ. We are now calling you in the name of the great and eternal God, to believe in his Son Jesus Christ, and receive him, so as you may walk in him, till you come to walk with him in white among the redeemed above: and there is this general motive, that should be instead of a thousand to you all; and which, if duly regarded, there would be no need of any more; and that is, the supreme authority of God the Father is interposed in this matter: For, this is his commandment, that we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, 1 John iii. 23. And, shall we think nothing to trample upon the authority, and contemn the command of that God, who can command us to hell in a moment? Here God sums up all the ten commands, as it were, into one; and says, if you obey this, you obey all; if you break this, you break all: the man that doth not believe in the Son of God, he breaks both the tables of the law at one dash; and violates every precept of the law, in the most dreadful manner. You have heard sometimes, how the sin of Adam, in eating the forbidden fruit, was at once a breach of all the ten commands. But do you consider, that your unbelief, in not receiving Christ, is a trampling under foot the authority of God in every one of these commands, and that in the most grievous manner.—The man that receiveth not Christ, he rejecteth God himself as his God; for he is not the God of any man, neither will be, but in Christ.—The man that receives not Christ, all his worship is at best but idolatry and superstition; for God cannot be worshipped acceptably any other way than in Christ, who is the image of the invisible God.—The rejecter of Christ is a profaner of the name of God; for, God's name is in him; and it is in him especially that God maketh himself known.—The man that doth not receive Christ, he cannot sanctify the Sabbath-day, nor hallow it; for all the days of his life, wherein he lives without Christ, are unholy days; his whole time is a sinful time. The man in this case, is disobedient to his heavenly parent, dishonours his heavenly Father; and so can never put due respect upon earthly parents.—He kills his own soul and crucifies the Lord of glory afresh, and so can never have a right love to man.—He is guilty of the grossest spiritual adultery, in departing from the Lord, and cannot be otherwise clean.—He steals and robs God of his glory, so cannot in other respects be altogether innocent.—He bears false witness against God, by making God a liar, and rejecting the testimony that God gives concerning his Son; and having so little regard to God's name, he cannot have much for his neighbour's.—And finally, he is guilty of covetousness, which is idolatry, and that of the most atrocious nature; for, he through unbelief, and rejecting of Christ as a Saviour, and thinking of salvation by his own means, doth covet that glory and honour which is only due to God and Christ, to be ascribed to himself: self is his God, and self-righteousness is his Christ; and what will he not covet, who covets to be in God's room?

Thus the sin of unbelief, in rejecting of Christ, doth at one stroak dash the whole commands of God to pieces; and therefore, no wonder that this be his great command, that we believe in the name of his Son: seeing also that, by receiving him, we fulfil the whole law, namely, by receiving him for our righteousness and sanctification; for in receiving him for our righteousness, we fulfil the law as a covenant, and that personally in him, who hath yielded perfect obedience in our room, and paid the penalty also for its violation; and in receiving him for our sanctification, we fulfil the law as a rule, by a perfection of parts, through his sanctifying Spirit in us, which goes on to a perfection of degrees in heaven. Therefore, I say, when we reject Christ, we reject the great command of God, and contemn his authority in the most signal instance. Know then, that, by the authority of the eternal God, you are obliged to believe; and let this general motive be in the room of all.

But to name some more particular motives, there are these six considerations that should, and would if the Lord would powefully concur with them, engage us to receive Christ. 1. Consider whom you are called to receive. 2. How few of the world do receive him. 3. What you shall receive when you receive Christ. 4. What you must receive, if you receive not Christ. 5. What is the malignity and danger of unbelief, in rejecting of Christ. And, 6. What is the excellency and necessity of faith, in receiving the Lord Jesus Christ. Now, some of these we would open at the time.

[1.] Consider WHOM you are called to receive. It is no less than the Lord of glory; the Lord, mighty in battle: we are exhorted from this very consideration, Psal. xxiv. 7, 8. Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors, and the King of glory shall come in. Who is this King of glory? the Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle. Who would not cast open these gates, to receive such an honourable guest! O let us open the gate of our understanding, to behold him; and open the gate of our will, to choose him; and open the gate of our affections, to embrace him; and open the gate of our whole heart and soul, to receive him. O what an excellent one is he! What excellent company for travellers! What excellent food for the hungry, and drink for the thirsty! What excellent medicine for the diseased, and excellent salvation for the needy! Man is the excellency of the creatures, grace is the excellency of man, glory is the excellency of grace, but Christ is the excellency of all: it is greater honour to be one of Christ's little ones, than one of the world's great ones. O consider whom you are to receive, it is not a man or an angel; but he that is Lord of men and angels; the Prince of the kings of the earth; He is the plant of renown; the chief among ten thousand. His beauty and glory outshines the sun in its meridian splendor: He is fairer than the sons of men; he is altogether lovely. He is the desire of all nations; and hence believers in all nations, both before and since his incarnation, have esteemed him most desirable; and shall we find in our hearts to reject and despise him? He is the consolation of Israel; and to all who believe he is precious: And indeed every thing in him is precious. What is in Christ? Why, if you duly considered what is in Christ, you would never reject or neglect him; for God is in Christ; 2 Cor. v. 19. For God is in Christ reconciling the world to himself. He is God manifested in the flesh; this is the great mystery of godliness, 1 Tim. iii. 16. A Godhead dwelling in flesh, is the world's wonder: it is such a wonder, such a mystery, that the world cannot receive it; yet God is in him, so as in receiving Christ you receive God. But here it may be asked, What of God is in Christ? Why consider,

in

1. The authority of God is in Christ; My name is in him, Exod. xxiii. 21. God hath authorized and sealed him; for, Him hath God the Father sealed, John vi. 27. He hath a commission, under the great seal of heaven, to save you; and therefore he comes in his Father's name, as well as in his own, to seek and save you. And this glorious one is come this day, in this gospel, to seek your acceptance of him, as a Saviour every way well qualified to save even the chief of sinners. Oh! shall such an one be rejected!

2. The wisdom of God is in him; Christ is the wisdom of God, 1 Cor. i. 24.; and in him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge, Col. ii. 3. Never did the wisdom of God display itself in such an illustrious and transcendent manner, before the eyes of men and angels, as it hath done in Christ: wisdom in uniting the most distant extremes, God and man, and God's glory and man's happiness: he is the centre of the union.

3. The power of God is in him; as he is the wisdom, so he is the power of God, 1 Cor. i. 24.: and all power in heaven and earth is given unto him, Mat. xxviii. 18. He hath not only the wisdom of God to contrive, but the power of God to accomplish and perform whatever concerneth us, and our eternal happiness. In an essential way, he hath all power as he is God; and in a donative way, he hath all power as he is God-man Mediator: therefore, he is able to save to the uttermost. You are called to receive a Christ, by the power of Christ; to receive one that can give you power to receive; as one absolutely feeble, you are invited to come and to take hold of his strength, that you may be enabled to go from strength to strength.

4. The Spirit of God is in him; I have put my Spirit upon him, Isa. xlii. 1.; God gives not the Spirit by measure to him. Men and angels that have the Spirit of God in them, they have their measures; some more, some less of the Spirit: but the Spirit is in Christ without measure; He is anointed with the oil of gladness above his fellows: and he dispenses to every one their share, as seemeth fit to him; for he hath the communication of the Spirit in his hand: The Father hath loved the Son, and hath given all things into his hand: He received gifts for men, and he giveth gifts to men.

5. The righteousness of God is in him, by which only a poor guilty sinner can be justified before God; for he is JEHOVAH'S righteous servant, who brings in an everlasting righteousness, and brings it near to justify many: for, we are made the righteousness of God in him, 2 Cor. v. 21. He is the Lord our righteousness, Jer. xxiii. 6. JEHOVAH-TSIDKENU; the Lord that justifies us, and is our justifying righteousness. And this righteousness is meritorious of all blessings, being every way perfect and complete. And therefore in him is the righteousness and justice of God manifested; Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation, through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God, Rom. iii. 25. Again,

6. The love and mercy of God is in him: the very yearning bowels of divine love are in him. What is Christ but the love of God wrapt up in a garment of flesh and blood? 1 John iv. 9, 10. In this was manifested the love of God towards us: and herein is love,—that God sent his Son. This is the highest flight that ever divine love made; and higher than this it cannot mount.—The mercies and compassions of God are all in Christ, Jude ver. 21. God's mercy is the thing that poor sinners cry for, when breathing out their last, as the only thing that can do them good. O! what would a man give for mercy, in the moment of death, and mercy at the great day! Why, if you receive Christ, you receive the mercy of God; but out of him, there is no mercy to be expected out of God's hand; for he will never shew mercy to the prejudice of his justice; and it is only in Christ, that mercy and justice meet together, and harmoniously embrace each other.

7. The salvation of God is in him; Neither is there salvation in any other, Acts iv. 12. Christ is the door of salvation; and faith is the key that opens that door; or it is just the man's entering in by it: and therefore, they that receive not Christ, they exclude themselves from all hope of salvation; for the salvation of God is no where to be found but in Christ: for, In vain is salvation hoped for from the hills or multitude of mountains: truly in the Lord our God is the salvation of Israel, Jer. iii. 22. And such as receive Christ for salvation, will in the issue take up old Simeon's song, Now, lettest thou thy servant depart in peace; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, Luke ii. 29.

8. The fulness of God is in Christ; It hath pleased the Father that in him should all fulness dwell, Col. i. 19. And chap. ii. 9. In him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. The fulness of all God's attributes and perfections are in Christ. He is the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person. And there is a meritorious fulness of blessings in him, to be communicate unto the members of his body, being full of grace and truth, John i. 14. O what a full Saviour! What a full Christ are ye called to receive!—Thus you see what of God is in him, to induce us to receive him; and whom it is that we are called to receive: he is Christ, he is Jesus, he is the Lord: shall we reject such an one?

[2.] The second motive is: Consider how FEW in the world do receive him; notwithstanding of these glorious excellencies that are in him, yet the most part of the world do reject him: He came to his own, and his own received him not, John i. 11. The language of the most part is, Who is the Lord, that we should serve him? We will not have this man to reign over us. Now, is this nothing to you, all you that pass by? Do you think it a small matter, to see the world crucifying the Lord of glory, and renewing the bloody tragedy again? And shall you have a hand in this this interpretative murder alſo? The more they be that reject him, the more cordially ſhould you receive him. What! ſay you; who would reject ſuch an one as Chriſt? Is it poſſible that any will be ſo mad, as to deſpiſe this plant of renown? Yea, there is a whole generation of Chriſt deſpiſers, and ſee that ye be not in the midſt of them. I will give you a repreſentation of them, and ſhew what they are like, that you may know them, and know if you be among them that are rejecters of Chriſt, in theſe eight particulars.

1. There is a Gallio-like generation, that care for none of theſe things. Are there not many among us, that will not give a fig for the richeſt offers of Chriſt in the goſpel? They will not give a fig for the ordinances of Chriſt; they will not give a farthing for the goſpel; they will not give a farthing for a ſermon concerning Chriſt; they will not give a ſtraw for a week day's preaching, nor think it worth their while, to go the length of the ſtreet for it: ſo little do they care for Chriſt and his goſpel, that they will not give a ſtraw to ſtay away from a Sabbath-day's ſermon; they care for none of thoſe things. A ſenſeleſs ſtory of Thomas the Rhymer would go better down with them.

2. There is a Demas-like generation: Demas hath forſaken me, having loved this preſent world. They diſcover their rejecting of Chriſt, by their putting the world in his room; If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. And they that love not the Father, they love not the Son, whatever they may pretend and profeſs to do; for, Every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him alſo that is begotten of him. It is not Chriſt but the world they are taken up with.

3. There is a Pilate-like generation, who, though they find nothing againſt the man, yet will cry, Take you him, and crucify him. They find no fault with him, and yet are content that he be crucified: they have no objection againſt him; and yet are content though the world trample upon and abuſe him; they are eaſy and indifferent: they have nothing to ſay againſt him, and yet they are content to live without him. Surely they are rejecters of Chriſt.

4. There is a Felix-like generation, that will ſay as he did to Paul, Go your way at this time, and I will hear thee at a more convenient ſeaſon. They are not for hearing Chriſt to-day; they are for putting off to another ſeaſon; and that ſeaſon may never come: To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts; for all the world cannot promiſe you a to-morrow, or another offer of Chriſt. How ſad is it, that the world ſhould be ſtill for delays! A delay for the future, is a denial for the preſent. You reject him, if you do not preſently hearken to him.

5. There is an Agrippa-like generation; Almoſt thou perſuadeſt me to be a Chriſtian. They that are but half perſuaded, are wholly loſt and undone, unleſs they be wholly brought over to Chriſt, and altogether perſuaded. They that are but almoſt perſuaded to receive Chriſt, are but almoſt believers; and they that are but almoſt believers, are but almoſt ſaved; and they that are but almoſt ſaved, they will be altogether damned; and more fearfully damned, than if they had never been ſo near to ſalvation. O ſeek to have it to ſay, Lord, thou haſt perſuaded me, and I was perſuaded.

6. There is a Herod-like generation, who can hear the word gladly, and do many things, but an Herodias is dearer to him than a John the Baptiſt, whoſe head is ſerved up in a charger to pleaſe and gratify her. They are but rejecters of Chriſt, that, rather than be croſſed in a Delilah, and touched in a particular luſt and idol, will give up with all their pretended kindneſs to miniſters and diſpenſers of the word: touch them in the ſore heel, and then they are perſecutors, either by tongue or hand, as well as in heart: if they have not an opportunity of open violence, yet at leaſt John Baptiſt's head is brought in in a charger, by and by into every company: the miniſter will be beheaded of his good name, by reproach and ignominy caſt upon him. If any faithful reproof, that reflects upon your honour, or croſſes your carnal ſatisfaction, raiſe in you a perſecuting ſpirit againſt the reprover, it is an evidence of your being but a rejecter of Chriſt.

7. There is a Judas-like generation, who betray the Son of man with a kiſs; with the kiſs of a profeſſion, with the kiſs of a feigned ſubjection, with a kiſs of flattery, or a kiſs of baſtard faith, that never had God for the father of it, nor the word of God for the mother of it: They profeſs to know God, but in works they deny him; having a form of godlineſs, but denying the power thereof. They want but an opportunity to betray Chriſt; whatever profeſſion of love to him they make, yet, whenever the trial or temptation comes, they betray his cauſe, they betray his truth, they betray his people, they betray religion, and are ready to turn to any way, or do any thing that the world deſires them, rather than loſe the bag: yea, they will ſell Chriſt for thirty pieces of ſilver; and, Eſau-like, ſell their birth-right for a meſs of pottage. They will give up with Chriſt, and with a good cauſe, and a good conſcience too, for a worldly trifle.

8. There is a Balaam-like generation, that will deſire to die the death of the righteous, and to have their laſt end like his; yet they love not to live the life of the righteous. They would deſire to die like ſaints, but to live like pagans: they would deſire to have Chriſt when they are dying, but they care not for Chriſt while they are living. But, how fooliſh is that deſire, whereby they would die in the Lord but live without him! yea, the life of many is a practical ſaying with the Jews, Away with Chriſt, away with him; away with him, and give me Barabbas. The hearts of many ſay, away with that Chriſt whom you call ſo glorious and tranſcendent, and give me the world, give me my luſts and idols.

In theſe eight particulars you ſee a ſight of the world, the temper and diſpoſition of the moſt part, and how Chriſt is deſpiſed and rejected of men; and ſhall that be your diſpoſition too? Can you find in your heart to turn your back upon this glorious, matchleſs, Prince of the kings of the earth, with the reſt of the world? Are you content that he get no backing to follow him and praiſe him? O the more that reject him, the more ſhould you receive him. Again,

[3.] The third motive is, conſider WHAT you will receive if you receive Chriſt. I remember upon the doctrinal part *, when I ſhewed the reaſons, why they that have received Chriſt, are to walk in him, in ſhewing what encouragement a man that receiveth Christ, hath to walk in him; I told of eight things that a believer receives when he receiveth Christ, namely, that he receiveth pardon, peace, grace, the promises, the Spirit, the adoption of children, a title to heaven, and even all things, when he receiveth Christ: but this ALL, that he receiveth in Christ, will admit of infinitely more particulars. I shall name a few things more that you will receive, if you receive Christ.

* viz. On the fourth general head, page 217.

ment

1. If you receive Christ, you receive light with him; for, He is the light of the world; and, in his light we shall see light clearly. You shall be in case to say, Once I was blind, but now I see; once darkness, but now light in the Lord. If Christ be not received, you have no light in you. O poor ignorant soul, dark and blind creature, ready to fall into utter darkness! may not this be motive enough for you, to look after Christ and seek an interest in him, that if you follow him, you shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life; you shall see the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ? Said I not unto thee, if thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God? And that sight will be an introduction to the vision of his glory, for ever in heaven. Surely, if you were not utterly blind, you would not reject this light. The light of the natural sun is desirable, to any that have eyes to see it; but ten thousand times more is the light of this Sun of righteousness; yea, infinitely more than the light of reason, or the light of learning, and human wisdom; for you may have that light, and yet be a dead man; but this is the light of life, John viii. 12. Therefore,

2. If you receive Christ, you receive life; spiritual life, eternal life; John vi. 47. He that believeth on me, hath eternal life: He is the resurrection and the life; and he came to give life, and to give it more abundantly. He himself is the bread of life that you should live upon; and for maintaining of your life you should be fed with the finest of the wheat, and with honey out of the rock. Why, man, you would give much for your natural life if it was in hazard; but what think you of spiritual and eternal life? The life of justification and sanctification? the life of joy and consolation? the life of communion and fellowship with God? the life of begun glory? and to be in case to say; To me to live is Christ? Christ is the ALPHA and OMEGA, the giver and restorer of this life; the maintainer and preserver of it; the food and medicine of it; and the very business of the man's life: To me to live is Christ.

3. If you receive Christ, you receive liberty; John viii. 36. If the Son make you free, then are you free indeed. You shall have freedom from the iron yoke of the law, in its terrible threatenings, legal commandments, and dreadful curses, which now you are under: freedom from the wrath of God: freedom from your idols; for he proclaims liberty to captives; and he hath the key of the prison-house, to open your prison-doors.—It is a dark prison in which you are, wherein you can understand no more savingly of God, than the stones of the wall: but he says to the prisoners, Go forth, and behold the light.—It is a fearful pit wherein you are, in which you will be surprized with the fear of death and hell, if conscience but awaken upon you; but he comes to deliver them, who through fear of death, were all their life-time subject to bondage. Such freedom from the sting of death doth he give, that if you receive him, you may welcome death when it comes, saying, Come, stingless death; welcome, O friend!

4. If you receive Christ, you receive advantage by every ordinance, and particularly you receive the good of the word: The word preached doth not profit, not being mixed with faith, Heb. iv. 2. But now, when it is mixed with faith, and receiving of Christ, then the word preached shall profit, and you shall pick out some spiritual advantage out of this word and that word, as we use to pick, out of every corner of the shell that is broken, as of a walnut, the kernel that is in it; so will you be in case to pick out the kernel of this and the other word and ordinance, and to get food and nourishment to your soul. Out of the same rose there is honey to the bee, and poison to the spider; so, the word and ordinance that proves the savour of life to one, proves the savour of death to another.

5. If you receive Christ, you shall receive advantage by every providence; Rom. viii. 28. All things shall work together for good, to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. Merciful providences will make you thankful, and cross providences will make you humble; and you shall have occasion to sing of mercy and judgment. And though under a temptation, or the prevalence of unbelief, you may come to say in an hour of distress, All these things are against you; yet you shall find all moving for you, and that he hath done all things well.

6. If you receive Christ, you receive righteousness, even a robe of righteousness, in which you may appear boldly before the tribunal of infinite justice, and before the throne of infinite holiness, without being ashamed or afraid: because holiness is vindicated, justice is satisfied, and the law is magnified, by the active and passive righteousness of Christ, which shall be imputed to you; so as you shall be in case to say, Surely in the Lord have I righteousness.

7. If you receive Christ, you receive strength as well as righteousness: strength to enable you in all your duties; strength to support you in all your difficulties: Surely in the Lord have I righteousness and strength. Yea, you shall be able to do all things through Christ strengthening you. You shall be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might: and strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. Let this be an argument to those who are by nature without strength to receive Christ Jesus the Lord, that they may be strengthened to walk in him.

8. If you receive Christ, you shall receive supply of all wants: when the Lord is your shepherd, you shall not want, Psal. xxiii. 1. You shall want no good thing; you shall receive the supply of all your spiritual wants; out of Christ's fulness, you will receive grace for grace: your God will supply all your needs, according to his riches in glory by Christ: Yea, you will get a supply of all your temporal wants and losses; you receive that which will be abundantly up-making to you, in all your losses. Have you lost husband, wife, children, or any dear and intimate relation? Well, this may be very afflicting, but Christ can well compensate all losses of that kind; for he is, and will be to his people better than ten thousand husbands, better than ten thousand wives, or children, or familiar concerns; for he is all in all.

And, in a word, in your receiving Christ, you shall

ſhall receive more than eye hath ſeen, or ear heard, or heart conceived here, and an immortal crown of glory hereafter. Yea, he that receiveth Chriſt receiveth God; Mat. x. 40. He that receiveth me, receiveth him that ſent me. And what can be more ſaid? He is an heir of God. As he that receiveth a tree, gets not only the fruit, but all that is in the tree, and all that it can produce to himſelf; ſo he that gets Chriſt, gets not only the fruit that grows upon the tree of life, but all that is in the tree to himſelf: and, ſince God is in Chriſt; he that receiveth Chriſt receiveth God. A man may eat of the fruit of a tree, and yet have no intereſt in the tree: even ſo, many eat ſome of the ſweet fruit of this tree, in common providence and grace; but he that receiveth Chriſt hath intereſt in the tree itſelf, as well as in the fruit; yea, here the believing eater grows into the tree, being a branch thereof; I am the vine, ye are the branches, John xv. 5. Yea, he hath the tree of life planted in his heart; Chriſt dwells in their hearts by faith, Eph. iii. 17. It were groſs to aſk, how Chriſt in heaven, and believers on earth, can be ſo cloſely united; for man and wife are one fleſh, though a thouſand miles aſunder; much more Chriſt and the believer one ſpirit, though the viſible heavens interveen betwixt them, 1 Cor. vi. 17.

[4.] The fourth motive is, Conſider what you RECEIVE if you receive not Chriſt: Why, there are four things you muſt receive, if you receive not Chriſt: you muſt receive luſts, for your laws; the devil, for your maſter; the curſe, for your comfort; and hell for your portion and reward.

1. If you receive not Chriſt, you muſt receive luſts for your laws: either you muſt receive Chriſt or Barabbas. When you receive not Chriſt you receive ſin, and ſin ſhall have dominion over you, while you reject the Saviour, who ſaves from ſin: and what for a gueſt is ſin, which you receive in Chriſt's room?—It is a God-oppoſing gueſt; for, it is enmity againſt God. —It is a God-provoking gueſt; for it expoſes you to his fury.—It is a ſoul-defiling gueſt; it defiles all the houſe where it is; nay, makes you abominable to God.—It is a moſt expenſive gueſt; it will coſt you dear, even the loſs of your immortal ſoul.

2. If you receive not Chriſt, you muſt receive the devil for your maſter; for there is no midſt, either Chriſt or the devil muſt be your maſter: and when you receive ſuch a gueſt as this, in the room of Chriſt, do you conſider what for a gueſt, a dreadful gueſt the devil is? He is a gueſt that will blind you; for, the god of this world doth blind the minds of them that believe not.—He is a gueſt that will harden you ſo, as you ſhall be like the adamant, and get no good of word and rod, ordinances or providences.—He is a gueſt that will deceive you; either by perſuading you that you have received Chriſt already, that you are a good enough believer; or by perſuading you to believe untruths and turn you into damnable errors, to believe a lie. Whence come all the errors of our day, but from the devil, who is a liar from the beginning? —He is a gueſt that will not only delude you, but deſtroy you, and devour you; for, He goeth about as a roaring lion, ſeeking whom he may devour. And as now he is your tempter, ſo afterwards he will be your accuſer.

3. If you receive not Chriſt, you muſt receive the curſe for your comfort: no comfort in all the word of God belongs to you that are rejecters of Chriſt, but only the curſe of the law; Curſed is every one, that continueth not in all things that are written in the book of the law to do them. You receive more and more of this ſentence of condemnation; the more you live in unbelief, the more doth this curſe take place, binding you over to more and more of wrath; He that believeth not, is condemned already; and the wrath of God abideth on him. You are under the wrath of God: and, oh! what is that? The wrath of a king is as the roaring of a lion: but, oh! what is the wrath of God like! Surely, the thunder of his wrathful power, none can underſtand. Nebuchadnezzar was in great wrath and fury, when the viſage of his countenance changed againſt the three children; and he commanded the furnace to be made ſeven times hotter: but, oh! what is the wrath of God when he is as angry as Nebuchadnezzar was! And truly he is angry with the wicked every day. Therefore,

4. If you receive not Chriſt, you muſt receive hell for your portion; Mark xvi. 16. He that believeth not, ſhall be damned. Do not think it is a miniſter only that ſays it; it is the word of God: and if you think not the SAY of a God, the word of a God of truth enough, he hath SWORN it, as well as ſaid it; you have the oath of God interpoſed in the matter; Heb. iii. 18. He ſwears in his wrath, that you ſhall not enter into his reſt: And to whom does he thus ſwear in his wrath? even to them that believe not. And, oh! what think you of this damnation, which God ſwears you ſhall receive, if you receive not Chriſt? It will be damnation proportioned to the means you have enjoyed; damnation proportioned to the worth of the blood of Chriſt, which you have trampled under foot. And, O! what think you of that debt which is as great as the price of the blood of Chriſt? Will you ever be able to pay it? No, by no means: you will ſink under it for ever. It will be wrath proportioned to the greatneſs of that ſalvation which you neglect. See Heb. ii. 3. and chap. x. 29, 30, 31.

And now, what do you think of all this, that I have been ſaying? Is there no weight in this conſideration, namely, whom you are called to receive, and how the moſt part of the world are rejecting Chriſt, and what you ſhall receive if you receive Chriſt, and what you muſt receive if you receive not Chriſt. Do you think all theſe things fancies, or realities? If the devil be tempting you to think they are but fancies; I tell you, in the name of the great God, that they are realities: and you ſhall find them ſadly to be ſo, when death's cold ſweat begins to break upon you; when your eye-ſtrings begin to looſe; and the union between the ſoul and body begins to be diſſolved, and you called to go to the tribunal of God. O man, then, to-day, while it is called to-day, harden not your heart as in the provocation. Do you know that you ſhall hear another offer of Chriſt again? Nay, all the world cannot aſſure you, that you ſhall have another Sabbath-day; nor certify you that you ſhall have a to-morrow.

I think there is as much weight in what hath been ſaid, as may, at leaſt engage you, when you go home, to go to your knees, and cry, "Lord, what a ſad caſe am I in while without "Chriſt! O give me Chriſt, or elſe I die! O "give me the ſpirit of faith, that I may re-"ceive Chriſt! for I periſh eternally without "Chriſt!"

"Chriſt!" May the Lord himſelf awaken and quicken you.

[5.] The fifth motive we adduce is, Conſider the malignity of unbelief in rejecting Chriſt, or not receiving of him, as he is offered to us in the goſpel. As it is not ſafe walking cloſs by the ſea-ſide, when the waves are tumbling out upon the ſhore; ſo it is not ſafe to walk in this world according to the courſe thereof, when the deluge of God's wrath is certainly breaking out upon it; it is the ſafeſt courſe to get into the Ark, and walk therein. In this goſpel there is an Ark provided, even Chriſt; and there is a window opened in the ſide of this Ark; yea, the hand of mercy put forth at this window, to pull in ſhelterleſs doves, that can find no reſt elſewhere: many hover without, till the flood waſh them off from the ſides of the Ark, and they periſh eternally: but happy they that are taught to fly in, by the wing of faith; and this is what here we are called to, namely, to receive Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, and ſo to walk in him. Now, the malignity of unbelief will appear, if you conſider both the ſinfulneſs and the hurtfulneſs of it.

(1.) The ſinfulneſs of unbelief in rejecting Chriſt, and not receiving him. If a man be guilty of murder, adultery, or the like, preſently he is odious, and juſtly looked upon as a monſtrous ſinner; but yet your ſin of unbelief goes a ſtep beyond all theſe, if you duly conſider it; for, when the Holy Ghoſt is ſent to convince the world of ſin, John xvi. 9. he pitches upon this ſin, as if there was no other that the world needed to be convinced of; He will convince the world of ſin, becauſe they BELIEVE not on the Son of God: Why? becauſe there is more ſinfulneſs in it, than any other. Oh! what an abyſs of iniquity is in the bowels of unbelief! What made the old world ſo ſecure, before the deluge came and ſwept them away, but unbelief? And, how comes it that now, both wiſe and fooliſh virgins do ſlumber, before the coming of the Bridegroom, but from unbelief? Unbelief is virtually all ſin. Scandalous ſins have more infamy, but unbelief hath more of obliquity and guilt in it, it being againſt the greateſt laws, and ſtrongeſt obligations. But, more particularly, we may take up the ſinfulneſs of unbelief in the following particulars; ſuch as theſe,

1. The ſinfulneſs of unbelief in rejecting Chriſt will appear, if we conſider it with reſpect to GOD; for, unbelief doth diſhonour God more than any other ſin, by calling in queſtion all his attributes, and caſting an affront upon all his perfections: no greater indignity can be done to the glory of God, than is done by unbelief; it hath a mouth full of blaſphemy againſt God.—Why? by unbelief we do trample upon the authority of God that commands us to believe: it is a proud contempt of the divine command, under the maſk of humility; for, unbelief doth ordinarily paſs vailed under the vizard of ſome refined virtue; and that is one of the reaſons why it is ſo little ſeen, and that people are convinced of other ſins and breach of the commands of God, but not of this: beſides that groſs ſins, the conviction of them may ariſe from a natural conſcience, but the light of nature doth not lead men to the conviction of unbelief; it being a goſpel, and more ſpiritual ſin: however, the more ſpiritual it is, the worſe, in trampling upon the authority of that God who is a Spirit.—By unbelief, as we deſpiſe his authority, ſo we deny his faithfulneſs, and charge him with a lie; He that believeth not hath made God a liar; becauſe he believeth not the record that God gave concerning his Son, 1 John v. 10. As he that believeth, ſets to his ſeal that God is true; ſo, he that believeth not, ſets his ſeal to that dreadful untruth, that God is a liar. We may tremble to mention the evil of unbelief. To give the lie is reckoned the greateſt injury among men; for, truth is the ground of commerce, and human ſociety: ſo that to ſay that a man is a liar, is as much as to ſay, he is unworthy, and unfit to keep company with men: And, alas! what an injury is this to God, who ſtands more upon his word than any other part of his name! Pſal. cxxxviii. 2. He hath magnified his word above all his name: in ſo much that we have more experience of God, in making good his word, than in any other thing.—By unbelief we deny the wiſdom of God, and charge him with folly. All the treaſures of wiſdom are laid up in Chriſt, and in the contrivance of ſalvation through him: here is the manifold wiſdom of God; which the angels admire. Behold, unbelief imputes folly to the only wiſe God; and that in the moſt ſignal inſtance of it.—Again, by unbelief you deny the power of God, and queſtion his ability: Can God furniſh a table in the wilderneſs? Pſal. lxxviii. 19, 20. Can the ſon of Jeſſe give you vineyards? ſays unbelief. Though he be able to ſave to the uttermoſt; unbelief ſuppoſes there is ſomething too hard for God, that he cannot do, and which his power cannot reach.—By unbelief we deny the love and mercy of God, and charge him with unmercifulneſs, and defect of goodneſs, as if he was an implacable judge ſtill, and not upon a throne of grace, nor a God in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf. God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son: that whoſoever believeth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life, John iii. 16. But unbelief contemns all the diſcoveries that God makes of his love and good-will to men in Chriſt. God ſays, you need my Son, you are damned if you take him not; and I freely offer him to you that you may be ſaved, and yet we reject this grace.—Yea, by unbelief we ſtrike at the very being of God, and make an attempt upon God's life: ſo much atheiſm is in unbelief, that, at one ſtroak, we thereby take away the ſcriptures, God, and Chriſt, and all the good things that belong to our peace. So much blaſphemy is in it, that every unbeliever, by his ſecret and open murmurings againſt God, doth raiſe many black ſcandals upon God. So much idolatry is in it, that every unbeliever idolizes himſelf, his own carnal wiſdom, pride, will, common gifts, ſelf-ſufficiency, legal righteouſneſs, and ſeeming good duties, and by ſelf-dependency maketh himſelf his God. Thus doth he deify himſelf and undeify the true God. As faith honours God, ſo doth unbelief diſhonour him. What God doth to the creature, that faith doth to God: God juſtifieth, ſanctifieth, and glorifieth the creature; and ſo faith doth juſtify, ſanctify, and glorify God.—Faith doth juſtify God, Luke vii. 29.; acquit him from all the jealouſies that the carnal world, and the carnal heart doth caſt upon him.—Faith doth ſanctify God, Num. xx. 12.; by ſetting him above all, and believing that he can make good his word, when the courſe of all things ſeems to contradict it.—Faith doth glorify God, Rom. iv. 20.; declaratively declaratively giving him the glory of his excellencies: but unbelief, inſtead of juſtifying, doth accuſe him; inſtead of ſanctifying his name, doth but profane it; inſtead of glorifying, doth diſhonour him. And therefore it is the moſt hainous and hateful ſin.

2. The ſinfulneſs of unbelief will appear, if we conſider it with reſpect to CHRIST. Unbelief reproaches him, betrays him, kills him, and curſes him.—By unbelief in rejecting Chriſt you reproach him as if he was a deceiver; for, the native language of unbelief is, he is not the Saviour of ſinners; he is but an impoſtor, and ſo we will have nothing to do with him: his words ſeem to you as idle tales, and you believe them not; as if he was like Naphtali, cheating you with goodly words.—By unbelief you betray him, ſaying, Hail, Maſter, under a pretence of friendſhip. Many eat his bread, wear his livery, call him Maſter, and yet lift up the heel againſt him.—By unbelief you kill and crucify him afreſh: know it from the Lord, Sirs, they may have a hand in crucifying Chriſt, that never ſaw his face; Heb. vi. 6. They crucify to themſelves the Son of God afreſh.—Yea, by unbelief you curſe him, and call him accurſed, whom God hath bleſſed; and of whom it is ſaid, that men ſhall be bleſſed in him, and all nations ſhall call him bleſſed. It may be you will ignorantly reject this charge and ſay, you never curſed Chriſt, or called him accurſed all your days: but in vain do you excuſe yourſelves, if you be an unbeliever under the goſpel; for, every one that hath heard the goſpel, do, either by faith ſay, that Jeſus is the Lord, receiving him as ſuch; or elſe, by unbelief, do practically call him accurſed, and reject him as an horrible impoſtor: yea, every unbeliever doth trample on the blood of the Son of God, and count the blood of the covenant an unholy thing, Heb. v. 29. All unbelief hath ſomething of this in it. The apoſtle ſhews how all that hear of Chriſt, do either by faith crown him, or by unbelief curſe him; Wherefore I give you to underſtand, that no man ſpeaking by the Spirit of God, calleth Jeſus accurſed: and that no man can ſay that Jeſus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghoſt, 1 Cor. xii. 3. And, oh! ſhall we reckon it a light matter, thus to tread upon the Son of God, and trample upon God's moſt precious Jewel, wherein he is well-pleaſed; and to loath that which God loves above all things! What horrible ingratitude is it, to ſlight that remedy, that the infinitely wiſe God hath been, at ſo great pains, and ſo much expences to prepare for us; and hath coſt him more, than the creating of ten thouſand worlds would have done! And that we ſhould ſlight the works, which he prefers to all his other works! How criminal muſt it be to undervalue that, and to prefer the devil and your luſts before it!

3. The ſinfulneſs of unbelief, in not receiving Chriſt, will appear, if we conſider it with reſpect to the SPIRIT; for unbelief bears its curſed oppoſition againſt a whole glorious Trinity: and ſeeing God, in the goſpel, doth ſtrive with people by his Spirit, and the motions thereof; people cannot, by unbelief, reject Chriſt, but they muſt ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, as well as againſt the Father and the Son. Indeed, every ſin is a ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, though every ſin be not that which is called eminently the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt: for, there are manifold degrees of ſinning that take place, before it comes to that dreadful and unpardonable ſin. There are five or ſix degrees of unbelief, which all bear a reference to the Spirit of God, and every one of them is worſe than another, and the laſt the moſt terrible.—One degree of unbelief is that whereby the Spirit is ſaid to be grieved; Grieve not the holy Spirit of God: Forty years long was I grieved with this generation.—Another degree of unbelief is that whereby the Spirit is ſaid to be vexed; Iſa. lxiii. 10. They vexed his holy Spirit. Oh! to vex God is a ſad matter.—A third degree of unbelief is that whereby the Spirit is ſaid to be quenched; Quench not the Spirit, 1 Theſſ. v. 19. We are apt to put out the fire that God would kindle within us.—A fourth degree of unbelief is that whereby the Spirit of God is ſaid to be reſiſted; Do ye always reſiſt the Holy Ghoſt? ſaid Stephen to his unbelieving hearers, Acts vii. 5.—The fifth degree is that whereby the Spirit is reckoned to be deſpiſed; and when it comes to this, people are nigh unto curſing: Behold, ye deſpiſers, wonder and periſh.—But then the ſixth and laſt, and truly ſaddeſt degree of all is, when unbelief comes to that pitch, whereby the Spirit is ſaid to be deſpited, Heb. x. 29. The man is filled with horrible malice, and hath done deſpite unto the Spirit of grace; and this is an expreſſion uſually taken to ſignify the unpardonable ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt—There is a black and dark ſtair, with ſix ſteps; and as we would not chuſe to go down to the loweſt ſtep, let us beware of the firſt: unbelief hath ſome ingredients of all theſe in it. And, oh! what ſinfulneſs may we ſee from hence to be in it!

4. The ſinfulneſs of unbelief, will appear, if we conſider it with reſpect to the GOSPEL, wherein Chriſt is offered to be received. Unbelief doth juſt fruſtrate the deſign and make void the importance of the goſpel to man; for, he receiveth the grace of God in vain, 2 Cor. vi. 1. As good, yea, better had it been for ſuch a man, that Chriſt had never come into the world; or that he had never heard of him.—By unbelief we fruſtrate Chriſt's glorious expedition from heaven to earth; and, in a manner, give him cauſe to repent of his death and bloody agony. You ſay, in effect, Chriſt might have remained in heaven, kept his blood in his veins, and that he died as a fool; and you give him no thanks for his pains. Alas! ſad is the language of unbelief!—By unbelief you declare a goſpel miniſtry uſeleſs; you, in effect, not only call miniſters fools, that preach the goſpel; but the goſpel itſelf fooliſhneſs; The preaching of the croſs is, to them that periſh, fooliſhneſs: We preach Chriſt crucified, to the Jews a ſtumbling-block, and to the Greeks fooliſhneſs.

5. The ſinfulneſs of unbelief, in rejecting of Chriſt, will appear, if we conſider it in the EFFECTS of it, with reſpect to other SINS: As it is the mother of all ſin; ſo it is the mother of all miſery. Many are aſhamed of the daughter, but not of the mother: they are aſhamed of theft, murder, and adultery; but not of unbelief, which is the mother of all theſe. The firſt ſin was the fruit of unbelief, which opened the door to all ſin and miſery: for, had not Adam diſbelieved the word of God, he had not believed Satan, nor eaten the forbidden fruit: and ſtill it is the prodigious womb of all theſe.—It is the mother of hardneſs and ſtupidity of heart; He upbraided them for their unbe- lief and hardneſs of heart, becauſe they believed not, Mark xvi. 14.—It is the mother of apoſtaſy; it is big with child of defection from God; Take heed, brethren, leſt there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God, Heb. iii. 12. Unbelief travails as in birth till that accurſed child of apoſtaſy be brought forth. Why, through unbelief, the man loſes the thought of the excellency of Chriſt, and increaſeth in thought of love to his idols: for, as love to Chriſt doth decreaſe, love to idols will increaſe. And again, as he that believeth not the threatening, will not ſtand to do any evil: ſo he that doth not believe the promiſe, will not be forward to do any good; hence unbelief makes apoſtaſy.—Unbelief is the mother of lukewarmneſs: All our neglect and coldneſs in holy duties, comes from the weakneſs of faith or the power of unbelief; there is a decay at the root. Faith makes a man earneſt and zealous; but unbelief makes him coldrife and careleſs. Unbelief doth even turn duties into ſin, and pollutes every duty, every action: To them that are unbelieving, is nothing pure; but even their mind and conſcience is defiled, Tit. i. 15. The plowing of the wicked is ſin: yea, the prayer of the wicked is abominable to God; for, whatſoever is not of faith is ſin. And as it turns duties into ſin and pollutes them; ſo it ſtops the mortification of all ſin: it is impoſſible for one in the exerciſe of unbelief, to mortify a luſt or idol. You may allude to, Mat. xvii. 20. when the diſciples aſked this queſtion, Why could not we caſt out this devil? Chriſt anſwers, Becauſe of your unbelief. So, why cannot you caſt out that devil, that luſt, that idol? It is becauſe of your unbelief.—Unbelief is the mother of inſtability. Faith is a fixing grace; My heart is fixed, truſting in the Lord: but it is through unbelief that the man is toſſed to and fro; If ye will not believe, ſurely ye ſhall not be eſtabliſhed, Iſa. vii. 9.——Thus it is the ſin of all ſins, the prolific womb of every other ſin.

lief

6. The ſinfulneſs of unbelief, in rejecting Chriſt, will appear, if we conſider it more cloſely with reſpect to ITSELF. It is the greateſt act of folly to reject and not to receive Chriſt; They have rejected the word of the Lord, and what wiſdom is in them? Jer. viii. 9. Though ye were the greateſt heads of wit in the whole world, while ye reject Chriſt, ye are but arrant fools: ye can never be wiſe unto ſalvation while this is your caſe.—What greater folly than to refuſe a remedy, when it is in our offer? For an wounded man to ſlight a phyſician, or a condemned man to ſlight a pardon, is an argument he is not in his right wits. He is as guilty of ſelf-murder, who rejects a proper medicine, againſt preſent death, as he that cuts his throat: and ſo is the caſe here. Nothing can be more fooliſh and unreaſonable than to reject Chriſt: for, as he hath the only right to your ſouls; ſo he out-bids all other merchants; he out-bids ſin, Satan, and the world. Can theſe give you more than Chriſt? Can the world give you more? Let them all declare their ſtrength and treaſure. Can any of them give redemption to you? Can any of them procure remiſſion of ſin to you? Can any of them ſatisfy God's wrath for you? Can any of them preſent you righteous before the judgment-ſeat, or ſettle eternal life upon you? All this Chriſt can do, and none elſe. How unreaſonable is it then to reject him, and chooſe any thing elſe beſide him? But the grievouſneſs of this ſin, and its aggravations, may appear, in conſidering further the folly of it, as it is a ſlighting the remedy, when you view what for a remedy you ſlight by unbelief. Why,

Your unbelief, in refuſing Chriſt, is a ſlighting of a needful remedy. O Sirs! you have extreme need of Chriſt. Doth not a ſinner need a Saviour? Were you in a ſtate of innocency, as at the firſt creation, then there would be no need: but you are fallen and broken, and ſold under ſin. Had you a ſtock in your own hand, to ſet up your broken ſouls again; and to purchaſe your own peace and ſalvation, there would be leſs need: but you are by nature without ſtrength. Could any plank bring you aſhore but Chriſt, then there were the leſs hazard: but, oh! Sirs, there is ſalvation in no other. Is it not needful that you come to Chriſt with your burden? for, otherwiſe the whole burden of ſin and guilt lieth upon your back: a burden that will ſink you to the loweſt hell. Your ſoul is naked, and ſwarms with the vermin of filthy luſts: Do you not need a garment to cover you, and a fountain to waſh you? Your ſoul is enſlaved to enemies and idols: Do you not need a Redeemer to looſe your fetters? You are under the wrath of God: and do you not need a Reconciler? God is angry with the wicked every day; every day of the week, and every hour of the day: when you go out, or come in; when you riſe up, or ly down, God is ſtill angry with you. While in a ſtate of unbelief, the flaming ſword of juſtice is over your neck; and who can help you, if Chriſt be neglected? If you remain Chriſtleſs now, ſurely you will be ſpeechleſs at the great day, when the wicked ſhall have none to pity them; for the Judge will frown upon them; their own conſcience will upbraid them; the ſaints will condemn them; their friends will forſake them; the angels will deride them; the devil will ſcoff at them; the heaven will thunder againſt them; earth will flame about them; hell will groan for them; and down they will go, roaring and howling for ever! Why, man; there is no remedy but one, and is not that a needful remedy? yet, by unbelief, you reject it.——Your unbelief is a ſlighting of a ſuitable remedy, a remedy fitted to your need: look upon your need aright, and then judge who but Chriſt is fitted for a ſinner. Are you a blinded ſinner? Here is a Prophet to enlighten you. Are you a guilty ſinner? Here is a Prieſt to ſatisfy for you. Are you an enſlaved ſinner? Here is a King to proclaim liberty. He is well furniſhed and qualified for your caſe: He hath gold, for your poverty; balm, for your wounds; a fountain, for your filth; a ranſom, for your debt; yea, here is a broad plaiſter, for your broad ſore; a deep fountain, for your deep [illegible]; a great ranſom, for your great bondage; chief of Saviours, for the chief of ſinners. O what think you of unbelief, that rejects this?—Your unbelief is a ſlighting of a gracious and merciful remedy: Ah! how would fallen angels value ſuch a mercy! You ſlight your own mercy, through unbelief, in rejecting of Chriſt: God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son: and Chriſt ſo loved the world, that he gave himſelf. Is not Chriſt ſaying in the goſpel, Behold me, behold me? Is he not ſtretching forth his merciful arms? and ſhall not divine love melt, or move you? Why, ſays Chriſt, ſhall I vail my glory, die a curſed ſhameful death, and bear the ſcorn of men, the wrath of God, the curſe of the law, the terror of death, and the pains of hell for you, and yet you care not a ſtraw for me?—Your unbelief is a ſlighting of a near remedy; Rom. x. 6, 7, 8, 9. The remedy is brought to your very door: you need not ſay, Who will aſcend into heaven, to bring Chriſt down? or, who ſhall deſcend into the deep, to bring Chriſt again from the dead?—The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart. You need not ſay, Who will roll away the ſtone, from the mouth of the well? for, Chriſt hath done it for you; and now it is an open fountain, and running by your door. Well, Sirs, will it not be ſad to have Chriſt ſo near, his righteouſneſs near, and yet eternally to miſs him! To periſh, like the thief upon the croſs, with a Saviour at your ſide! To be within a ſtep of him, and yet never touch him! Yea, ſuch is the nature of your unbelief to ſuffer you juſt to ſtarve for want beſide infinite fulneſs at your hand in the goſpel-offer.—Your unbelief is a ſlighting of an eaſy remedy; for the goſpel lays no obſtruction in your way of cloſing with Chriſt, and receiving of him: there is no impediment but your want of will, which you lay in your own way; You will not come to me that you might have life. The gates of the goſpel are caſt open to all paſſengers; and whoſoever will are commanded to enter. Chriſt is the door, and the door is open, and you may come in; yea, if you but look in, you are ſaved: Look unto me, and be ye ſaved, all the ends of the earth, Iſa. xlv. 22. Faith is indeed the effect of the almighty power of God; but your powerleſneſs lies in your unwillingneſs: the goſpel-offer lays no obſtruction in your way; and there is no hinderance on God's part. In this reſpect it is an eaſy remedy; but unbelief ſlights it, notwithſtanding that the Lord ſays, Whoſoever will, let him come: and, him that cometh, I will in no wiſe caſt out.—Your unbelief is a ſlighting of a ſeaſonable remedy, a timely remedy; and now is the time, now is the ſeaſon: Now is the appointed time, now is the day of ſalvation. You know not but your days may be at a cloſe, ſo as Chriſt ſhall never be offered to you again: you know not but this is the laſt ſermon, or the laſt Sabbath-day; and yet ſuch is the nature of your unbelief, that it neglects the opportunity, which it may never enjoy again.—In a word, this remedy is preſſed upon you; Chriſt is in earneſt offering himſelf; Wiſdom cries in the ſtreets: and what is his cry? See Iſa. lv. 1. Ho every one that thirſteth, come ye to the waters; and he that hath no money, come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk, without money and without price. You will notice three times COME in that one verſe: he is crying, Come, come, come. O! is he not purſuing you with his gracious offers, even when you are running away from him? As the rock followed the Iſraelites in the wilderneſs, with its running ſtreams of water; ſo Chriſt, the ſpiritual Rock, is following you with the ſtreams of his mercy and blood, to waſh and ſave you. O how compaſſionately doth he complain of ſinners! Ye will not come to me, that ye might have life, John v. 40. As if he ſhould ſay: Why run ye ſo faſt away from me? Why will ye not come to me, that am come from heaven to ſave you? It is not an enemy but a friend, that you run from. Oh! what madneſs are you guilty of? Yea, you are buſy going to the devil to get death and eternal damnation: but ye will not come to me to get life and eternal ſalvation. Alas! Sirs, what horrid and unſpeakable evil is there in unbelief!——Thus you ſee the ſinfulneſs of unbelief. I ſhould next ſpeak of the hurtfulneſs thereof.

and

(2.) The hurtfulneſs of unbelief is another part of the malignity of it; and this will appear in theſe particulars following.

1. It is moſt diſpleaſing to God, and ſo cannot but be moſt hurtful: as it doth moſt diſhonour God, ſo it doth moſt diſpleaſe him. Chriſt did never chide his diſciples ſo much for any thing, as for their unbelief; O ye fools, and ſlow of heart to believe; why do ye doubt? O ye of little faith! When they were afraid of periſhing in the ſtorm, he chides them before he chideth the wind: the ſtorm firſt began in their own hearts. Iſrael were caſt off, for their unbelief, Rom. xi. 20. If we would know what company are in hell, ſee Rev. xxi. 8. it begins with the fearful and unbelieving.

2. Unbelief is hurtful, in regard that final unbelief is an undoubted evidence of reprobation; Ye believe not becauſe ye are none of my ſheep, John x. 26. Unbelief is God's priſon wherein he keeps the reprobate world; For God hath concluded them all in unbelief, Rom. xi. 21. He hath ſhut them up under unbelief; As many as were ordained to eternal life believed: The elect ſhall obtain, and others are hardened. Why then, by unbelief you put a ſeal to your own reprobation, and continue a black note upon yourſelves. While you ſlight Chriſt you increaſe your immortal bonds, and are twiſting a cord wherewith to bind your ſouls eternally, in theſe unquenchable flames: therefore, Be not mockers, leſt your bands be made ſtrong, Iſa. xxviii. 22. There is no back-door to eſcape God's wrath, if Chriſt be not received.

3. It is hurtful in that it hinders the tokens of God's love, and deprives us of much good. Nothing doth bar, and ſhut out God's operation, in order to our relief, ſo much as this ſin; He could not do many mighty works there, becauſe of their unbelief, Mat. xiii. 58. It is true, he could by his power deſtroy unbelief; but while unbelief remained, his hands were, as it were, bound; Said I not unto thee, if thou wouldeſt believe, thou ſhouldeſt ſee the glory of God, John ii. 40. It mars the comfort of ordinances; The word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it, Heb. iv. 2. It bars the gates of heaven: it excluded Adam out of paradiſe, the Iſraelites out of Canaan, and will exclude us out of heaven, if it be not removed, Heb. iii. 17, 18.

4. It is therefore alſo hurtful, in that it is the great murderer of ſouls: If ye believe not, ye ſhall die in your ſins. The ruin of ſinners is laid at the door of this ſin, as if there were none other; and juſtly ſo: for, if the malefactor was offered life, upon his accepting the king's remiſſion; if he refuſed this, it might well be ſaid, his refuſal hanged him: even ſo here, he that believeth not is condemned. Indeed no other ſin would condemn you, if you were not guilty of this ſin: but this is the ſin, that binds the guilt of all other ſins hard and faſt upon you; becauſe by unbelief, you reject the ſatisfaction for all ſin, by refuſing Chriſt; and this will aggravate your perdition to the higheſt degree.——But having enlarged ſo much upon the ſinfulneſs of it, the hurtfulneſs plainly follows thence.

[6.] The ſixth motive is, to conſider the excellency

lency and neceſſity of faith, in receiving Chriſt. Faith is as helpful and advantageous, as unbelief is hurtful and diſadvantageous.

It was a heavy challenge the Lord Jeſus gave to the Jews, John v. 43. I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not. He had challenged them for injuring themſelves, ver. 40. ſaying, And ye will not come to me, that you may have life: and again, ver. 42. for their diſeſteem of God, ſaying, But I know you, that you have not the love of God in you; and now here, in this verſe, for their not embracing Chriſt, though come in his Father's name. Where we ſee, that, though Chriſt be God over all, equal with the Father; and Lord over his own houſe, and ſo acts in his own name; yet he condeſcends, as Mediator, to come into the world clothed with a commiſſion and authority from the Father, to make offer of himſelf, and life through him, Phil. ii. 5,—11. Mat. xiii. 17. Heb. v. 4, 5. Obſerve alſo, Chriſt, though thus coming, is to be received, embraced, and entertained; yet ſuch is the perverſeneſs of the world, as not to make him welcome. When Chriſt manifeſts himſelf to the world, it is uſual with Satan to hound out ſeducers, and falſe teachers, to ſtudy to bear him down, and make the way of truth odious. See Mat. xxiv. 5, 24. Acts v. 36, 37. John viii. 37. But the true diſciple of Chriſt diſcovers himſelf, at all times, by his firm attachment to his Maſter; and therefore is characterized by our Lord himſelf, as one that not only gives entertainment to the Father, but to the Son; He that receiveth me, receiveth him that ſent me, Mat. x. 40. Though ſeducers may pretend to come in Chriſt's name, Mat. xxiv. 5.; yet they come but in their own name, having no commiſſion from the Lord; making themſelves, and their reputation and advantage, their chief aim in their undertakings, and ſpeakings, and imaginations of their own heart and brain, without any warrant from God. Such as will not receive and embrace Chriſt, will eaſily receive and embrace ſeducers.

All that I ſhall point at, concerning the excellency of faith, upon this head, ſhall be to diſcover theſe ſix advantages thereof, beſide what I have ſaid before: For, I have told you what it is we receive, when we receive Chriſt *, which diſcovers the unſpeakable advantage thereof. But beſides what was then offered, let us view it,

1. With reſpect to Chriſt, and then the firſt excellency of faith in receiving Chriſt is, that it advances Chriſt's name, and makes him very precious, and very glorious in the man's eyes: To you that believe he is precious; yea, more glorious than mountains of prey. And herein faith goes beyond ſenſe, or ſpiritual ſenſation; for ſenſe may take up the glory of his actings; but faith ſees the glory of his perſon.—Senſe beholds the love that is in his ſmiles; but faith beholds the love that is in his heart, even when ſmiles are out of view.—Senſe looks to what Chriſt is for the preſent; but faith will look to what he hath been from eternity, before time; and what he will be to eternity, after time: and faith's long journey, from eternity to eternity, makes it fall into an ocean of admiration, and raiſes the thoughts to the higheſt pitch of eſtimation of Chriſt.—Senſe, in a word, will follow Chriſt for his love, and for the loaves; but faith prizes him for himſelf. And ſurely this is the exerciſe of the higher houſe, to be dwelling upon the contemplation of Chriſt's beauty, and to be tranſported with love to him, and joy in him.——By faith we view the matchleſs excellency, and the tranſcendent properties of Chriſt. Faith makes long commentaries and precious encomiums upon Chriſt: "It is the "faithful ſpy, as one calls it, that brings the "good report of glorious Chriſt." Chriſt's and his Father's honour are both advanced at once by faith, when we receive Chriſt.

2. The ſecond excellency in faith, is with reſpect to the believer, in that it advances the believer to the higheſt dignity, ſuch as, the dignity to be a member of Chriſt; for, by faith, Chriſt and the believer are ſo unite, that they are no more two, but one ſpirit; He that is joined to the Lord is one ſpirit. And herein faith keeps a ſweet correſpondency with her ſiſter love; for faith is that nail which faſtens the ſoul to Chriſt; and love is that grace that drives the nail to the head. Faith takes hold of him, and love helps to keep the grip. Chriſt dwells in the heart by faith, and he burns in the heart by love, like a fire melting the breaſt. Faith caſts the knot, and love draws it faſt.—The dignity of being God's children; we are the children of God by faith: and to as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the ſons of God, even to them that believe in his name, John i. 12. And is this a ſmall thing to be a ſon to the King of kings; or to enjoy the privileges of his children; the ſon abideth in the houſe for ever; to be heirs of God, and joint heirs with Chriſt? O if we knew the excellency of this dignity, it would ſtir us up to more concern after this grace of faith!—The dignity of power with God, like Jacob; for, he hath ſaid, Whatſoever ye aſk in prayer, believing, ye ſhall receive it, Mat. xxi. 22. And, indeed, if ye receive Chriſt, ye ſhall receive whatſoever ye aſk of God. It is ſtrange to ſee his condeſcenſion, in that he puts a blank in the poor believer's hand many times, ſaying, What wilt thou that I ſhould do unto thee?

3. The third excellency in faith, is with reſpect to other graces, in that it advances all other graces: faith doth quicken every other grace.—It advances love; and hence faith and love are put together in ſcripture ſo frequently: for, no ſooner doth faith look to the glorious object, than love delights in it; faith draws aſide the vail; and love ſits down and ſolaces itſelf in the diſcovery.—Faith advances mortification; for, by this ſhield of faith, we quench the fiery darts of the wicked: And this is the victory whereby we overcome the world, even our faith. Faith makes the ſoul to eſteem his idols to be as taſteleſs as the white of an egg: and that which formerly was ſweet proviſion for their luſts, doth now become ſorrowful meat, and bitter herbs.—Hence faith advanceth humility. By what law is boaſting excluded? It is not by the law of works, but by the law of faith: yea, faith ſees ſuch glory in Chriſt, as makes the man vile in his own eyes.—Faith advances joy; for, the God of peace doth fill with joy and peace in believing: in whom believing we rejoice. The more faith the more joy.—And further, faith advances the grace of hope. We cannot hope for the thing promiſed, unleſs by faith we cloſe with the promiſe itſelf; for, faith lays hold on the promiſe, and hope to the thing promiſed.—In a word, all the graces of the Spirit are quickened and advanced by this grace of faith; as, peace, long-ſuffering, gentleneſs, goodneſs, and temperance.

4. The

* What theſe things are, may be ſeen above, p. 217, 239, 240.

4. The fourth excellency in faith, is with reſpect to duty, in that it advances duties as well as graces: I inſtance in prayer and obedience.—It advances and excites to the duty of prayer: a believing perſon is a praying perſon; Lord, I believe, ſaid the man, Mark ix. 24.; there is the confeſſion and profeſſion of his faith: Lord, help my unbelief; there immediately follows his prayer. Faith excites to the greateſt diligence in attending upon the Lord in this duty. Little faith makes little prayer; little ſweet diverſion from ſleep, in this ſpiritual exerciſe.—It advances obedience: faith makes obedience eaſy and pleaſant; Heb. xi. 8. By faith Abraham, when called to go out to a place which he ſhould after receive for an inheritance, obeyed. Why are God's commands a burden? Even want of faith is the reaſon: a pleaſant obedience is impoſſible without faith. Faith diſcovers the invaluable excellencies that are in Chriſt, and this makes the perſon look upon his duty, more as his dignity than his duty. Faith takes hold of that infinite ſtrength that is in Chriſt, and draws virtue from him; and this makes him obey. No holineſs without faith. It facilitates every duty, and makes it ſweet: but unbelief makes every duty a burden.

5. The fifth excellency in faith, is with reſpect to acceptance of every duty and action: neither our prayers nor ſervices are acceptable but in faith; By faith Abel offered up a more acceptable ſacrifice than Cain, Heb. xi. 4. Intimating, that without faith, no acceptable ſacrifice. And ver. 6. Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God; intimating, that by faith we do exceedingly pleaſe him. Many prayers are nothing elſe but a breach of the third command, in taking the name of God in vain; for which the Lord will not hold them guiltleſs. The duties of the moſt part are nothing but abomination; becauſe, to the unbelieving and impure, nothing is clean, Tit. i. 15.

6. The ſixth excellency in faith, is in reſpect of communion with God. Faith is that grace whereby a believer doth attain the moſt intimate communion with God, and correſpondence with heaven; for, Chriſt dwells in the heart by faith, Eph. iii. 17. By the exerciſe of other graces, Chriſt is as a paſſenger that tarries at moſt for a night: but, by the exerciſe of faith, he is as an inhabitant, that comes and takes up houſe with us. The acts of faith are like the ſteps of a ladder, by which we go up to heaven, and converſe with the higher houſe; it uſhers the believer to the throne.—It is the grace whereby the believer attains the moſt ſenſible enjoyments; for, it keeps the eye upon the moſt glorious object: and ſeeing it is a ſenſible act, and faith is a ſeeing of him who is inviſible, Heb. xi. 27.; perhaps ſome may be ſaying, Whence ſo little ſeeing of the Lord? Alas! it is more than thirty days ſince I ſaw the King: yea, ſome may be at that; I have lived theſe two years at Jeruſalem, and yet have not ſeen the King's face: yea, the complaint of ſome may go higher; theſe three years and ſix months, it hath not rained upon me, but the clouds have been reſtrained and bound up, and the heaven hath become braſs; and why? it is the want of the exerciſe of faith: many are leſs convinced of the neglect of the duty of faith, than of the neglect of the duty of prayer: but if we knew the excellency of this grace, we would have a holy impatience till we believed.—It is by faith the man hath a clear ſight of the things promiſed; the great things in the promiſe, as well as the promiſe itſelf: by faith a man is brought within ſight of God, and within ſight of heaven; Faith is the evidence of things not ſeen, Heb. xi. 1. So by faith Moſes ſaw him who is inviſible, ver. 27. Why, is it poſſible to ſee things that cannot be ſeen? yea, faith's diſcoveries of God are as certain as the diſcoveries of our bodily eyes are: and, by this means, it comes to have ſuch communion with God; for it is moſt myſterious and ſublime in its actings; and therefore called the myſtery of faith.—Hence faith can believe the word of promiſe, though ſenſe ſeems to contradict the accompliſhment thereof; for, it walks not upon the low ground of ſenſe and reaſon, but upon the high road of the ſure word of prophecy, and the divine faithfulneſs is engaged in the promiſe; as we ſee in Abraham's faith, Rom. iv. 19. Thus faith believed the falling down of the walls of Jericho, by the blowing of rams horns, which was impoſſible to ſenſe and reaſon.—Faith can believe the promiſe, though the providence of God ſeems to contradict the accompliſhment; ſaying with Job, Though he kill me, yet will I truſt in him. Notwithſtanding of killing diſpenſations, yet he would believe the Lord's word.—Faith can believe a word of promiſe even when the commands of God ſeem to contradict the accompliſhment: thus when Abraham was commanded to ſacrifice his ſon, the promiſed ſeed, yet he believed the promiſe would be accompliſhed: "He had natural affection to wreſtle with, and "the command of God ſeeming to contradict "the promiſe of God; yet, over the belly of "all theſe, as one faith, believing Abraham "gives faith to the promiſe, and brings Iſaac "to the altar," Heb. xi. 17, 18, 19.—Faith can believe a promiſe, though challenges for ſin and conviction of guilt do ſeem to oppoſe and contradict the accompliſhment of the promiſe; 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. Though my houſe be not ſo with God, yet he believed the promiſe, ſaying, he hath made with me an everlaſting covenant, ordered in all things and ſure. Thus again, Pſal. lxv. 3. Iniquities prevail againſt me; yet this doth not interrupt his faith; as for our tranſgreſſions, thou ſhalt purge them away: And ſurely it is a noble act of faith to believe, notwithſtanding of unanſwerable challenges of guilt. The beſt way, both to crucify idols, and to anſwer challenges, is by receiving Chriſt, and hoping againſt hope. Now, the faith of a promiſe being the great medium, the grand mean of communion with God, and intercourſe with heaven, we may ſee how it advances communion with God.—Yea, faith can believe a promiſe, though temptations, falls, and follies ſeem to contradict the accompliſhment. Satan aims at nothing more, than to oppoſe and weaken faith; but God turns his temptations, and their falls, to the further eſtabliſhment of faith, which, like a tree, ſtands the ſtronger of its being ſhaken. True faith gets ſtrength by every fall to the ground, it riſes and fights more valiantly; as we ſee in Peter, and other ſcripture examples. Temptation to faith is as fire to gold, 1 Pet. i. 7. It makes the true gold more pure; and inſtead of deſtroying faith, it is the occaſion of refining it, and adding to its ſtrength.——I might enlarge this purpoſe, concerning the excellency of faith, to a great degree; from the conſideration of the worthy Prince that faith receives,

Chriſt

Christ Jesus the Lord; and the walk that issues from thence, and ends in glory.

3*dly*, The third thing here proposed, in this exhortation to receive Christ, was to give some directions, in order to the receiving of Christ: And the directions I would offer may be confined to these four. 1. Study the sad state you are in while without Christ, and faith in him. 2. Study the right use of the means of faith. 3. Study to have the obstructions and impediments of faith removed. 4. Study the art of pleading with God, for this grace to receive Christ.

[1.] Study the sad state you are in, while without Christ, and without faith to receive him. While you are destitute of faith you are destiture of Christ; yea, you are yet in nature, and have neither part nor portion in him: and therefore, O man, be deeply impressed with the sad case and state you are in, upon this account; for, you will never seek after Christ, nor faith in him, till you see your need of him, by getting your natural state discovered to you. Though this be not the formal cause of faith, yet it is a forcible mean to engage the soul to be restless, till it get faith in Christ; therefore the law is said to be our schoolmaster, to lead us unto Christ. Study therefore, I say, the sadness of a Christless state. Why?

1. A Christless state is a burdened state: you ly under the burden of all your sins, original and actual: the burden of the guilt of all your sinful thoughts, words, and actions lies upon your back; because you never come to Christ with your burdens: and if you never come, the burden will sink you down to the lowest hell.

2. The Christless state that you are in is a loathsom state. All your actions, whether natural, civil, or religious, are vile and abominable in the sight of God: the very prayer of the wicked is sin. You are full of nothing but putrifying sores, from the crown of the head to the sole of your foot. There is no mire so unclean, no vomit so loathsom, no pestilence so noisom, no carion so offensive, as thou art in thy Christless state, in the sight of a holy God, who cannot look upon iniquity but with abhorrence.

3. Thy Christless state is a poor, blind, and naked state. Your soul is naked, and you swarm with the vermin of filthy lusts: you are destitute of a garment, to cover you; of eye-salve to enlighten you; and of gold to enrich you: there seems to be an allusion to Christ's threefold office, Rev. iii. 18. I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye-salve, that thou mayest see. As a Prophet, he hath eye-salve; as a Priest, he hath a garment; and as a King, he hath gold: but now, you are destitute of all these, while you are without Christ, and without faith in him.

4. Your Christless state is an enslaved state. You are a slave to Satan; he works in your heart, as in his shop, Eph. ii. 2. He says to you, Go, and you go; do this, and ye do it. Your state is worse than the Egyptian bondage; for, Israel groaned under theirs; but, alas! you are not sensible of yours; neither do you believe it: the devil knows, that if you perceived your slavery, you would seek to make your escape from him; therefore he makes all sure. He does with you as the Philistines did with Samson; puts out your eyes that you may not see your chains, nor look to Christ for liberty.

5. Your Christless state is therefore a wrathful state, wherein God's wrath is burning against you; the flaming sword of justice is always over your neck; for, God is angry with the wicked every day, Psal. vii. 11. Every day of the week, and every hour of the day; when you go out, and when you come in; when you rise up, and ly down; God is still angry with you: he hath bent his bow, and made ready his arrows; and you are the butt of these arrows of his indignation: and if he let them fly, they will pierce you to the very soul; and who will heal that wound? Who can help you if Christ neglect you? No reconciliation but through him.

6. Your Christless state is a cursed state. All the curses of the broken law are levelled against you: and a just God is engaged, by his oath, to ruin you: to whom doth he swear in his wrath, that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believe not? Heb. iii. 18. Should not the thoughts of this make you tremble? Were it but the oath of a man, or a company of men, as these forty men, that bound themselves with an oath, that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul, it would bereave you of your night's rest and quiet, till you were made friends with your enemies: And will the oath of the great God have no effect upon you, nor move you to fly to Christ for protection?

Study this sad state you are in; for withal, it is a weak state; since, by nature, you are without strength, and cannot help yourselves. You can by no means redeem your own soul, or pay your own ransom. Therefore,

[2.] Study the right use of the means of faith. Now, when we speak of means, you would know, that faith is not a flower that grows in nature's garden; By grace ye are saved, through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. Yea, though a natural man could gather together all the motives and arguments of the Bible, yet he could not make his own heart to believe, or receive Christ: God is the giver, Christ is the author, and the Holy Ghost is the efficient cause of faith; yet notwithstanding there are means which the Lord uses to bless, for working faith. And in general, the great mean and ministerial instrument is the gospel, which discovers a shore for a shipwrecked soul; and it is the power of God to salvation.

More particularly, the ordinary means are especially these six, in so many words. 1. Mean is reading of the scriptures; these are they that testify of Christ, the great object of faith. 2. Hearing of the word preached; for, Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. 3. Meditation: for if a man never think upon his way, nor consider matters, he will neither know God, nor believe in him; The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib, but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider. Meditate on Christ's fulness, your own wants, the suitableness of the promises, and the freedom of grace. 4. Prayer; waiting at wisdom's gates, and crying for wisdom to put forth her voice; to give understanding, to speak of excellent things; and that the opening of her lips may be, that her mouth may speak of truth and righteousness. 5. Conversation with the godly; for, He that walketh with the wise, shall be wise. 6. Self-examination; Examine your- ſelves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own-ſelves; know ye not your own-ſelves, how that Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except ye be reprobates? Many never believe, becauſe they never examine, nor put the queſtion, whether they have believed or not.——These are ſome of the means. Now, I ſay, ſtudy the right uſe of the means of faith.

selve

QUEST. What is the right uſe of theſe means? Indeed no unbeliever can rightly uſe theſe means: but you are to ſtudy to uſe them as rightly as poſſible, and to uſe them right, is to uſe them,

1. Humbly, knowing that means will not do without the Lord's bleſſing upon the means. Never think that God is obliged to give you faith, upon the account of your uſing the means; but uſe them, becauſe he enjoins them as means: put them in their own place, not in Chriſt's room; and do, as the mariner; he cannot command the wind, yet he lies ready at the coaſt, and waits on the wind; and when the gale comes, he hoiſts up the ſails: ſo, though you cannot command the wind of the Spirit, which blows where it liſts; yet, wait humbly upon his blowing, and till he come and move the waters.

2. Hopefully and believingly; It is good for a man both to hope and quietly to wait for the ſalvation of God, Lam. iii. 26. If God looks upon no motive in us to induce him to give us Chriſt; who then may not hope and expect againſt hope, and believe againſt unbelief? People, in uſing the means, ſhould do it as believingly as they can, by trying what the Spirit of faith will help them to, preſſing after faith, with an eye to the promiſed ſtrength: and ſo ſtudy to mix faith with the uſe of the word; for, the word preached did not profit, not being mixed with faith in them who heard it. And the word read doth not profit, not being mixed with faith in them that read; neither do we receive any thing by prayer, but by believing. Therefore, cry for the ſpirit of faith to accompany the means.

3. Means are to be uſed frequently: be often about the Lord's hand, in the uſe of the means; Bleſſed is he that ſoweth beſide all waters. We have a common proverb: A going foot is always getting: If you be much about God's hand, there will be ſome off-fallings now and then to be got. How frequent and induſtrious was Elijah in the uſe of the means! He went up to mount Carmel, and there fell on his face and prayed for rain; but not a cloud appears: he ſent his ſervant to go up and look toward the ſea, to know if there was any appearance of rain; he returning tells there is nothing: he doth not leave praying; he prays again, and ſends his ſervant again, even to ſeven times, 1 Kings xviii. 42, 43. Thus uſe the means frequently and induſtriouſly. And ſo,

4. Fervently: Be fervent in ſpirit, ſerving the Lord: be earneſt in this matter, as a matter of eternal life and death; ſeeking the ſpirit of faith as what you cannot want; Aſk, and it ſhall be given; ſeek, and ye ſhall find; knock, and it ſhall be opened unto you, Luke xi. 9. Why, all theſe words, aſk, ſeek, knock, doth intimate fervency, as well as frequency, in the uſe of means: and what are we thus fervently to ſeek? even the Spirit, ver. 13.

5. Patiently; Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord: behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain, James v. 7. Wait patiently for him, Pſal. xxxvii. 7. The Lord is a God of judgment, bleſſed are all they that wait for him, Iſa. xxx. 18. The word may ſeem ſtrange; for there is encouragement in waiting on a God of mercy, but what comfort in waiting upon a God of judgment? but judgment in this place is not to be underſtood as oppoſed to mercy, but to folly: he is a God of judgment; that is, of infinite wiſdom, who knows how to time and order his gifts.

6. Perſeveringly; Hoſ. xii. 6. Wait on thy God continually, till he come in with regenerating grace: do not limit the holy One of Iſrael; it is reaſonable to wait God's leiſure, for he gives grace freely and ſovereignly: and if grace come in the end, what though we have waited long for it?—Uſe the means honeſtly, and do not weary in well-doing; for, in due time, ye ſhall reap if ye faint not. Give not over the uſe of means, but wait on him who waits to be gracious. We never heard of any that got this diſpoſition, but they found their waiting on the Lord was not in vain; the Lord pitied them and gave them a heart to believe and receive Chriſt.——This is the direction I offer then; ſtudy the right uſe of the means of faith.

[3.] Study to get removed from you all the obſtructions and impediments of faith and receiving of Chriſt: and the impediments are theſe ſix.

1. Impediment of faith that hinders the receiving of him, is natural atheiſm: The fool hath ſaid in his heart, there is no God. And an atheiſtical ſpirit hath moſt ſordid apprehenſions of God: it doth not take him up in the greatneſs of his nature, nor in the authority of his word: God looks not like a God to that perſon: the word of God is not like the word of God: the ſweet promiſes are but empty notions to the man: the ſharp threatenings of hell and wrath, are but terrible fables to him. O ſeek that the power of God may remove this impediment; otherwiſe you will never believe nor receive Chriſt.

2. Impediment is groſs ignorance; ignorance of God and of Chriſt. Many fooliſhly queſtion, whether or not they have an intereſt in Chriſt, before ever they know that there is a Chriſt: they are ignorant of Chriſt, and his excellency; ignorant of the law, and its ſeverity; ignorant of the goſpel, and its condeſcendency; ignorant of themſelves, and their ſinfulneſs, and miſery, and their abſolute need that they ſtand in of this glorious goſpel-remedy. If they knew the diſpoſition of God toward ſinners out of Chriſt, they would not take reſt, while they are expoſed to that conſuming fire, and within the flood-mark of his wrath. If they were not ignorant of their natural ſtate, they would not reſt content in that ſtate. If they knew Chriſt, they would not be content to live without him: If thou kneweſt the gift of God, ſays Chriſt to the woman of Samaria, and who it is that ſaith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldeſt have aſked of him, and he would have given thee living water, John iv. 10. My people are deſtroyed for lack of knowledge. O ignorant ſouls, you are nearer hell than others; your ſtate is darkneſs, and it borders upon utter darkneſs. You ſwear, and lie, and drink drunk, and break the Sabbath, and commit uncleanneſs; you ſlight ordinances, you ſlight duties, you ſlight prayer, in ſecret and family; you go on in ſin without flying to Chriſt; and all is becauſe of your ignorance: They that know his name put their truſt in him; but you know him not, and therefore believe not.

Why,

Why, say you, many have knowledge that make no good use of it; yea, they are more graceless and profane, than we that are poor ignorant creatures. I answer, that their knowledge is but head-knowledge, and not heart-knowledge; or else it would influence their heart and life; and they have a sad account to make, for sinning against so much knowledge: but this will not help you; for profanity kills them, and ignorance kills you; they die of one disease, and you die of another. Will you reject knowledge because some abuse it? Why, that is as ridiculous as to say, because many die who have both food and physic, and plenty of means for preserving life; therefore, I will use no means, for preserving of my life at all. They that have food and physic may die; but they that have none of them cannot live: so, whoever perish, ignorant persons, that slight the means, are sure to perish.

3. Impediment of faith that you need to seek removed is presumption: Many presume they have Christ already, and thus they need not receive him: they will not confess that they want Christ. Many presume they have a righteousness of their own: Christ spoke a parable to certain that trusted in themselves, that they were righteous. If a proud man hath money in his house, he will scorn to be obliged to his neighbour: so it is with the proud sinner, his language is, I have never wronged any man; none can say, black is the eye of my head; I am neither whore nor thief; I have a good heart to God; and have done as well as I could. Alas! poor deluded creature, cannot the God, who charges his angels with folly, see a fault in you? yea, millions of deformities doth he see: and is this a sufficient bottom for you to sail to heaven into? There is a leck in the vessel that will sink you for ever, into the bottomless pit: the soul is the passenger, graces are the sails, the spirit is the wind, but Christ only is the bottom, in which you can sail safe to glory. It is said of some in the Acts, They came and burnt their books, whenever they came and believed in Christ: so, if ever you believe in Christ, that trash must be burnt; you must be forced out of yourselves, and obliged to relinquish every thing about you.

4. Impediment of faith is earthly mindedness and worldly dispositions: the vanity of the world so possesses the mind, that there is no room for Christ: the thoughts of the world shut out the thoughts of God. As Saul hid himself among the stuff: so, many are buried and absorbed in the midst of the world. And yet, all the best things of a world are like the shadow of the sun, which the least cloud can remove: like a heap of chaff, which any wind can blow away; and like Jonah's gourd, which any worm can eat out.

5. Impediment of faith is a heart-league with sin, which hinders the match with Christ: why, we are married to other lovers, and in love with sin; Christ comes as a Saviour to save from sin; well, he is welcome; yea, but it is to save from such a beloved sin as your drunkenness, whoredom, lewd and carnal company: why, here the heart recoils: Oh! I cannot live without my nature; I cannot part with Benjamin. At the root of unbelief, try when you will, you will find the heart is in league with some lust, which it cannot part with. Seek the removal of these impediments.

6. Impediment of faith is the cunning artifices of natural unbelief. The unbelieving heart hath a thousand deceits whereby it keeps off people from Christ, and from the receiving of him. Sometimes unbelief presents impossibilities before the man: O it is impossible that God will have mercy on you: it is impossible that the like of you can get to heaven. Unbelief will present a thousand difficulties and discouragements; there is a lion in the way: you will never be able to believe; never be able to pray; never able to hold on in God's way. Unbelief doth harden the heart, and turn it so stupid, that they are no more moved with the word, than if they were a thousand miles from ordinances. Unbelief fills the heart with slothfulness, so as the man doth not put forth his hand, as it were, to receive the offered Saviour and salvation. Yea, unbelief presents a world of wrong objects of faith, and that hinders true faith, or believing in, and receiving of the Lord Jesus Christ, the only true object.

There are four things that unbelief doth cunningly lead men to build upon, that seem good things, and are so indeed; but yet wrong objects of faith, namely, sense, duties, graces, providence.

(1.) Through the cunning of unbelief, a man will build his faith upon sense, and not upon Christ: thus Thomas, Except I put my fingers into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into the hole of his side, I will not believe. O Sirs, to believe in a bare word of promise, abstract from sense, is a great mystery: and therefore, when one makes sense and feeling his idol, God usually withdraws himself, and denies sensible tokens of his presence, that they may learn to build upon Christ only, or upon a bare word of promise.

(2.) Through the cunning of unbelief, a man will build his faith upon his duties, and establishing a righteousness of his own, and not submitting to the righteousness of God. And thus he builds upon self: or, like the whorish woman that divided the child, he makes the object of his faith, half Christ, and half self, when unbelief cannot prevail to exclude Christ wholly.

(3.) Through the cunning of unbelief, a man will build his faith upon his graces; and so lies open to that challenge, Ezek. xvi. 15. Thou did put thy trust in thy beauty. And thus, through the cunning of the old serpent, and of unbelief, the man will build his faith upon his faith, and not his faith upon Christ: it is not Christ that is the righteousness of such persons, but their faith is their righteousness. Hence many can give no other ground of their faith, but just this, they believe: and what is the foundation of their faith? Why, they believe, because they believe: they hope to be saved, because they believe: and whence do they believe, but because they believe? Alas! it is a fancy instead of faith; and a fancy built upon a fancy.

(4.) Through the cunning of unbelief, a man will build his faith upon providence: hence, ask at some people, what is the ground of their hope for heaven? O, say they, God hath been good and kind to me all my days; he hath many times protected me from danger, and [illegible] me in difficulties, and fed me in my straits: yea, perhaps, he is only feeding you for a day of slaughter: no man can know love or hatred by these outward providences. These

These wrong objects of faith, and grounds of believing, are great obstacles and impediments, in the way of true believing and receiving of Christ.

Now, O Sirs, seek that all these impediments of faith may be taken out of the way; whether it be atheism, ignorance, presumption, earthly-mindedness, a heart-league with sin, or the cunnings of natural unbelief, presenting wrong objects of faith. Another direction is,

[4.] Study the art of pleading with God for grace to receive Christ. It is true, God is not bound to hear an unbeliever's prayer; but he that hears the ravens when they cry, may hear you when you plead with him for the blessing. And, if you would learn the art of pleading, there are six pleas, or arguments, wherewith you may urge him to pity you.

1. Plead his promise, Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you, and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them. It is a free gracious promise: cry to him to make good that word to you, seeing he hath said, For this will I be enquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them, ver. 37. Tell him, that now you are come to enquire, and request him to do it.

2. Plead your own impotency and inability to help yourselves: this was the impotent man's plea at the pool of Bethesda, John v. 6, 7. When Jesus saw him ly, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole? The impotent man answered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool; but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me. So say you, Lord, I have lain many years with this dead plagued heart, beside the open fountain of thy blood; I am unable to move to it of myself, I have none to put me in: ordinances cannot do it; ministers cannot do it; thou must put to thy helping hand, or else the work will remain unperformed.

3. Plead his power, in a sense of your own impotency. Do you feel the power and multitude of your corruptions within you? Say with Jehoshaphat, Lord, I have no might against this great company; neither know I what to do: but mine eyes are upon thee. With thee all things are possible. Though I may despair of help in myself and others; yet, thou hast forbid me to despair of help in thee. Thou said, Let there be light, and there was light: O say, let there be faith and it will immediately take place; for, faith is thy work and thy gift: it is the WORK of God that we believe: By grace we are saved, through faith, and that not of ourselves, it is the GIFT of God.

4. Plead your necessity, your extreme need of Christ, and of faith in him. O man, there is not a starving man that needs meat so much, as you need Christ: there is not an wounded man that needs a physician; a shipwrecked man, that needs a plank; a dying man with the dead rattle in his throat, that needs breath so much, as thou needs Christ. O then, cry, Give me Christ, or else I die. I may live without friends, without wealth, and honour, and pleasure; but I cannot live without Christ, and without faith.—Plead his power; how easy is it for him to help, saying, as Psal. lxxx. 1. O thou that dwells between the cherubims, shine forth: it will cost thee no more pain to work faith in me, than it doth the sun to shine forth. Yea, he can more easily put forth his power and grace, than the sun can dart out its beams. It is no trouble nor loss to the sun to shine forth: so neither will it be to him, to shew his power and mercy: a look, or a touch, will do it; since he can so easily do it. You may cry with hope; he will never miss an alms bestowed on a beggar, out of the ocean of his bounty. Nay, as the sun, the more it shines, displays its glory the more: so will he gain glory by putting forth his power to help you.

5. Plead his mercy, and the freeness and communicativeness of it.—Plead the freeness of his mercy, that needs no motive, and expects no worth: it runs freely, so that the mountains cannot stop the current thereof, no more than the rocks can stop the ebbing and flowing of the sea.—Plead the communicativeness of his mercy to others: he had compassion on men's bodies, that came to him for healing; and will he not have compassion upon souls, that come to him for life? Is not mercy the work that he delights in? that perfection of his nature that he takes pleasure to display?

6. Plead Christ's commission, Isa. lxi. 1. that he came to proclaim liberty to the captive, and the opening of prison-doors to them that are bound. Cry, Lord, here is a poor prisoner, a locked and bound up heart; here is employment for thee: O loose and knock off my fetters, and bring my soul out of prison.—O here is a naked sinner for thee to cover, a wounded soul for thee to cure, a lost sheep for thee to seek and save: and, was not this thy errand? Thou came to seek and save that which was lost. And, wilt thou not be found of a lost sinner, that desires to seek thee, through thy grace? Plead his commission under the broad seal of heaven; for, Him hath God the Father sealed. And plead the value of his blood, and merit of his righteousness; and upon that ground whereby all grace is purchased: plead for faith and grace to receive Christ Jesus the Lord.

Thus I have laid before you some directions, in order to the receiving of Christ. O cry for grace to follow them, and put them in practice, so as you may indeed close the bargain with him.——I should now answer some objections, but am prevented with your time *. O shall all these directions be lost and Christ be still slighted and rejected! O Sirs, you cannot please God better, than by coming to Christ, and embracing the offer of him: and you cannot please the devil better than by refusing the offer of Christ; and putting him off with delays, till you perish in your unbelief.

And now, after all that hath been said, what are you resolved upon? Will you receive Christ, or not? Our glorious Lord and Master hath sent us to pose you, man, woman; and demand whether you will receive him or not? O! what answer shall we return? Must we go and say, that all this people, upon no terms, will receive him; none of them are for precious Christ? Oh! God forbid! shall he not see the travel of his soul, who travelled through all the armies of God's wrath for you, and gave his soul an offering for your sin? O give your soul to him, saying, Lord, in spite of the devil and of unbelief, through grace I will open my heart and arms

* This seems to be the conclusion of one of the discourses.

arms to receive Christ!——The Lord himself help you to receive him, and walk in him.

4*thly*, The fourth thing, upon this exhortation, to receive Christ was, to answer some objections. There are two things, that the sum of Christianity, and the whole of a gospel-life doth consist in; and they both have a respect to Christ, and are these, in short, 1. To take him; 2. To use him. Now, behold Christ's name sounds in the ears of multitudes, that never yet could be persuaded, to take him and use him: to take him as he is offered, and to use and improve him as he is taken; yet this is the great call of God in the words of our text; As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him: where the way to heaven is described, by taking Christ, so as to receive him as Christ Jesus the Lord; and then by using and improving him, so as to walk in him suitably to that reception. The receiving of Christ being the leading thing here, without which there can be no walking in him; therefore, I have insisted a considerable time upon this exhortation, to receive Christ. But after all that hath been said for conviction, excitation, and direction, perhaps the hearts of hearers are filled with a thousand objections, against this great and necessary duty of receiving Christ Jesus the Lord. We cannot answer the half of them; yea, no man or angel can answer one of them without Christ. All objections whatsoever, would vanish before the grace of the gospel, rightly understood, and powerfully displayed. Christ stands in the gospel ready, to hear and answer all your objections; and he can do it with a word.

If the soul say, I have no right to receive Christ, for I am a great sinner; his answer is ready: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.—O, says the soul, my sins are red as crimson: Well, says Christ, I can make thee white as wool.—Oh! but I have no reason to hope; for I am a lost creature: nay, says Christ, I came to seek and save that which was lost; and many a lost sheep I have sought and found.—O but, says one, I am past cure, for I am dead and rotten in the grave of sin: nay, but, says Christ, I am the resurrection and the life.—O but, says the soul, I am a slave to sin and Satan, and a prisoner to justice: well, says Christ in his word, I am come to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound.—O but I have many burdens of sin, and guilt, and confusion, and innumerable burdens, that I cannot mention: well, says Christ, Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—O but my hand is withered, I cannot receive Christ: well, in this case, Christ bids you stretch forth the withered hand, believing in him for grace to believe; and coming to him for grace to come.—O but, says the soul, I am lame, and cannot walk in Christ, or in his way: well, says Christ, I will put my Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes.—Ah! but he may withdraw his Spirit, and depart from me: no, says Christ, I will make an everlasting covenant with thee; I will not turn away from them to do them good.—O! but I may depart from him, and make apostasy: no, says Christ, Jer. xxxii. 40. I will put my fear in your heart, that ye shall not depart from me. And, Jer. iii. 19. Thou shalt call me, My Father, and shall not turn away from me.—O! but I may be overcome with strong temptations: well, says Christ, Fear not, for I am with thee; my grace is sufficient for thee.—Alas! but I have been a great backslider already: well, says Christ, there is a word for you to rely on, in answer to that, I will heal your backslidings, and love you freely.——And thus Christ, in the word of grace, and gospel of salvation, stands ready to answer every objection.

But more particularly, we might open the grounds of manifold objections, that sinners make against believing in, or receiving of Christ.

1. Objections are drawn from the greatness and multitude of sins. It is true, there are some who have no such objection as this at all: they are as secure, senseless, and stupid, as a stone of the wall: there is no hope of saying any thing, to move and affect such, unless the Lord himself awaken them. But if any here were objecting to this purpose, though it was but one in all this company: "Oh! my guilt is so "grievous, my sins are so great, and my trans- "gressions are so multiplied, that you would "tremble to think of the sins I have been guilty "of, and what light I have sinned against; and "this makes my heart sink: none knows, but "God and my own conscience, what a sinner "I have been; and will Christ ever accept of "me?" Answ. The greatness of your sins should be a great argument to engage you to come to Christ, and receive him. Your sins are not greater than God's mercies: your guilt is not greater than Christ's merits. It is hardly to be supposed, that you are worse than some who yet have obtained mercy; such as Paul, a persecutor and blasphemer; Manasseh, a murderer and wizard, in compact with the devil; Mary Magdalene, in whom were seven devils; and many of the Jews that crucified the Lord of glory, yet washed in that blood of the Lamb, which they shed. The merit of Christ's blood is infinite; though your sins were greater than all sins, yet there is virtue in his blood to expiate them; for, it cleanses from all sin. Though the sands be many and large, yet the sea can overflow them all: so, though your sins be numerous and great, the blood of Christ can cover them all.—In a word, the question is not about the greatness of your sins, but your present duty: be your sin what it will, the Lord calls you to come to Christ and receive him: and your unbelief, in your rejecting Christ, is greater than all your other sins; for it is a refusal of the remedy, whereby you may be relieved of all your sin and guilt. Your other sins are but against the law; but this sin, in rejecting Christ, is against the law and the gospel both. Other sins are against God; but this sin, in rejecting Christ, is against God and Christ both. It is a great sin to think any sin little; but it is a greater sin, to think the righteousness of Christ is not above all sin. Our disobedience is the disobedience of man; but Christ's obedience is the obedience of God: therefore, our believing in Christ doth please God better, than if we had continued in innocency, and never sinned. The least sin is unpardonable without this obedience and righteousness of Christ; and the greatest is pardonable by it. Therefore, O seek in to Christ, to be cloathed upon with this righteousness.

2. Objections are drawn from the justice of God: "Oh, God is just, and will not hold the "sinner guiltless: therefore, though I should "fly to the horns of the altar, there I fear ju- "stice would be avenged upon me." Answ. This is also an argument why you should receive Chriſt. God's juſtice indeed muſt be ſatisfied, and there is no way in the world, to give ſatisfaction to God, but by believing in Chriſt: for, God is in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelf: he hath endured the wrath of God, and ſo there is no way to anſwer juſtice, but by flying to that ſatisfaction he hath made; and if you do, juſtice will not demand a double ſatisfaction; one from thee, and another from thy Surety: no, he will deliver from going down to the pit, becauſe he hath found a ranſom. It is contrary to the nature of juſtice, to demand a double ſatisfaction, when the ſatisfaction given by Chriſt is infinite.

ceive

3. Objection is drawn from the ſinner's unworthineſs. "Oh! I am utterly unworthy, and have "nothing to move God to pity me; will he "accept of the like of me?" Anſw. What think ye is the ſtrength of that reaſoning? It comes juſt to this: I have no merit; therefore, God will have no mercy: there is no ſalvation for me by the law; therefore, there is no ſalvation for me by the goſpel. If you look at God with a legal eye, the leaſt ſin makes you uncapable of mercy: but if you look at him in Chriſt, or with an evangelical eye, the greateſt ſinner is capable of mercy: yea, the ſenſe of unworthineſs makes a man the more capable. It is an unworthy objection, and argues lamentable ignorance of the goſpel. Come to him as deſerving nothing but wrath, and flying to God's free grace, and Chriſt's full merit, and the covenant's rich promiſe. It is with faith, as it is with a bird caſt into the water, it cannot fly, the element is ſo groſs; it cannot clap its wings there: but caſt it into the air, then it will clap its wings and mount: ſo, faith is the wing of the ſoul; when it looks to the man's ſelf, and his own worthineſs, this is ſuch a groſs element faith cannot mount; but let it out to the air of God's free grace and promiſe in Chriſt, then it will act and fly: yea, grace cannot act but upon an unworthy object, and without any cauſe from the object. Juſtice hath an eye upon the diſpoſition of the perſon, in its rewards; but grace and mercy hath an eye upon itſelf. Thus, if a king execute a malefactor, this is an act of juſtice, and the cauſe of it is in the offender; but if a king pardon a malefactor, this is an act of grace, and the cauſe of it is in the king's breaſt, not in the worthineſs of the delinquent: ſo here, if you was worthy, you were not capable of this free gift. If ever there was a gift freely given, it is Chriſt: and will you reject him becauſe you are unworthy? Why, if you was worthy, it would not be a free gift. Nay, your refuſing of Chriſt, and ſtanding aback from him, for your unworthineſs, is great pride: you would have a bladder of your own, that you might ſwim to heaven, without being obliged to Chriſt. If you meet a poor beggar, and ſee nothing but miſery and poverty in his face, and draw your purſe and offer him a ſhilling; would it not be ſtrange to hear him ſay, No, I will not have it; I am not worthy; yonder is a gentleman in gay clothing, give it him, for he is worthy? Juſt as ridiculous is the caſe here, while you ſtand aback from Chriſt, becauſe of your unworthineſs. In a word, Chriſt is worthy enough of your taking. What if the greateſt prince in the world ſhould make ſuit to the pooreſt beggar, that hath neither beauty or dowry, though ſhe be unworthy to hear of the propoſal, yet the perſon is worthy who hath made it, and the acceptance of the motion is reaſonable: ſo it is here, if Chriſt, the Prince of life, and King of glory, be worth the receiving, then reject not his offer that he makes of himſelf: and indeed never will you be worthy till you receive him.

4. Objection is drawn from a doubt and ſuſpicion ariſing in the mind if Chriſt be willing: "Oh! I fear he is not willing to accept of me." Anſw. He declares, in his word, that he is not willing that any ſhould periſh; and he ſwears that he hath no delight in the death of ſinners. And, O ſinner! will you look up to God's face and ſay, though he hath both ſaid and ſworn to that purpoſe, yet he is not willing? His purpoſe of grace in ſaving ſome, doth not ſay that he is willing to deſtroy any; it only ſays, that, as he is not willing that any ſhould periſh, ſo, he is reſolved that all ſhall not get leave to deſtroy themſelves; as all would do, if he did not catch hold of ſome, and pluck them as brands out of the burning: and his doing ſo ſays, that none are deſtroyed by him, unleſs they deſtroy themſelves. None are willing to be ſaved by him, until his willingneſs prevents theirs. His not ſaving all, is no more an argument of his willingneſs that any ſhould periſh, than a king's not pardoning all rebels, is an argument of that prince's willingneſs, that any ſhould live in rebellion againſt him, and fall under his furious reſentment: and though it was poſſible for that earthly prince, to make them all willing ſubjects to him, yet it were not inconſiſtent with a merciful diſpoſition, for him to ſuffer ſome to take their will; that he may ſhew how obſtinate their nature is, and how equal and juſt he is in the adminiſtration of his government: for, acts of juſtice toward ſome is not inconſiſtent with a will to ſhow mercy upon all. Carnal reaſon and unbelief ſtill ſuſpects the willingneſs of Chriſt; eſpecially becauſe of a decree paſt in heaven, which the word mentions concerning the ſalvation of ſome, from which they know not but they may be excluded: but as this is a powerful temptation of Satan, leading men boldly and arrogantly, to meddle with the records of heaven, that are locked up from men and angels, till the decree break forth; ſo it is an evidence of our curſed enmity againſt God, that we will not believe his good-will in Chriſt, revealed in the goſpel toward ſinners, by ſo many commands and promiſes, calls and invitations. If you would notice inſtances of Chriſt's willingneſs; behold how he wept over Jeruſalem, ſelf-deſtroying Jeruſalem, rejecting his offer, Luke xix. 41, 42. And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, ſaying, If thou hadſt known, even thou, at leaſt in this thy day, the things which belong to thy peace, but now they are hid from thine eyes. What a moving ſight was this, to ſee the Son of God in a flood of tears for loſt ſinners! Had he been enquired at, as he did Mary, in another caſe, Bleſſed Lord, what ſeekeſt thou? why weepeſt thou? His anſwer readily would have been, "I ſeek not myſelf; I weep not for my-"ſelf; for, I ſhall be glorious in the eyes of the Lord, "though ſinners be not gathered; but I weep to ſee "ſinners ſo mad, as to reject their Saviour and "ſalvation, rather than part with their luſts "that have damnation attending them; I weep "to ſee them content, rather to caſt themſelves "headlong into the devil's arms, than throw "them-

" themſelves into my arms of mercy, or receive " and embrace me." Oh! how did Chriſt's heart melt with pity for you, and will not your hearts melt with deſire toward him! ſurely, all the rivers of tears, that flowed from his eyes; and the rivers of blood, that flowed from his pierced head, and feet, and hands, and ſide, will be ſtanding monuments of his good-will to ſave ſinners. How would you have him to diſcover his willingneſs? Why, man, woman; he juſt turns a humble ſupplicant to you; and, as it were, upon his bare knees beſeeches you to be reconciled to him; 2 Cor. v. 20. We are ambaſſadors for Chriſt, as though God did beſeech you by us; we pray you in Chriſt's ſtead, be ye reconciled to God. O ſtupendous and amazing condeſcenſion! Behold divine mercy ſtooping down to a ſinner, in the humbleſt poſture, importuning him to receive a Saviour, and to receive a free remiſſion through him! Surely the humble intreaties of the great God ſhould both convince us of his willingneſs to receive us, and ſhame us out of our unwillingneſs to receive Chriſt, and ſalvation through him.

5. Objection is drawn from a doubt or ſuſpicion of our being prepared for receiving of Chriſt. " Oh! ſays the ſinner, that is any way " ſenſible, I am not humbled enough; Chriſt " comes to bind up the broken-hearted; but my " heart is not broken: to give the oil of joy for " mourning; but I have not a mourning or melt- " ing ſpirit: therefore I may not believe, or " receive Chriſt." Anſw. You will never reckon yourſelf humbled enough, if you would have humiliation proportioned to your ſin, which is an infinite evil. Legal humiliation, though never ſo deep, though your heart ſhould be broken in as many pieces, as the glaſs doth ſhudder againſt the wall; and though you were roaring day and night, under the diſquiet of a guilty conſcience, and fearful apprehenſions of God's wrath; yet all this will not ſay, that you are now fit for Chriſt: theſe humiliations may be merely judicial, and puniſhments of ſin, as were thoſe of Cain and Judas: therefore, you cannot judge yourſelf by your legal humiliation, but only by the iſſue and event of them. Think not, then, to bring humiliation in your hand as a price; this but will more unfit you: the beſt humiliation is, to ſee your want of humiliation; the beſt preparation, to ſee your want of preparation, and your want of all good things about you: and to receive Chriſt is the only way to true goſpel-humiliation. The law is like a thunder-clap, that terrifies; but the goſpel is like a warm ſun that diſſolves the ice. Nothing melts the ſoul more than Chriſt apprehended by faith; They ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they ſhall mourn, Zech. xii. 10. Faith ſees the greateſt love, the ſweeteſt kindneſs; and this melts the heart. No doubt, the prodigal was more melted and broken, by his father's embracing of him ſo kindly, than by all his former miſeries. What! art thou embracing me, a ſtubborn child, and unworthy ſpendthrift! So Chriſt comes in the goſpel, ſaying, Come thou, poor ſinner, that haſt done evil as thou couldeſt, though thou haſt wronged me, and my Spirit, and my Father, and thyſelf, come and I will get you a pardon for all that; fear not, I will be thine to ſave thee; my blood thine, to waſh thee; my righteouſneſs thine, to juſtify thee; my Spirit thine, to ſanctify thee. O this melts the heart! What! is this for me, guilty me, rebellious me! Yea, it is for thee graciouſly and freely! O! how doth the ſoul now diſſolve into tears!

6. Objection is drawn from fear that the day of grace is gone. " Alas! I have refuſed many " calls, invitations, and offers, in ſo much that " Chriſt will not regard me! I have often ſlight- " ed the goſpel-offer, trampled on this precious " blood; and with what confidence can I now " claim it?" Anſw. It is to be hoped, that while you have this call, yet to receive Chriſt, that now is the accepted time, now is the day of ſalvation; if your former refuſals of Chriſt have not yet been malicious and deceitful, but rather timerarious and inadvertant, which, though a grievous ſin, yet not unpardonable: and now, ſince Chriſt doth not yet exclude you from the goſpel-offer, why will you exclude yourſelf? The more you have refuſed his offer formerly, the more you have need of a pardon. You ſhould go to God, as David, ſaying, Pardon mine iniquity, for it is great. This would indeed be a ſtrange argument with man, Pardon my crime, for it is great; but it is a ſtrong argument with God: Lord, it is great, and ſo I have more need of a pardon; it is great, and ſo thou wilt have great honour in pardoning: even as a phyſician hath in curing a deſperate diſeaſe. The ſinning againſt Chriſt's blood, or ſlighting it, is indeed a hainous ſin; but the more hainous it is, the more need you have to haſten to this blood, as the only fountain that can waſh away the guilt of trampling upon it. Nay, though you had ſhed this blood, as the Jews did, yet you are welcome to come to it for mercy: ſee the commiſſion that Chriſt gives to his apoſtles, Luke xxiv. 46, 47. Preach repentance and remiſſion, in his name, to all nations, and begin at Jeruſalem. O! why at Jeruſalem, where he was mocked, pierced, crucified? Nay, begin there; for they have moſt need of my blood to waſh them. If any thing could alienate Chriſt's heart from ſinners, ſurely the conſideration of their crucifying of him, and uſing him ſo deceitfully, might have done it; yea, ſays he, go make offer of my blood and mercy to theſe my murderers; and accordingly it was done by Peter, Acts ii. and many of them got this blood applied to them. Again,

7. Objection is drawn from the long continuance in ſin. " I am an old ſinner; my ſins are " of very long continuance; I have remained " long in the grave of ſin: and I am juſt an old " rotten ſinner." Anſw. I fear there are ſome old ſinners here very near to hell and damnation; the devil hath got the flower of their age, and he is like to get the brawn. Oh! if goſpel-grace would draw you, I would let down the cord of love, by telling you, that, though your ſins be old, yet they are not ſo old as Chriſt's mercies, which are everlaſting mercies. It is not the firſt old diſtemper that Chriſt hath cured; he raiſed Lazarus with a word, though he had been four days in the grave: he ſtopt a bloody iſſue, with the hem of his garment, that had run twelve years: he looſed a poor woman, whom Satan had bound eighteen years: he cured an impotent man that had an infirmity thirty eight-years: and, can he not eaſily cure all your old ſoul diſtempers? He received thoſe that came at the eleventh hour: he received ſome that came at the laſt hour; particularly the thief on the croſs, whom the devil devil thought he was ſure of, having drawn him the length of the mouth of hell, juſt ready to caſt him in; yet, even then, upon his looking to Chriſt, did the arms of mercy take hold of him. This is encouragement to you to look to him.

8. Objection is drawn from a doubt or jealouſy about our right to receive Chriſt. "Oh! "ſays one, though Chriſt can ſave me, yet I "have no right to receive him: though his "blood is ſufficient to waſh me, yet I have no "right to it." Anſw. You have a full right and warrant, from the very call of the goſpel, to fly to it: ſee what Chriſt enjoins miniſters to do, Mark xvi. 15. Go into all the world, and preach the goſpel to every creature: Make offer of me and my blood to all, without diſtinction; whatever be their age, ſex, or circumſtances; man, woman, and child. Let no children hearing me think, they are too young to be included in this call to come to Chriſt: nay, the goſpel is preached to you as well as to old folk: you may die in your youth; and if you die without Chriſt, you will periſh as well as old Chriſtleſs perſons. Preach the goſpel to every creature; even to the worſt of ſinners: EVERY creature, be they never ſo wicked; even though they have ſinned themſelves into the likeneſs of beaſts or devils; yet, if they be creatures, offer my blood, my mercy, my merit, my righteouſneſs to them: invite and preſs them to come to me and receive me; and, him that cometh, I will in no wiſe caſt out. O ſinner, let the goſpel-offer be accepted; and you ſhall find, whatever you have been, that there is mercy enough in God's bowels to pity you; merit enough in Chriſt's blood to pardon you; and power enough in his interceſſion to procure and apply it to you. Look to him for a ſhare of this grace offered to you; and receive not the grace of God in vain.

9. Objection is drawn from the power of ſin. "Alas! I find ſin to be ſtrong in me; how "ſhould I believe or receive Chriſt? none have "ſuch an abominable heart; ſurely the Lord "will loath me." Anſw. That as a ſenſe of the power of ſin, is better than to be ſenſeleſs and ſtupid under it; ſo, conſider the nature of unbelief more than the ſtrength of ſin; for, it is an evil heart of unbelief, that gives ſtrength to ſin. There are two things you muſt be obliged to Chriſt for: his merit, to get the guilt of ſin pardoned; and his Spirit, to get the power of ſin ſubdued. There is no healing, but under the wings of Chriſt; and therefore you muſt go to him for it. What think you of faith, man? Is it an enemy to holineſs? No, by no means; it is the only way to it. And do you find ſin oppoſing you? Why then, know, that a time of contrariety, is a time for faith to work. When a man ſees death, then it is time for faith to believe life; when he ſees the grave, it is time for faith to believe the reſurrection; when he ſees guilt, it is time for faith to believe pardoning mercy; and when he ſees ſin, it is time for faith to receive a Saviour: when he ſees ſtrong corruption, then it is time for faith to lay hold on Chriſt's ſtrength, and caſt yourſelf upon his faithful promiſe, for healing and pardoning of it. You may try other ways, but they will not do; you may waſh in other waters, but they will not cleanſe you; you may perplex your own thoughts, with a thouſand ſhifts beſide this, but they will not avail you: in Chriſt, and the promiſes of the covenant, are the cures of your ſinful nature; and faith doth apply the healing medicine. But now, to name no more,

10. Objection is drawn from the weakneſs of the creature, and of means. "Why, ſay you, I "have no ſtrength to believe; no ſtrength to "pray; no heart to duty: or, if I eſſay it at "any time, I have no ſucceſs in it, no benefit "by it." Here are two ſcruples, and I ſhall divide them.

Well then, the firſt part of the objection is: "Oh! I have no ſtrength to believe, no power "to receive Chriſt; yea, no heart to pray for "faith." Anſw. It is fit you know your own utter impotency to believe; they who think they can believe well enough of themſelves, they miſtake the faith of God's operation for fancy, and ſtrong imagination of their own brain. But, whereas you ſay you have no ſtrength; ſee that the diſeaſe lies not rather in this, that you have no will: if you were made willing, you undoubtedly would find yourſelves made able in due time: therefore, cry for one pull more of omnipotent grace, to make you willing in the day of his power. And whereas you ſay you cannot cry, you have no heart to pray: it is perhaps your mercy, to be kept empty handed, that you may not make a Chriſt of your duty, or a Saviour of your frame; for perhaps you would reſt there. However, know, that unbelief is the great cauſe of indiſpoſition for duty; for it fills the man with hard thoughts of God: "Oh! ſays unbelief, God is ſo holy he will "never regard you; God is ſo juſt he will ne-"ver endure you." Unbelief makes God all full of frowns and anger; and ſo the man's ſpirit ſinks within him: but faith would bring up the ſoul; Pſal. xxvii. 13. I had fainted, unleſs I had believed to ſee the goodneſs of the Lord in the land of the living. Faith ſhews God to be on a throne of grace; and this raiſes the heart: and faith ſets the ſoul upon prevailing motives in prayer; ſuch as, the name of God, the blood of Chriſt, the promiſe of the covenant, the interceſſion of Chriſt, the faithfulneſs of God. In the mean time, think not either to believe or pray aright, without oppoſition from Satan, an evil heart of unbelief, the prevalency of ſin, and an enſnaring world. You muſt wreſtle, through grace, all the way to glory: The kingdom of heaven ſuffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. Be ſtrong in the grace that is in Chriſt Jeſus. Preſs toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Chriſt Jeſus.

The ſecond part of the objection is, "That, "though you eſſay, you find no ſucceſs in "duty, no benefit by it; I am ſtill where I was." Anſw. True ſeeking comes always to ſomething: it is pride and impatience that ſays, It is vain to ſerve the Lord: See Mal. iii. 14, 18. and Iſa. lx. 22, 23, 24. God is faithful who hath promiſed. It is true, many aſk and receive not, becauſe they aſk amiſs, and do not aſk in faith, nothing wavering. How ſhould we ſpeed, or what ſucceſs can we expect, if we tell the true God to his face, that he is a liar and diſſembler; that he will not make good a word that he ſays? Therefore, ſeek the removal of this unbelief.

Beſides, remember that there is a twofold anſwer that God makes; real and ſenſible. A king may ſign a pardon and yet the criminal not know it, for a time: an anſwer may be given ſometimes when we know not of it. e. g. You ſeek, perhaps, a heart to pray, and a heart to hate sin: well, upon this, perhaps, you find your heart harder, to your feeling, than it was; and your corruption bursting forth upon you; which makes you ly groveling, with the most fervent importunity, at heaven's gate, and begets the most extreme loathing of your depraved nature: why, here you get the very thing you was seeking, yet you are not sensible that these things are answers; because the answer comes in a way, contrary to your expectation: for the heart may have such thirstings after grace, such an abomination of sin, that these present answers from heaven may seem to be nothing; there is something more the man would have: present grants are not a satisfying of his desire. Yet something is got by every faithful seeking: the man gets either more addition to some grace, or more aversion to some sin; or more grace to seek, or more strength to wait. But though you get not so much as you desire, surely you get more than you deserve; though not so much as to satisfy, yet as much as to help for the present. But suppose you be not answered at all, it is your sin to murmur, and your duty to wait: and remember, that God never gives his people so large an alms here, but that they need to become beggars the next hour, at the throne of grace again: and know, that God loves to be urged, but he does not love to be hastened. If God doth promise, it is your duty to believe: if he delays, it is your duty to wait; for, he waits that he may be gracious; and, blessed are all they that wait for him. In a word, the Lord may keep his door bolted, that you may be provoked to knock the harder. The woman of Canaan took up the design of Christ's refusing to answer her; therefore she turns the more importunate; and so gets all her will. Therefore, whatever discouragement you meet with, resolve never to quit the throne of grace, but always to lay yourselves in Christ's way, and never to go to another for help; yea, that you will die waiting on him. Remember the psalmist's experience, Psal. xl. 1. I waited patiently on the Lord, and at length he inclined his ear, and heard my cry. You may meet with discouragement and temptation, and be put to very hard thoughts; but you must be resolute in looking to Christ for help; reasoning with yourselves like the four lepers at the siege of Samaria, 2 Kings vii. 4. If I live at a distance from Christ I will infallibly perish, there is no hope for me: if Christ pity me not, when I am waiting on him, I but perish: but yet there is hope, he will have pity at length; therefore, if I perish, I will perish at Christ's feet; still looking up to him, where never one yet perished; and I hope he will not let me be the first.

to

Thus I have essayed to answer some objections: but after all there may be thousands of objections that remain; and it is the Lord only that can effectually and powerfully answer them, or any of those already mentioned. But whatever be your objections, against receiving Christ, pray to Christ himself to answer them: he is content that you receive him for this end, to answer all your objections, as well as to pardon all your sins, and subdue all your corruptions.

Notwithstanding of all that hath been said, perhaps some are ready to think, my objection hath not been mentioned; my case hath not been touched; for, it is a singular case: I am no more moved with all that hath been said, than a stone in the wall. Well, it might give some ground for faith, if you consider that Christ can, out of these stones, raise up children to Abraham; and that he hath promised to take away the heart of stone. O Sirs, will ye put him to his word? Nay, say you, my heart is raging in enmity against him, like a devil. Well, say not, for all that, there is no hope; for, Christ can cast out devils; and it is his work and business to put evil spirits out, and to put his own Spirit within you: only give him employment; for that is one of the ways of receiving him, even to employ him to receive you, and to destroy the works of the devil within you. If Christ get no employment here, among all this company, wo is us, that you should all give such a vile slight to a precious Christ, as that you prefer your base lusts to him, and will not so much as desire him, to put the sacrificing knife to the throat of your lusts; and though he stand knocking at your door, yet you will not so much as desire him to come in; nor invite him to shut up the door. If any body knock at your door, you will readily desire them to open, and come forward: and shall not glorious Christ get so much reception as that from you? O invite him, at least, to put in his hand by the hole of the door, and then your bowels will move for him, Song v. 4.——May the Lord persuade you to receive Christ, and answer all your objections against him!

Secondly, We now proceed to the second branch of the exhortation which was to BELIEVERS, who have received Christ, that they walk in him. Grace is not an idle habit, but an operative principle: religion doth not make men loiterers, but labourers. After a man hath believed in Christ, and received him, he is not then to ly down upon a bed of slothfulness, as if he had no more ado: nay, he hath much work, relative to God's glory, and his own good, to be employed about: he hath many duties to be performed; many evils to be reformed; many ordinances to be improved; many heart-plagues to be healed; many temptations to be resisted; many enemies to be vanquished; many graces to be exercised; many corruptions to be mortified: much employment to give to Christ all his days: therefore, As he hath received Christ Jesus the Lord, so he is to walk in him. It is a walking, and a walking in Christ, that he is called unto. I have already, in the doctrinal part, handled this branch of the text, at some length, and spoken of the duty of walking; the qualification of it, as it is a walking in Christ; and also the rule of this walk, or the proportion it should bear to our reception of Christ, by considering the AS and the SO in the text: AS ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, SO walk ye in him. And therefore, all that now remains is, (by way of exhortation and direction) to press, excite, and direct unto this walk. And in order to the more distinct pursuing of this exhortation, I would, 1. Offer some considerations, for clearing our thoughts and conceptions, concerning this walk. 2. Some qualifications, or properties of this walk, and of the way wherein we are to walk. 3. Some motives and persuasives that believers have to walk in Christ. 4. Some directions in order to our walking in Christ. If in prosecuting any of these particulars, any head shall occur, that may coincide with what was said on the doctrinal part; yet the different enlargement will, I hope, make the whole tend to be of new usefulness.

1*ſt*, I am to offer ſome conſiderations, for clearing our thoughts and uptakings, concerning this walk; and for paving the way to what may afterward be offered upon this exhortation. And the

1. Conſideration I offer is, that this Chriſtian walk is not to be expected in any, that are not Chriſtians indeed: yea, it is impoſſible for a man to have a truly Chriſtian walk, if he be not truly a Chriſtian. What it is to be a Chriſtian? Why, it is for Chriſt to be in a man by his Spirit, and the man to be in Chriſt by faith.—It is for Chriſt to be in a man by his Spirit: and indeed Chriſt muſt be in us by his Spirit, as a Spirit of regeneration, before we can poſſibly come to him by faith: and as regeneration is primarily ſuppoſed to this walk, none can walk in Chriſt if Chriſt be not in them, and if they be ſtill in a ſtate of nature and unregeneracy: the regenerating Spirit is the ſpring of this walk. Men in their natural ſtate, are dead, and cannot walk. I have read of one that attempted, by art, to make a ſtatue to walk and ſpeak; but after all, when he found his art fail him, and the thing impracticable, he was obliged to cry out, Aliquod deeſt intus; "There "is ſomething wanting within." Why, there wanted a ſoul, a living principle within. So it is here; men in nature are but like dead ſtatues, they want ſomething within to make them walk in Chriſt. It is true, as watches may go right for an hour or two, but will not hold on, if the ſpring be amiſs: ſo, natural men may take a pace or two, in the ways of God, but they cannot walk unleſs the ſpring be right, the heart be renewed, and the Spirit of Chriſt be put within them.—Again, to be a Chriſtian, it is for a man to be in Chriſt by faith: there is no walking in him, till there be a receiving of him, and cloſing with him: if a man be not in Chriſt, he cannot walk in Chriſt. Without faith there is not ſo much as a good thought, or conſideration about a Chriſtian walk: Now, ſerious conſideration is requiſite thereunto; I thought on my ways, and turned my feet to thy teſtimonies. Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God: but to walk in Chriſt is a walk that pleaſeth God; and therefore without faith it is impoſſible to walk in Chriſt. Faith takes in the ſtrength of God to enable us thus to walk: and without this ſtrength we cannot walk; for, The way of man is not in himſelf: it is not in man that walketh to order his ſteps. Therefore, without faith, drawing ſtrength from him, we cannot walk in him: Why? becauſe we cannot walk with God, without God; nor walk in Chriſt, without Chriſt. In a word, it comes all to this: A Chriſtian walk cannot be without a Chriſtian ſtate. O then, ſeek to be Chriſtians indeed: i. e. To have Chriſt in you by his Spirit, and you in Chriſt by faith: and not only to be in him by faith in the habit; but to abide in him by faith in the lively exerciſe thereof; for, without this, you cannot bring forth fruit in him, John xv. 5.

2. Conſideration I offer is, that there are not a few profeſſors, whoſe walk doth give their profeſſion the lie: as thoſe ſpoken of, Pſal. lxxviii. 34,—37. They returned, and enquired early after God: and they remembred that God was their rock, and the high God their Redeemer: nevertheleſs they did flatter him with their mouth, and lied to him with their tongues; for their heart was not right with God, neither were they ſtedfaſt in his covenant. Many profeſs to know God, but in works they do deny him. Many profeſs the name of Chriſt, who never ſet upon the buſineſs of renovation, to be renewed in the Spirit of their mind; and ſo they are in the caſe of thoſe, Pſal. l. 16,—22. to whom God ſaith: What haſt thou to do to declare my ſtatutes, and take my covenant in thy mouth; ſeeing thou hateſt inſtruction, and caſteſt my words behind thee? etc. Yea, many walk, of whom the apoſtle tells us weeping, that they are enemies to the croſs of Chriſt: whoſe end is deſtruction, whoſe God is their belly; and whoſe glory is in their ſhame, and who mind earthly things, Phil. iii. 18, 19.

3. Conſideration is, that they who profeſs to be Chriſtians, and yet have no Chriſtian walk, or know nothing of walking in Chriſt, they deceive themſelves with their profeſſion; they get no good of it, and God gets no glory by it.——They deceive themſelves. Profeſſors, who are not practical, they are but ſoul-cheaters, ſelf-cheaters: they are the worſt of all cheats that cheat themſelves; If any man among you ſeem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, that man's religion is vain, James i. 26. And ſo, if any man among you ſeem to be religious, and bridleth not his HEART, but giveth way to all carnal thoughts, worldly thoughts, while God is not in all his thoughts; that man's religion is vain.—If any man among you ſeem to be religious, and bridleth not his APPETITE, but giveth way to gluttony and drunkenneſs, that man's religion is vain.—If any man ſeem to be religious, and bridleth not his PASSIONS, but giveth way to anger, and wrath, and malice, and revenge, for every injury, that man's religion is vain.—If any man ſeem to be religious, and bridleth not his LIPS, but giveth way to lying, and ſwearing, and curſing, and obſcene filthy talking, that man's religion is vain.—If any man ſeem to be religious, and bridleth not the FACULTIES of his ſoul, and members of his body, his hands and his feet from working miſchief, and walking in the broad ways of whoredom, and Sabbath-breaking, and neglect of God's worſhip, in ſecret, private, and public, that man's religion is vain; he deceiveth his own heart.—— It is true, the godly have ſometimes caſt off the bridle, or kept very ſlack reins, and ſo ſtumbled greatly, and fallen foully: but this is not the tenor of their walk, nor the way that, as Chriſtians, they can take pleaſure in. And, therefore, the propoſition remains thus ever firm: they that profeſs to be Chriſtians, without having a Chriſtian walk, they deceive themſelves.——Yea, they get no good of their profeſſion, and are in the caſe of thoſe, Ezek. xxxiii. 31. They come and appear before God as his people; they ſit before him, and hear his words, but they will not do them: for, with their mouth they ſhew much love, but their heart goeth after their covetouſneſs, They get no good of their profeſſion, who know nothing of the life and power of godlineſs: their religion is vain: they pleaſe themſelves with the empty ſhell, but never eat the kernel.——And as they get no good by it, ſo God gets no glory by it, nor the goſpel any credit. A profeſſion, without a Chriſtian walk, is no ornament to religion: we ought to adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour, in all things. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that others, ſeeing your good works, may glorify your Father which is in heaven. The man that hath nothing of this, deſerveth not the name of a profeſſor. Oh! how many plagues are in our boſom, that make, inſtead of an ornament to religion, a ſtain to the Chriſtian

Chriſtian name! like thoſe, 1 Tim. v. 24. Some men's ſins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and ſome follow after. Which words ſeem to be ſpoken concerning church cenſures: ſome men's ſins are open, and obvious, and evident, before ever they be brought under any cenſure: others they follow after; they are not reformed by any cenſure.

4. Conſideration is, that thoſe who, through grace, have a Chriſtian walk, they have the happieſt life of it, as well as the holieſt: hence ſays Chriſt to his diſciples, John xiii. 17. If you know theſe things, happy are ye if ye do them. And Pſal. cxix. 1. Bleſſed are the undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the Lord. A Chriſtian walk, indeed, is not the meritorious or procuring cauſe of this happineſs; but it is the character, property, and quality of happy men: bleſſings, both ſpiritual and temporal, are entailed upon ſuch; yea, it is only ſuch who have a well-grounded, well-ſettled hope of heaven: and hence this walk, and this hope, are joined together, Tit. ii. 11, 12. The grace of God that bringeth ſalvation, hath appeared to all men, teaching us, that, denying ungodlineſs and worldly luſts, we ſhould live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly, in this preſent world: looking for that bleſſed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. Here they are knit and buckled together; and if this buckle be looſed, the man will have little hope: hence if a profeſſor drink drunk, and ſwear, and lie, and whore, and cheat, he cannot have the hope of heaven in ſuch a courſe; for, ſuch folk do not anſwer Chriſt's deſign in the goſpel; to be a peculiar people, zealous of good works. For, though good works, and a Chriſtian walk, be not the ground of the man's hope, (for that alone is Chriſt and his righteouſneſs,) yet it is the garment wherewith true hope is adorned, and by which it is known; and therefore, he that hath this hope, purifieth himſelf, even as he is pure, 1 John iii. 3.

5. Conſideration I offer is, that this Chriſtian walk is many ways preſſed and urged in ſcripture: it is both commanded and commended; and there are both threatenings and promiſes relating to it.—The Lord doth command it, ſaying, Walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, Eph. iv. 1. Believers in Chriſt are expreſly commanded in this, as they have received Chriſt, ſo to walk in him. And we may ſee the Lord commanding this very walk in his own name and authority, Jer. vi. 16. Thus ſaith the Lord, Stand ye in the ways, and ſee, and aſk for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye ſhall find reſt for your ſouls.—The Lord not only commands it, but commends it. Thus was Noah commended, Gen. vii. 1. Come thou, and thy houſe into the ark, for thee have I found righteous before me in this generation. Thus was Enoch commended; for, by faith he walked with God, and was not, for God took him: and before his tranſlation he had this teſtimony, that he pleaſed God. And indeed all that thus walk, ſhall be thus tranſlated; though not corporally at the firſt, as he was. The body, like Elijah's mantle, ſtays a little while behind, to be locked up in a cabinet of duſt, while the ſoul is tranſlated at death, to be with God: What is that? never to ſin more; never to ſorrow more; always praiſing God; always rejoicing in him; and preſſed down with nothing but a weight of glory. Thus it ſhall be with all that walk in Chriſt: for they are made meet for this inheritance of the ſaints in light. Others are not fit for heaven, and ſo could not dwell in it. But I was ſaying that God commends this walk; and to give all the inſtances of commendation that he gives this way, would lead me to enlarge too far.—There are threatenings relating to this walk. God threatens to bring ſad ſtroaks upon ſuch as are ſtrangers to this Chriſtian walk; Lev. xxvi. 27. If ye will not for all this hearken unto me, but walk contrary unto me: then I will walk contrary to you alſo in fury: and puniſh you ſeven times more for your ſins. Yea, if God's own children ſtep aſide, and take not heed to their walk, they ſhall ſmart for it: though he take not his loving-kindneſs from them, yet, if they break his laws, and walk not in his commandments, he will viſit their tranſgreſſions with the rod, and their iniquities with ſtripes, Pſal. lxxxix. 30,—33.—Again, there are promiſes relating to this walk. There are promiſes of it, and to it. Promiſes of it, like that, Ezek. xxxvi. 27. I will put my Spirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my ſtatutes: And indeed none would walk ſo much as a right ſtep, without the Spirit to guide them. Then there are promiſes to it; hence godlineſs is ſaid to be great gain, having the promiſes of this life, and that which is to come. This Chriſtian walk hath promiſes, not in the way of the firſt covenant, when the promiſe was made to works itſelf; but here it is made to the worker, or walker in Chriſt; or to the walk, as it is an evidence of union to him, in whom all the promiſes are Yea and Amen.

6. Conſideration I offer is, that this Chriſtian walk hath a reference to all the duties of religion, to all the graces of the Spirit, and to all the directions of the word, which is the rule of this walk.—It hath a reference, I ſay, to all the duties of religion; and ſo they cannot walk in Chriſt, who neglect the duty of prayer, the duty of watchfulneſs, the duty of vowing, and paying our vows to the Lord, as David, Pſal. cxvi. 9, 14. compared.—It hath a reference to all the graces of the Spirit. Chriſt is the way that the believer, walks in: but, as in a high way, there are ſeveral foot roads, ſome on this ſide, and ſome on that ſide of the way, which a perſon may conveniently walk in, and yet never go off from the high way: ſo here, the ſeveral graces of the Spirit are like ſo many branches of the way and road, for believers to walk in, ſo many little walks by the way-ſide.—There is the walk of faith, which we are daily to ſtep into, acting faith on Chriſt's righteouſneſs, for acceptance; acting upon his ſtrength, for aſſiſtance; acting upon his fulneſs, for ſupply; acting upon him for grace, to kill ſin and to quicken the ſoul; and acting upon him for glory, and for another life to come.—There is the walk of repentance: while the ſoul looks to him whom it pierced, and mourns. O Sirs, when the ſoul looks to Chriſt crucified, it ſees more of the curſed nature of ſin, and more of the curſed deſert of ſin, than it is capable to expreſs. He that was infinitely pleaſed with his Son, could not but be infinitely diſpleaſed with ſin, that made him to bruiſe him, till he melted under the burden of theſe fiery mountains of wrath, that were heaped upon him: It pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him.—There is the walk of love, Eph. v. 2. Walk in love, as Chriſt alſo loved us, and hath given himſelf for us; an offering, and a ſacrifice of a ſweet-ſmelling ſavour. O! here is a pleaſant walk: God is love, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him, 1 John iv. 16. Many walk in doubts and fears; but if we were more in the ſweet element of love, we would doubt leſs; for, ver. 18. There is no fear in love; but perfect love caſteth out fear: becauſe fear hath torment: he that feareth is not made perfect in love. And if we were more in this happy region, of love to God, we would be more in love to one another.—There is the walk of joy, that the believer ſhould be ſtepping into; Rejoicing in Chriſt Jeſus; Rejoicing evermore. This joy is not only a privilege but a duty: not only a part of our happineſs, but a part of our holineſs; a part of this walk; a commanded duty. This joy of the Lord is the ſtrength of the ſoul: and this walk, in holy joy, is not inconſiſtent, with a walking in holy fear; they are both put together, Acts ix. 31. Walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghoſt, they were multiplied. Is the believer married to Chriſt, and ſhould he not delight in his Huſband? He delights in them, and ſhould they not delight in him? Believers ſhould mourn all their lives for ſin, and yet rejoice all their life in Chriſt: Theſe things have I ſpoken to you, that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full, John xv. 11. It is Chriſt's joy to ſee his people rejoicing in him; in his love, in his death, in his reſurrection and interceſſion, in his fulneſs and righteouſneſs, in his merit and Spirit: for this holy and ſpiritual walk is from the Spirit, as the principle; in the Spirit, as the mover; and after the Spirit, as the guide.——But again, this walk, it hath a reference to all the directions of the word, as the rule of it. The man that walks in Chriſt, hath a reſpect to all God's commandments; and a reſpect to the whole word, as the rule: for, Whoever walketh according to this rule, peace be on him, ſaith the apoſtle, and on all the Iſrael of God. Oh! how few diſcover a Chriſtian walk, from this very particular, that they are ſo unacquaint with the rule of the Chriſtian walk; ſuch ſtrangers to the Bible! Many caſt the rule of the Bible behind their back. Would ſhe not be counted a whoriſh woman, who had received a letter from her long abſent huſband; and when ſhe had read it, ſhe rent it in pieces, and tread it under her foot? And, indeed, all of you are doing this, while you are ſlighters of the Bible, from Sabbath to Sabbath; and make no conſcience of walking by the rule of the word.

7. Conſideration I offer is, that this walk hath a preference, beyond all other walks; even the beſt walk of any in the world, that are but pretenders to religion and Chriſtianity. As the worſhippers of the beaſt have the mark of the beaſt: God's children have God's ſeal; 2 Tim. ii. 19. The foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this ſeal, the Lord knoweth them that are his. Let every one, that nameth the name of Chriſt, depart from iniquity. God's ſeal hath a double motto: the one denotes their ſecurity; The Lord knoweth them that are his: the other denotes their ſanctity; they depart from iniquity. There are many wild flowers in the field, that bear a reſemblance unto, and look like the flowers in the garden; but are really not the ſame: ſo, many things, at a diſtance, look like ſanctification, and a Chriſtian walk; but at a nearer view are quite different from it.

There is a threefold walk, that looks like a Chriſtian walk, but yet it is not only different from it, but oppoſite to it: and this Chriſtian walk is ſo far beyond it, as heaven is above earth.

(1.) The walk of civility, which is nothing elſe but a fair ſhew in the fleſh; rather a heatheniſh ſtrictneſs, than a Chriſtian holineſs. For, mere civility is uſually accompanied with ignorance of God, and the myſteries of his kingdom. Men may be no drunkards, no ſwearers, no adulterers, no rude debauched perſons; and yet groſly ignorant of ſpiritual matters: ſo Nicodemus, a ruler in Iſrael, a ſtrict Phariſee, a civil man; and yet a mere ignoramus in the new birth, John iii. 10. Whereas a Chriſtian walk begins with knowledge, and with the Spirit of wiſdom and revelation in the knowledge of Chriſt.—Jeſus Chriſt is uſually little prized by civil men: they are ſatisfyed with their own righteouſneſs; they do not hunger and thirſt after Chriſt's righteouſneſs. The law is more natural to men than the goſpel; yea, the goſpel is not at all what nature can duly imagine about: therefore, legal ſtrains, and moral maxims, ſuit more with them, than goſpel-doctrine: but, to the Chriſtian, Chriſt is all in all.—Some reigning luſt uſually keeps company with civility; ſuch as covetouſneſs, for ordinary. The young man in the goſpel, that was a civil honeſt man, a fair dealer in the world; and could ſay, I have kept all theſe things, from my youth; ſo he might, as to the letter of them: yet, behold, his poſſeſſions were a ſnare to him: at the narrow bridge of ſelf-denial, Chriſt and his ſoul parted.—In a word, the civilian uſually takes more care about his actions, than about his luſts: he can digeſt all the luſts of wrath, malice, pride, worldly thoughts, and unclean affections; becauſe the converſation ſeems to be ſmooth and fair, theſe crawling vermin ſwarm in the heart without controul: why, civility is all for outward carriage; it minds not the heart. But the Chriſtian walker complains, even of the law in his members, the ſinful workings of the heart: his eyes, like the windows of the temple, are broad inward; he looks much within, and mourns over the ſins of the heart, as well as thoſe of the life. But there is,

(2.) The walk of the Formaliſt, that hath but a dead form: this Chriſtian walk is vaſtly beyond that. Why? the formaliſt acts from foreign conſiderations, motives from without; ſuch as popular applauſe, carnal reſpect, worldly honours, preferments, and the like. Juſt like puppits, that want the natural motion of life within, and are artificially moved by an outward force. The Spirit of God may aſſiſt the hypocrite in ſome duties; but he is not in him as an informing, quickening, renewing principle: but the Spirit is in the believer, like a living fountain, natively bullering up: Out of his belly floweth rivers of living water, John vii. 37.—Formaliſts are careleſs of God's ſight and preſence; they can neither appeal to God for their ſincerity; nor live in his preſence, as in the eye of his omniſcience: but their great care is, to blind the world. The Chriſtian can appeal to God, with Peter; Thou that knoweſt all things, knoweſt that I love thee. At other times he loaths himſelf, at the ſight of God's glorious majeſty and purity, in the ſenſe of his defects; Now mine eyes ſeeth thee; therefore, I abhor myſelf, and repent in duſt and in aſhes.—The formaliſt is proud of his falſe grace; but the Chriſtian walk is always attended with ſpiritual poverty. The more knowledge the ſaint hath, the more he is ſenſible of his ignorance: the more faith, the more he bewails his unbelief: the more love, the more more he blames his heart for want of love. It is a good ſign, when the ſoul is kept hungry and humble, in the ſenſe of its wants, amidſt the height of its enjoyments.

(3.) The walk of the temporary Chriſtian ſeemeth excellent; but this true Chriſtian walk hath the preference.—Some hypocrites are under the influence of reſtraining grace, chained up by their own fears; but not moved by goſpel-grace, nor conſtrained by love and mercy: this reſtraining grace, where there is no more, never deſtroys ſin; but only diſcharges the acts of it: but true grace ſweetly inclines the heart, to hate every falſe way, and to run the way of God's commandments.—Other hypocrites are under the influence of common temporary grace: this hath a degree of excellency beyond all the former, and yet comes to nothing. It differs from civility, becauſe it is more Chriſtian and evangelical. It differs from formality, becauſe that is only a ſhew, and this is a real work on the ſoul. It differs from reſtraining grace, for that avoids ſin, and performs duty from ſlaviſh fear; but this ſeems to have ſome affection for Chriſt and his word: this a man may have, and yet fall away, like the ſtony-ground hearers. This is the neareſt to true grace, and it is called, Heb. vi. 5, an enlightening; a taſte of the heavenly gift, a partaking of the Holy Ghoſt, namely, in his gifts, that are common: but yet the light here ſpoken of, is not humbling; the taſte is not raviſhing; the gifts are not renewing: all that they have puffs them up. The foundations ſink that are not laid deep enough. The true Chriſtian walk doth magnify Chriſt, and debaſe ſelf: this Dagon falls down before the ark. In a word, a formaliſt and hypocrite, or legaliſt, may have the Spirit, and yet not be born of the Spirit: he may have the Spirit ſhining on him, like the glancing of the ſun-beams upon a glaſs window: but the ſaint hath the Spirit in him, like a well of water ſpringing up to everlaſting life. He enjoys his indwelling preſence and his gracious working; not only in his inferior operation, but in effectual regeneration, and ſpiritual transformation; and ſo the Spirit of adoption, crying, ABBA, Father, Gal. iv. 5, 6. But in order to clear this difference further, the

8. Conſideration I offer is, that this Chriſtian walk is different from all other pretenders to it, eſpecially in its relation to Chriſt. And it hath chiefly a threefold relation to Chriſt. As of him, and through him, and to him are all things; ſo, this walk being a walk in Chriſt, is of him, as the author; through him, as the altar; and to him as the end: it is of him as the Alpha; through him, as the way of acceptance; and to him, as the Omega: it is of him as the efficient cauſe; through him, as the accepting cauſe; and to him, as the final cauſe.

(1.) This Chriſtian walk is of him as the ALPHA, the principle, the efficient cauſe: I live, ſays Paul; yet not I, but Chriſt liveth in me. Every ſtep of this walk is an act of the ſoul, made alive unto God through Chriſt, and his quickening it by the ſupereminent influences of the Spirit of Chriſt, without whom we can do nothing. We have neither life nor legs to walk, without Chriſt: it is he that worketh in us, both to will and to do. It is he that giveth power to the faint, and encreaſeth ſtrength to them that have no might. Then they run without wearying, and walk without fainting. The man is able for all things through Chriſt ſtrengthening him: now he ſurmounts all difficulties, which before were inſuperable. Though the ſoul be the formal agent, yet the power and efficiency, by which it acts, is from him: as the ſoul animates the body; ſo Chriſt animates the believer's ſoul in this Chriſtian walk. Here is a myſtery which is but madneſs and melancholy to an ignorant world; and particularly to blind moraliſts.

(2.) This Chriſtian walk is through him, as the ALTAR, the mean of acceptance, and the accepting cauſe; for, we are accepted in the Beloved. It is in him alone that God is well-pleaſed: this is the altar on which the gift is to be laid. As the believer draws all his ſtrength from him; ſo he expects all his acceptation through him: no action, no duty is accepted but as perfumed by the merit of his oblation. Though they ſhould be melted down into tears of goſpel-tenderneſs; yet they dare not preſent them to God, for acceptation; but only by Chriſt: they carry back theſe tears to be bathed in his blood; knowing that their ſalt water is of little value with God; expecting only to be accepted upon the value of the blood of the Lamb, and the virtue and efficacy of his interceſſion.

(3.) This Chriſtian walk is, to him, as the OMEGA, the final cauſe, and the end of it: it is all directed to the praiſe of his grace, and to the glory of God in Chriſt. The very thoughts of robbing God of his glory, and clothing himſelf with the ſpoils of his honour, are ſometimes terrible to him: why, he is upon a God-exalting, Chriſt-honouring, and grace-magnifying deſign: This is the very nature of the Chriſtian walk, and that which completes the image of God, when his glory, and the exaltation of his grace, and the manifeſtation of his glorious perfections, is uppermoſt in the man's thoughts, deſires, deſigns, and endeavours. When it is the man's greateſt wiſh on earth, to ſhew forth the glory of his name; and his greateſt errand to heaven, to ſee this glorious object, and be in caſe to extol him up for ever. This is the walk we are called to, and herein it is diſtinguiſhed from all that moraliſts, formaliſts, legaliſts, and hypocrites can attain.——May theſe conſiderations be indeed the matter of your conſideration; and may the Lord acquaint you with this walk; that receiving Chriſt, you may ſo walk in him.

2dly, I am to offer ſome qualities and properties of the way. Having conſidered the walk formerly, at ſome length, I ſhall now confine myſelf to ſpeak a little of the way: and indeed every property, that I am to offer of this way, that you are to walk in, may be a ſtrong inducement to thoſe that are out of the way, to come to it; and thoſe that have come to it, to walk in it. All men are walking in ſome way or other: What is the way the moſt part are walking in? Why, they are walking after the fleſh, Rom. viii. 1.; walking in the way of their own heart, Eccl. ii. 9.; walking after their own devices, Jer. xviii. 2.; walking after vanity, Jer. ii. 5.; walking after their own ungodly luſts: this is far from walking in Chriſt; and yet, this is the walk of the moſt part in the world. The laſcivious man walks in his luſts; the covetous man walks in his wealth, as in his ſtrong tower; the voluptuous man walks in his pleaſures; the hypocrite walks in his formal duties, etc. Oh! how few walk in Chriſt! They who do ſo, are a few perſons by themſelves; and of another ſpirit, like Caleb, Num. xiv. 24. However, ever, this is the walk of true believers; and if they do not walk so, they do not act like themselves: As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him. Christ says, I am the way, John xiv. 6.; and here his apostle says the same: As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him: in him, who is the way, wherein ye are to walk. And now, to shew what sort of a way this is, we need not be at any loss, if we were under the conduct of the word and Spirit of Christ, who is the way. There are these ten qualities and properties of this way, wherein you are to walk: all the conveniencies that the heart of man can conceive or devise; all the accommodations, that may either gain people to this way, or refresh people that are in this way: and therefore apply it still, as we go along, by way of motive to quicken you to set footing in this way, if you be out of it, and to make progress therein if you be in it.

1. Property is, that it is a free way for all comers to enter into, and for all intrants to walk in.——It is free for all comers to enter into. It is a way barred up to no person whatsoever; a way whose gates are cast off from the hinges: Whoever will may come freely to it; without money and without price. There are some ways, some bridges over certain rivers, which we cannot be allowed to pass without paying some little money, for defraying the charges of the building, or support thereof: but here is a way, a bridge, built over the ocean of God's wrath; a way for sinners to get to God. And, indeed, it is a costly way, built at the greatest expence that God and Christ could be at, yet free to us; nothing to pay for the passage.—It was, indeed, a costly way to the Father, and cost him his own Son; not so as to lose him for ever, but so as to kill him for a time. Though a man do not lose his child; yet it goes to his heart to see his child tormented; much more when he himself is forced to be the tormentor. Christ was the Father's beloved Son, the delight of his bosom, Prov. viii. 30.; yet, it pleased the Lord to bruise him: he not only beheld the tragedy that was acted upon him by man, but allowed the suffering; yea, and was the chief actor of it himself: it pleased him to bring about the salvation of sinners this way.—It was costly to Christ; he parted with the glory of his divinity, for a while, though not with the essence of it: and though he was King of kings, underwent the notion of a beggar, and took upon him the form of a servant; yea, and died the cursed death of the cross. But yet it is a free way to us, without any cost or charge: Christ is freely given of the Father, to be the sinner's way to him; and it is by way of absolute free gift; I will give thee for a covenant of the people. Not for our sake doth he it, but for his own name's sake: in so much that the greatest of sinners may freely enter into this way; By grace we are saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. If any thing was to be done on our part, to partake of Christ, we might have whereof to boast; Rom. iv. 2. If Abraham was justified by works, he had whereof to glory: therefore God gives Christ freely, without any consideration in us, to move him thereto; yea, contrary to all the evil in us, that might move him to deny Christ unto us; and all to the praise of the glory of his grace; that we may come boldly to this throne of grace. If this way of access to God was not free, we could not come boldly. If God shewed regard to any previous good in us, it would mar our boldness; but, we have boldness to enter into the holiest; not by his blood and our actions, but only by his blood. If a man has a mind to step into the king's high-way, out of his house, which is the subjects privilege, no man can say to him, you trespass in so doing; it is made to be common for all: so Christ is a free common good; a common way to all sorts of persons whatsoever, to whom there is a heart given to step into the way. Christ allows all sorts of sinners to come to him and enter into this way: but he allows none to live in sin, that have come to him: nay, he purges out their sin. Let none take it amiss that we say, the vilest of sinners are freely welcome to this way, that they may walk in it; and then surely they will walk at another rate, than they have done: in this sense it is that Christ says, Publicans and harlots may enter into the kingdom of heaven, before the self-righteous Pharisees, Mat. xxi. 31. Men's thoughts run another strange way: if I have a little holiness and righteousness, then the man thinks, now I may, in regard of that holiness and righteousness, without presumption, close with Christ: why, this is to overthrow the gospel of the grace of God in Christ; who says, that he came to save that which was lost; and came not to call the righteous but sinners. It is a free way for all comers to enter into.——And it is free for all that have entered into it to walk in, and to walk freely. Walking is a voluntary motion, and the regenerate soul walks freely, without force or compulsion, or a base mercenary spirit; The love of Christ constrains him: love is a golden weight that hangs upon the soul, and makes every wheel in it to move. Christ is such a free way, as makes all his people volunteers in his service; Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power. It is their choice, their delight, their option: I have chosen the way of truth, Psal. cxix. 30.

2. Property is, it is a safe way to walk in; and so as there is here the freest walking, so there is here the safest walking; hence it is said of the man that walketh in this way, Isa. xxxiii. 16. He shall dwell on high, the place of his defence shall be the munition of rocks. In this way the man is so safe that he needs fear no evil. O how sweetly do they walk, who can sing the twenty third Psalm in the very view of death! Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, yet will I fear no evil; for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. There is the greatest security in this way; He that walketh uprightly, walketh surely. He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High, shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty, Psal. xci. 1. Let a man take any other way in the world to heaven, but Christ, and there are a thousand dangers in it, and hazards of miscarrying: but let a man take this way, and walk in it, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against him. It is said of this way, Isa. xxxv. 9. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall be found there: but the redeemed of the Lord shall walk there. Those that keep close to this way, they keep out of the reach of Satan, the roaring lion; that wicked one toucheth them not. It is true, they are the objects of his greatest spite: but they are out of his reach; he can do them no real hurt, while they keep close in this way. They that walk in their lusts, and in sin, they are in Satan's

Satan's way, and he hath them at his will: this is the way to hell. They that are walking in their own righteousness, as their way to heaven, Satan hath continual advantage against them; because there is so much sin in all their righteousness, and so much of the devil in all their goodness, they are not out of the reach of the lion: but there is no lion in the way Christ. It is a safe way to walk in, you cannot be safe in any other way. This is the way that hath salvation at the end of it; for it leads to eternal glory, and eternal happiness; Heb. xii. 1, 2. Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith: who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right-hand of the throne of God. Other ways lead to hell, this takes to heaven; for the promise is made to this way, and to the walkers in it; for, all the promises are in Christ Yea and Amen. And those that live godly in Christ Jesus, have the promises of this life, and of that which is to come.

3. Property is, it is a lightsom way to walk in; for there is much light in this way; hence says the prophet Micah, chap. vii. 8, 9. When I sit in darkness, the Lord will be a light unto me; he will bring me forth to the light, and I shall behold his righteousness. Psal. cxix. 130. The entrance of thy word giveth light; it giveth understanding to the simple. It discovers sin to be sin, and duty to be duty. It is a pleasant thing, says Solomon, for the eye to behold the sun: and, Oh! it is a heavy thing for a traveller to be benighted and overtaken with darkness! And hence the summer seasons, are the best seasons for travellers in the way, because it is lightsom. Now, Sirs, all other ways but this are darkness: Christ is the light of the world; John viii. 12. I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. The light of knowledge, in opposition to the darkness of ignorance and error, is in this way; for he that is the way, teacheth all the travellers, according to his promise; They shall all be taught of God: never a schoolmaster in the world, can teach the perfect trade of walking uprightly, but Christ, the God-man: they are all but unskilful, that are not taught of him, and by his Spirit as a Spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him. We that are ministers, we leave you all but unpolished dunces in Christianity, till the Lord himself come in to that ministry; and, by his Spirit, teach your spirits: and then, when he comes, he can make you wiser than your teachers. Again,

4. The fourth property is, it is a firm and solid way to walk in; there is no fear of sinking, while we keep this causeway, this road. Gluts of rain make some mirey boggy ways sinking, to both men and horses. But here is a way that is a firm rock; all the rain that falls upon it runs away; it is a sure foundation: it is firm in the foulest as well as in the fairest weather. Christ is a way that will deceive none, that walk in him: some ways will look well enough to the eye, and yet deceive people: some places will look as green and fair, as any other parts of solid ground; and yet they are such quagmires and bogs, that men and horses will sink to the neck therein: even so, there is a way of self-righteousness, and legal obedience, that seems to be a fair green way, that promises firmness; but he that walks there will himself sink; and if Christ come not to pluck him out, he will sink over head and ears. Paul durst not be found in that way of his own righteousness, but looked upon it as dung, Phil. iii. 8, 9. Now, dung you know, makes both a stinking way, and a sinking way: even so, when men go about to establish their own righteousness, for justification, and so the way to the Father, it smells in the divine nostrils, as dung: and not only so, but, as it is unacceptable to God, so it is unprofitable to us, in point of acceptance; for, it is a sinking way; we cannot keep firm footing upon it, but sink in it: but Christ is such a firm way to walk in, that you cannot sink therein; for, he upholds with the right-hand of his righteousness. The way of sin is a sinking way; the man will sink to hell that walks in it: the way of self-righteousness also is a slippery way; all the righteousness of man is not able to uphold him; for the sin that is in his righteousness, is enough to trip up his heels, and lay him in the mire, and overthrow him. But the man walks firmly that walks and builds upon a rock. Though they that walk in Christ, are not free of the filthiness of sin altogether; but as water falling upon a rocky way, glides as fast as it falls, the way being as hard as before the rain; so, though the Lord hath laid on Christ the iniquity of us all, and the believer's sin falls still upon Christ; yet he passed away all this iniquity from himself, by making full satisfaction: if Christ should have our sin remaining on him, he himself would be a sinking way to us: if Christ was sinful in the eyes of God, we could never be clean in his eye: but when sin was laid upon Christ, how did he sweat it out, when he trode the wine-press alone! Again,

5. The fifth property is, that it is a high and honourable way; Isa. xxxv. 8. An high way shall be there, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it, but it shall be for those: the way-faring man, though a fool shall not err therein. It is an high and honourable way: if you walk in this way, you may debate with any man, in point of honour; for therein you have fellowship with the Father, and with the Son. They that walk in this way, they dwell on high; for it is the way of God: it is the king's high-way, the way of the King of kings; Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight, Mat. iii. 3.—It is the way of holiness, that makes it an honourable way also, of which God says, Without holiness no man shall see God. Indeed none can walk in holiness that do not walk in Christ; and none shall ascend to heaven, that are not sanctified in Christ. There is no man or woman, no king or queen, no lord or lady, no rich or poor person in the world; no magistrate or subject, no minister or people shall get to heaven without holiness, or being sanctified in Christ Jesus, 1 Cor. i. 2.—It is high and honourable as it is the path of righteousness; He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake, Psal. xxiii. 3. And so it is the way everlasting; Psal. cxxxix. 24. See if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting: i. e. The way that is everlastingly true, everlastingly good, everlastingly holy, everlastingly pleasing to God, and profitable to man, and ends in everlasting life. It is an high way; a way by itself, and distinguished from the ways of the world; for, it is a way of separation from, and non-conformity to this world.—The unclean ſhall not paſs over it; that is, the unregenerate, either to defile the way, or diſturb thoſe that walk there: and they that walk in it, ſhall be undefiled in the way; and ſhall more and more eſcape the pollutions that are in the world: Why? there is a river that runs along this way, the ſtreams whereof not only make glad, but make clean, the city of God; the river of the blood of Chriſt, the river of the influences of the Spirit: by theſe they are cleanſed from all ſin.—Thus it is in every reſpect an high, holy, and honourable way. Again,

6. The ſixth property of this way is, it is an eaſy way; My yoke is eaſy, ſaith Chriſt: and ſaith the prophet here of this way, The way-faring man, though a fool ſhall not err therein; though of a weak capacity in other things, he ſhall have ſuch plain directions from the word and Spirit, that he ſhall not err therein: not that they ſhall be infallible, and commit no miſtake; but they ſhall not be guilty of any fatal miſcarriage; nor ſo miſs their way, but that they ſhall recover it again, through grace, and get well to their journey's end. This way is eaſy to hit; Knowledge is eaſy to him that underſtandeth, ſaith Solomon: to nature it is a moſt difficult way indeed; but, through grace, it is a moſt eaſy way, and ſuch a way as wherein a man cannot be loſt. In the way of the covenant of works, a man may preſently loſe himſelf: there is not one work he doth, but he commits ſin in it, and ſo he preſently ſteps aſide; and having thus loſt himſelf, he muſt begin again, go about, and come where he was at the firſt: when all is done, it is as good as if it had been undone; for the law is not ſatisfied with any thing leſs than perfection; and this perfection of righteouſneſs, we can only have in Chriſt.—But further, there are theſe four things, that make this way an eaſy way to walk in.

(1.) It is an eaſy way in point of clearneſs; Chriſt maketh every thing clear, to the man that comes into this way; for, the anointing which they receive, teaches them all things: he maketh himſelf evident to them, and giveth underſtanding to the ſimple; in ſo much, that the way-faring man, though a fool, ſhall not err; the Spirit of truth leading them into all truth, that is neceſſary for them: the goſpel makes the ſimple wiſe.

(2.) It is an eaſy way in point of nearneſs: they that walk in Chriſt have a ſhort-cut to the Father; No man cometh to the Father but by me. Other ways are like the crooked bow, but Chriſt is the even ſtring: all other ways are compaſſes about; yea, they are labyrinths in which men loſe themſelves. How near a way Chriſt is you have account, Rom. x. 6, 7, 8. Say not, Who ſhall aſcend into heaven? Or who ſhall deſcend into the deep? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart. The way to heaven is nigh; there is but one ſtep to it, as it were, and that is to ſtep in to Chriſt, and remain there; He that believeth ſhall be ſaved. The old way of the law of works is a long way; for, Curſed is every one, that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them. If a man will run an hundred miles for money, which he may have juſt at his door, and but one ſtep to it, ſure his journey is vain: ſo it is here, Chriſt hath grace and ſalvation, and all in him, and he lays them down at our door; and what need all this travel with reſpect to legal working? Here is a near way.

But here a queſtion may be propounded, Will not this diſcourage men to work, or to do good works? To which we might reply, Indeed it may diſcourage ſelfiſh men, that work for themſelves, and for their own juſtification and acceptance; which is a work that God rejects: a ſervice of ſelfiſhneſs, may be diſcouraged by this goſpel-doctrine; but the ſervice of thankfulneſs, which is the only true ſervice, and is more cordial and ſedulous than all the mercenary work in the world; this ſervice will be furthered and encouraged thereby. True ſervice to God in Chriſt, is not a ſerving him ſlaviſhly, to purchaſe ſalvation from him; but a ſerving of him thankfully, to glorify him who hath brought ſalvation to us.—Thus it is an eaſy way in point of nearneſs: a great deal of labour and toil is ſaved.

(3.) It is an eaſy way in point of readineſs and diſpatch of buſineſs therein: whoſoever chooſeth Chriſt for a way to walk in, comes to a very quick diſpatch of all the buſineſs of holineſs, ſanctification, and mortification, which they are to do, while they are in the way; for Chriſt, whom the believer chooſeth for his way, anoints the wheels of their ſoul, and puts them into a nimble motion; 1 Pet. ii. 3. To whom coming as to a living ſtone, ye as lively ſtones are built up. Chriſt being the living ſtone, makes every one that cometh to him living; yea, and lively too: and we ſay a man is a lively man, that is quick in buſineſs. Why? Chriſt is their ſtrength; he is the ſtrong arm that draws the bow, and the ſtronger the arm is that draws the bow, the ſwifter is the flight of the arrow, and the further it flys. Chriſt is the living principle within that makes them lively; I live, yet not I, but Chriſt liveth in me. The larger that the root of the tree is, the more ſap doth it gather, and the more fruit doth it bring forth: Chriſt is the large root, where he is once received, and ſo there are anſwerable ſpirits and ſap coming from him; there will be a bringing forth of much fruit: hence believers are ſaid, to be ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might: there is the believer's ſtock. A poor maid ſervant, or widow, can do little for themſelves in the world; why? becauſe their ſtock doth not reach far: but if married to a rich man, then they could do much, becauſe they are intereſted in a large ſtock: ſo, when a perſon is married to Chriſt, that before was poor, he is now intereſted in a rich ſtock; for, in him are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge: and when there is ſuch a great ſtock to trade upon, there may be a great deal of work done with much diſpatch; I can do all things through Chriſt ſtrengthening me; yea, when I am weak, then am I ſtrong.

(4.) It is an eaſy way in point of largeneſs; for it is a ſpacious way, wherein there is abundance of room and liberty: If the Son make you free, then are ye free indeed. It is true, it is ſaid, Strait is the way: and it is ſtrait, not only becauſe of the ſtrictneſs and exactneſs that is required, while the way will allow no toleration for ſin; but alſo that it is a way, that allows no room to any thing elſe but Chriſt: there is no room for a man's own righteouſneſs for juſtification jointly, together with Chriſt: but now Chriſt, conſidered in himſelf, is a large and ſpacious way, both in reſpect of the number that are allowed to come into this way, and the liberty and freedom he allows to them that walk in him: they walk at liberty. There is a manifold bondage in every other way; bondage to ſin, Satan, death, hell, wrath, and to the law as a covenant of works. In a word, other ways are crooked, but this is a ſtraight even way.

bondage

7. Property is, that it is the good old way; Jer. vi. 16. Stand ye in the ways and ſee, and aſk for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye ſhall find reſt for your ſouls. This way you are to walk in; it is not a new up-ſtart way, but the old beaten way, in which all the patriarchs and prophets have walked: we are to conſult the pureſt antiquity; to aſk for the path that Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob have travelled in, and all the ſaints theſe five thouſand years, and more. Aſk for the old path; where is the good way: we muſt not be guided purely by antiquity, as if that plea was ſufficient to juſtify our path; no, by no means: there is an old way, which wicked men have trodden, Job xxii. 15. But when we aſk for the old way, it is to be for the good old way. The goſpel is no new ſcheme: Chriſt is an old way in four reſpects.

(1.) It is an old way in reſpect of the contrivance of it: it is no new invention, but as old as eternity: Chriſt is the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world; that is, from eternity: he was ſet up from everlaſting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. God's way of ſaving ſinners by Chriſt, is according to his eternal purpoſe, which he purpoſed in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, before the foundation of the world was laid, Eph. iii. 11. 2 Tim. i. 9.

(2.) It is an old way in reſpect of the revelation of it; for it was revealed immediately upon the back of the fall: The ſeed of the woman ſhall bruiſe the head of the ſerpent.—Adam knew this way; and Abraham ſaw Chriſt's day, and Chriſt was before him; Before Abraham was, I am.

(3.) It is an old way in reſpect of the uſe and improvement of it; it is not of late uſe; it is long ſince the ſaints began to walk in it: there was never another way to heaven, ſince the covenant of works was broken and violate; and all that have walked to heaven ſince the beginning of the world by faith, they walked in this way, Heb. xi. And ſo,

(4.) It is an old way in reſpect that it was the old-teſtament as well as the new-teſtament way. The old-teſtament church had the ſame faith and hope in Chriſt, that the new-teſtament church have: only with this difference, their faith was to look foreward, and our faith is to look backward: they upon a Meſſiah to come, and we upon a Meſſiah that is come. It is the good old way.

8. Property is, that is the new and living way; Having boldneſs to enter into the holieſt of all by the blood of Jeſus, by a new and living way, Heb. ix. 19. But here two queſtions may be propoſed.

QUEST. 1. Why called a NEW way?

ANSW. (1.) It is called a new way, becauſe it is come after the old way of the covenant of works. God never deſigned to bring one man to heaven, by that old covenant of works: he erected that ſcaffold for a little while, that the glory of the new covenant might be diſplayed. The condition of that covenant was perfect, perſonal obedience, upon pain of eternal death; and now, by ſin, this bridge is quite broken down; yet, ſuch is the folly of a blind world, that they labour to build up that bridge again; but it is rotten, and will never bear us over.

(2.) A new way in reſpect of the new, clear, goſpel-revelation thereof now under the New Teſtament: for, under the Old, the way into the holieſt was not yet made manifeſt, Heb. ix. 8. The brighteſt revelations of Chriſt, under the Old Teſtament, were in theſe or the like words; that he was to be the ſeed of the woman, the ſon of David, a prophet like unto Moſes, a child born, whoſe name ſhould be Wonderful, Counſellor: but what are all theſe to that one bright word of the Baptiſt's, Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the ſin of the world? And therefore, John the Baptiſt is called greater than all the Old-teſtament prophets; and yet the leaſt in the kingdom of heaven, is greater than he, that can ſay, with the apoſtle, We have ſeen with our eyes, heard with our ears, and handled with our hands the word of life; and can preach a crucified, dead, buried, riſen, exalted, and glorified Chriſt, that hath brought in everlaſting righteouſneſs: hereupon it was ſaid, Bleſſed are your eyes for they ſee, even what the old-teſtament ſaints longed to ſee, and never ſaw, except one, who was the happieſt of the old-teſtament ſaints, viz. old Simeon; he was both an old-teſtament and a new-teſtament ſaint; he got it revealed to him, that he ſhould not ſee death, till he had ſeen the Lord's Chriſt. Again, they had but types of Chriſt, and the ſhadows of things to come; but the body is of Chriſt. What a great difference is there between a prieſt's cutting a lamb's throat, and Chriſt giving himſelf a ſacrifice! Therefore it is called a new way.

(3.) It is new, becauſe it is always new. The blood of Chriſt is but newly ſhed, as it were; and there is no abatement of the virtue of his death: his blood is as warm, and crys as loud this day, as the day it was ſhed: yea, it is always new, ſo as it never gives place to another way; there will never be another way to heaven: and we need to take heed how we improve this; for, if we ſin wilfully, after we have received the knowledge of the truth, in rejecting this way, there remains no more ſacrifice for ſin, Heb. x. 26.: That is, God will never provide another way, to the end of the world, but this one way.

(4.) It is a new way, becauſe it is well-prepared, as new ways uſe to be, and we may walk confidently and comfortably in it; for it is ſuch a well-prepared way, that one can hardly ſet his foot in this way, to walk in it, but he is almoſt at the end of the way; becauſe, he that hath the Son hath life. We receive eternal life, by receiving of Chriſt; not the full enjoyment of it, but a right to it, and an earneſt of it. When a man ſees Chriſt he ſees heaven; Thoſe eyes ſhall ſee the King in his beauty, and the land that is afar off, Iſa. xxxiii. 17. When a man ſees him, he ſees the land afar off; in regard, none can take a believing look of Chriſt, but he muſt ſee heaven, and ſalvation in his face. But,

QUEST. 2. Why called the LIVING way?

ANSW. (1.) It is called a living way, becauſe there was life in his death: the life of reconciliation; We have peace by the blood of his croſs: for here he ſatisfied juſtice, fulfilled the law-demands, and expiated ſin, which was the ground of the quarrel.

(2.) A living way, becauſe he is the life of the world; and all that are in this way live; and no man can die in this way: no traveller upon it can die; He that believeth in me, ſhall never die. When bodily death comes, they but ſleep in Jeſus, who is the reſurrection and the life.

(3.) A living way, becauſe he lives for ever to be the way. Eternal life is one of Chriſt's names; This is the true God, and eternal life,

1 John

1 John v. 20. He ever liveth to make interceſſion for us, Heb. vii. 25.

(4.) A living way, becauſe travellers muſt live upon this way: the traveller lives as ſoon as he is in it, and he lives as long as he is in it, and he lives upon it: all his fare is Chriſt himſelf; whoſe fleſh is meat indeed, and whoſe blood is drink indeed. If the traveller be faint and hungry, he hath nothing ado but to fall upon Chriſt, by faith, and live upon him; The life that I live is by faith upon the Son of God. Never deſire better entertainment for a child of God, than more of Chriſt, more of his grace, more of his fulneſs, more of his Spirit, more of the ſap and virtue of a crucified Jeſus.

I thought, at this time, to have offered more properties of this way, particularly that it is a conſecrated way; and upon the whole a pleaſant way. But now, is Chriſt ſuch a way as I have been deſcribing you are to walk in, and particularly a living way, then, O what a ſweet life is the believer's life, that is a walking in ſuch a way! To be for ever with Chriſt is heaven; our way, is walking IN him; our heaven, is walking WITH him in white. Oh! what a ſad caſe are they in that walk in the way of death, and deſpiſe this way of life! And, how ſad and diſmal is it, that men love death rather than life! It is a mercy that few people do prize, that they have ſinners to preach Chriſt to them: if we had not experience of that rebellion of the natural heart, in ourſelves, we would be mightily impatient in dealing with ungodly perſons. What infatuates men, that they refuſe Chriſt, and will not walk in this way, but in the way of death! What madneſs poſſeſſes the hearts of men, that they will rather go to hell with the devil, than to heaven with Chriſt! Surely they deſerve hell for ever that make ſuch an abominable choice; and yet every natural man doth ſo, every graceleſs man does ſo.—May the Lord perſuade people to receive Chriſt, and to walk in him. Again,

9. Property is, that it is a conſecrated way; Heb. x. 19, 20. Having therefore, brethren, boldneſs to enter into the holieſt by the blood of Jeſus, by a new and living way which he hath conſecrated for us; that is, dedicated to be the way. Now, Chriſt is conſecrated,

[1.] By the FATHER to be the way in which we are to walk. (1.) He is conſecrate by the oath of God; The Lord hath ſworn, and will not repent, Thou art a Prieſt for ever, after the order of Melchiſedec, Pſal. cx. 4. Heb. vii. 28. For the law maketh men high-prieſts which have infirmity, but the word of the oath which was ſince the law, maketh the Son, who is conſecrated for evermore. By the oath of JEHOVAH he is appointed to be the only way to bring ſinners to glory. (2.) He is conſecrated by the preparing him a body; Heb. x. 5. Sacrifice and offering thou wouldeſt not, but a body haſt thou prepared me. (3.) By the Father's commiſſion and charge that he gave him about the work of redemption, to ſuffer in that body or human nature: This commandment have I received of my Father, John x. 17. (4.) By the holy anointing; Pſal. xlv. 7. Thou loveſt righteouſneſs, and hateſt wickedneſs; therefore God, thy God hath anointed thee with the oil of gladneſs above thy fellows. (5.) By getting all power and judgment committed to him; For as the Father raiſeth up the dead, and quickeneth them: even ſo the Son quickeneth whom he will, John v. 21, 22. As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh, that he ſhould give eternal life to as many as thou haſt given him, John xvii. 2.

[2.] Chriſt did conſecrate HIMSELF to be the way for ſinners to walk in to heaven. (1.) By willingly complying with the Father's will; Pſal. xl. 8. I delight to do thy will, O my God. A great part of his conſecration lay in his compliance with the divine will; By the which will we are ſanctified. (2.) He conſecrate himſelf by his willing death; John xvii. 19. For their ſakes I ſanctify myſelf, that they alſo may be ſanctified through the truth. So that ſanctifying himſelf is juſt his conſecrating himſelf; devoting himſelf to be a ſacrifice for his ſheep. We could never come to that ſanctification by goſpel-devotedneſs to God, unleſs Chriſt had devoted himſelf to death. (3.) He conſecrate himſelf by diſplaying his authority to ſave, and declaring his ability. For, as there is no Saviour beſide him, Hoſ. xiii. 4.; ſo, he came into the world to ſave ſinners, 1 Tim. i. 18.; and ſhall ſave his people from their ſins, Mat. i. 21. becauſe he is able to ſave to the uttermoſt, Heb. vii. 25. (4.) He conſecrate himſelf by the exerciſe of his office, in bringing many ſons to glory: For of all that the Father gave him he loſt none, John xvii. 12.—Thus he is a conſecrated way, and as ſuch we are to walk in him. And, upon the whole,

10. The tenth property is, that this way we are to walk in, is a pleaſant way, a comfortable way: ſurely wiſdom's ways are pleaſantneſs; for wiſdom itſelf is the way. What more pleaſant than to walk in him, who is light itſelf, pleaſure itſelf?

OBJECT. But believers are many times oppreſſed, with ſadneſs and heavineſs of ſpirit, though they be in this way.

ANSW. It is only when they turn aſide out of this way, that they are oppreſſed: they walk not in Chriſt as they ought, who rejoice not always in him; for, it is the believer's duty, ſtill to rejoice in Chriſt Jeſus.

OBJECT. But, ſhould not a believer mourn for ſin?

ANSW. Yea, indeed; ſurely they ought: but true mourning, goſpel-melting, is not without great pleaſure: there is more pleaſure in goſpel-mourning, than in all the merriment of the wicked. There is much ſecret pleaſure in an evangelically melted heart; for, God deals with believers as he deſires us to deal with our enemies; Prov. xxi. 22. If thine enemy hunger, give him bread; if thirſty, give him drink: ſo ſhall you heap coals of fire on his head. q. d. Kindneſs is the beſt way in the world to melt the moſt obdured wretch: thus God deals with his people in Chriſt. They are by nature enemies as well as others: well, he gives them bread, when they are hungry; and drink, when they are thirſty: and thus he heaps coals of fire on their head; i. e. he melts them. What is true of drunkards and gluttons, in a ſinful ſenſe, that they are never better than when they are in a wine-cellar, and at a banquet, always tippling and drinking; is true of the believer, in a ſpiritual ſenſe: for, the church ſpeaks in this language; He brought me into his banquetting-houſe; [or, as it may be read, his CELLAR OF WINE;] Stay me with flaggons, comfort me with apples; for I am ſick of love, Song ii. 4, 5. O the ſoul is no longer ſatisfied than it is with Chriſt! the believer is never better, than when he is in the banquetting-houſe, in Chriſt's wine-cellar; and he cannot get enough, as it were, of this ſpiced wine; Stay me with flaggons: it is not with cups, or half cups, but with whole flaggons. There is a holy kind of inebriating, whereby Chriſt doth, in a ſpiritual ſenſe, make the believer, that keeps him company, ſpiritually drunk; he overcomes them with his wine: it is lawful to be drunk in this ſenſe; yea, it is commanded that we take our fill: Eat, O friends; drink, yea, drink abundantly, O beloved. And again, Be not drunk with wine, wherein is exceſs, ſaith the apoſtle; but be filled with the Spirit. Chriſt hath rivers of pleaſures, to ſatisfy his people with, that walk in him.

that

Here I thought to have told you of ſix things, that contribute to make this way a pleaſant way; namely, that they that walk in Chriſt, they have in this way, 1. A pleaſant guide. 2. A pleaſant guard. 3. A pleaſant ſhade. 4. Pleaſant company. 5. Pleaſant entertainment. 6. Pleaſant reſt and quiet in the way. This way as it is, on theſe accounts, pleaſant to them; ſo it is a pleaſant way to God: this way pleaſes God; for, he ſays of Chriſt, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well-pleaſed. And walking therein is, what pleaſeth God alſo; hence Enoch, who walked with God, had this teſtimony, that he pleaſed God. Again, it is, and may be pleaſant to the ſaints, on theſe accounts which I have only named.

1. A pleaſant guide they have that walk in this way; This God is our God for ever and ever; and will be our guide, even unto death, Pſal. xlviii. 14. The Spirit of God is the guide, who not only ſets them into the way, like a friend that leads one a mile out of the town, and then leaves him to go alone, no; but he leads them into all truth, and guides by his counſel, till he bring them to glory, ſaying, I will never leave thee, not forſake thee.

2. A pleaſant guard they have that walk in this way. They have a guard of angels to ſecure them; The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him: They are miniſtring ſpirits ſent forth to miniſter to the heirs of ſalvation.—Yea, they have a guard of divine attributes about them: As the mountains are round about Jeruſalem; ſo the Lord is round about them that fear him. The Lord himſelf holdeth and upholdeth them, with the right-hand of his righteouſneſs. What a pleaſant walk is it to walk in Chriſt's hand, and to be coming up from the wilderneſs leaning on the Beloved!

3. A pleaſant ſhade they have who walk in this way; for it is a ſhadow way; a ſhadow place in hot weather is comfortable. How pleaſant and comfortable was Jonah's gourd? But, what a comfortable ſhadow hath the believer to walk in, or ſit under, when the ſcorching heat of God's wrath breaks out into the world? A man ſhall be as a covert from the tempeſt, and as the ſhadow of a great rock in a weary land, Iſa. xxxii. 2. I ſat down under his ſhadow with great delight, and his fruit was ſweet unto my taſte, Song ii. 3.

4. Pleaſant company they have who walk in this way; for they that walk in Chriſt, they walk with God; and ſurely that is the beſt of company. It is encouraging to a poor traveller, that hath a long journey to go, to hear tell of good company to go with him, to his journey's end: here is the choice of company: Nevertheleſs I am continually with thee, Pſal. lxxiii. 23.—They have alſo all the ſaints to go along with them; and theſe are the excellent ones of the earth; for there is none excellent without grace, be they never ſo great: let them be never ſo great in this world, we muſt not walk with them, when they ſtray from the word of God.

5. Pleaſant entertainment alſo they have who walk in this way, and the beſt of refreſhment on their journey; they are fed upon the green paſtures, Pſal. xxiii. 3.; and they are fed with the fineſt of the wheat, and with honey out of the rock, Pſal. lxxxi. 16. They have noble diſhes to feed upon, which others never taſted of: and a well-furniſhed table to ſit down at, far beyond the table of the great kings and monarchs of the world.—There is the diſh of the divine promiſes, that is ſometimes ſet before them: Man feeds not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. How ſweet a diſh this is the pſalmiſt declares when he ſays, How ſweet are thy words to my mouth!—There is the diſh of divine peace; a peace that paſſeth all underſtanding; the peace of God quieting the mind through Chriſt: Great peace have they that love thy law, and nothing ſhall offend them.—There is the diſh of divine pardon; I, even I am he that blotteth out thy tranſgreſſions, for mine own name's ſake, and will remember thy ſins no more. Son, daughter, be of good chear, thy ſins are forgiven thee.—There is the diſh of divine manifeſtations, John xiv. 21. He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, and he that loveth me ſhall be loved of my Father; and I will love him, and manifeſt myſelf unto him.—There is the diſh of divine comforts; In the multitude of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my ſoul.—There is the diſh of a good conſcience, which is a continual feaſt: This is our rejoicing, the teſtimony of our conſcience, that in ſimplicity and godly ſincerity, not with fleſhly wiſdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our converſation in the world. They that walk in Chriſt, they feed upon the rarities of heaven; he makes to them a feaſt of fat things, and of wines on the lees, well refined. They have the white ſtone, and the new name, that no man knoweth but he that receiveth it. The delights in Chriſt are ſuch as none can reach unto, but thoſe that receive Chriſt, and walk in him: therefore Chriſt thanks the Father, ſaying, Mat. xi. 25. I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto babes. He doth not thank him, that he hath revealed them to the mighty, great, and wiſe in the world, but to babes. A babe is the weakeſt of all ſorts of men; and it ſays, that the weakeſt of all believers, that are in Chriſt, the feebleſt babe, ſhall partake of ſuch delicates in Chriſt, as all the world ſhall never be able to dive into, or comprehend: and Chriſt himſelf takes ſuch delight to entertain them, that he bleſſes his Father that he, for his ſake, doth ſo much for them, over and above what he confers upon others.

6. Pleaſant reſt and quiet alſo in this way: they have not only ſuch dainty fare, and delicious entertainment to feed upon, but they have excellent chambers and ornamented apartments to lodge in. A king and prince that wants grace, hath not ſuch coſtly hung rooms to quarter in, as they have; nor ſuch well-furniſhed chambers: The King hath brought me into his chambers; we will be glad and rejoice in thee, Song i. 4. O the chambers of divine preſence, the ſecret of God's preſence, is agreeable quarters to lodge in! and Chriſt's warm boſom, is a ſweet bed to ly down in! Our bed is green, Song i. 16. Chriſt and believers have but one bed between them; and he covers them with his garment, which is ſo perfumed that it ſmells of aloes, myrrh, and caſſia, out of the ivory palaces. And here they are ſure to get reſt in their quarters; Pſal. iv. 8. I will both lay me down in peace and ſleep;

ſleep; for thou Lord only maketh me to dwell in ſafety. Nay, Iſa. xxxii. 18. My people ſhall dwell in a peaceable habitation, and in ſure dwellings, and in quiet reſting places. Prov. i. 33. Whoſo hearkeneth to me, ſhall dwell ſafely, and ſhall be quiet from fear of evil. And Song i. 7. He maketh his flocks to reſt at noon. Thus while they walk in the good old way, they find reſt to their ſouls, Jer. vi. 16. He warms them with the fire of his grace, and covers them with the robe of his righteouſneſs, and cauſeth them to reſt: he makes their hearts to burn within them, and giveth his beloved ſleep; filling them with holy ſecurity, in himſelf. And, O what more deſirable to a poor weary traveller, than to be brought to an excellent inn or lodging; than beſide a well-covered table; to get a good fire to ſit down at, and a good bed to ly down in! And now, what do ye think of this pleaſant way? and how ſweetly it is repreſented to us in the word of God? What have you to ſay againſt this way, and the walking in it? Is the way of ſin and the way of ſelf-righteouſneſs, the way of death, comparable to this way? Are your old ſinful courſes better than this way? If you imagine ſo, your own heart, your own tongues will fall upon you, and condemn you at the great day. Is this the beſt way? O then, why will you not take it? And have you taken it, believer, why then will you not walk in it?—May the Lord himſelf commend his Chriſt, and commend his way to you, that you may walk in it, till you come to glory at the end of it.

3*dly*, I proceed now to lay down ſome motives and perſuaſives to engage to this walk in Chriſt.

[There is a twofold garment wherewith Chriſt adorns his people. 1. The garment of imputed righteouſneſs, for their juſtification. 2. The garment of imparted holineſs, for their ſanctification. Without the former, we can have no title to heaven; without the latter, we can have no meetneſs for heaven. Both theſe garments they alone are clothed with, and poſſeſſed of, who, having received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, do walk in him.—The work of ſanctification and holineſs is the work of God; I am the Lord that ſanctifieth you, Lev. xxi. 8. Grace is his own creature; man's will contributes nothing to the work, but by reſiſtance and rebellion againſt it: therefore, God makes the ſoul willing in the day of his power. Outward means work not, unleſs the mighty power of the Spirit work with them; otherwiſe, why ſhould the ſame word, preached by the ſame miniſter, mollify ſome, and harden others? Nothing but the blood of Chriſt can purge the conſcience from dead works. Chriſt muſt come from heaven and open a fountain, in his own ſide, for our purification and cleanſing. Sanctification is not only expreſſed by a creation, Eph. ii. 10. We are his workmanſhip, created in Chriſt Jeſus unto good works; but by a victory, a powerful overcoming of oppoſition, Luke xi. 21, 22. 1 John iv. 4. In creation, as there was nothing to help, ſo there was nothing to hinder: but when God comes to convert a ſoul, and make him holy, and bring him to a Chriſtian walk, beſides a death in ſin, there is a reſiſtance againſt grace; and, therefore, the grace that is in Chriſt conquers the ſoul, enabling it to receive him; and the ſame grace ſtrengthens to a ſuitable walk in him: out of him it cannot be; for, without him, and out of him, we can do nothing: and hence we are called to be ſtrong in him; and ſo here, to walk in him: As ye have received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, ſo walk ye in him. *]

Now, the ſcriptural motives, to engage us to this Chriſtian walk are innumerable. I reduce them to theſe two heads. 1. The conſideration of the concomitants of this walk in Chriſt, wherein we may ſee the excellency of it. 2. The conſideration of the effects of this walk, wherein we may ſee the neceſſity of it.

[1.] The conſideration of the concomitants of this walk in Chriſt, and ſo therein view the excellency of it. There are ſome excellent concomitants and attendants of this walk in Chriſt; eſpecially, what comprehends manifold bleſſed attendants, the Spirit of Chriſt; for there is no walking in Chriſt, but by walking in the Spirit of Chriſt, and ſo it is called, Gal. v. 16. Walk in the Spirit, and ye ſhall not fulfil the luſts of the fleſh. And ver. 25. If we live in the Spirit, let us alſo walk in the Spirit. And Rom. viii. 9. If any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of his. This walk in Chriſt then, is attended with the Spirit, in his various graces and operations; and this ſhould recommend this walk to us. More particularly,

1. This holy walk in Chriſt is attended with the Spirit of humiliation, Eph. i. 17. If the Spirit of ſanctification and holineſs dwelleth in us; the ſame Spirit, as a Spirit of humiliation, dwelleth in us. They that walk in Chriſt, they receive the unction from the holy One, to know all things, 1 John ii. 20. Every man is brutiſh in his knowledge before converſion; the god of this world hath blinded him; but when he is brought to Chriſt, to believe in him, and walk in him, then he is made light in him, light in the Lord, Eph. v. 8.; being turned from darkneſs to light. Sanctification and illumination are as inſeparable, as light and heat in the ſun-beams.

2. This holy walk in Chriſt is attended with the Spirit of ſupplication; for when he is the Spirit of grace, he will be the Spirit of ſupplication, Zech. xii. 10. Where he is the Spirit of holineſs, he will be the Spirit of prayer. Every new-born babe comes, for the moſt part, into the world crying; ſurely every ſpiritual new-born babe crys, ABBA, Father, Gal. iv. 6. The word, ABBA, ſignifies FATHER, in the Syriac tongue, which the apoſtle here retains; and which alſo young children retain, almoſt in all languages and countries. If you never find the melting, moving, quickening, warming breathings of the Spirit, you do not look like one that walks in Chriſt: but to pray in the Spirit is a ſign of tranſlation from death to life; from nature to grace. And herein alſo appeareth the excellency of this walk, it is attended with the Spirit of ſupplication.

3. This holy walk in Chriſt is attended with the Spirit of faith; 2 Cor. iv. 13. We having the ſame Spirit of faith; by which the man doth more and more believe that Jeſus is the Chriſt, and believe on this Jeſus. By which, on the one hand, he believeth that Jeſus is the Chriſt: this was the grand teſt of a believer in the primitive times; becauſe then it was little leſs than death, among the Jews, thus to own and confeſs Chriſt: "Shut your eyes and your ears, "[ſays Luther on Pſal. cxxx.] and ſay, You "know no God, out of Chriſt; none but he "that was in the lap of Mary, and ſucked her "breaſts."—By this faith, on the other hand alſo, we believe on the name of the Son of God, and rely rely upon him for wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption; cleaving to him, drawing daily virtue from him, and laying all our wants and burdens upon him.

* This incloſed paragraph ſeems to be introductory to one of the diſcourſes.

4. This holy walk is attended with the Spirit of repentance and humiliation: this follows the look of faith; They ſhall look upon him, whom they have pierced, and mourn, Zech. xii. 10. The man that is walking in this way, and under the conduct of the Spirit, he is always weeping, as he is walking; Going and weeping, they ſhall aſk the way to Zion, with their faces thitherward, Jer. l. 45. The man goes forth weeping, bearing precious ſeed, Pſal. cxxvi. 6. being humbled to the duſt, before God, for his ſin and iniquity. He loaths himſelf, and repents in duſt and aſhes.

5. This holy walk in Chriſt is attended with the Spirit of joy and conſolation. As Chriſt is anointed with the oil of gladneſs above his fellows; ſo his children have fellowſhip with him, in this oil of joy. The godly ſorrow and weeping, mentioned juſt now, is not inconſiſtent with this joy and gladneſs: the Spirit of humiliation is not inconſiſtent with the Spirit of conſolation; for, while he mourns before the Lord, he melts; and there is more joy in the believer's melting before the Sun of righteouſneſs, than in all the mirth of the wicked. We may appeal to all believers, who have had their hearts melted before the fire of divine love, whether they have not found a ſecret contentment and ſatisfaction, ſuch as hath made them rather fear the change of that mourning, than to be troubled at it: yea, the man many times weeps for joy, while he ſees the fulneſs and freeneſs of the grace of God, toward the like of him.

6. This holy walk in Chriſt is attended with the Spirit of power; 2 Tim. i. 7. For God hath not given us the Spirit of fear, but of power. There is the Spirit of power and victory that attends it: 1 John v. 4. He that is born of God overcometh the world; namely, the wicked of the world, the luſts of this world, the god of this world, the devil: the ſaints have a war with theſe enemies; but are enabled and prepared according to their meaſure, to ſubdue their corruptions within, and vanquiſh temptations without. The believer gets, in ſome meaſure, above the fears, and frowns, and flatteries of the world; ſo as he cannot be turned from the faith of Chriſt thereby. When ſome perſuaded Eraſmus to write to Luther, or againſt him, at the Reformation, to bring him back to Popery: Eraſmus anſwered, "That Luther was too great for "him to write to, or againſt." So a man that walks in Chriſt, is too great a ſpirit to be turned by the powers of the world; when he is himſelf, he cannot be drawn by force or fraud into a baſe compliance with them againſt the honour of his God, and the conſcience of his duty.

7. This holy Chriſtian walk is attended with the Spirit of love; 2 Tim. i. 7. God hath not given us the Spirit of fear, but of love: love to God and to the brethren. This love is made a ſpecial effect and evidence of ſpiritual circumciſion, or ſanctification, Deut. xxx. 6. there the Lord promiſes to circumciſe the heart to love him. The man loves himſelf, and his relations, and outward enjoyments, with a common love; but he loves God and Chriſt, with a ſpecial love. He loves God with a love of deſire; panting after God with a love of union; with purpoſe of heart, cleaving to the Lord: with a love of benevolence, deſiring all praiſe and glory to be aſcribed to him: and with a love of delight and complacency, reſting in the Lord as his only God and portion.—This Spirit works by love to the brethren alſo: there are brethren by name, by nation, by office; but eſpecially by grace, that the man loves: He that loveth him that begat, loveth him alſo that is begotten. A ſpirit of hatred and enmity between man and man, is inconſiſtent with this walk; and eſpecially where there is no love to the excellent ones of the earth. It is true, a child of God may love ſome of the children of God irregularly, when it is not merely becauſe they have more of the image of God, than others; but becauſe they are more their favourites, followers, and admirers: if they be not ſuch, then they will, perhaps, give them little of their company: but, ſays David, I am a companion to all them that fear thee. The apoſtle gives us a teſt of true love to the brethren, 1 John iii. 16. Chriſt laid down his life for us, and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. A true believer is not only to lay down his life for Chriſt, and for his cauſe and the goſpel, when called thereto; but, in ſome reſpect, for the brotherhood: and though this ſeems to be an high pitch, yet, I think, there is ſomething of it in every true lover of Chriſt: they ſo love the brotherhood as, with John, they deſire to decreaſe, if ſo be that Chriſt myſtical may increaſe; that the kingdom of Chriſt be enlarged, and the generation of the righteous multiplied, amplified, and preſerved; though he himſelf, his name, his honour, his life, ſhould ly in the duſt.

8. This holy Chriſtian walk, or walk in Chriſt, is attended with the Spirit of a ſound mind; 2 Tim. i. 7. God hath not given us the Spirit of fear, but of a ſound mind. Sanctification is a ſoul reſtoration; He reſtoreth my ſoul, Pſal. xxiii. 3. not only to joy and comfort, but to ſinging, health, and vigour. What ſickneſs is to the body, ſin is to the ſoul: a ſick man cannot walk, nor work; ſo here, an ungodly perſon cannot walk in Chriſt, run the way of his commandments, nor work out his ſalvation with fear and trembling. A ſick man cannot take delight in meat and drink, or the enjoyments of life: ſo, the unholy man cannot take pleaſure in ſpiritual things: but when a man is ſanctified in Chriſt, then he experiences unſpeakable ſatisfaction in ſpiritual exerciſes; he is ſound in the faith, and his heart right with God. It is true, as a man that is healthy may catch cold, and labour under ſome infirmity; ſo a holy, ſpiritually healthy perſon may, through human frailty, and ſtrong temptation, decay in grace for a time; he may get cold, his love and zeal may grow cold, his faith weaken; he may have an inordinate affection to the creature, and immoderate cares; fall into ſin, great ſin; yet the immortal ſeed of God in him will, by the ſupplies of the Spirit of life, revive and corroborate the man again. Grace, like leaven, will ferment the whole lump, and work out the diſeaſe of ſin: the withered principle of grace within, like a tree planted by the river of life, will ſpring, flouriſh, and bud again.

9. This holy walk in Chriſt is attended with the Spirit of adoption and liberty, which are put together, Rom. viii. 15, 21. When a ſinner becomes a ſaint, that very moment a child of wrath becomes a child of God. They that are the children of God by regeneration, are the children of God by adoption; and they that are born of God, are free-born, they are born to a glorious liberty; If the Son make you free, ye are free free indeed. The spirit of adoption is a free spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty: the man walks at liberty, and is at freedom for prayer and service; Truly I am thy servant, thou hast loosed my bonds: here is the honour of all the saints. According to the measure of sanctity that is conferred on them, such is the measure of liberty and freedom they have in the performance of religious duties.

10. This holy walk in Christ is attended with the Spirit of perseverance; for the Spirit of God rests on them, and never altogether leaves nor forsakes them. True holiness is an abiding principle; for, the foundation of God standeth sure; and, the gifts and calling of God are without repentance. He that is the author, will be the finisher of faith: he that hath begun the good work, will perfect it. See Jer. xxxii. 40. Here God both undertakes for himself, that he will not turn away from them to do them good; and then for his people, that he will put his fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from him. Hence, though they fall, they shall rise; though they step aside into the ways of death, God will bring them back, and give them repentance unto life. Where-ever the image of God is, it is progressive: the picture of a man in a frame doth not grow, it is always at a stand; but the picture, or image, of a man in his child, is far different; it is lively, vigorous, and progressive: so the painted holiness of hypocrites, is vastly different from the image of God in a saint; The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. I give to them eternal life, saith Christ, and they shall never perish. See Song iv. 16. Awake, O north-wind, and come thou south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out. Not only the wind of influences; the north-wind of nipping and convincing influences of the Spirit; and the south-wind of warming and comforting influences of the Spirit: but all the winds of providence; the north-wind of adversity, the south-wind of prosperity; the north-wind of frowning providence, the south-wind of smiling providence; the warm summer of joy, or the cold winter of sorrow; all the gales and blasts of divine providence, shall sweetly conspire to open the spices of God's garden, to ripen and diffuse the savour of the graces of the Spirit, in the hearts of his people.——Thus you see some of the concomitants of this walk; it is attended with the Spirit of illumination, supplication, faith, humiliation, consolation, power, love, a sound mind, adoption, perseverance, &c.

[2.] We now come to the consideration of the effects of this walk, wherein we may see the necessity of it. When I spoke to this part preceding, I brought in what is above as another property of the way, namely, that it is a spiritual way; because therein we find the Spirit in all these respects, as above; and so what now follows may be brought in, as the persuasive part of this exhortation: the two former parts being instructive, and the last being directive. What doth immediately follow then, is the persuasives and arguments, for further engaging us to walk in this way. There are these three motives and persuasives to a Christian walk, which comprehend multitudes of other arguments, namely, 1. The glory of God. 2. The advantage of man. 3. The credit of the gospel.

1st, The glory of God is the grand motive that should persuade us to this Christian walk: though a Christian walk cannot justify us before God, that was never appointed as the design of it; for our justification is founded only upon the perfect righteousness of God's beloved Son; and to put our imperfect holiness, wrought in us or by us, in the room thereof, is to rob Christ of his title, as the Lord our righteousness: but though, I say, a Christian walk cannot justify us before God, yet it glorifies God before the world. And here the glory of all the three persons of the glorious Trinity; the glory of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, require this Christian walk.

(1.) The glory of God the Father calls for it, particularly from the hand of believers. Why? because they are chosen for this purpose; he chooseth you that you should be holy, Eph. i. 4.; and, he chooseth to salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit, 2 Thes. ii. 13. Believers are ordained for this end: We are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, Eph. ii. 10.—They are called for this end by the Father; 1 Pet. i. 15. As he that hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation.—They are corrected by him for this end, that they may be brought to a Christian walk, a holy walk; This is all the fruit to take away their sin, and to make them partakers of his holiness, Isa. xxvii. 9. Heb. xii. 10. This is a sweet fruit, that grows upon the sour tree of affliction; we are threshed, that our husks may fly off: tried in the furnace, that the dross of our lusts may be consumed. Many times the saints get such deep spots in their consciences, and stains in their garments, that so nothing but the water of the blood of Christ will wash away; as nothing but the salt and vinegar of affliction will rub out. God would rather see his people in a suffering state, than in a sinful state: he had rather hear them cry, than see them filthy; and better, a thousand times better to be preserved in brine, than to rote in honey.—Thus I say, God chooses them, calls them, corrects them for this end, that he may sanctify them, and bring them to this Christian walk, that by it they may glorify their Father that is in heaven: Herein is my Father glorified, says Christ, that ye bear much fruit.—We glorify his holiness, when we are holy, as he is holy.—We glorify his mercy, when we are merciful, as our heavenly Father is merciful.—We glorify his righteousness, when we are righteous as he is righteous.—We glorify his perfection, by studying to be perfect, as our heavenly Father is perfect, Mat. v. 48.—By this walk we glorify his sovereign will and authority: for, this is the will of God, even our sanctification, 1 Thes. iv. 3, and put honour upon his law, by yielding obedience to, and walking in his commandments.—By this walk we glorify his love and good-will to us in Christ, while we walk in love; and are followers of God, as dear children, Eph. v. 12, and serve him from a sense of his love.—By this walk we glorify his faithfulness and power; in that this walking in Christ imports, as a special ingredient of it, the faith of his promise, and dependence on him for all necessary supplies of grace; and hence this walk is called a living by faith, Rom. i. 17. By faith, believing that God is faithful, and will accomplish; powerful, and can accomplish all his promises: Faithful is he that hath promised, who also will do it.

Now, an unchristian walk dishonours God in all these respects; and should not the people of

of God have a regard to the glory of God? ſhould not all the children of God particularly have a regard to their Father's honour? All grace begins with God the Father; he is the firſt, in order of being; and the firſt, in order of working: and it is the Father that flows out to us, in Chriſt, by the Spirit. Whatſoever good Chriſt hath done for us, or in us; it is done with reſpect to the Father's love and grant; and Chriſt, as Mediator, is the Father's ſervant, his elect, and choſen, Iſa. xlii. 2. And it is the Father that hath given him power over all fleſh, that he might give eternal life, to as many as the Father hath given him, John xvii. 2. In the Father's acts of kindneſs, we have the freeſt and pureſt apprehenſions of love: it was the Father that began the buſineſs, and ſent his Son into the world, to accompliſh the work of redemption: the Son, as Mediator, can have an higher motive, than his own love, to wit, his Father's will; but the Father can have no higher motive than his own love. The love of the Father is antecedent to the merit of Chriſt, and to the operation of the Spirit. O then, what ground to glorify the Father as the original author of all holineſs and happineſs, and that by our walking in Chriſt! Again,

(2.) The glory of God the Son calls for this Chriſtian walk: as thereby we are to honour the Father, that his choſen be not diſparaged; ſo to honour the Son, that his members be not deformed: head and members ſhould be proportionate to one another. It were monſtrous that Chriſt ſhould have ſuch a ſtrange body, as Nebuchadnezzar's image, which he ſaw in his dream; the head of gold, the breaſt and arms of ſilver, the thighs of braſs, and the feet of iron and clay, Dan. ii. 32.: even ſo, it is not for Chriſt's honour, to be head of a monſtrous body. So much as we retain of ſin, ſo much do we diſhonour Chriſt. Chriſt came for this very end, to make his people holy. He came to repair the ruins of the fall: now, by the fall, we loſt not only God's favour, but God's image alſo: therefore, that the plaiſter might be as broad as the ſore; he died, not only to reconcile us, but to ſanctify us; That he might ſanctify us by his own blood, he ſuffered without the gate, Heb. xiii. 12. His blood is not only a price to redeem us, but a laver to cleanſe us. Now, by this Chriſtian walk, Chriſt gets the glory of his mediatorial offices. — We glorify his prophetical office, by hearing his voice, receiving his inſtruction, and learning the law from his mouth. — We glorify his prieſtly office, by coming to God through him, ſeeking acceptance only in him. — We glorify his kingly office, by giving up our luſts into his hand, to be ſlain by him; and by an intire and voluntary ſubjection of our ſouls to his government; ſo as not to be without law to God, but under the law to Chriſt. — By this Chriſtian walk, he gets the glory of his death and paſſive obedience; while we live to him that died for us: the glory of his doing, or active obedience; while we make honourable mention thereof, in all our courſe of holineſs, ſaying, I will go in the ſtrength of the Lord, making mention of his righteouſneſs, even of his only, Pſal. lxxi. 16. — By this he gets the glory of his work in us, as well as for us: while we work out our ſalvation, in the faith of his working in us, both to will and to do of his good pleaſure. — By this walk Chriſt gets the glory of his purchaſe; having purchaſed a peculiar people, zealous of good works: and having purchaſed grace and glory to that people, ſurely he is glorified then, when theſe graces ſhine in the practice of holineſs. — By this walk he gets the glory of his covenant and example; ſeeing it is by the grace treaſured up in theſe promiſes, that this walk is begun, carried on, and perfected: therefore, Having theſe promiſes, dearly beloved, let us cleanſe ourſelves from all filthineſs of the fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſs in the fear of God, 2 Cor. vii. 1.; and ſeeing from theſe promiſes believers bring all their comfort under difficulties; Though my houſe be not ſo with God, yet he hath made with me an everlaſting covenant, ordered in all things and ſure: for this is all my ſalvation, and all my deſire, although he make it not to grow, 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. By this walk Chriſt gets the glory of his way of walking in the world; in that it is a walk after Chriſt, as the moſt perfect example of holineſs; in doing and ſuffering, according to the will of God: hence they that walk in Chriſt, are ſaid to walk as he himſelf walked, and to be followers of the Lamb whitherſoever he goes. In a word, by this walk Chriſt gets the glory of his grace and free favour; for, as this walk is a fruit and effect of his grace; ſo it hath a natural, as well as inſtituted tendency, to advance the praiſe of his glorious grace; and all the believer's walk ſhould be directed to this end. Here is a ſtrong motive, it is a walk neceſſary to the glory of Chriſt.

(3.) The glory of God the Holy Ghoſt calls for this walk; for the Father and the Son have committed the ſaints, to the Spirit's charge to this very end and purpoſe, that they might be ſanctified and made holy. Sanctification of heart and life, is made the Spirit's perſonal operation; Becauſe God hath from the beginning choſen you to ſalvation, through ſanctification of the Spirit, and belief of the truth, 2 Theſſ. ii. 13. This holy walk doth belong, according to the œconomy of grace, to the Father, to purpoſe it; to the Son, to purchaſe it; to the Spirit, to work it: and it is not to the Spirit's honour that God's nurſery and plantation, committed to his charge, ſhould not thrive and proſper: it is not for the Spirit's honour, to dwell in defiled temples: it is not to the Spirit's honour, that any, committed by the Father and the Son to his charge, ſhould miſcarry or fall away, either totally, from all grace; or finally, for all time: nay, this, or any thing that looks like it, is ſo far from being to his honour, that it is to his greateſt diſhonour: yea, it is a great grief to the Spirit, when the work of grace doth not go on and proſper in the ſoul; for, it is he that worketh us to this very thing; and therefore is called the Spirit of holineſs. — The Father hath left the Son in charge to be the Captain of our ſalvation, to bring many children to glory: the Son hath left the Spirit in charge, with all his Father's children, to guide them by his counſel, and bring them to his glory: Father, Son, and Spirit are one, and agree in one, for our ſanctification. Chriſt ſends the Comforter for this end, to lead his people in all truth, John xiv. 16. And how is the Spirit glorified in his graces, glorified in his comforts; glorified in his influences, glorified in his operations, while we give evidence, by our walk, that he is perfecting his own work, and ripening our ſouls for heaven! Whereupon this walk in Chriſt, is alſo called a walking in the Spirit. — Now, believer, what think ye, or what ſhall you and I think of this great motive, motive to this Christian walk, the glory of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost? Surely, when we speak to believers, we cannot be supposed to speak to such, as have no regard to the glory of God, the praise of Christ, or the honour of the Holy Ghost: why then, I think it may melt our hearts, for our unchristian walk hitherto, and move our souls to a more Christian walk hereafter; that by the glory of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, we stand obliged to this Christian walk: As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him.

2dly, The advantage of man is another motive, that may be branched out into many particulars; whether we consider the necessity of this Christian walk, with respect to our own advantage, or the advantage of others.

(1.) It is necessary in respect of ourselves, and the advantage that accrues to the children of God, by this Christian walk, in these particulars.

1. Advantage of this Christian walk is, that it is the porch of communion with God: none but those that walk in Christ, have fellowship with the Father, and with the Son. While a man is profane and unsanctified, what communion can there be between light and darkness? God is light in the abstract, and an impure sinner is darkness in the abstract. As a man cannot have communion with beasts, because they live not the same life; so, a natural man cannot have communion with God, because he lives not the same life; nay, he is alienated from the life of God: but when a man walks in Christ, then he walks with God; and when you walk in Christ, God walks in you. Ye are the temple of the living God: as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them: I will be their God, and they shall be my people, 2 Cor. vi. 16.

2. Advantage of this Christian walk is, that it exalts a man above his neighbours; lifts him up above the sphere of other men: The righteous is more excellent than his neighbour. A gracious poor man is far more excellent than a graceless great man, notwithstanding all his titles of honour. The saints are God's jewels; the rest of the world are but lumber, with all their land and lordships.

3. Advantage of this Christian walk is, that it turns moral virtues into graces. Some persons are naturally more meek, and sober, and patient than others: and some natural men are morally just and righteous, in their dealing and conversation in the world; honest dealers, good pay-masters, make their word their deed: all this, a man may be, and do, and yet perish for ever. But whenever grace, and a Christian walk enters, and sanctification in the power of it, then the principle of grace turns these moral virtues into graces: his natural and moral actions are now performed from inward and renewed principles; he now acts FROM God, and FOR God in all that he doth; whether he eats or drinks, or buys or sells. As carnal hearts are always carnal, even in spiritual performances; for the streams never run higher than the head; so, on the contrary, gracious hearts are spiritual, even in natural and moral actions; for, they that are in Christ are new creatures; acting from new principles.

4. Advantage of this Christian walk is, that it is the matter of our joy. There is the joy and peace of our justification, that is founded upon the righteousness of Christ's merit for us: this is the greatest ground of the believer's joy. But next in virtue to that, there is the joy and peace of sanctification, flowing from the righteousness of Christ's Spirit in us; of which the apostle speaks, when he says: This is our rejoicing, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world: and the psalmist, when he says; Great peace have they that love thy law, Psal. cxix. 165. Whereas, there is no peace to the wicked: and therefore Christ's coming at death and judgment, will be terrible to them, both because they are destitute of the righteousness of justification and sanctification; for it is only the pure in heart that shall see God. At death and judgment, a dram of saving grace will be more valuable, more comfortable, than mountains of gold, and millions of worlds. Oh! the midnight cry at death and judgment, saying, Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him! How terrible will it be to the foolish virgins, that have no oil in their lamps, nor grace in their hearts! Alas! how dolefully will you cry in that day, man! How dreadfully will you shriek! But Christ will not hear you; yea, he will shut the door against you, Mat. xxv. 10. Then knock never so hard, cry never so loud, the door is shut; there is no hope of entrance.

5. Advantage of this Christian walk is, that it is an evidence of a gracious state, for the confirmation of our faith: hence Abraham shewed his faith by his works; whereby it was justified from the calumny of a false faith, James ii. 21,—23. And this, indeed, contributes to make this holy walk a comfortable thing; because it is the fruit, effect, and evidence of justification; though it be no ground or foundation thereof, yet it is an evidence of it, and of a gracious state: How shall a man evidence that he hath received Christ Jesus the Lord, but by walking in him?

6. Advantage of this Christian walk is, that it is a walking toward heaven; heaven is at the end of the walk: hence it is said, Without holiness no man shall see the Lord, Heb. xii. 14. And no unclean thing shall enter into heaven, Rev. xxi. 27. Without are dogs and swine, but within are the pure and holy. Believe it, man, without holiness on earth, there is no happiness in heaven. This Christian walk is the very beginning of heaven, where the saints walk with him in white: this holy walk is a great part of heaven and salvation itself; hence in that golden chain, Rom. viii. 30. Whom he called, them he justified; whom he justified, them he glorified; no mention is made of sanctification; to show that sanctity and holiness is heaven and glory begun: it is not only the way to heaven, but it is heaven itself. The more we walk in Christ, the more do we live the life of God, and anticipate the life of heaven; that glorious life, which the angels of God, and the blessed spirits of just men made perfect, live there. This Christian walk makes a man meet for the inheritance of the saints in light. What would a carnal heart do with heaven, that knows no other heaven but to eat, drink, and wallow in sensual delights? So the glutton at a feast cried, There is no heaven like this: We must not look for a Turkish paradise in heaven; but for a pure sinless state: perfection of grace, and fulness of joy, in the presence of God's glory, is the saints heaven. An unsanctified man cannot truly truly desire heaven; he may desire it as a privation of suffering and misery, but not as it is a perfection of grace, a privation of all sin, and perfection of holiness: when a man begins to be holy, then he begins to enter into the white cloud of glory.——O then, seeing every one would be happy, and would be with Christ for ever, who would not desire to be holy and to walk in him? A graceless man is very miserable in both worlds; he misses heaven in this world, and loses heaven in the world to come; nay, he has a hell of sin here, and a hell of suffering hereafter: fire and brimstone is his portion. But the gracious man is the happy man: indeed he hath heaven begun here, and heaven perfected hereafter. Here then are some of the advantages of this Christian walk to the children of God.

In a word, this Christian walk is the way, to bring down the blessing of God, on every work of your hand; Psal. i. 4. Whatsoever he doth shall prosper. Whereas, to walk in the way of swearing, drunkenness, whoredom, Sabbath-breaking, cursing, lying, cheating, is the direct way to bring down the curse of God, upon all the works of your hand.

Now, I think the consideration of these advantages, should move us to this walk; while the disadvantages of the contrary walk must be as grievous, as the advantages of this are precious. And though, when we speak to them that are in Christ, we cannot denounce against them the curse of the covenant of works, which they are altogether freed from; yet, if they be untender in their walk, there are many other things, besides the curse, which belong only to, and lie heavy upon Christless sinners, that may be the believer's motive.——Is it nothing to you, believer, that your heavenly Father should chastise you, hide his face from you, deny an answer to your prayers, conceal your evidences of heaven from you, give you up to the tyranny of your lusts, and then take vengeance on your inventions? Yea, he will thus visit your iniquities with rods, if you walk not in Christ, and in his way, though his loving-kindness he will not take away, nor suffer his covenant to fail.——Thus much for the advantages of it with respect to ourselves.

(2.) The necessity of this Christian walk, with respect to others; and the advantage of this walk with respect to our neighbour, both godly and wicked, and all in general.

1. Our Christian walk would be for advantage to the wicked; for it may tend for their conviction and conversion. On the one hand, this walk may tend to their conviction, and to stop their mouths; 1 Pet. ii. 15. This is the will of God, that by well-doing, ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men. See also, chap iii. 16. Having a good conscience, that whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil-doers, they may be ashamed that falsly accuse your good conversation in Christ.—On the other hand, your walk may tend to their conversion; 1 Pet. ii. 12. Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles; that whereas they speak against you as evil-doers, they may, by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation. The holiness of professors hath sometimes tended to the conversion of the profane, who, in the day of their gracious visitation, have glorified God on that account. See also, 1 Pet. iii. 1, 2. How advantageous and profitable such a walk may be, the apostle tells us, Tit. iii. 8. This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God, might be careful to maintain good works: these things are good and profitable unto men.

2. Our Christian walk may be for advantage to the godly, who are thereby excited and encouraged to be the more holy, by the strict conversation, which they behold in others; and to say with those, Zech. viii. 23. We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you. Whereas, an untender walk doth grieve and stumble them; but a Christian walk will rejoice the hearts and strengthen the hands, both of godly people, and godly ministers; I have no greater joy, says the beloved disciple, than to hear that my children walk in truth, 3 John ver. 4.

3. Our Christian walk may be of advantage to all in general, that are round about us; yea, to the whole generation we live among: for, in this way we would become a public good, a common good; not only in communicating good to them, but in diverting judgments from them, among whom we converse; so ten righteous men would have preserved Sodom: and surely, if the Lord had not left us a remnant, in this generation, we had been like Sodom and Gomorrah, in respect of judgments, as we are in respect of sins; for the most part of the generation are declaring their sin as Sodom.—Thus the advantage of man, is a great motive to this Christian walk.

3*dly*, The credit of the gospel is another great motive, to this Christian walk; by this we are called to adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour, in all things, Tit. ii. 10. By this walk we adorn the gospel of Christ. As the glory of God, the advantage of man, so the credit of the gospel obliges unto this walk. The gospel is honoured thereby in many respects.

1. Gospel doctrine is honoured by this walk, while thereby we are taught, in an efficacious manner; The grace of God, that bringeth salvation, which teaches us to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in a present world, Tit. ii. 11, 12. Every doctrine of the gospel teaches this holy walk.—The doctrine of election, 2 Thess. ii. 13.—The doctrine of redemption, Eph. v. 25, 26, 27.—The doctrine of vocation, 1 Thess. iv. 7.—The doctrine of justification, which is to take away the guilt of sin, Rom. iii. 25—The doctrine of sanctification, which is to take away the power and filth of sin, 1 Cor. vi. 11.—The doctrine of glorification, which takes away the very being of sin, and admits of no sin at all.——Every doctrine of the gospel tends to the advancement of this holy, Christian walk. And,

2. Gospel promises are honoured thereby, in that this walk is excited powerfully thereby; 2 Cor. vii. 1. Having these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. The promises are the cords of love, whereby we are sweetly bound to the service of God, and the acceptable performance of religious duties.

3. Gospel rules are honoured by this walk, which is the law of God, as a rule of holiness and righteousness, and as disburdened of the covenant of works, in his fœderal requisition of the condition of life from us; for, we are no more commanded to DO that we may LIVE, while we walk in Christ: we live, that we may walk in Christ; and do not walk, that we may live.

live. The law here is also disburdened of its terrible curse, and of its irritating power; and therefore may well be called a law of liberty; to the man in Christ; an easy yoke; and commandments that are not grievous. James i. 25. Mat. xi. 30. 1 John v. 3.

4. Gospel examples and patterns are honoured by this walk, it being a walk according to these examples; it being a walking after the example of Christ. A gospel walk is a walking after God Jehovah, as our Father; and after Christ, as our leader; and after the Spirit, as our guide; and after the example of the saints, as they were followers of Christ: we are to follow them who, through faith and patience, do inherit the promises; and to follow the footsteps of the flock.

5. Gospel ordinances are honoured by this walk, while we are careful and conscientious, in our attendance upon these, with an eye to the God of ordinances, for his blessing upon them, whether public or private; particularly upon the hearing of the joyful sound, the gospel message; and regular participation of the gospel sacraments.

6. Gospel privileges are honoured by this walk; and particularly, all the privileges that go along with the gospel state, while we walk worthy of, and suitable to these privileges, and that state.—Are you believers in a gospel state, being effectually called? Why then, you are to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith you are called.—Are you in a justified state? then you are to evidence your justification, by your sanctification.—Are you in a sanctified state? wherefore got you a new nature, but to walk before God in newness of life?—Are you in an adopted state? then it is suitable to that state, that you be followers of God as dear children.——O Sirs, if we be believers, is it not a shame for us, to live so unsuitable to our state? Is this all the thanks we give to God, for these privileges, that we trample his statutes under our feet, dishonour his name, break his law, and grieve his Spirit? Oh! shall we render acts of enmity for all his acts of love towards us! Fy for shame! Tell it not in Gath.——Have we the hope of glory, and shall we not, having this hope, purify ourselves, even as he is pure? Are we separate from the world? and shall we walk in the broad way with the rest? Hath God pitied us? and shall we not study to please him? Hath he washed us in the blood of his Son? and shall we wallow in the mire of our lusts? or rather, shall we not study to let it be known to the world, that his blood hath a virtue to sanctify us? Well, brethren, if we do not walk in Christ, we do discredit the gospel doctrine, gospel promises, gospel rules, gospel examples, gospel ordinances, and gospel privileges, and counteract the design of a gospel state.——These are the motives to this gospel walk.

The fourth and and last thing upon this second branch of the exhortation was, the directive part of it, namely, to give some directions, in order to our walking with Christ. In general, I hope I need not tell you, that you must be in a gospel state, otherwise you cannot have a gospel walk: we must first be married to Christ, before we can bring forth fruit unto God, Rom. vii. 4. We must first be in Christ, the true vine, before we can bear good fruit, John xv. 5. And therefore, let this be your principal study, to be sure that the state be changed, and that you receive Christ Jesus the Lord, otherwise you cannot walk in him. All other directions will be in vain without this. And now, as we go along, lift up a prayer with your heart, that the Lord may bless the following advices and directions, wherewith I design to put a period to this subject.

[1.] Direction in order to your walking in Christ, is to beware of all impediments that hinder this walk. And I will mention you a few of these hinderances of the Christian walk; both that you may beware of them, and seek to be rid of them.

1. Darkness hinders walking. A man that wants light, and is in the dark, cannot walk comfortably: even so, the darkness of ignorance hinders this Christian walk; They that walk in the night stumble. O pray, that God may take away your gross darkness. It is midnight with many, in respect of black and dark ignorance: and therefore, no wonder that they stumble and fall; some into one open wickedness, and some into another.

2. Heedlessness hinders walking. When a man doth not take heed to the way, but is gazing about him, he is ready either to dash his foot against a stone, and so to fall and break his bones; or else he is ready to wander out of the way, while he doth not notice the road: even so, spiritual heedlessness and unwatchfulness, is the cause of many wandering steps out of God's way: Watch therefore and pray, saith Christ, that ye enter not into temptation.

3. Weakness hinders walking. If a man be sick and weakly, he is hardly able to walk abroad: even so, as there is a bodily weakness, so there is soul weakness. As all by nature are without strength; even so, those that are sometime strengthened by grace, may turn weak and powerless: while corruption is strong, grace is weak, faith is weak. Seek to have this impediment removed, by being strong in the Lord, saying, I will go in the strength of the Lord, making mention of his righteousness, even of his only.

4. Fetters hinder walking. If you bind a man, he will walk at leisure. Many are bound with the strongest fetters; even believers may be under the conduct and influence of some secret lusts, and these are so binding, that they are like fetters: they have the binding power of a law; and hence are called, the law of the members, warring against the law of the mind, Rom. vii. 23. And again, I find a law, that when I would do good, evil is present with me. Seek therefore, that the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, may make you free from the law of sin and death. Seek to be free of your fetters, to be loosed of your bands: Surely, I am thy servant, thou hast loosed my bonds.

5. Weights hinder walking. If a man hath a clog at his heels, a heavy weight on his back, he will not walk hard. There is a twofold weight that hinders the Christian walk much: the weight of worldly incumberances; the cares of the world are a dead weight, that keep many from walking. O Sirs, cast off that weight. There is also the weight of predominant sin: whatever be the weight, we are to lay it aside; that we may be in case to walk, yea, and to run in God's way; Let us lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth more easily beset us; and run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of faith, Heb. xii. 1.

6. Diversions hinder walking. There is some company, company, if a man meet with, in his way wherein he walketh, they will mightily hinder and retard him in his journey; ſo it is with the carnal company of the men of this world. They will not walk faſt in God's way, but make many a ſtop, who haunt the company of graceleſs and profane perſons, that mock at religion, idle away their time, and neglect their ſouls.

7. Diſcord hinders walking. If men fall out by the way; if, inſtead of walking together with concord, they fall by the ears, this will hinder and marr their walking; yea, perhaps, they may diſable one another, that they can walk no more, but muſt ly by the way: ſo here, diſcord and contention hindereth the ſpiritual walking. They that live in the fire of ſtrife, have little of the life of religion: they that are fighting in the way, are not walking in it: they that are occupied in ſlandering, backbiting, reproaching their neighbours; and eſpecially that fall out with the godly, and cannot live at peace with them, or in love to them, their walking is marred: therefore, beware of diſcord; where there is much diviſion, there is little devotion.

8. Doubting and diſcouragement hinder walking. If a man doubt about the road wherein he walketh; if he doubt that it is not the way, that will carry him to his deſired journey's end, or to the place he hath in view, then he is diſcouraged, and hath little heart to walk therein: even ſo, doubting, inſtead of believing, marrs our ſpiritual walk, and fills the ſoul with diſcouragement. David reaſons himſelf out of his diſcouragement, ſaying, Why art thou caſt down, O my ſoul? and why art thou diſquieted within me? hope thou in God, for I ſhall yet praiſe him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God, Pſal. xlii. 11. Many reaſon themſelves out of their faith, inſtead of reaſoning themſelves into faith. Doubting is no duty; nay, it is a ſin that hinders our walk: diſcouragement is no duty; no, no: the joy of the Lord ſhould be our ſtrength.

9. Intemperance hinders walking. If a man intoxicate himſelf with drink, and overcharge his belly with meat, he is more fit for loitering and ſnorting in a bed, than walking on the road; it impedes his walking: hence we will ſee ſome beaſtly drunken perſons attempt to walk in the ſtreet; but inſtead of walking, we will ſee them ſtaggering from ſide to ſide, or tumbling down, and expoſing themſelves to open infamy. Well, this intemperance is ſuch a hinderance to all ſpiritual walking, that if a man be ſtuffed with meat and drink, and immoderate cares, he is altogether unfit for ſpiritual work and worſhip: therefore Chriſt warns his diſciples, even them, to beware of it; Take heed to yourſelves, leſt at any time your hearts be overcharged with ſurfeiting, and drunkenneſs, and cares of this life, and that day come upon you unawares. —Watch therefore, and pray always, Luke xxi. 34, 35. Let habitual drunkards and tipplers conſider whither they are walking; for ſurely they are not walking in Chriſt, but in the broad way that leadeth to deſtruction. Let thoſe, that cannot make a bargain, without drinking to exceſs, as many uſe to do at your public markets, conſider this.

10. Slothfulneſs and lazineſs hinder walking. When people ſhut themſelves up in a cloſe chamber, as it were, to ſleep and ſlumber, ſurely their walking is marred: even ſo, nothing hinders this Chriſtian walk more, than ſpiritual ſloth and ſecurity.——I will tell you two chambers wherein eſpecially, the ſlothful, lazy, and ſecure ſinner ſhuts up himſelf to ſleep into. There is the chamber of lies, and the chamber of eaſe.

(1.) The chamber of lies, or, as the prophet Iſaiah calls it, the refuge of lies, chap. xxviii. 15. They have made lies their refuge, and under falſhood have they hid themſelves. Whether it be the lying refuge of their legal righteouſneſs, their phariſaic profeſſion, their cradle faith, their falſe hope, partial repentance, legal convictions, their carnal dreams and deluſions; if they ſleep on there, God's curſe will hale them out of that chamber; for, the hail ſhall ſweep away the refuge of lies. Some are brought out in mercy, but moſt part are dragged out in wrath.

(2.) The chamber of eaſe; Moab hath been at eaſe from his youth, Jer. xlviii. 11.: never truly awakened, never duly concerned about their ſoul and their eternal ſtate, nor concerned about the affairs of Chriſt's houſe; notwithſtanding of all the trouble of Zion, or dangerous circumſtances that the church of Chriſt is into: there is a wo upon the bed, and a wo upon the covering of thoſe that are lying at eaſe; Wo to them that are at eaſe in Zion, Amos vi. 1. Now, that partial ſecurity may overtake believers themſelves, is too evident, not only from common experience, but alſo from the parable of the virgins; where it is ſaid, both of the wiſe and fooliſh, that, while the Bridegroom tarried, they all ſlumbered and ſlept: but ſlothfulneſs and walking are inconſiſtent. Seek therefore, that God would deliver from ſloth and ſecurity: The ſlothful man ſaith, there is a lion in the way; he will not walk forward.——Theſe are ſome hinderances of walking: ſeek to be free of theſe, and beware of them, if you would walk in Chriſt.

[2.] Direction, in order to this walk is this, O endeavour, through grace, that every action may be a ſtepping in this way; then would we walk in Chriſt to purpoſe, if we could learn to make every action of our life, a ſtep of our walk in this way. It is poſſible to a child of God, through grace, that any action of his life may be a part of his Chriſtian walk: e. g. even in his natural actions, of eating and drinking; when, whether he eats or drinks, or whatſoever he doth, he doth all to the glory of God in Chriſt; then he is walking in Chriſt, even when he is eating and drinking. But I inſtance eſpecially in our religious, and in our civil actions.

1° Let all your religious actions be a part of your walking in Chriſt; for this walk extends to all religious duties. When a man is reading the word, with the Spirit and underſtanding, then he is walking in Chriſt. When he is hearing the word, with faith, he is walking in Chriſt. When he is praying in the Holy Ghoſt, in the Spirit of Chriſt, then he is walking in Chriſt. When he is ſinging and praiſing, with grace in his heart, he is walking in Chriſt. When he is communicating worthily, then he is walking in Chriſt; for then he is eating the fleſh, and drinking the blood of the Son of God.—And ſince I have mentioned this, I ſhall take liberty to ſay, that I underſtand there are ſeveral obliged to be hearers in this place to-day, who may ſee it incumbent upon them, to be communicants elſewhere the next Lord's day; and therefore, though I drop a word ſuitable to them, I think it cannot be reckoned amiſs; and though there is no direction I am offering, but they they may find abundantly ſuitable to their caſe, yet I would here ſay, that this Chriſtian walk is ſo extenſive, that it comprehends all the duties, both before, in, and after communicating; and right partaking of the Lord's ſupper, is a ſpecial part of this walking in Chriſt. As a man may be ſtanding in the church, and yet walking in Chriſt, if ſpiritually exerciſed; and as a man may be lying in a priſon, and yet walking in Chriſt, as Paul and Silas was, in the ſtocks: ſo, much more, may a man be ſitting at a communion-table, and yet walking in Chriſt; for walking in Chriſt doth not ly in bodily exerciſe, but in ſoul exerciſe; as in the exerciſe of faith, the exerciſe of love, the exerciſe of repentance, and godly ſorrow for ſin, the exerciſe of joy in the Lord: when a man is in that exerciſe, under the conduct of the Spirit of Chriſt, then he is walking in Chriſt.

What is the duty then before communicating? It is to walk in Chriſt. What is the duty in communicating? It is to walk in Chriſt. What is the duty after communicating? It is to walk in Chriſt.

There are two words I have to tell thoſe, and take the liberty to offer them. The firſt is, that none can communicate worthily, that are not in Chriſt, by having received Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, that are not believers. The ſecond is, that people may be believers, that have received Chriſt, and yet communicate unworthily, if they be not walking in him.

(1.) I ſay, that none can communicate worthily, that are not in Chriſt, by receiving of him. It is the childrens bread, and is not deſigned for the converſion of ſinners, but for the confirmation of ſaints. Why? may not, and have not ſome been converted at ſacraments? It may be ſo; but yet this ſacrament is not in itſelf deſignedly inſtitute, for the converſion of ſinners: ſome have, indeed, been converted at communion ſermons; but I have not heard of any Chriſtleſs ſinner converted at a communion-table, where he himſelf was partaking. It may be, there have been inſtances of this, that I have not heard; but yet that doth not falſify what I aſſert, that it is not a converting ordinance: muſt we run a man through with a ſword to ſave his life, becauſe one did ſo once, and let out a ſecret impoſthume? Becauſe ſome miniſter hath been converted at his ordination, is therefore the laying on of hands inſtitute as a converting ordinance? No; by no means. Becauſe a man hath been converted at his marriage, when the ſermon and bleſſing hath wrought upon him, is therefore marriage a converting ordinance? No; not at all. Let this then be remembered, that none can communicate worthily, that are not in Chriſt, by receiving him.

(2.) That people may be believers, that have received Chriſt, and yet communicate unworthily, if they be not walking in Chriſt. Let communicants then endeavour, through grace, to prepare and examine themſelves; Let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat. Why, a man may examine himſelf, and find himſelf both out of Chriſt, and out of a courſe of walking in him: ſhall he eat in any caſe upon examination? No, no; the meaning is, let him examine whether he be in Chriſt, yea, or not; and ſee if he can prove his being in Chriſt, by his walking in him. As a man that tries gold with a touch-ſtone, will not take it becauſe he tried it, but becauſe he found it true gold: and as a man will not go abroad, becauſe he hath beheld himſelf in a looking-glaſs, for he may find deformity and filthineſs; but becauſe he hath corrected what was amiſs, and compoſed his dreſs by looking at himſelf: and ſo unleſs we will prevaricate with the ſcripture, the Holy Ghoſt means, by that word, a fitneſs and preparation found; and yet thoſe that prepare for that ordinance, muſt never expect ſuch a preparation, as will not ſtand in need of Chriſt: nay, Chriſt himſelf muſt be the great preparation; for this ordinance hath a ſpecial relation to Chriſt: and it is by walking in him, that we have communion with him in that ordinance.

QUEST. How ſhall I attain this privilege to walk in Chriſt?

ANSW. How doth a man come to walk in his cloaths? Is it not even by putting them on? So, if you would walk in Chriſt, you muſt put on Chriſt; Rom. xiii. 14. Put on Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, and make no proviſion for the fleſh to fulfil the luſts thereof. Put off your filthy garments, Eph. iv. 22. put on Chriſt. It is true, many put on Chriſt, as a man puts on his ſhoe, to trample upon him. Some put on Chriſt as a man doth his hat, which he lifts to every paſſenger; they will compliment every company with their religion, and put on or put off their profeſſion of Chriſt, according as the company goes. Some put him on, as people will put on a fine glaring embroidery upon their cloaths, for ornament, and not for uſe. But they that truly put on Chriſt, as they put him on, never to put him off again; ſo they put on Chriſt as a robe; particularly the robe of his righteouſneſs, for their juſtification; and the robe of his grace, for their ſanctification: that is, they take him in his merit, to juſtify them; and in his Spirit, to ſanctify them: and as a man walks in his robes that he hath put on, ſo they that go to a communion-table in this robe, they go walking in Chriſt; and ſo they have the wedding-garment, and ſhall have the Bridegroom's favour. Here is the robe we ought all to walk in: it is heaven's parliament-robe; and to walk in it, is to wear it; and to wear it, is to walk in it. To have Chriſt, and to uſe him, is the ſum of all true religion.

But to return, I was ſaying, firſt let all your religious actions be a part of your walking in Chriſt, whether it be your reading, hearing, praying, praiſing, communicating, or the like.

2. Let all your civil actions alſo, be a part of your walking in Chriſt. A man may be walking in Chriſt, when he is buying and ſelling, if he be acting ſpiritually, conſciencioufly, and in the name of Chriſt; and acknowledging the Lord in all his ways.——And becauſe of the market you have now in view, I ſhall tell you what are the finful ways that people take, in buying and ſelling, which declare that they are not walking in Chriſt, when about theſe actions.—There is the diſparaging and underrating of what you are to buy; and the raiſing and over-valuing of what you are to ſell; and both without juſt cauſe; ſee Prov. xx. 14. It is nought, it is nought, ſaith the buyer; but when he is gone his way, then he boaſteth.—There is the ſin of abuſing men's ſimplicity and unſkilfulneſs, and uſing falſe weights, balances, and meaſures to deceive; Prov. xi. 1. A falſe balance is an abomination to the Lord.—Again, ſome will, I underſtand, ſet off the goodlieſt face of their wares outmoſt outmoſt to the market, the buyer takes all to be of the ſame ſort, at the word of the ſeller. Thus they are guilty of a double cheat; they cheat their neighbour's eye with their wares, and cheat their mind with their words; and thus both their hands and lips are full of cheating and deceit: but they ſhould know that they cannot cheat God, who ſurely will not let them thrive that way; or if they ſeem to thrive, it is with his curſe upon their gain. God hath ſaid, None that worketh abomination, or maketh a lie, ſhall enter into heaven; but only they that are written in the Lamb's book of life; Rev. xxi. 27. Intimating, that thoſe, among others, who are cheaters and liars, they may well read their names written in the black book of death and damnation: but they cannot read ſuch foul names as theirs, in the fair little white book of life, the Lamb's book of life. O Sirs, there is a way of walking in Chriſt, even in all your natural, religious, and civil actions. The direction then that I was giving is; O endeavour, through grace, that every action of your life, may be a ſtep forward in this way, by doing all in his fear, and through his grace.

[3.] Direction, with which I cloſe, is to endeavour, through grace, to improve all theſe means, and to make conſcience of the diligent uſe of all the means, that tend to advance this Chriſtian walk: and here I mention theſe four means.

1. A punctual and ſerious attendance upon goſpel-ordinances; Prov. viii. 34. Bleſſed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, and waiting at the poſts of my doors.

2. Frequent converſation with goſpel-profeſſors, whoſe walk adorns the ſame: He that walketh with the wiſe, ſhall be wiſe. See Heb. vi. 12. Be not ſlothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience inherit the promiſes.

3. Prayer; Continue in prayer, and watch in the ſame, with thankſgiving, Col. iv. 2. Seek the aſſiſtance of the goſpel-ſpirit, who only can enable you to this walk, Luke xi. 13. Seek him as a Spirit of power to ſtrengthen you; for, it is he that worketh in you, both to will and to do, Phil. ii. 13. Seek him as a Spirit of faith, that by faith in exerciſe you may abide in Chriſt: for, except ye abide in him, ye cannot bring forth fruit, John xv. That by drawing virtue and water out of theſe wells of ſalvation, and fountain of life, and receiving out of his fulneſs grace for grace, ye may live on him, and walk in him. And that, by faith, ye may make uſe of the goſpel-promiſe, and thereby be partakers of the divine nature, 2 Pet. i. 4. And that by this faith ye may fix all your reſolves for duty, in the ſtrength of the Lord God, with a deſign to make honourable mention of the Mediator's righteouſneſs, in every performance, as that alone whereby ye are juſtified in your perſons, and accepted in your performances, Pſal. lxxi. 16, 19, 24.

4. Spiritual meditation; I thought upon my ways, and turned my feet to thy teſtimonies. Meditate on your ways, how ſinful and ungrateful they have been; how unlike unto the ways of the children of God, and thoſe who have received ſo many favours. Again, meditate on the Lord's way, how ſweet, pleaſant, profitable, and honourable it is.——And though, through much tribulation you may enter into the kingdom of heaven, and muſt reſolve upon the croſs; yet amidſt all the croſſes of the way, meditate upon two things in this way you are called to walk in.

(1.) The red carpet that is laid over all the way; that is, the red carpet of the blood of Chriſt: and as the ſaints have always overcome by the blood of the Lamb; ſo by this blood of Chriſt you ſhall overcome all the difficulties in the way, and walk upon the red carpet.

(2.) The white pavement that is below the carpet, all along the way you walk in; and that is the white pavement of love, the love of God in Chriſt. Song iii. 10.; there Solomon's chariot, repreſenting the goſpel covenant, is ſaid to have a covering of purple; there is the red carpet of the blood of Chriſt: and it is ſaid to be paved with love, for the daughters of Jeruſalem; there is the white pavement of divine love. Now, the holy meditation and perſuaſion of God's ſpecial love in Chriſt, to you in particular: his love already manifeſted, in what he hath done for you, and in you: his love to be manifeſted, in what he is to do for you, in conducting you to the actual and full poſſeſſion of the glorious inheritance reſerved in heaven for you; nothing will more engage to a goſpel-walk, than this; the love of Chriſt will conſtrain you, 2 Cor. v. 14, 15. Gal. ii. 20. 1 Pet. i. 3, 4. Pſal. lxxiii. 24, 35, 26.

Neglect not theſe means; and if Satan tempt you, ſaying, What need the uſe of means, ſince God hath promiſed, to cauſe you to walk in his ſtatutes? Anſwer him as Chriſt did, when Satan tempted him, to caſt himſelf down from the pinacle of the temple, by adducing the promiſe that God had given his angels charge over him, to keep him in all his ways: his anſwer to Satan was; It is written, Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God. So when Satan tempts you, to caſt yourſelf from the pinacle of the temple, from temple means and ordinances, let your anſwer then be, Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God. To neglect the means, is to tempt the Lord. Let means be uſed in dependence on the Lord, who only can put a bleſſing in the means: they are like pipes and conduits, which convey nothing, unleſs the fountain let forth of its water; ſo they convey nothing, unleſs the Lord ſend forth a ſtream thereby. Therefore, in the uſe of means, be ſtill looking to the Lord, both for grace to uſe the means, and grace to bleſs the means.

Now, all the ſermons I have preached upon this text, will be ſo many ſtanding witneſſes, againſt all the unbelievers of this congregation, who do not receive Chriſt Jeſus the Lord; and all believers that, having received him, do not walk in him. Be reſtleſs then, till he be received into your hearts and ſouls; and, having received him, ſo walk in him.——May the Lord himſelf put a bleſſing, in all that hath been ſaid from this text. To his name be praiſe.

 It having been agreed upon to range the diſcourſes according to the order of time in which they were delivered: when the preceding one was begun to be printed, there was but a ſmall part of it tranſcribed from the Author's ſhort-hand characters, and therefore the preciſe number of diſcourſes that it conſiſted of could not then be poſitively aſcertained, in regard they were not particularly divided by the Author; though, now upon a view of the whole, from the Author's concluding addreſſes and introductory preambles, with other marks of diſtinction, the ſubject appears, to an attentive reader, to have been diſcuſſed in ten ſermons, and might eaſily have been ſo divided, had it been permitted: but ſhall be ſuſtained as ſo many in the enumeration of them.

SERMON.

SERMON XX.–XXVII.

The HAPPY CONGREGATION; or, the great gathering of the People to SHILOH.*

GEN. xlix. 10.

The ſceptre ſhall not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him ſhall the gathering of the people be.

THE twelve ſons of Jacob were very remarkable in their day: but the twelve tribes of Iſrael, that were deſcended and denominate from them, were yet more remarkable and renowned; for we find their names upon the twelve gates of the new Jeruſalem, Rev. xxi. 12. In the view hereof, their dying father, Jacob, ſays ſome things remarkable concerning each ſon, and his tribe. Holy Jacob, the nearer he was to his death, the nearer to God; his ſoul had not only a kind of divinity, but of divination alſo, whereby he propheſies of what ſhall take place concerning them, and come to paſs in the latter days. From Jacob's couch, and death-bed prophecy, we may learn ſome new leſſons, though it be an old ſtory, and ſpoken more than three thouſand years ago. Many great things are ſaid to and of the ſeveral ſons of Jacob, when now they were gathered together at his bed-ſide: but eſpecially very glorious things are ſpoken of Judah and his tribe; as, 1. That it ſhould be an honourable tribe; ver. 8. Judah, thou art he whom thy brethren ſhall praiſe. 2. That it ſhould be a victorious tribe; Thy hand ſhall be in the neck of thine enemies. 3. That it ſhould be a ſuperior tribe to the reſt; Thy Father's children ſhall bow down before thee. 4. That it ſhould be a powerful and courageous tribe, ver. 9. Judah is a lion's whelp. 5. That it ſhould be a royal tribe, from which the Meſſias the Prince ſhall come, ver. 10. The ſceptre ſhall not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him ſhall the gathering of the people be.

As Abraham ſaw Chriſt's day afar off, ſo did Jacob here: though his bodily eyes were dim, yet ſuch a clear-ſighted ſoul hath he, that he ſees that which the eye of mortality never ſaw, even an object at ſuch a far diſtance, that he ſpake clearly of it more than ſixteen hundred years before the accompliſhment thereof; and while there was nothing but ſhadows that interveened betwixt the prophecy and the event. And, notwithſtanding all the legal interveening ſhadows, and that his ſun was going down in his hemiſphere of nature, his eyes dim through infirmity of age; yet his mind being irradiated by the Spirit of God, he ſees the Sun of righteouſneſs, the Morning-ſtar, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Light of the Gentiles, and the Glory of his people Iſrael. As Moſes, from the mount, beheld the land of Canaan afar off; ſo Jacob from the mount of his divine contemplation, even when his heart and eye-ſtrings are breaking, ſees to the furtheſt end and period of all the prophets.

This text is the more remarkable, that it is the third promiſe of grace and of Chriſt to mankind ſinners after the fall. The firſt promiſe was, Gen. iii. 15. The ſeed of the woman ſhall bruiſe the head of the ſerpent. The ſecond was, Gen. xxii. 18. where God ſays to Abraham, In thy ſeed ſhall all the nations of the earth be bleſſed. But this is the third, both fuller and plainer than the former two; for theſe ſhew that it ſhall be, but this ſhews, when it ſhall be; pointing out the very preciſe period of time when Chriſt ſhall come: So that, if any one demand, When ſhall this Meſſias be revealed? The anſwer is, When the ſceptre is departed from Judah.

This text hath two parts: the firſt pertaining to the Jews, The ſceptre ſhall not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet until Shiloh come; the ſecond pertaining to the Gentiles, To him ſhall the gathering of the people be. He ſhall come to the Jews, and be received by the Gentiles: for Chriſt, the king of the Jews, came to them; He came to his own, and his own received him not. The Gentiles ſhall be ſubject to the King of the Jews, and at laſt the Jews ſhall be ſubject to the King of the Gentiles. The former part of the verſe ſpeaks forth the conviction of the Jews, the latter part the converſion of the Gentiles.

Now, in the firſt part of the words, relating to the Jews, you may notice two things, firſt, a ſign; and, ſecondly, an event. The ſign is, the departing of the ſceptre from Judah, and the government. The event is, the coming of Chriſt the Shiloh.

1. You have the ſign; and this ſign, if it be not doubled, is at leaſt twice mentioned in the text; for the ſame may be underſtood by the ſceptre and the law-giver: where there is a ſceptre, there muſt be a legiſlator. They may be either conſidered to be the ſame, namely, the ſceptre, OR the law-giver; or ſeparately, as ſome read it, the ſceptre OF the law-giver; making the one the principality, and the other the magiſtracy, as it were, at the feet of the former; as Paul at the feet of Gamaliel. Jacob here foreſaw, that the ſceptre and government would come to the tribe of Judah, which was fulfilled in David, on whoſe family the crown was intailed. He foreſaw alſo, that the ſceptre would continue in that tribe, at leaſt a government of their own, till the coming of the Meſſias, in whom, as the King of Zion, and great High-

* This ſubject is the ſubſtance of eight diſcourſes, preached at ſeveral places, on ſacramental occaſions. The firſt three were delivered at the ſacrament of Kinglaſſie, June 5*th*, 6*th*, and 7*th*; and end about the middle of the third general head. The next three were preached at the ſacrament of Airth, June 19*th*, 20*th*, and 21*ſt*; and end with the fifth general head. The laſt two were delivered at the ſacrament of Carnock, July 4*th*, and 5*th*; all in the year 1725. It hath undergone four editions.

prieſt,

prieſt, it was fit that both the prieſthood, and the royalty, ſhould terminate and centre.

I know it is objected here, eſpecially by the Jews, who deny that the Meſſias is come, that in the captivity of Babylon, where was the ſceptre of Judah? And that the Maccabees were of the tribe of Levi; where then was the tribe of Judah? For clearing of this, you are to remember, that when the ſceptre entred upon Judah, it remained there. You may ſee Judg. i. 1, 2. That after the death of Joſhua, the children of Iſrael aſked the Lord, ſaying, Who ſhall go up for us againſt the Canaanites, to fight againſt them? The Lord anſwered, Judah ſhall go up, becauſe I have delivered the land into his hand. But when it is ſaid, The ſceptre ſhall not depart from Judah, it is not meant, the ſceptre ſhall ſtill remain there in the ſame ſplendor and glory: it is not taken away, when it pleaſes God to eclipſe the glory, and obſcure the ſplendor of it, as a puniſhment of their ſins. Now, as until the captivity, all along from David's time, the ſceptre was in Judah; ſo in their captivity they had their princes exiles. You ſee the king of Babylon lifting up the head of Jehoiakim king of Judah, when he was his captive, and advancing him above the other kings that were with him in Babylon, 2 Kings xxv. 27. And after the captivity, their rulers were either by the father or mother's ſide, deſcended from the tribe of Judah. They had ſtill a governor of that tribe, or of the Levites, that adhered to it, which was equivalent, till Judah became a province of the Roman empire, juſt at the time of our Saviour's birth, and was at that time taxed, as one of the provinces of that empire, Luke ii. 1. And though the act of government might, at ſome time or other, ceaſe, yet the right of government was ſtill in Judah; the crown ſtill did belong to Judah, and the principality had its denomination from Judah: and to this day, they have the name of Jews from Judah, and will ever be ſo called; the name ſhall not wear out, till Chriſt's ſecond coming: however, his firſt coming did not take place, till the ſceptre was departed from Judah: and when the government was actually departing, or departed from Judah, that was the time when Chriſt came into the world; for when Herod, a ſtranger, and of another nation, was made king and governor of Judah, and thereby the ſceptre and royal power departed from Judah, our Lord appeared on earth. Therefore, in the narrative of Chriſt's nativity, Mat. ii. 1, 2. it is particularly recorded, that he was born in the days of Herod the king, namely, when this notable prophecy of the patriarch Jacob was fulfilled. The Jews then may hold their peace, and be ſilent, otherwiſe we can condemn them out of their own mouths; for, at the time of Chriſt's death, they expreſly owned, ſaying, We have no king but Cæſar, John xix. 15.; no king but the Roman emperor: and now, the ſceptre, that was removed from Judah before this time by conqueſt, is departed from them by conſent. Now, they ſolemnly own, that the right of government was fallen into the hands of the emperor, and ſo departed from Judah to Cæſar; from Judea to Rome. The ſceptre is here publicly reſigned: We have no king but Cæſar; a plain indication, that the time for the Meſſias to appear, even the ſet time, was now come: for, if the ſceptre was departed from Judah, and the law-giver from between his feet; hence our Lord Jeſus, by their own confeſſion, is he that ſhould come, and we are to look for no other; for he came exactly at the time appointed. Now, from that time, to this very day, they have had no king, no magiſtracy, no governor among themſelves: their tribes are confounded, they are vagabonds in the earth, without any rule or government at all. This ſign of the coming of Shiloh cannot now take place among them: this may confirm our faith of his being come, and condemn their unbelief, who obſtinately deny it, though they cannot but acknowledge, that the ſceptre hath ceaſed from Judah ſeventeen hundred years ago.—So much concerning the ſign.

2. The event is the coming of Shiloh. If the queſtion now be, Where is this Meſſias, in our text? Here it is ſaid, Until Shiloh come. But what is this to the ſign? where is any mention made of the Meſſias? It is univerſally received, that this Shiloh is Chriſt: but the queſtion is, How Shiloh may ſignify and be called Chriſt? The impoſition of the name does agree with the nature of the perſon, and his work; and from diverſe roots proceed diverſe reaſons of this name: as the lines drawn in a circle may be many, yet all agree in one centre; ſo, among all the diverſe opinions about the ſignification of the word Shiloh, yet all agree that it is the Meſſias, who is here meant. I ſhall lay before you ſome of the ſignifications of the word. 1. Some notice, that Shiloh ſignifies peace, proſperity, and happineſs: now, Chriſt is the Prince of peace; he preſerves againſt the gates of hell, ſin, and death: and the pleaſure of the Lord ſhall proſper in his hand; and they only are happy that are found in him. 2. Some make it to ſignify reſt: Chriſt is indeed the true reſting-place for weary ſouls, Mat. xi. 28, 29. Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you reſt. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me,—and ye ſhall find reſt unto your ſouls. 3. Some notice, that Shiloh ſignifies a repoſitum, a thing laid up in a ſtore: and this agrees to him who is the deſire of all nations, kept up in the ſtore-houſe of God, until the fit time in which he might come abroad, and appear: In the fulneſs of time, God ſent forth his Son, made of a woman. And ſo, 4. Some obſerve, that Shiloh ſignifies, Filius ejus, his Son; that is, the ſon of Judah, or the Son of David: but a certain author puts ejus in the feminine gender, HER Son; that is, the Son of the virgin: and ſo, in both theſe ſenſes, Chriſt is the Son of David, the Son of the virgin, the ſeed of the woman. 5. To this purpoſe is the obſervation of theſe that make Shiloh to ſignify the membrane; that is, the ſkin that wraps the infant in the mother's womb: Chriſt, according to the fleſh, was the Son of the womb, even of the virgin's womb. 6. And more eſpecially, Shiloh ſignifies Sent; and Chriſt is indeed the Sent of God, and the beſt preſent that ever God ſent, John iv. 7. A man that was blind was bid go and waſh in Siloam, which is by interpretation Sent, to heal, not bodily diſeaſes only, but ſoul diſeaſes. As God ſaid to Moſes in the mount, Get thee down, and viſit thy brethren, that commit ſin below; ſo God ſaid to Chriſt, Go down, and viſit thy brethren, which are below in ſin, and in the ſhadow of death: how frequently is he therefore called, the Sent of God? Whatever of theſe meanings you put upon the word, they are all ſignificant, and ſhew, that Shiloh agrees to the perſon of Chriſt; and put them all together, they they make his name to be as ointment poured forth, that fills the whole world with a sweet savour. He is the King of Zion, to whom the sceptre belongs; for, the sceptre was not to depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, till Shiloh came.——And thus you have the portion of Judah, or that part of the words that belongs to the Jews.

Now, the second part of the words is what relates to us, To him shall the gathering of the people be. Here is a happy confluence, and concourse of people propheſied of; where you may notice, 1. The place of their reſort, to him. 2. The manner of their reſorting to him, there will be a gathering to him. 3. The perſons reſorting, or the members of the meeting or aſſembly; it is a gathering of the people. 4. The certainty of this event, to him SHALL the gathering of the people be. Notice then, I ſay,

1. The place of their reſort, or to what centre of reſt their motion will tend; even to him; that is, to Shiloh, the promiſed Meſſias; to him, who is the Son of God, the Sent of God; to him, as the only temple, the only ſhelter and Saviour; to him, who is the Lion of the tribe of Judah; to him, on whom the ſceptre is devolved.

2. The manner of their reſorting, To him ſhall the GATHERING be. I find this word in the original Hebrew, to be ſuch as gives occaſion to render it thus, To him ſhall the EXPECTATION of the people be; or thus, To him ſhall the OBEDIENCE of the people be: but our own tranſlation being moſt excellent and agreeable to the original, I ſhall eſpecially hold by it, yet ſo, as not to exclude the other ſignifications; for they agree upon the matter, and declare the manner of this reſort of the people to Chriſt; that it is not a ſimple aſſembling to him, or an outward gathering, like a confuſed multitude, not knowing wherefore they meet together; but that Chriſt ſhall be ſo the deſire of the people, the hope of the people; that it is not only a gathering of bodies, but a gathering of ſouls, and a gathering of hearts unto Shiloh. They ſhall not only lend an outward ear, but an inward heart-obedience; not a gathering of external attendance upon him and his ordinances only, but a gathering alſo of ſpiritual attendance, and dependence on him, complacency in him, and reverence towards him. In a word, this is ſuch a gathering here, as imports all the acts of faith and hope in him, and all the outgoings of the ſoul after him in the exerciſe of grace internally, as well as in the performance of duty externally.

3. You have here the perſons thus reſorting or aſſembling unto Shiloh, namely, the people; To him ſhall the gathering of the PEOPLE be; that is, the Gentiles: for the bleſſed Shiloh was to break down the partition-wall betwixt them and the Jews. The promiſe here reſpects the Gentile nations. It is not a particular ſett of people here intended; it is people in the plural number. All our Latin commentators tranſlate it either aggregatio gentium, or aggregatio populorum; Junius and Tremellius, obedientia populorum *. The coming of Shiloh was to turn the ſingular number to the plural; he was to turn Gens to Gentes, and populus to populi; that is to ſay, (for I deſign not to ſpeak to you in an unknown tongue) he was to turn a nation in particular, to nations in general; and, inſtead of making a feaſt only for one ſort of people, to wit, the Jews, he was to make unto all people a feaſt of fat things, and wines on the lees, well refined, Iſa. xxv. 6.; yea, he was to turn out the Jews, and take in the Gentiles in their room for ſo many hundreds of years. And, alas! they have been turned to the door theſe ſeventeen hundred years bygone, and we need to pray that the time of their rejection may be of no longer continuance; for it will not fare the worſe with us, that they be received in again. Nay, If the caſting away of them, ſays the apoſtle, be the reconciling of the Gentile world, what ſhall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead? Rom. xi. 15. However, at preſent, they that were the only church, are unchurched; they are cut off from Shiloh, and there is a gathering of the people in their room: what people? even the people that were afar off, the Gentiles; for the Jews had been long the people near to him: they were the children of Abraham, and we the ſtones; and glory to him, that out of theſe ſtones can raiſe up children to Abraham. They were the garden of God, when we were a deſolate wilderneſs. The Gentiles were contemned by the Jews: the Levite-prieſt would ſcarce look upon a poor Samaritan, but paſt by on the other ſide. We were the dogs that were without, and looked upon them as a curſed people, as indeed we were: but now, by the gathering of the people to Shiloh, the curſe is turned to a bleſſing: the Gentiles are invited, and the Jews neglected. Where nature made a ſeparation, grace makes a gathering and conjunction; where ſin made a diſjunction, grace makes an aggregation: To him ſhall the aggregation, or gathering, of the people be.

4. You have here the certainty of this event; To him SHALL the gathering of the people be. God revealed this counſel of his to old Jacob; and he by the inſpiration of God, declares it, that it ſhall be. It is very true the ſhall be in the text here is not in the original, but it is very fitly ſupplied by our tranſlators; and the certainty of this event is as ſtrongly aſſerted, when theſe two words are left out, as when they are put in, and in my opinion ſomewhat ſtronger: for, if you read the text without ſupplying of theſe two words, then it runs thus, The ſceptre ſhall not depart from Judah, nor the law-giver from between his feet, till Shiloh come, and THE GATHERING OF THE PEOPLE TO HIM. And this way of reading the text ſays, I think, four things.

(1.) That the gathering of the people to Shiloh, is a certain evidence that the ſceptre is departed from Judah; for the ſceptre was not to depart from them, till Shiloh ſhould come, and gather the people to him. Now, the ſceptre is departed from Judah; therefore Shiloh is come, and the gathering of the people is to him.

(2.) That the coming of Shiloh, and the gathering of the people to him, was of equal certainty by the counſel of heaven: the gathering of the people to Chriſt was as certainly foreſeen, as it was certainly foreſeen that he was to come; and that according to the counſel of God, the gathering of the people hath been and ſhall be to Chriſt, is as ſure and certain, as it is ſure that he is come already; for thus they ſtand connected, namely, the coming of Shiloh, and the gathering of the people to him.

(3.) It ſays, that the coming of Shiloh, and gathering of the people to him, was to take place together; and indeed the gathering of the Gentiles

* That is, the gathering of the nations, the gathering of the people; or the obedience of the people.

Gentiles took its remarkable accompliſhment with his coming. Whenever he was born in Bethlehem, behold there came wiſe men from the eaſt, enquiring after him: we are ſure they were Gentiles, and belonged not to the commonwealth of Iſrael; and the reſpect they paid to Chriſt, the King of the Jews, was a happy preſage of what would follow, when theſe that were afar off ſhould be made nigh by Chriſt. It is true, they were magicians; but ſome take it in a good ſenſe, for the Magi among the Perſians were their philoſophers and their prieſts: but though we take it in the worſt ſenſe, it was an early inſtance of Chriſt's victory over the devil; whatever ſort of wiſe-men they were before, now they begin to be wiſe-men indeed, when they ſet themſelves to enquire after Chriſt. In this there were ſome early trophies erected of Chriſt's victory over Satan's territories, abſtract from the Gentiles that were religious proſelytes of old; herein commenced the gathering of the people to him.

(4.) This reading ſays, that as upon the coming of Shiloh, the gathering of the people ſhould be no more delayed; ſo, upon his coming, their gathering ſhould be no more diſcontinued; but that the gathering of the people ſhould continue and run parallel with the period wherein it can be ſaid that now Shiloh is come. The text ſpeaks of a twofold period: the firſt is the time before Chriſt's coming, wherein it could be ſaid, Shiloh is not come; and, ſo long as that could be ſaid, the ſceptre was to remain with Judah. The ſecond is the time of Chriſt's coming, and after it, wherein it can be ſaid, that Shiloh is NOW come, and the gathering of the people to him; therefore ſo long as that period remains, ſo long muſt the gathering be.

In a word, this reading of the words imports, that while the ſcene is now ſo far altered, that it can be ſaid, The ſceptre is departed from Judah, which will be to the end of the world; ſo long we have ground to expect, that the gathering of the people ſhall be to Shiloh, who is now come. The ſceptre is departed from the Jews, and the Saviour is come to the Gentiles: whatever way we read it then, it ſtands eſtabliſhed for a firm certainty, that to Shiloh ſhall the gathering of the people be.

Now, omitting many obſervations that might be drawn from the words, I confine myſelf to that which eſpecially concerns ourſelves, namely, OBSERV. That it is eſtabliſhed in the council of heaven, concerning Jeſus Chriſt the Meſſias, that to him ſhall the gathering of the people be.

Now, that this is eſtabliſhed in the council of heaven, is plain from the ſacred records of that council, which you have in your hand. I need not cite all the ſcriptures that ſpeak of the converſion of the nations to him; I will but name two or three. Pſal. ii. 8. where God is declaring the decree concerning our Meſſias; he ſays to him, Aſk of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth for thy poſſeſſion. ASK OF ME; what ſhall I give thee in conſideration of that noble undertaking of thine, which I am ſo well-pleaſed with, and ſo much glorified by? Why, might Chriſt ſay, all that I aſk is, that I may have a ſeed to ſerve and glorify thee and me; that I may have my friends among the loſt heathen pagan world: let me ſee in them, as well as in others, the travel of my ſoul, and be ſatisfied. Well, ſays the Father, it is granted; I give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermoſt parts of the earth for thy poſſeſſion. See Iſa. xi. 10, 12. Iſa. xliii. 5, 6. Iſa. lvi. 8. and lx. 4,—9.

The method we would propoſe for illuſtrating this propoſition, through divine aid, ſhall be the following:

I. To offer ſome remarks with reſpect to the nature of this gathering, and the qualities of it.
II. Who are the people of whom it is ſaid this gathering ſhall be.
III. To whom this gathering of the people ſhall be, and in what reſpect it is to Chriſt.
IV. The manner of this gathering; by what means, and in what method it ſhall be.
V. When are the ſpecial times and ſeaſons wherein this gathering to Chriſt does, or ſhall take place.
VI. Why, or for what reaſons this gathering ſhall be to him; why the people, and why to Shiloh. And then,
VII. Shut up all with ſome inferences from the whole.

I. The firſt thing propoſed was, to offer ſome remarks with reſpect to the nature of this gathering, eſpecially theſe four.

1. You may remark, that there are ſeveral ſorts of gatherings that we would diſtinguiſh. There is an outward corporeal gathering, and an inward ſpiritual gathering: outward gatherings are not here eſpecially intended. It is true, that a flocking to ordinances is very pleaſant, as it was to the pſalmiſt, when he ſaid, I was glad when they ſaid, Come let us go up to the houſe of the Lord; and when that word is accompliſh, Iſa. ii. 3. Many people ſhall go and ſay, Come let us go up to the mount of the Lord, to the houſe of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths. But many gather about a tent, and gather together to ordinances, that never are gathered to Shiloh. Some, like the Athenians, gather to ordinances, to hear if the miniſter will tell them any news: ſome, like the Phariſees, watch for a word to carp at, and play the part of the devil in accuſing of the brethren: ſome, like the Jews, ſeek after the law, and legal duties, that they may eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs: ſome, like the Greeks, ſeek after wiſdom and eloquence, and flowers of rhetoric; ſome gather only to gaze, and others to muſe; and perhaps they muſe upon their market, their journey, their dinner, their ſupper, their diverſion; and may be the ſermon is done before they know well where they are: ſome gather to hear, but ſo ſoon as the miniſter begins, they fall aſleep, as though they had been brought in for dead corpſes, and the miniſter were preaching their funeral-ſermon: ſome gather to ordinances and hear; but they hear, and ſcorn; they hear, and mock; they hear, and deſpiſe. May we not ſay with Chriſt, What went ye out to the wilderneſs for to SEE? rather than, What went ye out to HEAR? For people remember that which they ſee, but forget all that they hear; which ſays, that they came rather to ſee than to hear. Some indeed will mind what they think to the miniſter's reproach, or what will afford matter for their own diverſion; but, with reſpect to the main thing, they depart from ſermons with their hearts like a bottomleſs bottomleſs purſe, that can hold no money; and ſo they go home without gathering any fruits that fall from the tree of life, which ſhould be the greateſt deſign of their gathering together. Nay, as Satan pointed Adam to another tree, leſt he ſhould go to the tree of life; ſo he points to ſome other buſineſs, and to ſome other exerciſe and ſtudy: hence they go home, ſaying, The miniſter hath not an edifying gift; ſays another, I cannot profit by him; ſays another, He does not keep his text; ſays a fourth, He preached too long, and I cannot mind all; as if the ground ſhould complain of the ſeed, which yet will not receive the ſeed. Few gather to ordinances, or attend upon the word, as the ſtar, that ſhould lead them to Chriſt; as the ladder that ſhould mount them to heaven; as the manna, that ſhould refreſh their ſouls. Many gatherings of the people conſiſt only in preſenting their bodies like dead carcaſes before the Lord; They worſhip God with their mouth, and honour him with their lips; but their heart is far removed from him. The ſpecial gatherings here intended, is an inward and ſpiritual gathering. The gathering of the people to Shiloh, is the gathering of ſouls to Chriſt, a gathering of hearts, a gathering of affections to him. An outward gathering, like bodily exerciſe, profits little, where there is no ſpiritual gathering and holy approach to a God in Chriſt: and it is a pity, where there is a great congregation of people, there ſhould be but a ſmall aggregation to Chriſt; while the ſoul comes not along with the body to his ordinances. O that only is a bleſſed gathering, when God gathers ſouls to himſelf, and Chriſt gathers hearts to himſelf! Bleſſed is the man whom thou chooſeſt, and cauſeſt to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we ſhall be ſatisfied with the goodneſs of thy houſe, even of thy holy temple, Pſal. lxv. 4. And indeed there will be no gathering to Shiloh here, if God himſelf do not cauſe us to approach.——Hence, as you are to diſtinguiſh betwixt a corporal and ſpiritual gathering, that you may not think it enough when you bring only your bodies before the Lord, while yet you leave your hearts behind you, and the deſire of your ſoul is not to his name; ſo you are to diſtinguiſh betwixt a paſſive and active gathering: as a bodily-gathering is unprofitable, where there is no ſoul-gathering; ſo active gathering to Shiloh is impoſſible without a paſſive gathering. That there ſhall be an active gathering to Chriſt, is as certain as the firm decree of heaven; John vi. 37. All that the Father hath given me, ſhall come to me; but it is as certain, that there can be no active, without a paſſive gathering; ver. 44. No man can come to me, except the Father which hath ſent me draw him. Both theſe are expreſſed by the ſpouſe in one word, Draw me, we will run after thee. The paſſive gathering is God's drawing ſinners to Chriſt, the active gathering is their running to him when drawn. This is ſuch a neceſſary diſtinction, that it muſt be taken along with the whole of our diſcourſe upon this ſubject; wherein we muſt conſider this gathering ſometimes in an active, and ſometimes in a paſſive ſenſe, becauſe the one cannot be without the other. When irreſiſtible power is put forth, there muſt be a gathering, Pſal. cx. 3. Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of thy power: and where there is ſuch a gathering it is a fruit of that exerting of divine power in its irreſiſtible efficacy. Hence I offer,

2. A ſecond remark, that in this gathering of the people to Shiloh, there are certain gatherers employed. The great and glorious gatherer is God himſelf, when he draws ſinners to himſelf with the cords of love and bands of a man; that is, in a powerful, irreſiſtible manner; and yet not violenting the will, as Arminians dream; but, with loving and rational arguments, conquering, carrying, captivating, and overpowering the whole ſoul. God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, are employed in this gathering-work: it is done by the care of the Father, by the pains of the Son, and by the power of the Holy Ghoſt: it is done by the motion of the Father, by the mediation of the Son, and by the might of the eternal Spirit. God the Father is the gatherer; he is ſaid to gather into one all things by Chriſt, Eph. i. 10. Chriſt himſelf, to whom the gathering is, is alſo the gatherer, John xi. 52. where it is ſaid of him, that he would gather together into one, the children of God that were ſcattered abroad. And that the Holy Ghoſt is the immediate gatherer, is plain, in that as the Father ſends the Son to gather, ſo the Son ſends the Spirit to gather the people to him: hence the Spirit is ſaid to reveal Chriſt, to teſtify of Chriſt, to glorify Chriſt, to invite the people to Chriſt, Rev. xxii. 17. The Spirit and the bride ſay, Come: And he not only ſays it externally to the ear by his word; but internally to the ſoul, by his common motions; and efficaciouſly to the heart, by his irreſiſtible operation: like that word by which the world was made, when God ſaid, Let there be light, and there was light; ſo, when the Spirit ſays, Let there be faith, there is faith. Hence, he that is called the Spirit of faith, 2 Cor. iv. 13. is alſo the Spirit of power, 2 Tim. i. 7. For he both begins and carries on the work of faith with power, and ſo powerfully draws ſinners to Chriſt, and effectually gathers the people to Shiloh. The principal gatherers then are the bleſſed perſons of the glorious Trinity: the Father does it, through the Son, by the Holy Ghoſt. This adorable three-in-one work to each other's hand.——There are ſubordinate gatherers, which God does employ; particularly miniſters of the goſpel, whoſe greateſt work lies in winning ſouls, and gathering people to Chriſt; therefore called, workers together with God, 2 Cor. vi. 1. Their principal buſineſs is to ſound the trumpet, and gather the people to Shiloh: they are to preach Chriſt, to proclaim Chriſt, to offer Chriſt, to invite ſinners to Chriſt, and that is all they can do. They may caſt down the goſpel-net, but they will take nothing, unleſs the Lord himſelf gather in the fiſh; Except the Lord build the city, the builders build in vain. The goſpel is then the power of God to ſalvation; that is, his organical power, the inſtrument of his power, when it is the miniſtration of the Spirit; Not by ſtrength, nor by might, but by my Spirit, ſaith the Lord. Seek then, that his power may accompany the word, otherwiſe it will not be a gathering word——Now, as miniſters are the ſubordinate gatherers under Heaven's influence by office; ſo may private Chriſtians, whoſe ſouls are gathered to Chriſt: they may be gatherers in their ſtation, not indeed by office miniſterially and authoritatively, but by private admonition and counſel charitatively. Thus parents, by their precept and example, may be the inſtruments of gathering their children to Chriſt; maſters, their ſervants; and private Chriſtians, their neighbours. And happy theſe that, through grace are thus employed, whether as miniſters or Chriſtians! for they are wiſe; He that winneth ſouls is wiſe. And they that be wiſe, Dan. xii. 3. or, as it may be read, they that be TEACHERS, ſhall ſhine as the brightneſs of the firmament: and they that turn many to righteouſneſs, as the ſtars for ever and ever. But then again,

through

3. The third remark I offer is, that there are certain airths, or particular quarters from whence the gathering of the people is made. Whence are they gathered, may you ſay? Why, this is to be conſidered both in point of place, and in point of ſtate.

1ſt, In point of place. Whence is the gathering to Shiloh, and from what airth? Why, even from every airth; They ſhall come from the eaſt, and from the weſt, and from the north, and from the ſouth, and ſhall ſit down in the kingdom of God, Luke xiii. 29. This gathering to Shiloh, conſidered even literally and extenſively, will be from all the four quarters, and from all the four corners of the earth; from Europe, Aſia, Africa, and America. Hence it is ſaid of Chriſt's dominion, Pſal. lxxii. 8. that he ſhall have it from ſea to ſea, and from the river to the ends of the earth: and not only the large continent, but the little iſles are included, ver. 10, 11. The kings of Tarſhiſh and the iſles ſhall bring preſents, and the kings of Sheba and Seba ſhall offer gifts: yea, all kings ſhall fall down before him, and all nations ſhall ſerve him. You have all the four airths mentioned, Iſa. xliii. 5, 6. I will bring thy ſeed from the eaſt, and gather thee from the weſt; and will ſay to the north, Give up; and to the ſouth, Keep not back: bring my ſons from afar, and my daughters from the ends of the earth. While the iſles and ends of the earth are ſo much mentioned, even the outmoſt ends of the earth, to be Chriſt's poſſeſſion; we may therein ſee and wonder at the grace of God, that in his council of old, concerning the gathering of the people to Shiloh, he had a view to our remote northern iſles among the reſt; even Britain and Ireland, Scotland and Zetland. When God will count the people that were gathered to Shiloh, it will be ſaid of poor remote Scotland, This man and that man was born there: and, O that the number were increaſed, and a greater gathering-time would come than ever hath been! O for a gathering power, a day of power! However, it is from all airths that the gathering of the people ſhall be to Chriſt: it is not confined to one place; to him ſhall the gathering be, from Aſia in the eaſt, and from America in the weſt, from Africa in the ſouth, and from Europe in the north, not forgetting the European iſles in the midſt of the northern ſeas.

2dly, In point of ſtate. Whence is the gathering of the people to Shiloh, and from what airth? from what ſtate and condition are they to be gathered? Here let me allude to the four elements, water, fire, earth, and air, out of which they are gathered.

(1.) Some are gathered as it were out of the water, and fiſhed out of the flood; and hence, as miniſters in gathering ſouls, are called, Fiſhers of men, and the goſpel, the fiſh-net caſt into the ſea for gathering of every kind, Mat. xiii. 47.; ſo they are gathered out of the ſea of a troubleſom tempeſtuous world, out of the floods of ſin and miſery, where they are ſwimming. When the Lord gathers people to himſelf, he muſt fiſh them, and gather them out of many waters and great depths, even out of the depth of ſecurity, out of the depth of ſenſuality, where they were ſwimming pleaſantly, yet dangerouſly, ready to ſwim in to the dead ſea of everlaſting deſtruction. Nothing but the hand of God could reach to the bottom of the depth whence the Lord does gather his elect.

(2.) Some are gathered as it were out of the fire; Zech. iii. 2. Is not this a brand plucked out of the fire? There is the fire of luſt and lewdneſs that ſome are burning in; For wickedneſs burns as the fire, Iſa. ix. 18. and to be gathered out of the Torrid Zone, and brought to a temperate climate, is a great matter. Out of this fire they muſt be gathered, that are gathered unto Shiloh. There is the fire of God's wrath, which is a conſuming fire, wherein they are in utmoſt danger of being conſumed for ever; but when the Lord gathers the people, he puts his hand, as it were, into the midſt of the fire, and plucks them as brands out of the burning. Again,

(3.) They are gathered out of the earth; out of the duſt and dung of the earth. Some are groveling on the earth, and licking the duſt like ſerpents, having their hearts and affections clogged with the clay, in reſpect of their worldly-mindedneſs, earthly diſpoſitions, and covetouſneſs, while the heart is ſo ſet upon earthly things, that they are loſt, and hid among the clay, and covered with the duſt; and from thence they muſt be gathered; For the iniquity of his covetouſneſs was I wroth, and ſmote him: I hid me, and was wroth, and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart. I have ſeen his ways, and will heal him; and lead him alſo, and reſtore comforts unto him, and to his mourners, Iſa. lvii. 17, 18. O the kindneſs of God, in gathering ſouls out of ſuch a diſmal ſituation! Yea, ſome are not only covered with the duſt, but lying among the dung of this earth, ſticking in the miry clay, and wallowing in all the groſs abominations and pollutions of the world, ſuch as theſe mentioned, 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10, 11.; yet out of the very dung does he gather the people to Shiloh; Such were ſome of you, but ye are waſhed, but ye are ſanctified, but ye are juſtified. He gathers his ſheep out of the moſt dirty mire. Let none preſume; for he is ſovereign, and lets ſome ſtick and periſh in the mire: let none deſpair; for he is merciful, and draws out ſome from the very dung. When Antigonus, a king, paſt by a ditch, into which a ſheep was fallen, the hiſtorian ſays, he pulled it out, though foul and dirty, with his own hand; for which he was exceedingly beloved, and commended by his ſubjects. But behold, the King of Iſrael is yet kinder: he not only ſtoops to filthy ditches of ſin, into which his ſheep are fallen, and gathers them with his arm, but lays them in his boſom, Iſa. xl. 11. that he may warm them with his heart-love, and waſh them with his heart-blood. Again,

